UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO, MONDAY SEPTEMBER 24, 1945

OFFICIAL UNIVERSITY ANNOUNCEMENTS—SPECIAL ISSUE

MILITARY TRAINING

At the meeting of the Board of Governors held on September 11th it was unanimously agreed that participation by students in the training programme of the C.O.T.C., U.N.T.D. or the U.A.S. should be voluntary for the session 1945-1946. This action of the Board was in accordance with

- a resolution adopted at a joint meeting of the Caput of the University and the Joint Services University Training Committee held on September 7th, 1945, and
- a resolution adopted at a meeting of representatives of McGill University, McMaster University, Queen's University, the University of Toronto and the University of Western Ontario held in Toronto on September 9th, 1945.

Canadian Officers Training Corps U. of T. Contingent

This Corps is intended to be the chief source of supply of officers for the Canadian Army (Permanent and Reserve). It will thus revert to its original function of preparing students for qualification as officers.

- Students returned from Active Service in the ranks may enlist for immediate officer training.
- Students from the high schools will be required to become basically trained as soldiers before proceeding to officer training. The length of time required will depend on their own progress and abilities.
- Training will be carried on for a minimum of sixty hours during the academic year, with the possibility of camp training in the summer.
- It is expected there will be opportunity for a number of experienced junior officers in the Contingent to qualify for higher rank while carrying out regimental duties.
- Detailed information will be published as soon as government policy on military training in the Universities is received.
- Pay will be issued to all ranks with bonuses for qualification.
- Enquiries and enlistments at the Orderly Room, 119 St. George Street.

University Naval Training Division

Plans at present under consideration are to carry on the U.N.T.D. as a part of the peacetime programme of the Navy.

Generally, the plan of organization and local administration of U.N.T.D. is to be much as it has been—each U.N.T.D. being as in the past a unit of the local Naval Division.

A revised four-year syllabus of training during the academic year is now completed. This provides for progressive training from year to year. The amount of time devoted to naval training is the equivalent of one evening a week.

The syllabus during the academic year will be common to seamen and stokers, but opportunity for specialist or technical training is provided during spring or summer periods—spring and summer training afloat is to be continued.

Bounty pay is to be continued.

Consideration is also being given to provide opportunity for U.N.T.D. ratings who have completed the U.N.T.D. programme to proceed toward qualification for a commission if passed by a Selection Board.

The Ship's Office is at 119 St. George Street.

Canadian Red Cross Corps

The National Committee of the Canadian Red Cross Corps has ruled that all detachments will be disbanded except where there is a continued need for uniformed and trained Red Cross personnel.

In view of this ruling, the University of Toronto Detachment will not be reorganized this session and no recruiting will be done.

Former members who desire to give regular service to the Red Cross throughout the year may apply to the undersigned for information.

A. E. M. PARKES,
National Section Commandant, University Training.

LECTURE HOURS

At a meeting of the Caput held recently it was agreed that the University should revert to its former practice of commencing lectures at 9.00 a.m. instead of 8.30 a.m.

Accordingly, with the opening of the session 1945-46, lectures will begin at 9.00 a.m. and will be held on the hour thereafter throughout the day.

President's Opening Address

The opening address by President Smith to the students of all faculties will be given in Convocation Hall on Wednesday, September 26th, at 4.15 p.m. Attention is drawn elsewhere in this issue to the special nature of this event this year.

Students To Meet Dr. Smith

Dr. Sidney E. Smith will address the students of the University and be presented to their elected representatives on Wednesday next as the first step in the complex and colorful ceremonies of his installation as President of the University. The student body will welcome him as their head on Wednesday, September 26, at 4.15 p.m. in Convocation Hall.

The Students' Administrative Council feel that it is most fitting that Dr. Smith's first official act as President should be his meeting with the students. It is equally fitting that the students should take a major part in the first stage of the presidential installation ceremonies. In view of the special nature of this event and its significance to the student body, all students of all years and faculties are urged to be present.

The President's opening address, long a major term-opening feature, will this year be an all-student activity. Members of the Students' Administrative Council will occupy the platform. Dr. Smith will enter, with the Council's two vice-presidents, George Doner of Victoria College and Phyllis Jones of the School of Nursing.

Mr. Doner, as senior undergraduate of the University, will then present to the President the Council members as representatives of the assembled students, faculty by faculty, and the editors of The Varsity and Torontonensis as representatives of the two major unifying publications on the campus. On behalf of the student body, he will then welcome Dr. Smith as President of the University.

Dr. Smith will then address the student body.

The doors of Convocation Hall will open at 4 p.m. Students are urged to come early to be sure of being seated.

Further stages in the ceremonies of installation for the President, which are scheduled to come to a climax the week-end of November 10, will be announced at an early date.

HART HOUSE

Perhaps no fitter tribute to the life to be found within Hart House can be found than the words used by the editor of last year's Torontonensis: "For twenty-six years Varsity men by thousands have passed through the beamed oaken doors of Hart House into the cool corridors and humming committee-rooms of the headquarters of the University's extra-curricular life. Day after day they come by thousands, for concerts, painting, singing, the casual book, the theatre, crafts, worship, and every variety of sport; swimming, basketball, boxing, wrestling, fencing, squash. Fellowship draws them, too: 'friendly disputation and debate, the conversation of wise and earnest men.' Thronging the common-rooms and corridors, in groups at evening around the Warden's fire, they debate the thousand issues of the campus and of the world. For Hart House, magnificent showplace though it is, is more than a building; it is a centre of life, and in the truest sense, itself alive."

Among the many new experiences awaiting the men who arrive at the University for the first time this autumn will be the intense, varied and stimulating life to be found within the four walls of Hart House. This distinguished Gothic building, which is for the use of men only, in its widest interpretation seeks to provide for all the activities of the undergraduate's life outside the actual classroom. A complete list of all these activities will be found from time to time in the Varsity or may be secured in the form of a pamphlet from the office of the Warden of Hart House, where freshmen are assured of a warm welcome. It was found necessary temporarily to suspend many of these activities during the war owing to the great pressure on students' time to military studies, but this fall will see the return to a full programme. Undergraduate men will find under this one roof full opportunity to cultivate a large number of recreational and cultural interests.

The Warden and the Committees

To the Warden, Mr. J. B. Bickersteth, is entrusted the general supervision of the whole House. Mr. W. R. Cowan, the Comptroller; Mr. E. A. Wilkinson, Assistant Comptroller; Mr. W. B. Burwell, the Secretary; and Mr. P. McClory, the Assistant in the Comptroller's office, are responsible for the administration. But in great measure the care of the House and its welfare are entrusted to the students themselves. There are a number of committees, consisting of from five to ten undergraduates, two or three senior members and the Warden. The undergraduates on all these committees are elected annually by the undergraduate membership of Hart House, and the undergraduate

UNIVERSITY HEALTH SERVICE

MEDICAL EXAMINATION

Every student must take the medical examination arranged by the Health Service each year. This examination includes an X-ray of the chest in the first and final years only. Any student who has failed to fulfil this regulation will not be allowed to sit for his examinations.

It is impracticable to complete all examinations in a short time. Therefore in order to fulfil the University requirement that all students "must have a medical examination before taking part in any University Athletic Activity" or physical training, the following regulations shall be observed.

First year students must make appointments at once and should complete their examination by October 15th.

Other students must make their appointments for examinations before October 15th but, pending the completion of their examination, their previous year's medical categorization may be accepted provided they have suffered no serious illness or accident since that examination.

Men are examined at 43 St. George Street.

Women are examined at 44 Hoskin Avenue.

Examinations are by appointment only.

Appointments for Men:

Students of all faculties except Arts are requested to contact their Class President for their appointment.

Arts students, and members of the other faculties who cannot conform to the times as arranged through their Class President, may contact the Health Service direct for their appointments.

If any of the Arts classes or Colleges desire to arrange for their examinations en bloc, if the President of the Class or the Secretary of the College will contact the Health Service, it can be arranged and will greatly facilitate matters for both the Health Service and the student.

Appointments for Women:

Women students will make their appointments at once at 44 Hoskin Avenue.

Women students wishing to play basketball must make their appointments before the week of October 9th, 1945.

X-RAY APPOINTMENTS FOR FIRST AND FINAL YEAR MEN AND WOMEN

These appointments will be made at the Health Service when the student reports for his medical examination.

The X-ray of the chest will take place this year in the week beginning October 29th, at the X-ray department of the Ontario Department of Health, East Block of the Parliament Buildings. When the appointment is made, a slip stating the time of the appointment and detailed instructions of how to get there will be given, also an envelope to contain the X-ray film. The student is requested to enter his name, address, age, his family physician's name and address and the date of any previous X-ray examination of his chest in the places provided on the envelope. He will take this envelope with him to the Parliament Buildings.

The importance of keeping, and of being on time for the appointment as made, cannot be over-emphasized as physicians and staff are retained in advance according to the appointments made.

IF YOU ARE UNABLE TO KEEP YOUR APPOINTMENT, ADVISE THE HEALTH SERVICE BY TELEPHONE AS FAR IN ADVANCE AS POSSIBLE SO THAT THE APPOINTMENT MAY BE GIVEN TO SOMEONE ELSE.

FACILITIES OF UNIVERSITY HEALTH SERVICE

The full facilities of the Health Service as laid down in the calendar and Athletic Hand Book are now available and all students are urged to study these carefully and avail themselves of them when necessary.

First Aid in the event of sudden illness or accident is available and physicians are on duty or on call as follows:

Monday to Friday—9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Saturday, 9 a.m. to 12 noon.

Women—44 Hoskin Avenue. Telephone MI. 2646.

Men—43 St. George Street. Telephone MI. 6611, Local 78.

Hart House Surgery—4.45 p.m. to 6.30 p.m., Monday to Friday only. Telephone MI. 6611, Local 50, or MI 3835.

Accidents which occur at other than the above times or are of sufficiently serious nature as to require immediate hospital attendance may be taken direct to the Emergency Department, Toronto General Hospital—entrance 2nd driveway south of College on University Ave.

To obtain a physician at night or at hours other than above—for men or women, call MI. 5838. If no answer, call KI. 4141.

secretaries of the standing committees (namely, House, Library, Music, Debates, Art, Squash Racquets, and Camera) sit on the Board of Stewards which is the governing body of the House. Of this Board the Warden is ex-officio Chairman.

The Board of Stewards, believing that the majority of the members of Hart House desire to see a standard of dress used by all members which is in keeping with the dignity of the House, have passed a regulation that coats shall be worn by all members using Hart House. This does not apply to the athletic wing, which is governed by the regulations of the Athletic Directorate.

Pre-Payment of Fees

The attention of students registering in all Faculties is drawn to the fact that necessary forms, accompanied by at least the first instalment of University fees, are required to be filled out in duplicate by each student, and both copies are to be stamped by the University Bursar to indicate the receipt of fees. One copy is returned to the student and must be presented by him to his College Registrar or to the Secretary of his Faculty or School, before he can receive his card of admission to lectures.

STUDENTS RECEIVING ASSISTANCE UNDER THE TERMS OF THE POST DISCHARGE RE-ESTABLISHMENT ORDER SHOULD INDICATE ON THE FORMS THAT THEIR FEES ARE TO BE PAID BY THE DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS, AND THE FORMS SHOULD BE STAMPED BY THE BURSAR AS OUTLINED ABOVE.

University fees and the fees of students enrolled in University College are payable at the office of the University Bursar, Simcoe Hall, which will be open for the receipt of fees from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily from September 17th to September 25th, inclusive (Saturday, September 22nd, 9 a.m. to 12.30 p.m.), and from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. daily, except Saturday, during the remainder of the session.

Cheques in payment of these fees should be made payable to "The University of Toronto."

Instead of lining up in the Bursar's Office to pay fees during the term, students would save a considerable amount of time by mailing cheques to: "The Bursar, University of Toronto."

THE FALCONER LECTURE

Wednesday, September 26th, at 8.30 p.m.

Sir Richard Livingstone, President of Corpus Christi College and Vice-Chancellor of Oxford University, will deliver the Falconer Lecture in Convocation Hall on Wednesday evening, September 26th, at 8.30 p.m.

The subject of the lecture will be "On Telling the Truth." The lecture is open to the general public and tickets of admission will not be required. There will be no academic procession.

THE UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, 1945

STUDENTS MEET NEW PRESIDENT

Rev. R. S. K. Seeley Is Welcomed As New Trinity College Provost

WILL COPE WITH OVER- CROWDING

Rev. R. S. Seeley, M.A., D.D., was installed as Provost of Trinity College last Thursday. Coming to Toronto from Kingston, leaving the post of Bishop of Ontario, he dismissed the stress of overcrowding, saying, "The only thing we can do is go ahead and cope with it; there is nothing else we can do at present."

He has already acquired two residences for male students on St. George St. This brings the total from 76 resident-students, to 136, out of the increased student enrolment of 560.

Dr. Seeley was born in Herefordshire, England, and graduated from the University of Cambridge. He came to Canada in 1938, and, after touring Canada, he became Bishop at St. George's Cathedral in Kingston. While in Kingston he was special lecturer in philosophy at Queen's University. Since he has been in Canada he has written two books, "Towards a New Order," a

MEETS STAFF AT BANQUET

"One more freshman" was the manner in which Reverend R. S. K. Seeley, M.A., D.D., introduced himself at a banquet held in his honor at Strachan Hall.

The seventh Provost of Trinity College, Dr. Seeley described himself as a "symbol not only of his predecessors but also of the institution of Trinity."

His address was followed by speech of welcome on behalf of the faculty given by Rev. W. Lyndon Smith, Dean of Residence who stated jokingly his "service under three provosts had turned his hair grey."

Head of College H. A. Thompson extended a welcome on behalf of the students. Introduction of first-year students to Trinity sophomores concluded the banquet.

series of broadcast addresses; and "The Sign of the Cross," a Canadian Lent book.

PLASTER HAND OF FATE RESTS ON PRESIDENT'S DESK

In constant salute there stands on the desk of the President of this University a small chipped, plaster hand with one unusual characteristic—the little finger is silver nitrate such as, well, such as dentists use. Yes, as dentists use.

The object—the hand of fate, we might call it, if dramatically inclined—has been a prized possession and lucky piece of Dr. Sidney E. Smith since his undergraduate days at King's College.

During this period in his career, Sidney Smith was employed in the boy's wear department of a dry goods store where, one Saturday, disaster befell a clothing model which lost in one unhappy sweep its dignity, its usefulness and its hand. To the young student the dismantled hand seemed, strangely enough, a treasure or, at least, a curio worthy of possession. He took it home with him. And then, although it had shown no powers of charm, he took it overseas with him. It found a niche in his heavy kit bag on route marches, indication of its value. However, on a route march one day to the British village of Stonebridge, the tiny hand became lost and Sidney Smith accepted the fact. It was goodbye hand!

A few days later on a route march to the same place a friend of his in another company found the hand, brought it to him remarking: See, Smitty, isn't this your hand?"

At that moment it became Sidney Smith's lucky piece. It accompanied him to France and into the R.F.C. and back to Canada. But the adventure had left its traces on the hand. The little finger was gone. As such it would have remained had not a dental technician at Dalhousie volunteered, through friendship for Sidney and perhaps through a desire to escape from the tedium of teeth, to fit it with a silver finger.

Repaired in this fashion the hand has followed the Smith trail across Canada, occasionally serving menially as a paper weight, but today in the Simcoe Hall office of the President as a fascinating desk decoration.

Cody Grooms Successor

As Dr. Sidney E. Smith prepared to begin his first academic term as President of the University of Toronto, The Varsity invited his predecessor, Dr. H. J. Cody, now Chancellor of the University, to introduce the new President to its readers. Dr. Cody replied as follows:

"I gladly accept your invitation to write a few words about the new President of the University. I commend him most heartily to the students. He is no novice in University life and administration.

"A Nova Scotian—from the province of 'plain living and high thinking'—he received his education both in Arts and in Law in his native province. After some teaching in the Law School of Dalhousie University, he came to the Osgoode Hall Law School in this city as a lecturer; then he returned to Halifax to be Dean of the Dalhousie Law School. About eleven years ago, he was chosen President of the University of Manitoba. About a year ago, he was appointed Principal of University College and Executive Assistant to myself. After my election as Chancellor, he was chosen by your Board of Governors to succeed as President on my retirement at the end of last June.

"He is an able lawyer and a good organizer and has a most attractive personality. He has a first-hand knowledge of Canada, east, centre, and west. He has been President of the Conference of Canadian Universities and knows the general University situation in Canada. He has already taken no small part in conferences between the Government and the Universities in regard to military training and rehabilitation problems.

"He knows the history and organization of the University, and against that background will give wise and progressive leadership to it. He is strong and vigorous physically, and able to carry what is one of the heaviest burdens in the University field. Students will find him kindly, shrewd, and accessible.

"Above all, his educational theories are based on the view that with all our getting of the mental and the material, the fear of the Lord is the beginning and the end of true wisdom."

"Greatest Challenge in History Now Faces University"---Smith

The first step in the installation of Dr. Sidney E. Smith as president of the University of Toronto was accomplished in Convocation Hall yesterday afternoon when the President was presented to a packed house of over 1,700 undergraduates by George Doner, IV Law, Victoria College, first vice-president of the Students' Administrative Council and senior undergraduate of the University.

Doner also introduced to the President each of the members of the S.A.C. Executive, as representatives of their constituent faculties and colleges. The function, including the President's traditional opening address, was sponsored entirely by the Students' Administrative Council; thus Dr. Smith's first official act as President was to meet the students of the University. S.A.C. members entered in procession and occupied the platform, instead of the customary begowned academic body.

Lauds Student Government—

Commenting on the nature of the function, Dr. Smith said, "I have a profound conviction of the value of student self-government, especially as an important and significant educational instrument. Student self-government should not be regarded as a concession wrested from brow-beating authorities. It is a right of young Canadians."

Explaining that this right carried with it the duty of conducting extra-curricular activities "with due regard for the welfare of the University as a whole", Dr. Smith reminded the students that "if the responsibility is abused, the University has then a moral right to intervene."

A Welcome to Learners—

Welcoming the students who have come to the University from the armed forces, Dr. Smith reiterated the pledges made to them by the University during the war. "I say to you faithfully that when we said we were proud of you we meant it, and when we promised to help you we meant it. You gave us of your best, and we will give you of our best."

"I have heard some persons, who should know better, say that the returned men will present special and acute problems rooted in neuroses and other types of emotional instability," Dr. Smith went on.

"For you, and as a veteran of World War I, I resent such statements. We do not regard you as psychiatric cases. We will not treat you as a peculiar group, to be segregated. We will deal with you as experienced and mature young men and women who are anxious to take their places as students, and who are eager to recapture the years

The word "welcome" has a new meaning as we utter it, with fervent gratitude, to the ex-service men and women who are entering our doors. While you were in uniform, we sang your praise. Those sentiments are not now forgotten. We of the staff are resolved to serve you to our utmost. You would not have us treat you—we have no intention to treat you—as an unusual group who should be set apart. We will deal with you as young Canadians, well-versed, experienced, and mature, who eagerly desire to take their places as civilians and who are anxious to recapture years spent in a noble cause. You want and you warrant the best that the University can offer to you. The measure of the University's service to you will be a test of the very quality of the institution. All of us must bear in mind that it is an institution of education, an institution of higher learning. It would be quite unfair to you if the University lowered its traditional standards. That would not be a true service to you. You ask for and you need a thorough grounding for your careers.

From The Schools—

We also welcome heartily the freshmen who came directly from the schools. You, as a younger group, are an essential link in the chain of progress of the University. By your efforts, you will keep that chain strong. In mingling with the ex-service men and women, you will have a unique chance to learn at first hand the ideals for which Canadians, during the war, were ready to sacrifice life itself. Those ideals are of the essence of national greatness.

In a mood happier than that which has prevailed on the campus for six years, all of us—staff and students—must prepare ourselves for securing the peace. In the military victory, there was defeated an enemy who proclaimed that the individual is of little or no account. May we seize this opportunity to gird ourselves for the task of developing in Canada the finest type of democracy in which every individual, while mindful of the claims of others, may give of his best. If we tend to falter or fail, may we recall that our opportunity has been bought with the blood of young Canadians who counted not the cost of a Canada and a world of decency and order.

We Take The Lead—

The University of Toronto—now your University—can and should take the lead in giving a resounding "No" to the question: "Was their sacrifice in vain?" If we match our every thought, word or act to that question, we will be worthy of those who poured out for us "the red sweet wine of youth" and who gave up for us "the years to be of work and joy."

Frosh Weekend Held at Victoria

More than six hundred frosh and freshmen arrived at Victoria College last Saturday morning to begin their college careers at the annual Freshman week-end. The newcomers were welcomed by President Brown and Dean Bennett and were conducted around the campus in the afternoon.

Saturday night President George Doner of the Victoria College Union and representatives of the major student organizations explained the functions of the various undergraduate bodies. Aided by the seniors, the frosh commenced registration Monday morning. The social activities of the week-end with a reception given by the staff, and

Pharmacy Opening Addressed by Grad

A record first year enrolment of 150 students, including over 60 ex-service-men, was present at the opening of the new session of the Ontario College of Pharmacy yesterday.

Mr. V. E. Hessel, executive manager of the British Pharmaceutical Institute and former graduate of the College addressed the gathering.

Formal proceedings were followed by a community sing-song and senior Glee Club entertainment.

A little less bewildered, the freshmen were prepared to settle down to the serious side of college life.

Editorial

THE SEIGE LIFTED

For sixty-five years The Varsity has been pouring from the presses. For sixty-five years it has been customary for the current editor to sit down at his typewriter the night before the appearance of Issue No. 1 and realize, in a moment of dismal anticlimax, that he has nothing to write about.

Like many other customs, that one has changed this year. We are in the precisely contrary dilemma. We have too much to write about.

The campus, inevitably insulated for six years from the world, is suddenly in the state of a city whose siege has been lifted. For six years, while the whole world rocked in a blood-bath whose purpose was somehow to prevent certain things being destroyed forever, the University, inevitably aloof, has jealously guarded within its walls those treasures for whose preservation the warriors beyond the gates were fighting. We have not been cut off altogether. We have given leadership, discovery, and men to the battle; we have received from it inspiration, and a continual bracing contact with reality. But for all that, as befitting the keepers of the treasure-house, we were isolated, in an isolation which we jealously guarded.

AS THE GATES RE-OPEN . . .

Now, with the sudden ending of two wars, we are no longer cut off. We are once more altogether part of the world. Thousands upon thousands of students, to a number unprecedented in any peace-time year, have swarmed onto the campus. The better to function in a larger, busier world, we have acquired by the lease of Ajax a larger campus. The better to teach more students than ever before, we have acquired and are still acquiring a larger and larger staff. And for a new era, we welcome at our head a new President.

And, finally, we present a new Varsity. The Varsity, principal unifying force on a sadly sprawling campus, just a little awed by the hurly-burly importance of the year ahead, has been readying itself this summer for the biggest job of its lifetime.

THE VARSITY'S JOB . . .

The business of The Varsity is to make each student a more alert and intelligent member of the University campus. That is the business of everyone on the campus. But for various reasons, not everyone can fulfill his function so directly as can The Varsity. You may feel, and it is no disrespect to the faculty to feel, that the lecture belongs to the professor. But you should have no hesitation in feeling that The Varsity belongs to you.

This issue, honeycombed though it is with flaws, is the first of a hundred which will, we hope, do greater credit to a centre of learning than The Varsity has ever done before. This page, in particular, we have completely revised, reducing the amount of editorial say-so to give room for a wider representation of student interests: books, music, art, the stage, and the questions of the day. And we intend to wage token warfare against the most disturbing feature of the present-day press, its anonymity, by signing every article on page two; editorials included.

We have plenty of space in reserve for your views, your letters. We shall feel slighted if you do not write continually. Like all human things, The Varsity is frequently wrong; when we are wrong we want to know about it, so we can set ourselves right. We particularly want to be reminded, when we have given too much space to one side of a question, that the other side has also a powerful case.

BECOMES YOURS.

We see all around us today the post-war world for which we have all for six years longed and sacrificed and bled. It is a truism that to have won the war is a trifling accomplishment beside the awful task of keeping the peace. The peace was not made in San Francisco, nor will it be made in London, Paris, or Moscow, nor in the atomic laboratories of the world. Every one of us, and especially those of us who are at University, must forge the post-war world every day of our lives.

In this the principal task of the University today, The Varsity can be of service if you will let it and help it. If not, it must pursue its myopic way alone. We are not spinning out words: we were never more sincere: our future lies in your hands.

Books

We Bare Our Axe

By ROBERT WEAVER

This is the first of a projected weekly series of literary articles and book reviews. For some time it has been obvious that occasional reviews, which have generally dealt with books written by members of the staff and with issues of the college magazines, have failed to give students any general idea of the development of contemporary literature. The success of this column depends partly upon the number and type of books obtained for review; but it also depends to a great extent upon the reactions and suggestions of individual students, whose comments and criticisms are therefore welcome.

In this first column I am going to write quite generally about some theories of contemporary literature and criticism. Today the major problem for writers is that which faces almost every craftsman in this machine-controlled age. Authors of seriously conceived books, which frequently have a disappointing sale, are faced with a tremendous flood of mass-production literature, combining shoddy workmanship and surface intellectual development with great popularity. And good writers are continually being lost to, or overwhelmed by, this synthetic popular literature. The particularly tragic part of this struggle between intelligent and popular literature is that it comes at a time when serious books are desperately needed, and when it might appear that there was every reason for their success. The best writers show every desire to examine contemporary problems, both social and individual, as completely as possible; they are able to use advanced scientific knowledge, particularly in the examination of emotional struggle and tensions; and their potential readers are more generally literate and educated than ever before. Yet the best-sellers continue to win.

The crucial aspect of this problem seems to be that the basic premise of popular literature—the premise that the reader must escape the unhappy present by identifying himself with one of the central characters, and that therefore there must be a hopeful ending—has not only infected many writers, but has also driven potential readers from books requiring insight and an ability to face the problems of this time. This forces upon any reviewer one prime purpose: (Continued on page 7)

Art, Music and Drama

Back-Stage at the Opera

This is a column devoted to views and reviews on art, music and drama. It is primarily a column of opinion. Consequently you may find yourself in disagreement with the ideas expressed here.

Should such a situation arise, it would be well to keep in mind that we are being guided by certain principles. We intend to speak out for artistic integrity and for general raising of the cultural level of programs. Most of the reviews in this column will be written with an eye to these precepts. General articles on the arts are inevitably flavored with the prejudices of the writer. If your opinions differ from ours, send them in and we'll be glad to print them.

The coming season promises to be an active one. Students will probably have more time for concert-going this year than in the past few years, and in order that they may keep informed on artistic events, a schedule will be printed each Friday for the following week. These will be accompanied, from time to time, by brief previews.

While this may seem rather late to write about the opera at Massey Hall last week, the event was of sufficient significance in Canadian music circles to merit comment.

Last Saturday's performance of Verdi's La Traviata was extremely well paced. The three principals, Bidu Sayo, Nino Martini, and Francesco Valentini were magnificent. Of course, they sang superbly, but in addition they acted well, never letting the action drag. The chorus, dancers and orchestra were fine and the scenery adequate.

The privilege of hearing this excellent group is to be extended to thirty-seven cities on the continent. The operation of

Most Crowded Campus in Varsity History Strains Residence Resources to Utmost

Room Service Humming

There are no pup-tents in the Hart House quadrangle.

The platform of the Mackenzie memorial in Queen's Park has not been fitted up with sleeping-bags.

No one has suspended a cot on slings from the biggest carillon bell-clapper.

For these and a thousand similar mercies students can thank the S.A.C. Room Service, which for the past month has been performing the impossible in getting roofs over the heads of hundreds of students. And it still has some untenanted rooms up its sleeve. Never, despite the biggest student influx and the toughest housing shortage Toronto has ever faced, has the Room Service had to say, "We have nothing for you."

Set up behind a partition at the end of the west common room of Hart House, in a space occupied until this year by top-drawer C.O.T.C. officers, the Room Service, with a staff of four, has been making available to students lists of furnished rooms all over the city.

Headed by Glen Day, III C. & F., the staff includes students George Hougham and Adrian Leitch, and Miss Mary Bell of the S.A.C. staff.

In breaking Toronto's housing deadlock, the S.A.C. has been nothing if not enterprising. For the past two weeks it has been securing every morning the complete lists of the government's War Emergency Shelter office.

Advertisements and stories in the North Toronto Herald have opened up scores of rooms in the city's finest residential sections. Scores of householders who had never before dreamed of renting rooms responded to the appeal and threw open accommodation for students.

Some of the Council's usual services have had to be suspended this year. The system of inspecting rooms, approving the rates, and making available to seekers in card-index form a complete cockroach-to-counterpane picture of any room on the Rooms Service files, had to be abandoned in the face of overwhelming numbers. Next year, with an exceptionally early start, it is hoped that this service can be resumed.

Even House-Hunting Can Be Fun; How Do You Hit the Top Deck?

There are satisfying moments for Mary Bell of the S.A.C. office, whose headache is housing. For instance, last week when a successful room-searcher entered the Room Service office with the jubilant announcement: "I've got a double room on Huron Street. I'll need a room mate."

One of the score or more homeless students who spent days waiting anxiously for accommodation in the S.A.C. office jumped to his feet, shouted: "Where? Huron Street?" He was told: "I'll take it!"

Among the home-hunters who have approached Room Service in hordes for the past month was the married couple who, failing to find any Toronto accommodation, drove 20 miles out of the city to sleep in a tourist cabin.

Complications caused by the crowding of residences in the unprecedented housing crisis are mainly not amusing. But currently lending itself to much amused speculation are the difficulties confronting Whitney Hall residents where double-decker bunks have been installed. Problem of the girl assigned to the top bunk: "How? Just how?"

As in all residences, 73 St. George Street has many single rooms now containing two beds, double rooms three. And still students seek space. At one point the Superintendent's office was believed considering the telephone booth at 73 for reconversion to bedroom.

Home Secured On Hanlan's Point For Servicemen

Through the co-operation of a Hanlan's Point hotel keeper, Mr. A. Atkin, the Students' Administrative Council Room Service have secured accommodation for 52 persons. Occupants will be students formerly in the armed services, and in some cases their wives.

Equipped with a dining-room ready to serve three meals a day, and accessible by motor launch provided free of charge by the proprietor, the lodge has eased immeasurably the problem of securing accommodation for this year's unprecedented number of married students.

During the winter a T.T.C. ferry will carry islanded students back and forth, as it makes its daily trips through a channel kept open by ice-breakers for access to the island filtration plant.

Furniture, mattresses, and all equipment are described as new and in first-class shape, and heating is being installed this fall. An extra feature is an outdoor swimming-pool which will do double duty as a skating rink when the freeze-up starts.

Money, Marbles Do Not Entice, Painters Scarce

"It's largely a story of frustration," declared Col. A. D. Le Pan, Superintendent of Buildings, in discussing his department's redecoration program on University buildings.

"We needed 45 painters, for instance. And we had a dozen. We couldn't get more for love, money or marbles."

"Besides the labor shortage, materials were scarce. We were told on ordering quantities of furniture that we could not expect better than ten months' delivery. Supplies of bunks, blackboards and easels were obtained from War Assets Corporation—that helped!"

The ever-diminishing length of time during which University buildings are empty now that courses are on a 12-month basis was another handicap for Col. Le Pan's department. The department has always depended on a certain period of non-occupancy in which to accomplish necessary alterations. Co-operation from academic heads can solve this problem, Col. Le Pan emphasized; but labor and material shortages swamped everything else.

Residences Crammed

Never ample, and in the last few years increasingly inadequate, residence accommodation on the campus has this year disappeared with a gurgle beneath the flood.

Booked up solid for months in advance, residences throughout the campus have been feverishly turning down city applicants and in many ways making three students sleep where one slept before.

The red brick men's residences on Devonshire Place, which accommodate 48 men to a wing, took care of all applicants in residence last year who neither graduated nor failed, and then filled up solid with students returned from the armed forces. The waiting list, in case anyone moves out, is dozens of names long.

There has been an unaccountable influx of women, too. In Whitney Hall, main University College women's residence, 50 double-deck beds procured from War Assets Corporation, have been placed in all the single rooms on the first and second floors. Only the limited head-room allowed by a sloping roof kept top-floor singles from being similarly equipped.

Last year's policy of converting the larger double rooms to triples has been continued this year. The large triples and the double-deck doubles are reserved for freshmen, and for a number of P. & H.E. students whom pressure of space outside has forced into the Hall. Untrammelled single rooms are still available for scholarship students and senior students.

Overtaxed dining-room accommodation in Whitney Hall has been relieved by arrangements to have the extra students take turns eating at the adjoining Women's Union.

Extra furniture for the doubled-up rooms is another problem. So far, the supply of dressers is adequate. New mattresses are on order, and some delivered; until the rest arrive, old stock is being used. Extra desks will not be available until mid-winter.

No city girls at all have been admitted to the Victoria women's residences, and many single rooms turned into doubles. Third and fourth year students have gotten top priority, and many second-year out-of-towners turned away.

Victoria's men's residences in Burwash Hall are accepting freshmen only from the college, and have been forced to turn away men from other faculties. Nelles House is being used for students in theology, Ryerson and Caven for graduates, while Bowles and Ganier are reserved for the women.

At St. Michael's College, students are being placed in all available space. Loretto and St. Joseph's have accepted very few city girls. There has been no doubling up at Loretto, but St. Joseph's reports being more crowded than usual.

Trinity men and St. Hilda's girls are doubling up, while at Wycliffe the only change is that no city men are being admitted to residence.

ed out, "if you haven't got any men or any paint."

Nevertheless the superintendent's office was engaged during the summer in a myriad of duties including redecoration, and installation of new wiring, plumbing and heating systems.

For the first time in the memory of employees a replastering job was necessitated on the dome of Convocation Hall when plaster fell away from the ceiling in mid-summer. Scaffolding, provided by the Sarnia Bridge Company, was erected for the three-week plastering task. To avoid redecoration after the plaster had set, which would have meant the lowering and raising of the cumbersome scaffolding network, ingenious supervisors decided to mix the color with the plastering. Plastering and redecoration were thus accomplished with the single operation.

Return of peace to the campus saw the superintendent's office stepping up lighting throughout the university buildings and grounds. Light bulbs removed from lamp standards on the campus during the war years were replaced. Another item already engaging a number of the 250 workers in the department is the construction on laboratory equipment for the Ajax project.

ALL THE COMFORTS OF HOME AWAIT INFLUX OF PIONEERS AT AJAX

(Into the house that Ajax built move 1,500 engineers in early 1946. This week buildings and site—where presently the winter air will resound to soulful "Toke Oikes"—were opened for a tour of inspection by The Varsity. The eye-witness account follows.)

Ajax is an airy, sprawling community, glistening in the sun, rolling over gentle ridges down to the blue giant of Lake Ontario, and dominated by the smokestack of its central heating plant and the huge tank of its private water-supply. The Queen Elizabeth Way, as yet unpaved, runs by its back door. On hundreds of siding freights chug busily in and out.

At the general offices D.I.L.'s Mr. Russell issued a resplendent yellow pass, properly signed, countersigned, and dated, which we affixed to a lapel to escape challenge as an out-of-season saboteur. One half was surrendered on entering the plant compound. The other was claimed on emerging. "No military secrets left here, of course," assured Mr. Russell. "However," he warned, "a spark could throw the whole place sky high." The demolition of certain powder-impregnated buildings is being arranged, he continued. Pre-tour briefing in Mr. Russell's office had produced a map of the plant and grounds. Shaped as an L—L for Lease—is the university's share. Each arm is a mile long, containing everything necessary to running the community.

In the upper, east-west arm of the L, he explained, lie the residences, playing fields and recreational facilities. At the junction of the two arms are the power plants, pump-house and maintenance buildings. And stretching down the north-south, lower arm are two of the company's six assembly lines. Shops and buildings of these assembly lines will be converted into lecture rooms and laboratories. "The buildings are steam-heated," Mr. Russell revealed. "And warm as toast every winter." A pressure water supply is fire protection.

Of substantial wooden construction, painted white, the buildings are almost all single story.

The Recreation Building serves a dual role as gymnasium, for which its hardwood floors suit it admirably, and theatre with stage and all equipment to seat and entertain 750. Wings of this Hall house Tuck Shop, Library, and Sitting Room.

Some 75 professors will occupy next-door Management House, fitted with dining room, kitchen and 85 bedrooms. Maple furniture and gray bedspreads appoint the bedrooms.

"Every second counts," warned Mr. Russell as we were whisked away in the staff car. "It'd take three days to see the whole place properly." On the right we glimpsed the long, low lying 36-bed hospital, the postoffice and bank. In another moment we had entered the residence block of 8 U-shaped buildings.

Each residence had a flight of steps, each a powerful bulb over the door, each a plushly-furnished common-room, 58 bedrooms, showers, baths, and laundry. "Quiet, Please!", admonished a poster inside the door. "Sleep-Saboteurs and Radio Rowdies are Hitler's Friends."

The Gate House, where we surrendered our pass and our lighter under the x-ray eyes of blue-coated guards, lies at the neck of the L, in a convenient site for its possible future function as a centre for Hart House activities.

And beyond the Gate House stretch the assembly lines, down towards the lake, buildings like sparse grey beads on a string of roofed, hardwood-floored corridors. Here the laboratories will be fitted up; but not until the demolition of fire-hazardous shell-filling rooms has broken the continuity of the chain.

Two of a fleet of six caravans, seating 80 and capable of holding 140, will be retained by the University to carry students the miles to their lectures.

The labs-to-be are now utterly bare, shells with thick brick walls and gleaming hardwood floors, laced with the colored pipes of steam, water, and power supply. But they will be humming when the engineers move in next spring.

DEAN PREVIEWS AJAX

Rural Annex to Faculty of Applied Science Will Eventually Handle 1,500 Embroy Engineers

"The Ajax project is a fine opportunity for staff and students, and as it stands is the nucleus of a very interesting place," Dean C. R. Young of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering told The Varsity recently.

"There should be no feeling on the part of staff or students that they are being buried away in the bush out of touch with college life and all it means. Ajax is a self-contained community. We shall try to develop it as a University town with a life of its own."

Dean Young explained that all the first-year students his department could accommodate had been accepted for enrolment on the campus this fall. "We can look after 400 freshmen here, and we have taken those with 29 months of service or more to their credit. The rest will have to wait until January, when we will have Ajax ready to receive them."

The enrolment at Ajax will thus include all civilian applicants, and all students from the armed services with fewer than 29 months of service. "It will offer relief for both veterans and civilians," Dean Young stated. "There is no reasonable limit to the accommodation we can offer there. When Ajax is open, we can take every Engineering student who applied."

All the classes in all departments of first-year Engineering will be given at Ajax, Dean Young said. There will be laboratories for Engineering Drawing, Chemistry, and Mineralogy, with facilities for field work in surveying. In addition, Physics Laboratories will be available for certain courses.

Despite the duplication of equipment involved, students in first year Engineering Physics and Aeronautical Engineering, as well as certain freshmen in the Arts Physics courses, will probably take their work at Ajax rather than in Toronto.

What about equipment? Dean Young was confident that no insurmountable difficulties would arise. The government, he said, would facilitate the purchase of building materials and necessary apparatus, while the University has the option of keeping any Ajax equipment it wants.

Much of the needed furniture, such as trestle tables and cupboards, is being constructed by the staff of the University Superintendent. Two thousand square feet of table space is needed for draughting alone. Certain apparatus can be taken to Ajax in the spring after it has been used during the fall term on the Toronto campus. Certain equipment needed for electrical demonstration cannot be bought and is being made specially. It has been out of stock since 1939.

Inevitably, Dean Young concluded, Ajax will go on expanding. "In 1946 and 1947 we will inevitably have a second year there, as well as yet another crop of freshmen," he said. "This fall we have 400 freshmen here; in the spring, 1,500 more will register at Ajax and will be ready to enter their second year next September along with the rest. That makes 1,900 first year students. Even if 25 per cent drop out, there will be 1,400 second year engineering students next fall. And the end isn't in sight for years."

700,000 Sq. Feet Floor Space In Ajax To Be Taken Over By Surplus Schoolmen

Co-operation Between Dominion, Province, and University Eases Congestion in Labs And Residences

To make room for an influx of students that may double its pre-war registration, the University of Toronto has obtained lease to 700,000 square feet of floor space in the huge Ajax plant of Defence Industries Limited as a post-war emergency measure. Reconstruction Minister C. D. Howe announced in Ottawa on the eve of V-J Day.

Situated 24 miles by highway from the Queen's Park campus, the new school at Ajax will be used to house and train first-year and later second-year students in Applied Science and Engineering, and possibly those in some chemistry and physics courses as well.

The work of converting the property into classrooms, laboratories, and residences is going forward now, and the first lectures will be given there in January to an anticipated 1,500 group of S.P.S. freshmen.

Plans are now being formulated for co-ordinating curricular, social, and athletic activities of Ajax students with those on the home campus.

The space leased, shaped like a letter "L" with each arm a mile long, is all within the plant compound and does not include the 600 houses built in Ajax village by Wartime Housing Limited. The university property does contain all the administrative buildings, the 21 big dormitories capable of accommodating up to 3,000 students, and a mile-long strip containing two of the six assembly lines, whose buildings are to be converted into classrooms and laboratories. Ajax college can therefore function as a completely self-contained University town.

The Ajax undertaking has been made possible through the co-operation of the Dominion and Provincial governments with the University, stated Col. W. E. Phillips, Chairman of the Board of Governors. Dominion authorities made the premises available, he said, and Premier Drew gave assurance that his government would underwrite the capital and additional current cost of operating the Ajax branch.

Built at a cost of $112,000,000, the Ajax plant closed on August 15 after four years of operations. Only a skeleton administration and maintenance staff at present occupies the premises, co-operating with University officials in the task of making the industrial village ready for student occupancy. Faculty committeemen have been making almost daily visits to the property for several weeks, securing first-hand information and attending to the details of the changeover.

LUXURY IS THE KEYNOTE of this residence common-room (bottom), one of 18 in the women's dormitory block. Incoming students will find these houses first, then, if necessary, spill over into the older houses.

Ajax at a Glance---

What is it? A huge townsite, home of the Defence Industries Ltd. shell-filling plant, stretching from the Queen Elizabeth Highway to the lake, 24 miles from the campus.

What do we get? An L-shaped lease, each arm a mile long, embracing the heart of the community. It is nearly four times the area of the home campus.

Why do we need it? Because 1,500 men are expected to enter first year Engineering in January.

Who will go there? For the present, those 1,500 men; later perhaps, a second year.

What will they do? Take all their lectures and laboratory classes there.

Will they live there? Yes, if they want to. There are residence facilities for 3,000. However, any who so desire may live in the city and commute.

Any recreational facilities? Yes. A gymnasium, theatre, dance-hall, library, eight tennis courts, baseball diamond, skating rink, soccer field. And Hart House Art and Music programs will be extended to Ajax.

Will the staff live there too? Yes; at least 75 of them. More will commute.

Will there be any women students? Probably.

In case of illness? There is a clinic, and a 36-bed hospital. Where do they eat? The Ajax cafeteria seats 1,000 at a time.

So the place is self-contained? Yes. It also has a central heating plant, Hydro, a laundry, fire-hall, post-office and bank, and all necessary shops and offices for maintenance and administration.

In fact, a complete college town? Yes.

"You are not special cases," he concluded, "but I know that you may have special problems. We are therefore establishing at 67 St. George St. an Advisory Bureau for Ex-Service Students. The Bureau will be staffed by men who have been in the armed forces during the war. In common with us all, they will consider you as individuals and not as mere numbers."

Turning to the place of the University in the modern world, Dr. Smith emphasized that "although the clash of arms has ended in a military victory, the conflict of philosophies still rages."

"The University," he said, "must conserve our cultural heritage; must extend our frontiers of knowledge and wisdom; must serve as a cultural nerve-centre for its city and for the whole world; yet I proclaim that its primary function is to teach."

"Sir James Jeans said after the last war that 'Science has given man control over nature before he has gained control over himself.' A few years later, H. G. Wells remarked that there is a race between catastrophe and education. Through education and only through education can man master the machine. That is the stark stake in the Battle of Ideas."

S-M-I-T-H--SMITH!

By E. ROSS McLEAN

The appointment had been with the President, but before the interview concluded the athlete, the debater, the student, the soldier and the man had also appeared.

The President had fitted the Player's about 3/4-inch into the amber cigarette holder, lighted it from a small, self-advertising book match, leaned back, and announced in the jargon of such occasions: "Shoot!"

He had studied in arts at King's College before his enlistment in the first war. He had had a not very distinguished extra-curricular program but he had been in the forward line of the College rugby team and during a scrim had broken his nose. Here he turned his nose and pointed uncertainly to a non-apparent spot on his nose where that painful injury was allegedly still recorded. Some of that lump, he explained.

Have you ever seen the game, he wondered. There are seven or eight men on each side. Four or five of these crouch in front, shoulder to shoulder and leaning against the shoulders of their opponents. (Here he almost disappeared behind his desk as he re-enacted his gridiron role of undergraduate days.) The referee drops the ball between the two forward lines and the push begins for possession of the ball. The rules of English rugby were given no further amplification.

He had done some debating too, he mentioned, leaving the forward lines in stubborn conflict. The college debating organization was the famous Haliburton Club (our objective). King's College, the new President of the University of Toronto had loyally paused to remind, is the oldest English-speaking university outside the British Isles.

Debating topics? Oh, he feared they were all quite innocuous though perhaps not so trite as "Is the Pen Mightier than the Sword?" They were all fairly academic on, rather, fairly abstract. That was the word he wanted.

He was sorry to say that there had been no debating of current affairs. And there had been obedience to a style of debating which, he was happy to say, is going out of vogue. Affirmative and negative in his days went with prepared speeches. From these they read and—like ships that pass in the night—neither was ever aware of the other man's presence. The only place where there was any collision of views was in the so-called rebuttal.

Under the modern system of debating this would not be tolerated, he observed happily, conscious of progress or a reasonable facsimile. The speakers today must adjust themselves to the other side's arguments on the spot and on their feet.

Came the war, as wars are wont to come, and Sidney Smith's enlistment. He had returned to Canada in January or February of 1919 and discovered that he would not be able to get back to school until September. Those, as he had told some of his colleagues the other day, were the unhappiest days of his life. Having lost—well, not lost, exactly; but in an academic sense—three years, he couldn't get to work but was obliged to wait—let's see: March, April, May, June, July, August—yes, six months. He could indeed feel sympathetic to the state of mind of the ex-servicemen returning to the campus. If ever there was—to use a Maritime term—a fish out of water, he was. His own recollections of that half-year wait formed the basis of his agreement with the decision to admit long-service veterans into the applied science and engineering courses first.

Once established at Dalhousie Law School after a summer of clerking at various retail shops, he had returned to his debating and athletic activities. A volleyball team on which he played had a relatively better record than the law school rugby team. He had also, of course, taken part in Moot Court and Mock Parliament together with today's Finance Minister, J. L. Ilsley, (that would be his debut, his guess would be); the wartime Navy Minister and now Premier of Nova Scotia, Angus L. Macdonald (or Angus L., as they called him); and the late Norman Rodgers, former Minister of Defense. There had been others who took positions in provincial governments in the Maritimes.

It had, he remarked in modest understatement, been a significant group.

Vic Frosh Hear Spencer UNRRA Expert to Speak

"There should be thanksgiving on this first peacetime convocation," said President W. T. Brown, introducing Chancellor A. C. Spencer, the speaker at the Victoria College Convocation.

In his address, Chancellor Spencer urged that we look forward to the future when strife will cease and the complications which beset the United Nations Organization will be overcome. After indicating the responsibilities of university graduates he gave the new students advice on their conduct at the University, stressing that there was no one to supervise their work and that they were on their own.

"Choose your objective and plan for it," he said. "Set it high that you may develop your character and have the satisfaction that comes from work well done. There are twice as many students this year as last, which makes the difficulties greater that face you, and there are ex-servicemen who also face the problem of reorientation."

An authority on the social problems of Europe today, Major J. A. Edmison will address an open meeting in the main hall of the Economics Building, Friday at 4.30. Prof. Harry M. Cassidy announced recently. The meeting will be sponsored by the School of Social Work.

A Montreal lawyer and alderman and a graduate of Queen's University, Major Edmison spent four years in the Canadian Army. He served with the European Regional Office of UNRRA as Deputy Regional Director of the Displaced Persons Division.

Dr. Cassidy of the School of Social Work will act as chairman of the meeting, to which all students are cordially invited. The lecture will be illustrated with slides.

"Vic is over a hundred years old. Be proud of Vic, and let Vic be proud of you," he said in closing.

Following the address of the new chancellor, Dean H. Bennett made the presentation of the prizes and the sticks.

Dalhousie Gazette Editorials Awarded Bracken Trophy

The Dalhousie Gazette, weekly student newspaper of Dalhousie University, Halifax, is the first winner of the Bracken Editorial Trophy, H. A. Richter, national president of the Canadian University Press, has announced.

Other competitors were The McGill Daily, Queen's Journal, The Varsity, The Manitoban, The Sheaf, and The Ubyssy.

Awarded to the C.U.P. paper with the best editorials on matters of nation-wide interest, the Trophy was donated by Progressive Conservative leader John Bracken last December to stimulate interest among college editors in affairs of national importance.

Member papers across Canada submit five editorials annually to judges chosen by the C.U.P. Rules specify that the award be made without regard to political implications. This year's judges were Gillis Purcell of The Canadian Press, John Bird of the Winnipeg Tribune, and Elmore Philpott of the Vancouver Sun.

"The Dalhousie Gazette was chosen both for clarity of expression and for development of thought in its editorials," Mr. Purcell stated. "The committee, which gave the winner a wide margin of superiority over its closest competitor, felt that its editorials were logical, concise, and—thank heaven—short. The selection of subject matter was interesting, timely, and intelligent."

Appoint S.P.S. Graduate New "Vic" Chancellor

Maj. Gen. A.C. Spencer, Camp Borden C.O., Accepts "Vic" Post

The Board of Regents of Victoria College departed from tradition this year when they chose Maj.-Gen. Alexander Charles Spencer, C.B.E., E.D., B.A.Sc., as the new Chancellor. Climaxing a long and successful career he was installed by Wilfred James, Chairman of the Board of Regents, on April 24.

General Spencer was born in London on Nov. 19, 1887. After graduating with honors from S.P.S. in 1908 he spent a year as an instructor there. After several years as a professional engineer he joined the 1st Hussars as the Non-Permanent Active Militia as a subaltern, and went overseas as Adjutant of the 2nd Canadian Divisional Cavalry Squadron in 1915.

While overseas he was mentioned in despatches several times and returned to Canada with the rank of lieutenant-colonel. He entered the employ of Imperial Oil Company in Sarnia while resuming his connections with the 1st Hussars in London. Then he spent a year in Germany working with scientists of I. G. Farbenindustrie on the production of synthetic gasoline. Before retiring in 1929, he organized a Technical and Research Division at Imperial Oil.

In 1930 he resumed his military activities and gained an active rating in the 1st Hussars. After numerous transfers he assumed the position of Commander of the Camp Borden Military Command in 1942. He accepted the Chancellorship of Victoria upon retiring from the Army General Spencer has four daughters and one son who served as an officer in the present war. His home is in London where his daughters have attended the University of Western Ontario.

Prof. Lasserre, Dr. Henderson, Die in Summer

For more than 20 years on the faculty of French at Victoria University, Prof. Henri Lasserre, 69, died suddenly at his home last summer. He had been retired for several years.

Born in Geneva, Switzerland, Prof. Lasserre received his education in Geneva, Berlin, and Paris, and was a graduate in law. For some years he practiced as a lawyer in Geneva, coming to Canada in 1921. Two years later he joined the Victoria staff. He was president of the Robert Owen Foundation.

Only ten days before his death, he received a cable saying that his son Georges, of Paris, had been liberated from a prisoner-of-war camp in Germany.

Professor of pharmacy and pharmacology at the University of Toronto, and international authority on anesthetic gases, Dr. Velyien E. Henderson, 68, died suddenly last August 6th, of coronary thrombosis.

Dr. Henderson was known throughout the world for his researches on anesthetic gases and his discovery of cyclopropane. Since 1921 he was chairman of the Committee on Pharmacy of the Canadian Medical Association, and chairman of the joint committee that worked out the Canadian Formulary.

At the time of his death he and his C.M.A. committee had just completed a new and up-to-date Canadian Formulary, designed especially to meet the probable needs of any general plan of health insurance.

Adjust Intramural Card As Enrolment Climbs

With the return of Intercollegiate sports the Intramural setup will resume its prewar status as a breeding ground of material for the big teams. It will enable the ordinary man to get his true enjoyment out of sport and the extraordinary to fit himself for intercollegiate competition. Along with this renovation comes the shift of loyalty from the faculty to the University of Toronto as a whole, and the long-awaited revival of real college spirit.

The huge increase in registration should provide an added interest in sport, and the way things are shaping up there just won't be the accommodation and time to make larger schedules possible. Lectures will run through till five o'clock each day in most faculties, and with daylight saving going at the end of the month there will be a definite curtailment in the available time for outdoor activities. Where last year there were two and a half hours of available daylight, this year there is one, but schedules will be juggled and allowances made to complete the shift back to the prewar setup.

The sports which are primarily affected are the fall team sports, rugby and soccer. A limited schedule, however, has been drawn up to enable each team to have opportunity to stage several well-organized practices, much as it was done at the arena last winter in the Jennings' Cup loop. This, it is hoped, will provide the players with at least nominal condition for the season and, perhaps, help them stave off that tired feeling, at least till they reach a bed.

There are rumors to the effect that volleyball will this year assume its rightful position as a more rigid team sport. The league will not be padded up to ninety-team proportions, but show instead a limited number of good squads to improve the calibre of the game.

The importance of having good men to represent each faculty on the standing committees cannot be stressed too greatly under the new intercollegiate system. The emphasis will be on a strong committee to back up the respective sports, and to choose the best possible men to carry Toronto's colors afield. The interfaculty in the individual sports will be the recognized criterion for these important choices.

Many new points will crop up this year due to the reorganization throughout the campus. Meds have the Premier years to organize and coordinate into their intramural athletics, and nearly every faculty is finding some difficulties arising in an otherwise rosy future. General managers of interfaculty teams are supposedly assuming their prewar positions with the old responsibilities again this year.

In the meanwhile, tennis, golf, track, will be starting soon. Faculty organization should be well underway to keep pace with these. Now is the time to get things rolling.

Rugby Recess Over, Stevens at Reins Trains U. of T. Squad

By MICKEY MICHASIW

Football as usual!

That is the intercollegiate slogan for 1945. After an absence of five long years, King Football returns with glittering promises for a thrill-packed season of cheering pennant waving crowds, yells of "Yea Varsity" and "Dirty McGill," pretty co-eds and perhaps the odd pipe-smoking coon-coated male. It all adds up to a very interesting season.

The last time a Varsity club took to the green sod of the Stadium was during that hectic fall of '39 and it proved just that to the charges of Warren Stevens as the University of Western Ontario team romped home in front of the pack to cop the championship and the Yates Cup. The Big Blues started off the season with a win over McGill and then proceeded to lose four straight. McGill said "uncle" in the final encounter.

The last time the Johnny Cope Memorial Trophy was awarded was during that same fall as Doug Turner emerged from School as the champion of the beaten. Other names that were on the roster included Jarvis, Somers, MacQuarrie, MacLachlan, MacMillan and Prince.

The last championship team was in 1936 when the Tricolor from Kingston was trampled in the playoff. It was even-steven the following semester as Varsity became the first intercollegiate team to lose the title in overtime as Queen's used the extra twenty minutes to good advantage. It is doubtful if the Moaner will ever let Varsity forget that game.

All that is but ink in the records now. Monday saw the opening practice of the 1945 team as some sixty-odd aspirants pranced up and down the back campus eagerly striving to impress the critical eye of Warren Stevens. They came from all colleges. They came from high school clubs; from service clubs; from the services where they had more important worries than mere football.

Names? Unimportant details which the mentor must worry about. It would only add to his troubles to hand-pick a team. The downtown press has very kindly built up a strong club for Stevens. Amongst rumors emanating from that area are such names as Tommy Waldon, Bobby Coulter, Bob Henry, Frank Williams, Mel Lawson, Wayne Pyne, Stew Scott, Bert Haman, Murray Bulger, Joe Woodyatt, Nilo Cioti, Bob Armstrong, Johnny Farmer, the Jacobs brothers, Jackie McLean and a host of others.

Some of these were out for the three-hour grind but most were not. The others were players with no reputation to back them up and who must rely on sweat and guts to make the team. These are the fellows who deserve the credit for turning out on hopes alone.

Daily practices are in order from now until the opener at Kingston on October 20 with a possibility of an exhibition game on the thirteenth of October.

he must attempt to demonstrate the value of serious literature, as well as the very real pleasure it can give. It also forces him to insist on the relegation of the second-rate to its proper place, regardless of its financial success.

This policy is not always easy to follow. The relative values of books cannot be established with a ruler, and there is no unified standard of criticism. "I think that literature must be viewed both as a branch of the fine arts and as an instrument of social influence," the novelist James Farrell writes (in A Note on Literary Criticism); and he then suggests that this "duality of literature" renders impossible the general acceptance of a single critical standard. Farrell discerns two major theories of literary criticism—the aesthetic and the functional. Both theories, when carried

PROGRESS—?

Things are looking up as far as enrollment in classes and men's inter-collegiate sports are concerned. The era of crowded camps, week-ends at McGill to hang on to the tail-end of the snake dance to climax rugby games, has returned. As for women's inter-collegiate sports, the horizon is dubiously darkened. The potential participants are not lacking in ambition nor ability, but the oil that eases all wheels, money, is a negative quantity. The gate receipts for college games are drafted to pay for men's inter-collegiate sports only. That leaves the feminine element to do what they will with the receipts from the parking lot. This might serve as a concrete proof that Emily Pankhurst's work was a dismal failure.

One spark of hope remains, as the Directorate has not yet met to decide the ultimate fate of the women's sports. So we shall carry on as last year, which should prove of interest considering the laudable co-operation of all faculties, their energetic competition, and the new energy which should inject more life into inter-faculty games.

EVERY YEAR ABOUT THIS TIME . . .

We look around for familiar faces and friends, checking how many have fallen below the examiner's axe. Doorthy Sander, President of the Tennis Club, has been located, and is busy organizing the tournament. However, Sue Gray, prime mover of basketball, has us worried as to her whereabouts.

Eavesdropping can be very profitable, especially on the campus and if the topic of conversation is concerning badminton. Students are interested in a fall opening of the Badminton Club rather than a spring tournament when exams dampen one's ardor for the game.

to extremes, produce incorrect and dangerous criticism, the aesthetic developing into an art-for-art's-sake point of view, and the functional establishing as the sole criterion of writing its social aspects. Particularly in recent years, there have been many fanatical supporters of both theories, and their violence has driven balanced critics to extreme positions of their own. There are, of course, a number of critics who still attempt to combine the better elements of both the aesthetic and the functional in their criticism, and it is from a blend of this sort that the best critical insight is obtained.

IT'S A NEW YEAR THIS YEAR . . .

And the biggest year yet! Along with the annual crop of "freshies" with question marks in their wide eyes, and the seasoned seniors returning to their courses, there is another element . . . the service men and women. Sailors from the decks of destroyers; soldiers who stormed beach-heads, and pilots familiar with the night trails over enemy territory are beginning the new College term. To them, and to all the students at Varsity, EATON'S wishes a bright and successful year.

Peacefulness Permeates Frosh As Girls Bear Brunt of Hazing

Peace has returned to the University. Not only are the European and Japanese wars at an end, but the traditional civil war between freshmen and others, and the cross-conflict between freshmen with yellow ties and freshmen with green.

In former years the presence of two opposing ties was the signal for a life-and-death struggle, the air thick with shouts and bright with flashing shears. This fall freshmen of different faculties are passing each other daily with nothing more than a furtive glance.

The women; bless them, carry on with hazing of the psychological kind. Freshies clad in bedsheets and placarded with phone numbers are still in evidence, proof that the old-time spirit still lingers. But the men of faculty after faculty, eyeing the biggest and maddest freshmen classes in years, have prudently declared an amicable truce.

Only the wearing of red and white ties will distinguish University College freshmen from upper-classes. And the ties are scheduled to come off after the Soph-Frosh banquet.

In Dentistry the men are not being initiated due to the difficulty in procuring ties. The Dental Nurses have already been paraded around the campus decked out in orange lab coats and bandages.

The S.P.S. initiation, formerly one of the most rigorous on the campus, has become a post-war casualty. Murray McCulloch, President of the Engineering Society, stated: "We feel that the frosh are sufficiently mature to get into the old School spirit without hazing or hesitation." He said that the freshman rules would be observed on a voluntary basis until their termination at the Freshman Reception in October.

At Victoria Bill Wonders and his committee are making plans for the traditional initiation ceremony—the "Bob," with first and second year students holding frequent secret rehearsals to prepare for the event.

Somewhat perplexed by the complete lack of hazing to date, Medical freshmen are apprehensive as to the future. They will receive their red ties shortly but nothing more violent has been planned.

Initial initiation plans have been made at St. Michael's and will be announced to the freshman class over the week-end. Ben Hurley, second year representative, would say little but implied that rebellious frosh would be tried by a Mount Court.

While the freshmen are getting off lightly, the initiation of freshettes has changed little from former years. St. Hilda's freshies will soon be modelling halos in the college colors and the customary placards. The formal gowning ceremony, which ends initiation, will take place Monday but the residence girls "still have several surprises in store for them."

Freshettes from St. Joseph's report undergoing a sleepless Wednesday night and have been seen attired in odds and ends and double blue bandages. Seniors also took some of the girls to St. Michael's residences where the occupants were entertained with a song and dance.

Kay Annis, second year president of Victoria College, is completing preparations for the freshies' introduction to the college. Feature of the ceremonies will be a Mock Court.

Ancients' Problems Likened to Own By Oxford Scholar

"To-day in the Universities of the world there is a tendency towards overspecialization," Sir Richard Livingstone, M.A., LL.D., vice-chancellor of Oxford University and president of Corpus Christi College, told The Varsity.

"A ceaseless battle is raging between Deweyism and Liberalism in education," Sir Richard continued, "a battle meaningless to the uninformed, but crucial to those who know. Both sides are exchanging spasmodic intellectual blows."

Prof. John Dewey, prominent United States philosopher and educationist, has many followers in rejecting as unprofitable any intensive effort to seek educational and philosophical guidance from past, Sir Richard explained.

"The Deweyists believe in tying education exclusively to the here and now," he continued. One of that school once objected to the study of Shakespeare in the United States, because Shakespeare writes about primroses and in America there are no primroses."

Sir Richard, on the contrary, emphatically believes that the world as a whole can benefit from the so-called Ancients: Aristotle, Socrates, and Plato. But men cannot take advantage of these benefits unless they understand the fundamental principles of the theories of the Ancients and apply them to the problems of this world.

"Outstanding examples from the school of thought of which I am speaking," he said, "are such notable men of the 19th century as Gladstone and Prof. Gilbert Murray. These Liberals came out of Greece!"

"For the Dewey school to follow the path it has chosen," he continued, "is not unlike a child cutting loose from its parents. What we are today is based on what we were yesterday; and if the Deweyists still cling to their train of thought, the world will soon be nothing. For with no clear basis, their past will have been shallow and rooted in their own age."

"The process of formulating facts and trains of thought will have been negative, for apparently the Dewey school are only concerned with the bare facts our children should know: where wheat comes from, and so on."

Sir Richard firmly believes that all students should at least attempt to acquaint themselves with Aristotle, Socrates, and Plato. "It is not necessary to read them in Greek; a suitable translation complete with adequate footnotes is sufficient."

"Prof. Cornford of Cambridge University has compiled a very fine volume of Plato that even the most backward undergraduate could make sense of," he said. "I wager that such a student would be amazed at the similarity between the problems of the Greeks and those of our own day."

Discussing Canada, Sir Richard declared himself delighted to have found such a sound and capable University as that of Toronto. "The standards are as high today as they were when I last visited Toronto more than ten years ago," he said.

Of undergraduate newspapers in England, he said that they had been suspended during the war years, but that he expected them to be resumed again. He added that they were college rather than university papers, and tended to be independent of the campus as a whole.

Ideas Mightier Than Bombs

Dr. William R. Taylor, last night, at his formal installation as principal of University College in Convocation Hall, likened university courses in literature, history, and philosophy unto "avenues by which we are led to see that ideas are mightier than bombs."

He said more than factual and technical knowledge is needed. "What we need," he emphasized, "is a growing perception of the real goals of human endeavor, and of the fundamental principles which sustain the happiness of the individual and of society."

Referring to the struggle for an enduring peace, he said that in this battle we are all conscripts and that the University-trained men and women have a conspicuous part to play.

Dr. Taylor divided the students at the University in this first post-war session into three divisions. "There are, first, those who left us in the flesh to do battle on land, on sea, or in the air with the foe, and return to live among us in the spirit. Then there are the students who are returning to study after months or years spent in the various fields of national service at home or abroad. And finally there are those students who by reason of their age have been untouched personally by the major disturbances of the war."

"It is through the mingling of these three streams of student-life," he explained, "that the collective quality of the life of this institution will be determined in the post-war years."

Reminding his listeners that it was their responsibility to find the way out of the present lapsed condition of culture, he suggested that we dare not lose our nerve. "No political arrangement, national or international, can be made a success unless deep underneath it there is in the hearts of men the will and purpose to sustain it," maintained Dr. Taylor.

"There must be in the mind of the people," he continued, "the purpose to make it work. It lies pretty much in our hands whether we of this generation rise into a better order of things or sink with a worse one."

The new principal was introduced by Dr. Sidney E. Smith.

The Doctors are Deluged

Unprecedented numbers have jammed the Health Service schedule. Perhaps you're one of those who should seek an appointment right away; perhaps you're in the waiting category (page 4).

Deweyism vs. Liberalism

Sir Richard Livingstone gives The Varsity his point of view on the "here and now" philosophy of education. He dislikes the Dewey school but he likes the U. of T. (page 1).

Stevens Is Swamped

Warren Stevens says he's as lost now as when he first came to Varsity. He has so many would-be grid girl heroes he doesn't know what to do (page 3).

A Course in Journalism

The Varsity has big plans afoot for professional coaching in journalistic work. It may be unofficial, extra-curricular, unprecedented. It is a serious effort (page 2).

New Athletics Director Stevens Is Back Agrin

By MICKEY MICHASIW

It may be true that "a rolling stone gathers no moss" but the wild-ot philosopher from whose works those undying words were culled later added "but it gathers a lot of polish."

Athletic Director Warren Stevens, recently discharged from the R.C.A.F., is not exactly a rolling stone, and undoubtedly possesses little moss, but he has traversed the terrain from Syracuse to Montreal to Toronto to the R.C.A.F., and finally returned to Toronto—which adds up to about his share of miles. And the polish that he accumulated during his travels, coupled with his natural ability, his friendliness and his willingness—in fact his eagerness to help out athletes—has added no little enthusiasm to the "Welcome Back" sign sported verbally by the entire campus.

To freshmen and sophomores alike, Stevens is but a legend as it was two years ago that he laid aside his athletic duties to don Airforce blue. From there he assumed the role of officer in charge of the medical reconditioning program at the various convalescent hospitals in Canada. Patients who were indirectly under his care claim that the work of Flight-Lieutenant Stevens was even more invaluable than his former excellent contribution towards furthering the name of the University of Toronto on Canadian athletic fields.

The issue of The Varsity dated March 15, 1932 carried the story: "The Board of Governors of the University of Toronto has appointed Mr. Warren Stevens, B.A., of Montreal, to the Department of Athletics and Physical Training to become Director of Athletics."

An accompanying story related how the Board of Governors had scanned the horizon in search of a man with brains as well as brawn and it was only after lengthy consultation that the appointment was made. Time and time again Stevens has proved that the confidence the powers-that-be vested in him was justified.

Of Canadian parentage, Steve attended Syracuse University where he excelled in football, baseball, basketball and track. He captained both the football and baseball teams. Aside from his prowess on the field, he was popular in campus activities and was president of his junior year.

After graduation Stevens moved to Montreal to perform for the powerful football squad commonly known as the Winged Wheelers. Alternating between his quarter and flying wing positions, Steve proved to be the main cog in the machine that swept everything including the Regina Rough Riders, in its path to the Grey Cup.

Then came the appointment to his present post and, as is so often the case, he joined the ranks of the benedicts shortly after. Given time to acquaint himself with the new surroundings, he served as what is modernly called "the chief gestic" of the '32 championship team. So impressive was his work that Dr. Harry Hobbs stepped aside as head coach and the fall of '33 found Steve with his first championship team.

Another credit-feather in his hat is Lew Hayman, who joined Stevens at Varsity as intermediate coach and then blossomed forth into the most renowned coach in Canadian football. The two were commonly referred to by football circles as "the boys from Syracuse" and their opinion was classed as law before hostilities put an abrupt halt to high class rugby.

Now Steve has rolled up his sleeves and is back where he left off. His worries are numerous with the enlarged enrolment, the re-formation of the football team and the Ajax problem. The worries are there but so is the solution with the return of Stevens. The future of athletics on the campus is secure.

OVERCROWDED?

There were once three professors who were discussing the affairs of the campus; and, as professors will, they lectured at one another. The evening waxed on, the argument grew warmer, and finally, as professors finally do, one of them came to the point. Leaping upon a chair, he addressed to his colleagues the stirring harangue that follows:

"Need the student lose by being packed into crowded classrooms?"

"That, gentlemen, is one of the major academic questions that the coming session must answer. With extra chairs being brought into lecture rooms, with the overflow of the most crowded classes in campus history sitting on benches, desks, and even on the floor, we professors must more than ever lecture stubbornly into a sea of faces and trust the students to gather what they may."

"That, gentlemen, I submit to you, is mass-production education. That, gentlemen, will in time reduce the University to a mere stamping-machine for producing degrees. In classes so swamped we have lost all contact with our students. Time was when education was a personal affair. Time was when Mark Hopkins sat on one end of the log, and the farm-boy on the other. Time was when my students and I exchanged ideas over the seminar table, working in double harness to solve the problems of the world. All that is gone, and I for one deplore it."

At which point, somewhat exhausted by his effort, he sat down. In the lull that followed, a slower-spoken colleague murmured, "It seems to me that to deal with this problem we must first determine what education is. Is education, as the Greeks thought..."

Here the other two, bored with abstract argument, howled him down.

But as they argue on, round and round and up and down, they perceived, at first hazily and then clearly and with chagrin, that the theorist had been right after all. It is impossible to assess the educational value of today's overcrowded classrooms without having first decided what education should drive at.

Education, we are agreed, is something more than acquiring facts out of books. No one need come to University to do that. Education involves adjustment of the mind to reality, and of the personality to society.

It is plain, then, that the intricate process of being educated is divided, as Aristotle would say, into two parts. The mind is trained by studies, the character by the impact of one's fellows. Now on a crowded campus the first of these will suffer; the second will benefit. The student will have to work harder to train his mind, but he need have little fear of becoming socially set and hardened. For the very expansion that is so bad in the classrooms is an undeniable advantage everywhere else. No one need complain that he is stagnating in a narrow circle, when he is among 9,000 students who have seen every part of the world, have lived every kind of life, have done every kind of work including the work of fighting, and have themselves discuss the problems of the world in a thousand varying contexts.

And, for that matter, is the overcrowding so very bad in the classrooms? It need not be. The student will have to work harder for what he gets, because the instructor will have less time to spoon-feed him. He will have to engage in discussions outside the classroom, because there is no time for them inside. He will have to present concise problems to the professor in his office, now that there is less chance of buttonholing him after class. But we have never seen how work, discussion, and concise thinking could be classified as disadvantages.

The widened social horizon can be accompanied by a widened horizon of the mind, if the student will only awaken to the unique potentialities of the situation in which he is placed, and determine to take advantage of them. He can no longer make a pretence of learning by being taught. He will have to make learning an active process. But the very effort can sharpen his mind to a finer point than could the former, more relaxing system. The University today can present a rich and challenging experience. The student has only to make up his mind to take advantage of it.

Movies

Buchenwald Home-Style

Girl Number 217, to be shown at the Royal Alexandra next week, is an antidote to Hollywood's routine anti-Nazi productions. There is nothing glamorous, either in subject or in treatment. The war background so prevalent in The Rainbow is dropped in favor of the German family unit.

The prosperous German grocer, his thrifty wife, his Nordic daughter, his officer-son, and the daughter's intellectual fiancé manage to make their home concentration camp brutal enough for Tanya, the Russian slave-girl without Gestapo aid.

There is no plot in the conventional movie sense, but a steady amassing of effortless brutality whose impression is as powerful as it is lasting.

The acting has an intensity that from Hollywood would be melodrama. The emphasis of word and facial expression is almost startling to one accustomed to a more controlled or less feeling interpretation. Elena Kuzina as Tanya and Vassili Zaichikov as the scientist are particularly notable as individuals. The rest are types, but types well cast.

Photography and sound are used to build atmosphere with extraordinary success. The musical score (replaced during the screen credits by the tramp of marching feet) offers more than the customary waves of crescendos and pianissimos. It is more than background; it seems an integral part of the emotions and actions portrayed.

—BARBARA JONES

Announcing that he intended to Beat Queen's if it Killed Him, Warblin Step-ins, popular Varsity rugby coach, revealed last night that he had spent the past two years in Ottawa working on an electronic device to locate the ball by radar.

"The whole point of rugby is to know where the ball is," declared Coach Step-ins. "That's where the brain-work comes in. Any pig-headed bruiser on the squad can carry it across the line. But no one can carry the ball unless he knows where it is. That stands to reason."

Having proved this last point exhaustively with diagrams, Mr. Step-ins went on to recall past games where ignorance of the location of the ball had proved the deciding factor. "At McGill in '26, Brzyzdzinski in a spurt of superb abandon galloped through every man on the opposing team. But did he score? No. Because he wasn't carrying the ball. In his confusion he had tucked under his arm not the ball but his helmet. On the kickoff the ball had landed in the water-pail."

"My purpose is to change all that. With every player equipped with a radar receiver, it will be possible to play a really scientific game."

Asked whether the radar receivers were portable, Coach Step-ins replied that they were not. "We shall have to provide each player with a jeep," he said. "But what of that? Rugby is a scientific game. We are not out to pit beef against beef." He added that besides that there was a shortage of beef.

"I look forward to the day," he concluded, "when the muscle element will have vanished altogether. Rugby is a scientific game. It should be played scientifically, if possible by remote control. I am now working on a (don't breathe this to a soul)—robot squad."

Announcement

Students interested in journalism as a possible career will be given an opportunity this year to participate in an informal semester course covering the profession in many of its wider aspects. Top-ranking writers and editors have agreed to meet with Varsity staff members during the first term and to discuss with them those phases of journalism not touched in The Varsity's own field of activity—metropolitan daily work, business newspapers, magazines, press associations, etc.

Interviews are being conducted daily between two and four in the afternoon in The Varsity office, Room 42A, University College. Everyone interested in participating in this informal journalistic training is invited to apply for interview.

Fuller details of the course, speakers, meeting dates, will be announced in next Mondays issue.

Art, Music and Drama

No Precedent at Prom

Students may rest assured that the Prom concerts are continuing in the traditional manner. The orchestra presented a program of works not too familiar to the audience, but tradition was rescued by Lansing Hatfield whose fine baritone voice lent itself to the lighter songs that the fans enjoy. Conductor Russell Gerhart seemed perfectly at home on the podium and achieved remarkable results with the usually rampant violins. His interpretation of three movements of the Little Russian Symphony of Tchaikovsky was effective. The Proms are gradually approaching the ideal of a complete symphony on a program.

Until we glanced at the program for next week, we had hoped that Mr. Gerhart was setting a precedent for the exclusive playing of good music. But because our hopes were short-lived we feel it imperative to point out the reasons why an agglomeration of shallow pieces is undesirable, even for summer concerts.

In the first place, good music is just as acceptable in the summer as in other seasons, since an appreciation of the masters is in no way dependant on the temperature. Secondly, the programs cannot be justified even from the educational point of view, since it has been conclusively demonstrated that the only way to generate an understanding of good music among laymen is to subject them consistently to good music. Further, ill-behaved audiences are a result of light programs. Anyone who has listened to broadcasts by the Boston Pops orchestra will have noticed that this is what has occurred there.

Mr. Gerhart's career as a conductor tells a story which has a bearing on this argument. It is the story of the development of a small, ignored string ensemble into a full-sized symphony orchestra in the town of Altoona, Pa.

Altoona boasted of the largest railway yards in the country and no other distinction in particular until the orchestra came along. Now it claims to be the most cultured little city in the United States and the only one in which the railway workers may be heard whistling Beethoven and Brahms. How this transition was accomplished should be of interest to those who would like to see the Prom concerts do more for their audience than they are doing now.

The secret of the success of this venture was to keep the programs on a high level and never play down to the audience. By continually making the audience reach, Mr. Gerhart was able to enlarge the scope of their appreciation. He feels, as most experts do, that it is a mistake to cater to what is commonly called public taste. Of course, the programs had to be tempered with smaller, easier works but the rule was to stick to good music at all times. The wisdom of the rule has been proven by the progress made.

Mr. Gerhart was full of enthusiasm for the idea of the Prom concerts. He thinks that the orchestra benefits from the policy of having guest conductors. "They learn to follow any conductor, whereas the musician who plays under one man is lost when there is a new conductor. It is the best schooling they can get."

"But getting back to Altoona," Mr. Gerhart continued, "It is really remarkable how people have taken to serious music. With a little effort the same thing can be done for people everywhere."

Considering Mr. Gerhart's remarks, it becomes apparent that the Altoona Symphony Orchestra is a more useful organization than the Toronto Philharmonic is now or can ever hope to be so long as its policy of playing "lighter" (Continued on page 5)

Tom, Dick or Joe? Well, I Don't Know Says Rugby Coach

When Warren Stevens was asked how the Varsity football squad was coming along, he merely stared blankly. The reason is quite apparent after watching one of the practice sessions. New faces spring up every day, some with ability, some with ambition. The first couple of days saw some Sixty-odd aspirants on hand. Wednesday hit an all time high with over 100 in attendance. Names and faces don't seem to jibe any more. Joe, who was a 140-pound half on Monday turned up as a 200-pound middle on Wednesday. Yes, coaching is a headache.

Steve went on to say that he feels as lost now as he did on first coming to Varsity. Then, fellows with scrap-books were sidelined for others with more ability.

The only comment Stevens would pass on the team was that they were a "fair looking bunch." With only five days of conditioning under their belts, the fellows are on the soft side and few are yet capable of showing their true colors. Twenty new backs put in their first appearance Wednesday, and yesterday found a number of strange candidates.

Today, pads will be given out so that the initial blocking and tackling session can be held. Just how far the available equipment will go around is a question that is bothering the team coaches.

Although he hated to discuss it, Steve admitted that some heavy cutting will be in order before that first game with McMaster on October 13. The team is allowed to carry 20 men, but a further 20 will be retained for practice purposes. The latter will not be barred from intramural rugby as they will not be members of the team.

music continues. The tragic aspect of the situation is that in the Prom concerts there are the potentialities of a great service to the citizens of Toronto. These potentialities are being destroyed by a policy based on the fallacy that people prefer mediocre music to good music.

Track Stars Conditioned For Forthcoming Meet Come Rain or Shine

One of the happiest and most enthusiastic gentlemen around these parts is none other than Hec Phillips who, when not occupied with gym classes is generally found at the Stadium pacing some sprinter.

The cigar-smoking track coach is devoting his fullest attention towards grooming the trackers for the forthcoming intercollegiate track meet at Montreal on October 26.

"There is a lot of material around but the fellows must get out to train, and get out soon. That means rain or shine," the former Olympic star emphasized. "In picking out the team, definite consideration will be given to men who have trained conscientiously."

Hec's pet pride are two high jumpers both from School. Bill Kerr and Art Jackes both maintained a torrid pace last year when new interfaculty records were posted on a number of occasions.

Two former milers are back from the services. Intercollegiate mile record holder Dave Crichton is just out of the Airforce while Phil Shackleton and the Army have also parted.

The freshman situation is especially promising. Joe Taylor from St. Andrew's is a potential distance star and the sprinters include, McMaster's Earl Deacon, Vaughan's Joe Woodyatt, and Jim O'Brien from North Toronto. Others include J. A. Grierson, J. Doll, and Don Sabiston.

Experience is on hand also in the persons of Frank Fordyce, Bill (Mouse) Fielding, Cliff James and Amodeo Antoni.

"Another event will be the Inter-

Rugby Players Return Monday

Contrary to the various rumors prevalent on the campus, the University of Toronto students now performing for the football clubs in the O.R.F.U. and the Big Four have been granted an extension of time and have not been suspended.

A blanket permit has been issued allowing these players to perform for their respective teams up to October 1. Then, they have the alternative of returning to the Varsity folds or applying to the Athletic Association for a permit to continue playing for outside teams. According to athletics officials however, such a permit has never been asked for by a player capable of playing for a University team.

collegiate intermediate harrier," Hec continued happily, "The arrangements are to be completed soon and the event will be held here."

A further event on the agenda is the Novice and Freshman Meet—formerly the Junior Meet—which is scheduled for October 11.

As a parting shot, Hec cautioned all track aspirants to arrange for their medicals at their earliest opportunity as the closing date is October 11. Although second and third year men may run under last year's category, he advised them to see Miss Boyd in the Athletic Office to complete arrangements for the medicals.

UP IN THE AIR—

They haven't said yes; they haven't said no, regarding women's intercollegiate sports. But experience has drummed into our befuddled head the soundness of the old adage "Be prepared for any eventuality." If not this year, intercollegiate sports will come next year, or the next. Transportation difficulties will have eased, housing accommodation will permit visiting teams to bunk within at least ten miles of the campus.

We shake ourselves out of a reminiscent dream about the dear dead days before the war when the atom bomb belonged in the Buck Rogers strip, and commence to muse on the history of women's intercollegiate sports. The '41 Toronto Torontonensis records December, 1920 as the first intercollegiate venture. Queen's and McGill challenged Varsity to participate in a basketball tournament at Kingston. The financial angle was solved by collecting 25c from each woman in the three universities. In later years they resorted to the sale of favours at football games and the not-too-lucrative parking-lot scheme.

Hockey began its brief career in '21. Students felt that the maximum utility of their funds was not reached in the lady-like exhibitions of hockey. Tennis took the place of hockey, in the form of an annual five-university tournament. Four universities competed in swimming from '36 to '41, and badminton entered the picture in '38 for a three-year run.

New and Entrenous

LET GEORGE DO IT!

By E. ROSS McLEAN

Mr. George Dimson, it is encouraging to note, has thrown away the "Under New Management" sign and is, the gods of restaurateurs willing, here to stay.

Mr. Dimson is the cherubic proprietor of what is now labeled as the St. George Grill where timid predecessors formerly feared to discard the above-mentioned "Under New Management" placard lest fickle trade pass by their portals and lead to their hasty retirement. But Mr. Dimson, now! Mr. Dimson has confidently announced that "he has a good lease."

Facts pertaining to the career of our Mr. Dimson were acquired yesterday across the laundry sink in which the manager was massaging his restaurant's chinaware and cutlery. He has been in the profession for 25 years around-and-about this village, having lately been established at Bloor and Dovercourt Road.

"I'm a Greek but I was born in Asia Minor. (Here Mr. Dimson's finger-nail tested the tenacity of syrup on a banana split sundae dish.) In a place called Smyrna."

"How do you spell that?" we wondered. "Z-y—" we prompted. "S-m-y-r-n-a," he corrected. He has been in business on the campus for six months which is quite a stay for the St. George Grill, nee Oposonia.

How did Mr. Dimson happen to change the name of the restaurant, we wondered. It was a whim of a sign painter, it seemed, a sign painter who arrived during the summer to freshen up the Blue Ribbon Tea signboard above the shop. "The painter was there," explains Mr. Dimson, "and he's painting out 'Oposonia' and is putting my name. My name's George and so he says why don't you put 'Saint' and I says 'Go ahead if you want to.' But name really don't make much difference," he opined. "It's quality's gonna count!"

Book matches distributed by the Oposonia in former days carried the helpful translation of the restaurant's name. "Oposonia," the match cover claimed, "is a Latin phrase meaning 'dainty edibles'."

Did Mr. Dimson know that Oposonia was, however, not a Latin phrase but a Greek word? "Iss what? Iss Ladin?" I dunno. It's girls' name, I know."

"Yes. It's lady's name. Oposonia is one the goddesses; no—one of the Seerens. Wasn't it?" Mrs. Dimson confirmed her husband's recollection of mythology with a silent nod.

"She's one these Seerens who are trying to fool Ulysses to stay. There's real story. He put wax in his ears. He's smart this Ulysses." Mr. Dimson paused to examine an ice cream dish.

"You work fairly hard?"

"Yes, I do a lot of work for one man. I'm trying to struggle on. I haven't been able to do very much so far. I cook and do dishes and sometimes when we're busy I wait on tables. Tuesdays we close and I get little bit of rest. Every Tuesday I close it rains so I get lotsa rest."

Mr. Dimson lifted a tray of rinsing dishes and took them away to dry.

SPECIAL FRESHMAN ISSUE

Editor Lines Up Three Experts For Press Club Discussions

Three ranking professional journalists have already accepted invitations to attend meetings of The Varsity Press Club and to discuss with members methods and problems peculiar to particular phases of the profession, Hugh Kenner, Varsity editor-in-chief, revealed today.

H. Napier Moore, editor of Maclean's Magazine and editorial director of the Maclean-Hunter Publishing Company Ltd., is slated to deal with the magazine field. Ronald A. McEachern, one-time member of The Varsity staff himself and editor of The Financial Post, has been asked to discuss business newspapers. Opening the series will be John M. Elson, associate editor of Industrial Canada and veteran lecturer to the University's extension course in Journalism.

"Mr. Elson is expected to open the series with a discussion of journalism in its broader aspects," Editor Kenner said. "It is felt that a general, comprehensive picture of the profession should be given before we get down to dealing in detail with segments of it. I believe Mr. Elson's own experience over a number of years here and abroad equip him to lead off our discussions on the right note."

The editor-in-chief explained that The Varsity Press Club will not be open automatically to all members of the staff. Students who sign up to work for The Varsity will be eligible for election to Press Club membership only after they have given evidence of their ability to meet The Varsity's standards for reporting and writing. It is meant primarily for students with serious journalistic ambitions.

To assist would-be reporters in developing quickly to the point where they can be awarded Press Club membership, Mr. Kenner explained that an extensive course in newspaper writing is being prepared for the entire Varsity staff.

"We feel that we are in a position this year to offer such a course of extra-curricular lectures," he said. "There are a number of our senior editors with considerable practical experience in daily newspaper, press association, and trade paper work. The responsibility of training our staff will fall to them."

First lecture in this newspaper writing series will be given as soon as registration of reporters is completed, possibly late this week or immediately after Thanksgiving. Reporters, both men and women, have been asked to apply for interview any afternoon between two and four o'clock at The Varsity office, Room 42A, University College.

No Complaints Say Campus Cops

"Of course," admitted Police GHQ in Simcoe Hall, "there are still plenty of kids who get lost looking for the Economics Building, but the first few days have been uneventful this year. It seems that the returned servicemen are all trying to get right down to work without any fooling around."

Further investigation with the Preservers of the Peace revealed that hazing of freshmen and college tie-fights have not as yet appeared on the campus. "Wait a few weeks," advised the Police Force, somewhat pessimistically, "things are bound to liven up a bit when they all get settled."

Meanwhile, although the police find the ex-servicemen serious-minded and law-abiding, the poor, befuddled High School graduate presents another problem. "Is the Economics Building in Toronto or Ajax?" "Where's the Physics Building?" Where's the Entomology Department?"

There is no entomology department, but the principle seems to be that it never hurts to ask.

For the first time in years the University cops aren't wearing ear plugs. There is an occasional rowdy group boasting the drainage of forty beers, or screaming a highly intellectual "Gazillaka, zillaka zoo," but so far peace and quiet have been the order of things on the campus.

"I don't mind the silly questions, but I'm not sorry there hasn't been a lot of fooling this year," concluded the University Constable, as he drained the last of his coffee in the Tuck Shop, and wandered back to the mercy of the freshmen.

Students' Clubs Feature Religion

In at least three organizations on the campus students may meet with those of similar religious convictions for purposes of worship, study and recreation.

The Varsity Christian Fellowship is a branch of the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship which embraces countless groups of high school and university students throughout the world. Featured on its program are daily prayer meetings at both University and Victoria Colleges for students of all faculties, and weekly discussion groups on such topics as Bible study and foreign missions. Hikes, sleigh-rides, sing-songs, teas and skating parties assure a well-balanced program.

The World's Student Christian Federation is represented locally by the Student Christian Movement with executive offices in Hart House. Active S. C. M. study groups deal with current social, political and religious problems in most colleges and faculties. Camps, conferences, and meetings addressed by outstanding guest speakers complete the educational activities. Special worship services are held frequently. Recreational activities include hikes, teas, social hours, and supper parties.

The religious, educational and social activities of Roman Catholic students are co-ordinated by the Newman Club, directed by Rev. J. E. McHenry, with a spacious club house and chapel at 89 St. George St. It is affiliated with many similar clubs at secular universities throughout the world. Activities of the club range from corporate communions, discussion study clubs, retreats, lectures, and debates to parties, dances, picnics and dramatics.

Recreation and Lucubration Combined by Course Clubs

For those who believe that business and pleasure do mix the university offers a wide selection of course-supplementing clubs where students see their subject a bit appears outside the lecture hall.

Language students find the University College, the Victoria and the Trinity French Clubs at their disposal. German and Spanish Clubs offer tailor-made social organizations for students of those tongues. For the student of classics the U.C.—Trinity Classical Association and the Victoria Classics Club offer helpful get-togethers with staff members in off-duty informality.

The urge to creative writing, cramped by the routine essay assignment, is given stimulating exercise at regular meetings of the Modern Letters Club and the Victoria College Writers Group.

Closely affiliated with the History department at Baldwin House are the Modern History Club and the International Affairs Society. The former welcomes members of the Modern History, Sociology, and Philosophy courses. The latter is open to all interested students.

Other club-cousins of popular courses are the Fine Art Club and the Commerce Club, both of which are closely integrated with their respective courses. Commerce and Finance, Political Science and Economics students are provided with a typically big business atmosphere at regular lunch-meetings and smokers.

Law students and undergraduates in the Faculty of Forestry have in the Law Club and the Foresters Club organizations closely identified with their courses. For those with a scientific bent are the Mathematics and Physics Society, the Chemical Club and the Honour Science Club (open to students in Honour Science and Household Economics.) The Geology Club, in the scientific field too, supplies instructions and pleasure to fledgling geologists on the campus.

Clubbiest of all are the engineers. A freshman entering any of the numerous and varied courses in Applied Science and Engineering is bound to find a related club, whether the course be architecture or aeronautics, civil, mechanical or what-have-you.

Independent Campus Life Disclosed by Survey

P. T. Dispensers Await Students

Maintaining physical fitness and assisting the ex-service man in his adjustment to the relatively sedentary life of the average student is the main purpose of the Physical Training course now compulsory for first and second year male students proceeding to a Bachelor's degree. By order of the Board of Governors all such students will be required to take the Physical Training course while requirements for first year men include a swimming test.

Attendance of ex-service men will be optional for the current session, although at the same time the University Health Service and the Department of Athletics and Physical Training emphasizes the importance of recreational and physical training.

IT'S GOT EVERYTHING

The University of Toronto, Canada's No. 1 campus in point of population, is virtually a self-contained community. An inventory of goods and services available within the campus confines—Bloor street on the north, St. George on the west, College street to the south, and Bay street to the east—will reveal the simple fact that a student could live here for the entire school year.

Presupposing the existence of sufficient clothing and money for the year's experiment, the student could live in this tiny segment of Toronto without crossing a streetcar track once. He could eat, sleep, study, and enjoy his recreation within hailing distance of the Memorial Tower carillon.

Breakfast? If not served in one of the university residences, there is the Great Hall of Hart House or a late cup of coffee in the Tuck Shop for men. Women have to make that early breakfast bell, step off the campus for their late coffee, or fast.

Classroom supplies? The University Press has them all—textbooks, writing materials, light reading, even school pennants and blue and white cushion covers. And when Christmas comes along there are Christmas cards, too. Used books are handled by the S.C.M. and certain college organizations.

Lectures? Aside from those regularly prescribed on his course our hypothetical student may accompany his friends to some of theirs. The lectures of some professors are so popular that the average daily attendance greatly exceeds the official class enrolment.

News? The University publishes its own morning paper containing current events and essential information for all students. Press connections and exchange facilities ensure complete coverage of academic happenings all over the continent.

Recreation? Social events need take care-worn students little farther than Newman Hall or Hart House. Varsity Arena features football games and track meets in the fall, ice-skating and hockey in the winter. Plays, revues and stunt nights are staged in Hart House Theatre, and countless dances are held throughout the college year by the various faculties and residences.

So in spite of what the Toronto Chamber of Commerce will tell you, stay right here on the campus. It's got everything!

Comes Aches, Breaks, Shakes Health Service on the Job

"Here I am all alone in the big city. What happens if I break an arm, come down with appendicitis, develop a toothache, or suffer from eyestrain?"

The University hopes all those things won't happen to you at once, but even if they should its Health, Dental, and Eye Services are at your disposal.

An annual free medical examination for all students is one offering of the Health Service (Men at 43 St. George St., Women at 44 Hoskin Ave.) Cases requiring medical treatment may be prescribed for, and arrangements for further consultation and examination made. The staff is always available for consultation, and a phone call will procure a visiting doctor for students taken ill in residence or lodgings.

Out-of-town students with minor illnesses requiring confinement for a few days may be cared for in one of the University infirmaries (men in Hart House, women at 79 St. George St.) None of the facilities of the Health Service is designed to cope with protracted illness or serious injury. In such cases the Health Service staff if necessary will guide the student in making private arrangements.

Although students from the armed forces have the option of securing medical care from D.V.A., the Health Service emphasizes that its facilities are at their disposal too. However, patients with war injuries, chronic conditions, and serious illnesses will likely be referred to Christie St.

Lost Pen or Pin? Apply Within

Lost articles, from apples to zebras, may best be recovered by a Varsity advertisement which reaches the far corners of the campus, and the populace thereof. Application to the S.A.C. office, Hart House, makes this service available to all students at a small nominal charge.

General experience has proved that janitors' cupboards yield a wide range of articles left in various classrooms.

In addition to the articles recovered through the use of multi-colored poster appeals appearing daily on student notice boards, many are returned to the offices of the Student Executives of the various faculties, and may be claimed there.

There Are Others Says The Varsity

Waste-baskets overflow, galleys, proofs clutter, and the sound of many a raucous editorial caucus cleaves the still night air, as undergraduates across the campus turn out the roster of University publications.

Acta Victoriana, The Trinity Review, and the U. C. Undergraduate represent the Arts colleges, containing pictures, poetry, articles, and fiction. Also literary is the year-end number of School's Toile Oike, whose predated issues, published irregularly, serve to propagandize S.P.S. events.

Dentistry presents a year-book with the insoluble title of Hya Yaka, compilation of the year's faculty activities. It contains class, sport, and executive pictures, editorials, and anecdotes by staff, students and dental nurses.

Of similar scope are School's Transactions and Year-Book and Wycliffe's Cap and Gown, the latter issued free to every graduate of the Hoskin Ave. seminary.

Practice in post-grad writing is offered by the Medical Journal, which features student articles on technical subjects. While from the University's smallest faculty comes the Forestry News Letter, with articles by faculty members and a synopsis of the year's activities.

Problem of College Organization Cleared for Freshman Information

The principle of the organization of the University, baffling to so many first-year students, was stated by Cardinal Newman over fifty years ago.

Advocating the increase of a university's range of studies, Cardinal Newman stated that although students 'cannot pursue every subject which is open to them, they will be the gainers by living among those and under those who represent the whole circle.' That is the opportunity which is made available by the diversity of the University of Toronto.

Its federated composition, which prevents the student from being lost in a jumble of enrolment, is unique among universities, and represents a development reaching back through the last century.

The presence of the church colleges, Victoria, St. Michael's and Trinity, on the same campus with the provincial college, University College, represents the solution of a clash in the educational aims of Church and State in Ontario in the last century. King's College, which gave no religious training, was the target of cries of "godlessness" from the advocates of the religious colleges.

It was in the late eighties that a group of men, including the late Chancellor of the University, Sir William Mulock, found a solution in a Federation Act which united all four colleges in the University of Toronto. Under Federation the colleges surrendered the right to teach certain subjects (notably the sciences, which were just then reaching their modern development) and concentrated them in the hands of the University.

Many are baffled by the use of the term "University" referring to Victoria and Trinity. The name "Victoria University," referring to Victoria College plus Emmanuel College, is Victoria's to use, for she and Trinity are Universities in their own right, and hold royal charters to that effect. Both agreed to hold their degree-granting powers in abeyance when they became federated with the University. At the present time both are in effect colleges in the faculty of arts, and Trinity College has not used the term "University" outside of its Theological Commencements for more than 15 years.

FOR FRESHMEN ONLY

What follows is, strictly speaking, none of our business. We are going to meddle with your second most sacred possession, which is your time. We are going to plan your year for you. It may somewhat take the edge off our presumption to recall that we are writing what follows with the unconscious assistance of President Smith.

Dr. Smith in a memorable address a year ago divided freshmen, like Gaul, into three categories: low and lazy, broad and hazy, high and crazy. The low and lazy student does little work for poor grades. The broad and hazy student is a commoner figure: the surface dabbler in forty unrelated interests. The high and crazy student pulls off high marks consistently, and is called crazy by the other two classes. "But don't think he's crazy at all," finished Dr. Smith. Nor do we.

First, Your Work . . .

All of which may be taken as a tactful reminder that academic work comes first. We remarked in this space Friday that a crowded campus need cause no lowering of academic standards. We would emphasize today that ones standards may come down sadly without unremitting vigilance. It is going to be especially easy this year to desert professors who are doing their best against unprecedented odds, to slump into torpor because a lecture is addressed to a hundred people instead of twenty, to avoid visiting professors with one's difficulties because too many other people have the same idea.

Most newcomers to university, fresh from years of intellectual forced-feeding, take too long to get used to the idea of going after learning instead of waiting for it to be packaged and delivered. And they are far too long in finding out that the professors' time out of class is, within limits, at their disposal. The habit of acquainting oneself with each instructor's office hours, and of letting nothing slip which he can elucidate, is fundamental to thorough scholarship.

Then Your Play . . .

It would be defeating one's purpose in coming to University not to take advantage of its staff and library facilities. It is equally short-sighted to take advantage of nothing else. One comes to University to learn what cannot be learned elsewhere, but the library is no place to learn all one is going to. University courses are not as heavy as all that. As much thought as went into the choice of courses on the lecture time-table should go into choosing one's extra-curricular activities.

We are not going to tell you what extra-curricular activities to choose. This issue of The Varsity presents a good many for your consideration, and there are more. For almost every course there is a club, whose principal function is the invaluable one of taking time and student and subject alike out of the classroom: a fumigation of the stultifying odour of pedagogical sanctity. And there are all-round activities like the Art Classes, the Camera Club, the many debating clubs, and The Varsity itself, which can do much to broaden one's interests: not broaden them to haziness, but to catholicity.

Make Up Your Mind!

We are not, we say, going to guide your choice. But we are emphatically going to advise that you choose. Many students pass up extra-curricular activities altogether, and are stunted and channelled thereby. Many more—too many more—flit with enthusiasm or with disdain from club to club, either joining too many or staying with none. One cannot swim in twenty lakes at once. And it is uncomfortable, on a chilly day, to keep climbing in and out. Dive in, and stay.

Our advice then, and we give it gloomily, since advice is never taken (we cannot claim to have taken this ourselves), is to stick to one's lecture timetable and give every professor a chance. Read, furthermore, widely and critically, enquiringly, seeking to reconcile what you read with what you are told and what you have always believed. Visit your instructors often, buttonhole them in corridors, treat them as homes on which to whet your mind. Finally, investigate all the extra-curricular activities that appeal to you. Probably a dozen will. Look into them all, choose one or two, and stay with them. Give them what you have, and they will give you all your mind requires.

If you do all this, your eventual hard-earned diploma will truly certify to a university education. If you do all this, you will be the complete and (humanly speaking) perfect student. You will also, incidentally, be a miracle.

Artsmen
Awake!

"IT IS TIME FOR A CHANGE," STATES the Winnipeg Students' Union newspaper, The Manitoban in its editorial column of last week.

"Thanks largely to a tremendous influx of students formerly in the armed forces, registration at the University of Manitoba this year will set an all time record. The indications at this time allow us to predict that the bulk of the new students will enter the faculties of Science, Engineering, Medicine and Agriculture.

"This is only a continuation of a trend that has been taking place for some years now. More and more students are seeking degrees that give them something tangible, degrees that seem to be sure tickets to well-paying jobs.

"This swing from the humanities to the sciences has been a source of great concern to Arts professors at this and other universities. Many of them feel with Wordsworth that 'the world is too much with us,' that man is neglecting himself as he becomes more engrossed in his machines, his inventions, and his economic systems.

"Some of the more pessimistic cultural leaders have gone so far as to predict that technology will one day outrun reason, that man will use his machines to destroy himself and his world forever.

"In the dying days of the most horrible war in history, our scientists unveiled a new force that with a few improvements could destroy civilization as sealed the fate of both the 'victors' in a few minutes. The atomic bomb and 'vanquished' of the next war.

"Why then, with this situation staring humanity in the face, do University students persist in turning to courses which offer training limited to narrow technological fields?

"Maybe the fault lies in our society: maybe we have built up a poor set of values. We suggest that at least part of the fault lies with Arts professors, with the high school English teachers, with the people who are loudest in the lamenting the swing to the sciences.

"They have transformed the study of man himself into something dry, drab and uninteresting. They have dissected Shakespeare's plays until they have become meaningless jumbles of Elizabethan phrases. The study of history has been surrounded with a musty aura of hokum.

"Perhaps the situation is not quite this bad at Manitoba, but this year's unbalanced registration figures show that something is definitely wrong.

"It's high time our Arts professors got rid of the idea that they are fighting a losing battle. They should 'sell' their courses, not by advertising 'Take Arts and Make $10,000 a Year,'

For the benefit of the many hundreds of millions of freshmen on the campus this year, we are publishing this as a guide that will lead to a better understanding, and a much, much fuller appreciation of university life.

As far as classes go—ignore 'em. There are, we understand, a few queer specimens wandering around who actually came to University to study, but the species is rapidly becoming a more nightmare of the past. We at the U. of T. are superior beings—we even admit it ourselves—who don't have to stoop to the pishposh of lectures to become geniuses.

As for extra-curricular activities, there is, for example, sports—big-time sports and small-time sports. Big-time sports include such mild, scholarly inter-collegiate games such as football, etc., in which all the players get smashed to a bloody pulp, and afterwards are good for nothing but attending classes.

The idea for small-time sports is simple: Get out for your college! Help win the T. A. Reed Trophy. . . All you have to do is run around the Hart House track 45,750 times for three days in a row—there isn't even a time limit! It's as simple as the authors of Champus Cats, who are reported to be the only living human beings with indirect foreheads. And for a little thing like 45,750 laps, your college gets 5 whole points towards the Reed Trophy, and as the winners of the Trophy usually have only around 50,000 points—well! figure it out for yourself!

As for social affairs, be sure to go to all the dances. Don't take a date from The Varsity, i.e. if you're particular about who you're seen with.

These days it's the thing to be a journalist. Join The Varsity, learn to write, meet the real bigwigs of this University—the caretakers of University College.

Take an interest in University literary groups—join the important movements around the campus. So this Hart House gang like the fancy-pants type, do they? Show them who's boss, join the Royal University Society for Pantsless Wednesdays in Hart House. I hear there are some very big people behind it.

And then of course there are the professors. A University would hardly be a University without them.

but by throwing out the hokum and scholastic nonsense, by once more making the study of man and society a vital, absorbing thing."

Today . . .

For a day, with this issue, The Varsity suspends its news coverage to give newcomers to the campus as full a survey as possible of what there is to do at University, when it can be done, and where to do it.

Much of the material in this issue has been culled from the Calendars and the Students' Handbook. We have republished it here in the hope that headlines, larger type, and flashier paragraphs may draw attention to services and activities that would otherwise be all too easily passed over.

Throughout we have emphasized the essential physical unity of the university, its all-inclusive life, its well-rounded programs and services. To be a member of an institution which can mean so many things to so many people is a challenge to every Toronto student to seek for fellowship and strive for unity.

Art, Music and Drama

What Goes On Here?

Among the advantages of university life is access to a remarkable quantity of good music. Some of these are listed below so that students, and treble-men in particular, may become aware of them.

The University is in possession of a fine comprehensive record collection and selections from it are played every day in the Women's Common Room in U.C. In about two weeks notices will begin to appear advertising the programs of the Record Hour. These notices are addressed to men and women students, of all faculties and colleges, who wish to round off their day on the campus with some fine music.

A series of organ recitals to be given Tuesday afternoons in Convocation Hall will start in the near future. The soloists are the most accomplished in the city and a large attendance is expected.

For male students, three traditional series will be given in Hart House. The famous Sunday Evening Concerts commence at the end of October. Students arrange for tickets at their own colleges. The informal Friday afternoon and Tuesday noon-hour recitals will also be held. Supplementing these are the Sunday evening recitals sponsored by the Victoria College Music Club.

In addition to music available on the campus, students may take advantage of reduced rates on tickets for the subscription concerts of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra. These go on sale on the day preceding each concert.

For those who wish to produce as well as listen to music, two venerable organizations will function again this year. The University Symphony Orchestra performs each March with personnel recruited from student musicians. It combines useful training with the pleasure of producing music in concert. You'll be reading more about the orchestra in this column.

Those who enjoy part singing will be interested in the Hart House Glee Club. The group, directed by Dr. Charles Peaker, will hold its first rehearsal tomorrow at 5 p.m. in the Music Room.

Student activity in drama varies with the various colleges. Victoria College is producing Thornton Wilder's The Skin of Our Teeth. Casting will take place tomorrow at three o'clock in Alumni Hall. Freshman who wish to partake in the production are asked to turn out.

In the realm of art, Hart House provides both an art gallery and art classes. The gallery frequently features shows of student art. No date has been set as yet for the first class.

Registration over, and pockets once more flat after payment of fees, the new student ponders over said fees, and investigates the privileges thus granted. With the payment of Athletic fees, women undergraduates become members of the University of Toronto Women's Athletic Association. Those students actively participating in sports vote for the student representatives on the Directorate, which manages all women's sports.

All students are required to have a yearly physical examination. Would-be athletes are expected to make their appointments before Oct. 14. Students with an eye on the basketball and baseball teams are privileged characters inasmuch as the week commencing Oct. 8 has been assigned exclusively to their medicals. The presidents of the basketball and baseball clubs caution them to follow the example of the early worm, make haste in arranging for appointments.

Everyone is reminded that this system calls for active participation by all medically eligible students and that ability comes second to willingness.

All those who are interested are asked to get in touch with the Athletic Director of their colleges or faculties, who will make further arrangements.

Speaking OF SPORT

Free For Frosh . . .

Curiosity has, quite naturally, followed the record shattering first year enrollment, and since a goodly portion of that group are men, the mechanics of the Athletic Wing are worth revelation.

The Athletic Association, which controls all University athletics, is headed by the Athletic Directorate. This Directorate is made up of the Director of Health Service, the Financial Secretary, the Athletic Director, four staff members, and six undergraduate representatives. This group has complete control of all University athletic grounds and is empowered to lease them as it sees fit.

Intramural sports are supervised by the Intramural Sports Committee which is composed of the Athletic Director of the University and one representative appointed by each of the competing colleges or faculties. The Supervisor of Intramural Athletics is a member of this committee ex-officio and acts as secretary.

This committee considers all problems arising out of the Intramural Program and presents to the Athletic Directorate for consideration any matters not covered by its regulations and with which it has not the power to deal.

The Athletic Fee, payable by all male students, provides a number of privileges which are enumerated on page 72 of the Students Handbook. Another fee payable at a like time includes a medical examination which all men are required to take. Arrangements for these medicals must be completed before October 15 and all men required to take Physical Training must register in Hart House by that date.

A ruling of the Board of Governors states that each man proceeding towards a bachelor's degree must take physical training during his first and second years.

A further assistance offered by the University Health Service is financial assistance towards the care of students injured while attending the required physical training classes or in recognized student athletics on the campus. While this assistance is freely granted, this does not mean the University admits any legal responsibility for injuries sustained by athletically eligible students.

A physician and first aid attendant are on call at 43 St. George Street daily between 9 a.m. and 4.45 p.m. (Saturdays—12 noon) and from that time until 6.30 a similar service is maintained in Hart House.

The highlight of the intramural program is the T. A. Reed Intramural Trophy race. The trophy was named after the Financial Secretary of the Athletic Directorate and presented in 1936 for competition between the various colleges. Points are awarded according to the proportionate number of students turning out which gives the smaller colleges an equal chance.

Intercollegiate Awards: Johnny Copp Memorial Trophy awarded annually to the member of the senior football team who, in that season, by his sportsmanship, character and playing ability, is adjudged the most valuable member of the team.

George M. Biggs Trophy, awarded annually to the undergrad who has

The initial intramural sport swings into action on Wednesday as the racket wielders take over the St. Hilda courts for the next fortnight. Well over 100 entries are expected in the singles while arrangements are being made for over 60 in the doubles events. All potential entrants are reminded that no post entries will be allowed this year and that the entry list will definitely close this evening at 5 o'clock.

This event will be used as a proving ground for the intercollegiate tennis team which will consist of five singles men and two double teams. These will travel to Montreal where the tournament will be held on October 22-23 and 24.

Debates Return Reporters Learn

Pre-war intercollegiate debating is slated for revival this year according to Graham Cotter, Debates Commissioner of the Students' Administrative Council. The S.A.C. and campus debating groups have planned a series of interfaculty debates for the current session, and there are hopes for at least two debates with other universities.

It was in 1941 that wartime circumstances put an end to intercollegiate debating. The following year the Interfaculty Debating Union was formed in the hope of keeping the art of formal argument alive.

For two years the Interfaculty Union flourished with many faculties and colleges holding the floor. Four interfaculty debates were staged last year; but a plan to revive inter-university rivalry with an exchange with Syracuse University fell through.

"Able debaters from all years will have good opportunities of debating here and elsewhere," Cotter told The Varsity. He advised those interested to apply to the college or faculty debate executive for further information.

FOOTNOTES FOR FROSH

A conscientious Varsity staffer once, with the aid of a pedometer purchased at a postal auction plus certain not-too-complicated arithmetic calculations left over from high school, reckoned that the average student walks seven miles a day and that, at this rate, he would reach the moon in 80 years.

Travel-weary freshmen having pedestrianized the length of the campus many times in this past week will hear these figures with interest.

If the average student—let's make him a freshman for this issue—had a timetable that involved those ten-minute dashes between Baldwin House and the Economics Building, it was calculated, his shoe-leather suffered an extra half-mile per trip and he would arrive at his lunar destination in a clean half-century.

A Saturday afternoon C.O.T.C. parade (sans route march) can be expected to add another six miles to the length of the subject's pace, hung from the subject's belt, and allowed to joggle freely as he sets about his travels. As he walks, the sensitive pendulum vibrates within, an dthe pointer creeps up and up. At least, that's how it was explained to us.

The gadget, hanging from the high-altitude belt of our staffer, tallied at the end of three weeks 138 miles.

Volunteer experimenters furnished the other data—re C.O.T.C. foot-slogging and the almost astronomical spiralling of mileage that plagues a Modern History student oscillating between his Bloor and College poles.

Looking for Job, Money, Room? See Students' Council Now

Constantly at the beck and call of every undergraduate, ready to find him a room, secure him a job, or help him finance this year, is the Students' Administrative Council office in Hart House.

The Council consisting of the Presidents or Heads of men and women student Government organizations from the various colleges, faculties and departments of the University, represents the entire undergraduate body. Meeting bi-weekly, its members sponsor a multitude of student activities.

Included in their sphere of activity are the publication of The Varsity, the Students' Handbook, and Torontonensis; the University Room Service; an Employment Service which card-indexes job-seeking students and puts them in touch with employers through Selective Service Co-operation; and the Graduation Reception every June.

As the title would indicate, the council is largely administrative, and is not meant to be legislative. As the liaison body between the students and the staff of the University, it is not empowered to act in the actual formation of University policy, but serves continually to bring the ideas and projects of the students into notice and fruition.

to the many graduating classes that regularly come to our studio—Trinity, Medicine, Dentistry, Nursing, St. Michael's, Physical and Health Education, and Applied Science. We appreciate your patronage not only because it gives us honour but because its friendly repetition enables us to make plans and store away supplies far ahead of the Fall Season. (For example, the thousands of folders in which we mount the photographs have been ordered nine months in advance.)

Please get in touch with us at once in order that we may arrange convenient periods for members of your class. We want to give you the best of service and maintain our good record with Torontonensis. There is room for our whole flock if you come early.

But if everybody procrastinates, what will happen? There are only 44 work days between October 1st and the end of November. If these days are not used in a regular and orderly schedule the result will be congestion. It is positively to your advantage to make early arrangements.

Graduation photographs are important enough to receive prime consideration.

Whoever is at the head of your committee on Graduating Class photographs phone us, KI. 6113, and ask for Mr. Crippen or Mrs. Lamb.

Well-Known S.P.S. Alumni Direct New Ajax Division

President Sidney Smith recently announced the appointment of two officials for the management of the Ajax Division of the University of Toronto. J. Roy Gilley, B.A.Sc. has been appointed by the Board of Governors of the University, to the position of Director of the Ajax Division, and Professor W. J. T. Wright, B.A.Sc., B.A., M.B.E. will be Director of Studies for the Division.

J. Roy Gilley

Mr. Gilley, who graduated from the Faculty of applied Science and Engineering of the University of Toronto in 1921, was born in British Columbia and received his elementary and secondary education there. One year after entering the University of Toronto he received his T for soccer.

His university course was interrupted by overseas service from 1916 to 1919 with the Canadian Expeditionary Force, first with the infantry and then with the machine gun corps, and by hospitalization for war disabilities.

Mr. Gilley is well known to students of the University as Comptroller of Hart House since 1932, and Acting Warden for the last five years.

Born in Clinton, Ont., Professor W. J. T. Wright was brought to Toronto at an early age when his father became Professor of Architecture at this University. He was educated in Landsdowne Public School, Harbord Collegiate, and the University of Toronto. After obtaining the degree of Bachelor of Applied Science (with honors), he proceeded, while holding the position of Professor of Engineering Drawing, to work for a B.A. in the evenings, receiving his Arts degree a few years ago.

W. J. T. Wright

Prof. Wright served overseas from 1914 to 1918, in command of a battery, and, later in command of railway troops. He was awarded the M.B.E. for distinguished service. Prof. Wright has had professional experience as an Engineer in Saskatchewan, Alberta, and Ontario. He is a member of the Engineering Institute of Canada; of the Ontario Association of Professional Engineers; and of the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education.

Men Enjoy Comforts Of Home In Spacious Elaborate Holwood

This piece might be called "Cabin 13." For despite efforts of a crew of University workmen set loose in Holwood Hall—wartime home of Canada's Toronto-based Wrens—one last naval touch remains. It is a princely cabin 13 on an out-of-the-way door in this rambling relic of pre-war magnificence.

Otherwise Holwood Hall is well on the way to becoming what the bobby-soxers would term an "out of this world" residence for University College men.

This one-time home of Sir Joseph Flavelle was willed to the University "without conditions . . . to be used . . . according to the University's needs."

Now as never before the need is great. University College principal, W. R. Taylor, said: "U.C. is more poorly equipped with men's accommodation than any other college."

"Because of this and congested housing conditions we felt something had to be done. We were willing to move heaven and earth to accommodate students so they could pursue their education without loss of time."

"Around Sept. 22 we got word that the Wrens would leave Holwood Hall on Sept. 25."

That was Tuesday. As the girls moved out University workmen went in. On Friday U.C. men took possession.

By Monday they were settled in their new home—all seventy of them; most former servicemen and most now first year students.

When first told they could be accommodated the reaction of Holwood Hall residents-to-be was "well, we'll have a roof over our heads." New to Toronto most didn't realize in what luxury they will be living.

The new residence is like a hotel. The front entrance opens into a lobby complete with maple desk.

Off the main hall are two studies in which new lighting systems will be installed. Residents will have use of two large lounges equipped with comfortable chesterfields, chairs, pianos, phonographs—and records. They may entertain their friends here.

Downstairs is a panelled game room outfitted with a ping pong table and phonograph. Next to it is a snack bar.

COMFORTS OF HOME

When asked if a little ice box raiding was in order Dr. Taylor smiled, "certainly—as long as they keep the ice box filled."

The spaciousness of Holwood House rooms eliminates the congestion you would expect to find when eight men share "ex-cabins."

These rooms accommodate four double-deckers yet have space for a large table which will seat six. There are bureaus, wardrobes, chairs and cupboards—small rooms in themselves—equipped with shelves and ample hanging space. Most of the rooms have fireplaces. And fire-extinguishers.

There are also rooms with three two and one double-deck bunks. But the house is so planned that the large rooms are the most comfortable.

Six men will share what once was Sir Joseph's gymnasium.

Holwood Hall has a large conservatory. So large it has a separate heating plant of its own. It will be up to the boys to decide if and how they will use this space. The matter is entirely in their hands.

New Foundation Backs Pharmacy

Establishment of the Canadian Foundation for the Advancement of Pharmacy is termed "probably the most forward step yet taken in the interests of pharmaceutical education" by Dean Hurst of the Ontario College of Pharmacy. The Foundation was born at the second annual Canadian conference of Pharmaceutical Faculties, meeting with the Council of the Canadian Pharmaceutical Association at Bigwin Inn, Muskoka, Aug. 29-31.

"The Foundation will provide the necessary stimulus to the promulgation and expansion of graduate and research facilities in Canadian colleges of pharmacy," Dean Hurst said.

Plans have been made for the raising of a $100,000 fund to be administered by a special board in accordance with conditions set forth in the charter. Three committees will deal with grants, pharmaceutical education and research and professional relations and extension service. Dr. Sidney Smith serves on the Committee on Grants.

U.C. GIVEN FLAVELLE HOME

Unfinished Files Overflow In Registrar's Hectic Office

Among the throngs that have crowded into the Registrar's Office in Simcoe Hall during the past few hectic days there have been some, no doubt who have noticed two long rows of boxes set on tables at the north end of the office.

These boxes are known as the "unfinished files" and through them pass applications for admission to the Faculties of Arts, Medicine, Applied Science, Household Science, Forestry, Dentistry, and the School of Physical and Health Education whose total enrolment, last year, made up 80 per cent of the student body.

Starting with one modest box at the beginning of the summer, the applications overflowed until at the beginning of the session they occupied two nine-foot rows of boxes.

As soon as an application form or certificate is received in the office, a buff filing card is made out bearing the full name of the student (if given) and particulars about the course and college he wishes to enter. As additional certificates and papers are received they are added to the files. When the application and all the necessary certificates have arrived the form is ready for the Committee on Admissions.

Each application is carefully scanned to see if any vital statistics or certificates have been omitted and a letter is sent to the student requesting any missing papers.

Stray certificates are often submitted before the application itself arrives, frequently with no covering letter. These are placed in the file to await the arrival of the application.

As each new document arrives it is noted on the filing card. If the application is referred to the Registrar or to one of the Committees on Admissions or Applications this fact is noted in the card too with the date on which it was taken. When the application is returned it is "signed in."

Students often present additional certificates which are unnecessary such as birth or marriage certificates although to date no driving licenses or L.C.B.O. permits have been found.

As busy stenographers and clerical workers struggle to decipher the correspondence received in connection with applications they feel sometimes that Penmanship and Spelling should be added to the Grade XIII curriculum.

Each faculty has its own Committee on Admissions which meets as soon as possible after Sept. 1, the absolute deadline for several of the professional faculties. Certificates from students from other Universities and secondary schools outside the province of Ontario must have special consideration in order to ascertain whether the necessary pre-requisites have been secured.

As the National Conference of Canadian Universities has adopted a special matriculation program for men and women from the armed services qualifying for admission to the Universities, applications from these students are given special consideration.

Each course in the Faculty of Arts has its own Committee on Admissions. As students often decide to change faculties or courses when they have been admitted or refused to others these Committees must have several meetings at the beginning of each session.

As soon as possible the decision of the admissions committee is forwarded to the student. In the Faculty of Arts, each student admitted is sent two white cards to fill out if he is entering the First Year.

Jealous sophomores, junior and seniors in the Faculty of Arts weary the staffs of College and University Registrars alike by anxiously enquiring "Where do I put in my application for next year?"

Each student when he files his examination application in the spring, fills out the registration cards for the succeeding year, yellow for Second Year, pink for Third, and blue for Fourth. However, such is the strain of those frantic spring days that perhaps they can be forgiven if they have forgotten this incident by September. Admit-to-lecture cards, you may have noticed, match the registration cards in colour and are issued in the colleges.

Students Should Grow Spiritually

Dr. Augustine Ralla Ram, noted Christian leader from India, opened the Student Christian Movement's college year with a challenge to the students of Canada, at the first of the regular Sunday evening services at Convocation Hall. As General Secretary for India, Burma, and Ceylon, he extended greetings to the students of the university.

In describing the attitudes that people are taking towards world problems today, Dr. Ram said, "There are the 'all is well with the world' type, the optimists, the pessimists, and those who say 'all is lost.' But it is the man who takes his courage and tries to master these difficulties that is a true citizen."

"The body is the vehicle of the spirit," stated Dr. Ram. "The university is for the growth of intellect. There are many who will be your friends here. You must try therefore to grow in health, knowledge, and graciousness, but above all, you should grow spiritually."

Dr. Ralla Ram described the program of the S.C.M. as worship, study and work. He told his audience to follow their religion seriously, and to practice it wholeheartedly.

A large number of students was present at the service which was led by Rev. Ed. Lute, the Toronto S.C.M. Secretary. Morley Clark, president of the S.C.M., and Helen Wassmann, associate president, took part.

After the service, Dr. Ram addressed the students at the Freshman Reception in the Women's Union. Here he gave a picture of the Indian S.C.M. and a commentary on political conditions in connection with Christianity and the other religions in India.

Seventy Students Replace W.R.C.N.S. Occupants

UNRRA Aids War Repats

"Four million displaced persons, coming from German concentration camps and war industry have now been repatriated by UNRRA teams," said Major J. A. Edmison, Regional Director of Displaced Persons for UNRRA, in an illustrated address sponsored by the School of Social Work on Friday afternoon in the Economics Building.

Two thousand calories a day is the dietary standard which UNRRA is trying to maintain for the two million people who are in UNRRA camps waiting repatriation. Committees chosen from among the inmates themselves operate these camps under the direction of UNRRA representatives, and national flags fly over the various camp buildings. Care for the mental and physical well-being of children, is a special consideration of UNRRA directors.

Photographs of Dachau concentration camp were shown by Major Edmison who said: "You cannot exaggerate atrocity stories. I am showing pictures of atrocities for two reasons: first, to indicate what many displaced persons have been through, and also to emphasize that atrocity stories are not propaganda. Nazi propaganda is today attempting to cover up what went on in concentration camps in Germany and Austria."

Major Edmison was introduced by Dr. H. M. Cassidy, Director of the School of Social Work, who described UNRRA as the "greatest welfare undertaking ever begun."

MEN'S RESIDENCE

Moving swiftly to alleviate the choked residence situation, University College has installed on temporary basis 70 first and second year men in the luxurious Holwood Hall, former home of the late Sir Joseph Flavelle.

Faced with an unprecedented demand for residence accommodation by returning servicemen enrolling at U.C., authorities took the first emergency step and expanded facilities at 73 St. George Street, main college residence, to afford housing for twelve extra students. A waiting list of 100 students indicated the need for some other relief measure.

As U.C.'s record-breaking registration got under way in West Hall on September 22, behind-the-scenes negotiations had begun, to take over the spacious Holwood home. The Women's Royal Canadian Naval Service, which had occupied the quarters through the war years, was scheduled to evacuate on September 25. Representatives from the university, the college and the superintendent's office made a tour of inspection of the building and prepared plans for the installation of three-score-plus homeless U.C. men.

Last Saturday—while men of the university's maintenance department continued their all-out efforts to convert the Hall to its new use—the influx of U.C. freshmen and sophomore tenants began.

Included in the 70 men who will be housed at Holwood are the Senior Don, R. B. Ferguson and his assistant G. M. Hougham, both doing post-graduate work.

University College now possesses two large men's residences. At the early stages in its history, the college offered students in the late 1800's residence accommodation in the cloisters of the college building. By the early 1900's the growing need for office and lecture room space had found the cloister quarters shrivelled to nothing.

The trend of thought at this period was toward all-university residences and it was to this end that the large North, South and East Houses were erected. These however, had proved inadequate for the increasing enrolments by 1923 when the University of Toronto Senate deemed it necessary to turn over 73 St. George Street to be used as a U.C. men's residence. The residence at 73, it was then stressed, was merely a stop-gap until a large residence could be designed and built for the men.

Shortly before the outbreak of war it was announced that erection of such an edifice was pending. War, postponed all university construction projects but today a large University College men's residence—after the Whittles on the University's list of post-war projects.

Physical Training

By order of the Board of Governors each man proceeding to a Bachelor's degree must take Physical Training during the first and second years of his attendance at the University. The physical training requirements include a swimming test for all first year men.

For the current session the Board of Governors have seen fit to make the attendance of ex-service men in this course optional.

At the same time the University Health Service and the Department of Athletics and Physical Training wish to emphasize the importance of recreational exercise and athletics. The course as offered in this University provides a means of maintaining physical fitness and of assisting the ex-service man in his adjustment to the relative sedentary type of life of the average student.

Editorial

SOCIAL BUTTERFLIES

The question has often been asked, "What is the use of a University education—what is it but more book-learning?"—a brief lapse of some few years in which the student runs about to the odd lecture, writes essays, goes to a lot of parties, talks a lot, and then crams madly for a couple of weeks at the end of the year to scrape through the exams. One summer of a year after graduation is sufficient to make the average student forget all he ever learned in college. Such is the opinion of some we have heard.

Another criticism, from similar sources is the University is a stepping-stone, unfairly offered solely to the offspring of the already-well-off to enable them to secure positions after graduation.

Perchance—

Undenially there are such students, but this year they should be few and far between—we hope. Moreover, the average student does run about, to not-too-many lectures, an equal amount of parties and clubs, writes essays, talks a lot, and then, at the end of the year, realizes that things are beginning to catch up with him, and crams madly for several weeks in a sometimes futile attempt to pass his exams.

On the surface, it would seem to be a gross misuse of time, and flippant would be the name for students if such were the case. Actually, the girl or boy who can scrape his way through three or four years of university and yet remain unaffected by exposure, be it ever so slight, to the lectures, labs, required reading, essays, and all the other forms of education available, would never pass the entrance requirements of the University. In a word, he would not be here at all, and therefore we conclude that such a person does not exist.

The First Leap—

The transition from the public and high school systems of teaching to that of the University itself presents the student with his first hurdle on the way to a liberal education. Once he leaps from homework and memory-reference books placed at his disposal, a new attitude begins to develop, towards both studies and the world in general. He learns to ask the question "Why?" with a deeper meaning and need than ever before. Many a harassed professor has said that if the only thing he ever succeeded in accomplishing with the student was to give him an inquisitive mind, it would be enough.

Here, then, in the lecture-room, labs, and libraries begins the metamorphosis of the mind of the student. The next step is found in clubs and parties where the student, by now perhaps feeling as if he were glued to a slide under some huge microscope, but believing that he is the prime mover in his own activities, goes blissfully on, unconscious of his own growth. So he goes to his parties and clubs, and there learns to "talk a lot" often to his parents' dismay, but an indication that he is gaining something to talk about. The fact that when he does talk, it is generally in an argumentative way shows that he is forming opinions. For those who come to University already opinionated, discussions with others in the various clubs will teach a respect for the opinions of others—a tolerance which will be essential to him in later life.

The Magic Key?

A liberal education, we admit sadly, is not available as yet to all who desire it. But to say that the diploma acquired at the end of a three or four years' struggle on the campus is merely a key to well-paid jobs after graduation is false. The mark of the starving student has been engraved on the centuries. As for those graduates who later acquire so-called important positions, is it not enough to say that important positions could not be held any person not fully qualified to take on the requisite responsibilities?

All students don't get all they could out of college, needless to say—and then all students don't aim at the top, while they are in university and afterwards. All come forth, nonetheless, with some aspect of a liberal education marked indelibly upon their minds.

Canadian Campus

CROWDED...
ISN'T IT?

It's the biggest year in Canadian campus history. Stories of unprecedented registration have poured into Canadian University Press headquarters from British Columbia to the Maritimes. The obvious answer to this march on higher education is found in the hundreds of servicemen and women taking advantage of governmental aid in furthering their preparation for a successful return to civilian life.

University of British Columbia
Vancouver, Oct. 1 (CUP).—Registration to date has reached a total of 5,400, including 1,500 freshmen. President N. A. M. Mackenzie told The Canadian University Press that although the university was built for 2,000 students, no man or woman with the required standing will be denied entrance.

Army huts, converted to house and feed 300 ex-servicemen, are U.B.C.'s first campus dormitories. Other huts have been adapted to use as lecture rooms and offices.

University of Saskatchewan
Saskatoon, Oct. 1 (CUP).—A freshman year numbering approximately 800 has rendered living conditions and class facilities critical on the University of Saskatchewan campus this year.

The university has taken over No. 4 S.F.T.S. and No. 7 I.T.S. from the Department of National Defence, in an attempt to furnish accommodation for men. The former establishment will house some 500 men, and the I.T.S. has been converted into suites for ex-servicemen and their wives.

Difficulties caused by shortage of classrooms have been reduced by forming more sections and by carrying classes through the full noon hour. Classes are also being given on Saturday afternoons.

University of Manitoba
Winnipeg, Oct. 1 (CUP).—The student body this year is expected to total 4,000—nearly double last year's enrolment of 2,032. Registration in junior years of Arts, Science and Commerce totals 1,500, with a record-breaking freshmen enrolment in engineering of 250. Ex-servicemen comprise about 50 per cent of the Science and Engineering courses. Off-campus buildings have been taken over to take care of the influx.

University of Western Ontario
London, Ont., Oct. 1 (CUP).—Heaviest enrolment in Western's heaviest registration year is in the medical, journalism, and business courses. Housing is a problem here, especially for ex-servicemen accompanied by their wives. Students in overcrowded classrooms are found sitting on window sills; and the cafeteria has overflowed to the point where sandwiches have to be served in the adjoining common room.

Toronto Ignores Worthy Play

The one regret your critic has about the production in Eaton Auditorium of "Night Must Fall" by the Negro Drama Group of New York, is that this review could not have been printed sooner so that more interest might have been stimulated on the campus. The lack of support received from the Toronto public was shameful. Emrys Williams wrote a play that grips your interest no matter how often you have seen it, either on the stage or screen, and Toronto would have done well to have studied this group in action. The house was not half full the night we attended, and certain objectionable individuals were there more through condescension than through genuine interest.

The production, on the whole, could have been improved. Neither the plot nor the intensity of the drama was affected by transporting the setting from Wales to the United States, but there were certain references which are peculiarly English that should not have been overlooked. Moreover, there was a queer mixture of American and English idioms that was so noticeable that obviously there had been only a half-hearted attempt to change the

So hazing and housing are in the headlines. Of course, hazing always did make sensational "head-lines."

The Freshman Issue awakened a mood of nostalgia, although that is not quite accurate since our mood of nostalgia has insomnia. But—ah the yesteryears when at this season there were two classes of male: The Wicked and The Wiggled.

When initiation indignities left the freshman's cranium almost tress-less and his philosophy was: "Hair today! Goon tomorrow!" and his only recourse was to take the case to The Court of Missing Hairs.

For the barber-ous sophomore the entire hair-hacking ceremony was "sheer" delight.

But the pathetic frosh, victim of the skull-duggery, sought propitiation for his initiation (Must remember to use that phrase in a story, someday!) and wondered idly what Shakespeare was talking about when he mentioned "the unkindest cut of all." (Act IV, Scene III, Julius Scissor)

Yes, hazing is on the wane. It's on the way out.

(Make up our mind, eh!)
The Barber of Seville has gone back to the Met.

It was, after all, quite a penalty that the freshman was forced tooupe.

TENNIS TOURNEY STARTS WEDNESDAY

Record Entries To Battle For Intercollegiate Spots

University of Toronto tennis enthusiasts are in for a banner year if the tennis tournament entry is a good indicator. A record entry of over 200 in singles and 70 in doubles was posted at the close yesterday at five o'clock. This exceeds the record set last year by approximately 80 entries in the singles event.

The tennis draw which appears elsewhere on this page is the only notification that the contestants will be given. A similar draw appears in the other morning newspaper. Games will be played at St. Hilda's and extra accommodation has been obtained at the Toronto Tennis Club for a few days.

All matches will consist of the best two of three sets.

The tournament will be used as a basis for choosing the intercollegiate team. Graduate Studies men will receive special consideration. Five men will be selected with two pairs combining on the doubles teams.

The Senior Intercollegiate tournament will be held in Montreal on October 22, 23 and 24. The Intermediate journey is at McMaster on October 19.

Golfers Tee Off At St. Andrews

The initial round of the University's Intramural Golf Tournament will be played Friday at the St. Andrews' Golf and Country Club. The course is located on North Yonge Street, and can be reached via T.T.C. and the radial car to stop 3A.

Entries close Wednesday at five o'clock, but post entries will be accepted at St. Andrews if time permits, depending on the size of the draw. The first foursome will tee off at nine in the morning, and contestants may start as late as two-thirty.

There is an individual championship on a low gross basis, and a team championship awarded for the four best scores from any one faculty. S.P.S. carried off the team event last year, and Mac Gibson of Dents won the individual with a 78 on a day when weather conditions were far from good.

The top thirty men in the Intramural Tournament together with any men not eligible for Interfaculty competition, will play a qualifying 36-hole round the following week. This play-off will determine the ten top golfers on the campus for intercollegiate play, with the first six classed as Seniors and the other four as Intermediates.

The Senior Intercollegiate Meet will be held in Toronto on the 12th and 13th of this month. The course for the event has not yet been decided upon by the Athletic Directorate, but St. Andrews is the likely choice if it is available. The Intermediate Meet will be held in Guelph on the 24th, and will probably be played on the O.A.C. home layout, one of the finest golf courses in Ontario.

The Senior Championship will be decided by means of medal play, with the individual champion achieving the coveted McCall Cup for his efforts. McGill and Toronto will meanwhile be vying for the Rutman Cup on a match play basis, with three points awarded to each individual match. There will be one point for each match and the extra point awarded to the overall winner.

The Intramural Golf Draw will appear in Thursday's Varsity and in the Globe and Mail on Friday. It is each contestant's personal responsibility to see where he places in the draw and to make certain he is at St. Andrews to tee off on time.

Football Schedule—A La 1945 . . .

Considerable comment has been passed hereabouts regarding the bobtail rugby schedule, the reason for it and the arguments against it. Most of these wisdoms passed by potential barnyard philosophers seem to concur that the wool was pulled over the eyes of someone. Just who the culprit was isn't quite clear.

Keen observers easily spotted the quirk in the schedule whereby McGill plays the highly rated Western team twice while Toronto has but one set-to. They also discovered that the two most distant universities are given a home and home series while the neighboring squads of Western and Toronto, McGill and Queen's, meet one another but once. This, they loudly proclaim, throws the "unnecessary travel" theory into the ashcan.

Accusing eyes have been cast in the direction of local athletic officials. Similar glances and thoughts, probably unprintable, have been thrown at "Hogtown," not only by a local columnist but also by at least two papers located in cities which house teams in the intercollegiate loop.

It is exactly this type of irresponsible reporting that has often prompted us to give up any attempts at so-called reporting and divert our attentions to studies and the finer things in life. Someone makes a hazy statement which is snapped up by some sleepy or dull citizen who promptly proceeds to jump off the deep end. The use of the Ameche could easily have avoided this misconception.

The truth of the matter is that a prearranged schedule was used and that no wool was present to pull over anyone's eyes. The intercollegiate football league works on what is known as the Senior Rotary Rugby Schedule which is drawn up for a period of twelve years. The rotary schedule in use at present was drawn up in 1939 and therefore will be kept in circulation until the close of the 1950 season.

On the cessation of hostilities in Europe and upon the visible weakening of Japan, the powers-that-be decided that the resumption of intercollegiate competition was advisable. At the organizational meeting they were confronted with many problems. Among these was the problem of the unknown quantity. Coaches didn't know who would be playing under them. Coaches were faced with the question of molding a team from a company of gridders who were complete strangers to them. A late start in league play was the only solution.

To facilitate this late start, the first two weeks of the original 1945 schedule were topped off. This meant a cancellation of the two games for each team. Toronto lost a trip to Montreal. They also lost an opportunity to entertain their arch rivals, the Western Mustangs. All that was taken in stride, not only by Torontonians, but also by the other colleges. Somehow, others discovered the unbalanced pairings and hurriedly proceeded to fill a yawning chasm of blank paper.

This newspaper game is really wonderful!

Something Old —

As rain drips moistly down our collar, and rubbers squash through campus pools, we console ourselves with thoughts of future sunshine. This calls to mind the pledge of tennis clubs president Dorothy Sanders that, barring rain, nothing would upset the tennis tournament schedule. The routine will be the same as in former years. Each college and faculty will hold preliminary tournaments on home courts to single out their six top players. The first interfaculty rounds will start Oct. 15. The remaining games will be whipped through in the succeeding five days allowing no procrastination. Thanks to the hospitality of St. Hilda's, the finalists will use the courts directly west of Varsity Arena.

This year S.P.S. will be initiated into the timetable of the tennis tournament. They will enter two contestants, and Mods will furnish the remaining four players to complete a team. The total number of entries will not differ from last year, remaining constant at 36.

Something New —

Has been added as the women take a page from the men's tennis sports calendar. When the shouts of the triumphant singles winners die a doubles tournament will begin. Each college will contribute two teams of two. More details of this innovation will appear as they are formed.

COUNTER-IRRITATION is the tried and accepted method of relieving pain resulting from muscular soreness. This counter irritation may be supplied by applications of heat or by patting on Sloan's Liniment where the pain is troublesome. There is nothing magic about the easiness and comfort which follows either method. The effect is simply a natural relaxing of nervous tension in the affected part which is brought about by stimulated circulation. Heat applied locally or Sloan's Liniment does the trick, but as it is not always possible to wear a hot water bottle against the sore spot, a patting on of Sloan's is handy.

FAIRWEATHER'S HAVE PREPARED something new in the way of shopping facilities for the university girl and young career girl. They feature a collection of carefully selected "personality" clothes on their second floor, this floor being easy to reach via elevator close to the main door. Fairweather's Second Floor round-up of up-and-coming young clothes repeats the fashion story of the world's great fashion centres, the new significance of detail and prettiness for its own sake, a new definite trend toward originality in design. Just above King St. on Yonge.

THOSE SHEARED MOUTON coats which look so much like high priced beaver are at present, we find, in a very likeable assortment at Northway's. Coats are the popular subject around the Northway Third Floor's "Fashionland" at the moment, where a goodly collection of the season's new things to wear are receiving their just amount of attention from the clothes-hunting gal. "Fashionland" is the college girl's own special department, a collection of specially selected fur and cloth coats and "clock-around" dresses designed to take the strain from the eye of the male student.

QUESTION: WHERE CAN I GET a good looking tuxedo suit for less than twenty-five dollars? ANSWER: We've just tracked down a nice assortment of the Evangeline Shops, a new group of very right-looking checks, plaids, plain rough woollens of the country-club type or for an academic career, designed to be comfortably serene in the fuss and bother of this rush-about world. These are good all around basics for a mix or match set-up. The Evangeline Shops are a still, yet, and again good shopping habit for specialty items as well as housecoats, outerwear of the casual type.

Speaking of Swing

WE DISAGREE RE BG

By STU BARTON

It is not very often that our opinions differ very greatly from those expressed by the famed "disstaff side" of the Ten-Ten Swing Club—however, such is the case in the matter of Benny Goodman's date last week at Billy Cross's Queensway Ballroom. Marion and Helen say "disappointing"; we say anything but.

First of all let's look at the band itself. Sure girls, it didn't quite come up to the band that played the Ex in the early war days, but it didn't have such men as Billy Butterfield, Cootie Williams, Lou McGarrity, Mel Powell, and John Simmons among its members either. That band "blasted" too girls, if by "blasting" you mean playing in tune and with a good deal of swing as well as loudly, whenever a triple forte sign appears in your part. And that band played pop tunes too, because strange as it may seem there are people, who, though not moronic in any way still like to dance and are willing to pay for the privilege of doing so to good music. Benny, and for that matter every other band leader is obliged to them as much as to the heppiest jazz-fan. After all it isn't quite fair to criticize a dance band for performing its prime function of playing dance music.

But there was plenty last Thursday to please the most bootied swing enthusiast. There was Tony Faso's big-toned trumpet, a standout on nearly all the jump numbers, there was Bill Shine's tenor which shows great promise and there was Morcy Feld, a drummer, whom Marion and Helen accuse of dragging the tempo, but whose efforts in that direction were entirely missed by these writers.

Then there was the Sextet which even in its Slamless condition was alone worth the price of admission. With Red Norvo, Mike Bryan, Morcy Feld and a wonderful replacement for Teddy Wilson whose name we didn't get, to back him up, Benny gave with durability as well as flattery, and that's a combination in value you can't improve upon. They'll sell you a perfect fit from stock, or if you have ideas, make you up something special to appease your lust for design.

DU BARRY has created a Special Skin Cream to take care of a complexion which has become weather-beaten from a summer of too much exposure. This Special Skin Cream sinks deep into the dried-out skin texture and helps it regain its own pliant vitality. After the Special Skin Cream has been used as directed, softening and freshening the face, Du Barry Foundation is used as a powder base. The Foundation Lotions tones out and irons out blemishes before the final softening touch of powder.

some of the best jazz Toronto audiences have ever heard. About Benny and Red there isn't much you can say. They are absolutely tops on their respective instruments. Benny's big fat tone and fabulous continuity of ideas find a perfect complement in Red's lacy figurations and polished technique. The only flaw in the Sextet performances were the Feld drum solos—they were tasteless even as drum solos.

All this left the girls from the Ten-Ten club feeling disappointed. We're glad that we don't disappoint that easily, in fact since Mr. Cross tells us that he has nothing definite lined up for the future might we suggest a return engagement for King Benny. . . . Stu B(89&)

Grads Try For I.O.D.E. War Scholarships

The Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire has established nine post-graduate scholarships as a War Memorial for those who fell in the First Great War. These scholarships will be awarded in 1946 to graduate students of Canadian universities, who wish to continue their work in a university in Great Britain.

A candidate for the award is required to study some subject vital to the interests of the Empire, and must agree to return to Canada to use the knowledge thus obtained. One scholarship will be open to students in each province in the Dominion.

Selection of the first candidate will be made during November, 1945, the candidate selected holding the scholarship from October, 1946, for one year. Candidates should acquaint themselves with expenses of residence, study and travel in Britain.

Applications must be made by Oct. 15, 1945, to the I.O.D.E. Provincial Educational Secretary. Blanks may be obtained by eligible candidates from the Students' Administrative Council, Hart House, where additional information will be furnished.

What's on Today

VIC MUSIC CLUB
Vic Music Club will be host at an open meeting tonight at 7.30 p.m. in Wymilwood. There will be entertainment and refreshments.

V.C.F.
The Varsity Christian Fellowship of S.P.S. will hold an organizational meeting in room E9A at 1.00 p.m. Everyone will be welcome.

Ralla Ram Sees Christian Unity

He sat with a salad plate perched on his knee and looked eagerly around the small informal circle of students. Dr. Ralla Ram always looks eager when he talks about the Student Christian Movement. He was having tea with a few members of the Toronto and national groups of the Canadian S.C.M. and the conversation had naturally swung around to the Indian students.

Dr. Augustine Ralla Ram is the man to tell about the universities in India. His position as general secretary of the S.C.M. in India, Burma, and Ceylon has kept him in constant touch with students. He is also the secretary of the Council of Church in Northern India. At present he is touring America, visiting the universities of the United States and Canada.

"Yes," the soft voice continued, "I have had Hindu students come to me and say that they have discovered un-stuff things in their religion. They will have gradually seen the cruelty of the caste system. These are often the students who look to the Christian students with new eyes; and in these young people they see brotherhood and love, equality of all men."

Dr. Ralla Ram went on to describe Hindu philosophy and theology to the group. His father was once a staunch Hindu, but gradually reached the point where he felt that he had to relinquish that faith and become a Christian. That decision is a difficult one to follow in a country where the Christian religion cover only two per cent of the entire population.

You half forget that you are sitting chatting with a great man when you talk with Dr. Ralla Ram. He has a friendly manner and an easy way with the students, clasping their hands in a warm handshake when meeting them, leaning over in a confidential manner when telling them some of his famous "stories."

Dr. Ralla Ram had a word of advice for young missionaries—"One thing a young man going to India must remember is that he is going to spread Christianity. If he intends to back up the British against the Indian people he might as well stay home."

Again there was a twinkle in his eye. Dr. Ralla Ram is a nationalist, and he is frank about it. But he doesn't want people to misunderstand him. A missionary, in his opinion, is a man who identifies himself completely with the people he is trying to help.

Another point which he stressed when he gave his advice is that Christian unity is necessary. It is confusing to a man who has entered the Christian faith understanding it to be a brotherhood, to find that there are divisions within the church.

Dr. Ralla Ram looked around the small circle and smiled, white teeth shining against his dusky brown complexion. He waved his hand in a sweeping gesture.

"Remember too," he said, "Christianity belongs to no one country or nation. It is through Christianity that people of all races and colors are able to join hands throughout the world."

Please Rescue Hec's Trackmen

That groaning sound heard in the vicinity of the athletic wing lately isn't someone going through the workouts with Chesty Martin but Hec Phillips' loud call for help.

Hec claims that the situation is so desperate, that he is afraid that his boys will be forced to run barefooted at Montreal on October 26 unless some kind souls come to the rescue but soon.

The reason for his agony? Track shoes are impossible to obtain on the open market and the lack of them has slowed down the training of track stars. Hec sends out an earnest appeal for anyone who owns a pair to lend them to the University of Toronto track club. Hec will guarantee the return of the shoes in first class condition.

All shoes should be taken to the Athletic Office in Hart House or to Varsity Stadium after 4 o'clock any afternoon.

New and Entrenous ON LOSING AN HOUR

By ROSS McLEAN

The young lady had mentioned to the proper people her desire to write for The Varsity and, accordingly, the young lady received last year a certain number of assignments. Her weekly appearance at The Varsity's smoke-clouded cubicle newsroom in 42A had sent her scurrying to the Royal Museum to discuss China with Bishop White and to Convocation Hall on a Saturday evening to attend a meeting of the Royal Canadian Institute. For the young lady it was all very exciting but she yearned passionately for something a trifle more exciting.

Perhaps, nothing quite so adventurous and death-defying as the pseudo-press antics of the comics' Jane Arden. But something that she could, as the saying goes, get her teeth into.

Yesterday it came. Something that she could, as the saying goes, get her teeth into. The young lady appeared at the afore-described 42A to volunteer for news assignments and to query whether there might not be something she could do immediately.

Yes, it happened, yes, there was something she could do. A story to cover. It concerned the return of the Hart House clock to slow time. The feature editor understood it was quite a complicated process. Would the young lady proceed, with what mechanical knowledge she might have acquired in the course of several days with Schoolmen, to the superintendent's office and there inquire into the fascinating ritual of turning back the Hart House clock. It was very rushish. A "setting-back-the-Hart-House-clock" story was a Tuesday-must or it would drop into the graveyard of stale stories. Did the young lady understand? Did the young lady know where superintendent's office was? She didn't? Well—it was at the end of the long corridor, past the registrar's and the bursar's offices. "Just before you come to the back entrance," she offered. That was right! Oh, excellent! Now go!

And off she tripped into Monday's moisture to visit the superintendent.

At two minutes before five o'clock, the young lady re-appeared and slumped onto a convenient piece of furniture, exhausted, damp, and starry-eyed. She had her story. Well, that is more or less. And garnished with a prelude.

The superintendent's office had been, to grope for a more just, a bum steer. The feature editor blushed. That office had directed her to the head electrician and the head electrician had sent her over to the observatory where a Professor Melson had obliged with a lifesaver and a lucid explanation and diagram of the workings of the Hart House clock. Plus a tour of inspection of the Hart House tower to inspect the clock's workings.

Flourishing the Professor's diagram and consulting her own sparse set of notes, the young lady valiently struggled to describe the operation involved in returning to slow time.

The story, as our lady relayed it, is this: You unscrew the thing where the shaft is sawed in half—this is the shaft that goes up—and turn this and two wheels turn up above another wheel with nicks out of it. It takes two or three minutes to do this but while you're turning the hour hand on be so faithful.

And it will be, we have on good authority, soon again. As soon as the chime parts arrive from Croydon, the north and south dials (there are two, you see!) with these head gears the minute hands go right on as though nothing were happening.

This, to the layman, may seem somewhat obscure. To the professional clockologist, however, it is probably bewildering.

It was Professor H. W. Price, our lady discovered, who devised the system for painlessly turning back the clock in the Hart House tower which is, you may realize by now, a very delicate mechanism.

Our lady got sidetracked into taking a few notes on the chiming of the Hart House clock which has not been happening for a couple of years. The chiming parts were obtained from Croydon, England, and they became unavailable during the war. The clock's chiming life ended when the parts wore out and could not be replaced. Prof. Melson told our lady, "It went out with a burst of 44 strikes at 4 o'clock one afternoon. Prof. Melson, counted them. The clock had been giving some warning for previous weeks with erratic striking and had been blissfully oblivious of lecture-catching students who might, innocently, have relied on it. It had always admitted and, in the case of Arts, his admit-to-lectures cards has been forwarded to the College, the applications, are removed from the unfinished file and placed in the complete file, a row of pigeon-holes at the opposite end of the office. At this time the student's filing card is stamped "COMPLETE."

Later on in the year particulars of the matriculation certificates are recorded on the application forms and the certificates are returned to the students. The application forms themselves are bound for future reference.

College Board Members are expected to complete four assignments during the school year, aimed at giving a well-rounded picture of the universities' social activities, new courses, new trends, etc. Victory bonds and war stamps are given for the reports judged best; and all material used, photographs included, are paid for.

Guest editors help put out the August college issue, working with regular staff members. Their duties include posing for pictures, and modelling clothes for the College Clinic feature.

Applications for positions on the College Board are passed upon early, and should be accompanied by a snapshot of the applicant and a brief news story from her home campus, as well as a thumbnail biography.

"Skin of Our Teeth" and "Patience" Give Vic Actors Scope for Talent

A capacity attendance of 350 was present at the opening meeting of the Victoria College Music Club, held in Wymilwood last evening. President Betty Gush introduced patrons who welcomed prospective members and talked on the traditions and activities of the club.

Members were told of plans for the coming production of Gilbert and Sullivan's Patience and Mr. Godfrey Ridcut. Music of the opera will be under the direction of Mr. Ridcut while Mr. Hatton will supervise the stage production. Rehearsals commence at once and production is scheduled for the first week in December.

Tentative arrangements are being made for a Glee Club open to those not in the opera, and suggestions for student concerts are being considered.

T. J. Crawford, organist and choir-master of Timothy Eaton Memorial Church, gave a resume of past productions and told members that he felt very optimistic about the activities of the forthcoming year and particularly the staging of "Patience."

There was a short discussion of business matters during which Bill Harper was elected publicity manager, by acclamation.

Heaps of Talent For U.C. Follies

A change in U.C. Follies format was announced today by Carmen Guild, director of the musical comedy production. "The show this year will be less 'skitish'. A battery of script men are meeting daily to whip into shape the first single-theme Follies in the history of this stage production.

"There will be continuity and plot to the Follies this year. In addition we will offer the other customary ingredients: specialty features, scintillating extracts, sparkling choral arrangements and what we hope will be fresh comedy material.

"We have an unprecedentedly large amount of talent this year," he revealed. "My interviews with the men of first year have made this clear."

Registration of those who desired to participate in the 1945 edition of the U.C. Follies took place in the theatre wing of the Women's Union yesterday at four o'clock. All types of talent

Dora Mavor Moore will direct the Victoria College Dramatic Society's production of Thornton Wilder's "Skin of Our Teeth," to be presented in Hart House in December. The play originally appeared on Broadway in 1941 and is currently running in London, England with Vivian Leigh in the lead.

Broadway critics differed in their evaluation and criticism of the play. Prevailing opinion is divided into two schools, those who think it is a satire, and those who see it as a slapstick comedy in the Olsen and Johnson tradition.

Don Harron, Publicity Director, said that the cast calls for forty players and that talent is still required in large quantities. The director is considering Royce Frith and Tom Becket for leading roles.

H. H. Rifle Club Plans Contests

The University Civilian Rifle Association will hold an organization meeting in the Debates Room of Hart House at 5 p.m. today, when the executive for this session will be elected. Dr. G. H. W. Lucas, M.A., Associate Professor of Pharmacy and Pharmacology, the present head of the Association, stated that expansion of activities to the pre-war level is planned after several lean years of struggling along with its armament reduced to a few 22 caliber rifles.

The Rifle Association is open to all undergraduates on payment of a membership fee, which entitles members to the use of the club's facilities. All male students may join the Association, and Dr. Lucas emphasized that freshmen are especially welcome. Ex-servicemen are encouraged to take part in the activities of the Association, and it is expected that enrolment will increase greatly this year.

The Association furnishes rifles and some ammunition to its members who are free to use their own rifles in the Hart House Ranges, as well as those belonging to the club.

Dr. Lucas also stated that inter-faculty competitions were held throughout the session, and plans are now being made for inter-university meets as soon as possible.

Hon. Vincent Massey Pays Visit To Hart House

The Hon. Vincent Massey is shown here in an informal pose with his dog. He has been vacationing in Ontario.

Interrupts Vacation Trip To See Campus at Peace

The Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner to the United Kingdom, paid a surprise visit to the University campus yesterday afternoon. The visit was included in a crowded holiday itinerary. Mr. Massey is intimately connected with the Massey Foundation—the donors of Hart House which was erected in memory of the late Mr. Hart Massey.

Warden J. B. Bickersteth conducted Mr. Massey through Hart House and the party visited the opening meeting of the Hart House Glee Club. Mr. Massey briefly addressed the members before continuing his tour and expressed amazement at the high stage of perfection which has been reached in the first rehearsal of the season. "In fact," said Mr. Massey, "I thought it was at least your fourth rehearsal."

When questioned as to a possible connection between his visit and the re-opening of Hart House Theatre or other Hart House developments Mr. Massey replied: "This is just an informal visit."

Mr. Massey is home on holiday in Canada for the first time in several years. He will leave shortly for Port Hope and will visit several points in eastern United States before returning to England.

H. H. Glee Club Meets V. Massey

Under the leadership of Dr. Charles Peaker, F.R.C.O., 100 potential members of the Hart House Glee Club held their first rehearsal last night. J. B. Bickersteth, Warden of Hart House, informed the members that the Glee Club will present the final Sunday Evening Concert in February.

Membership in the Glee Club is open to any member of Hart House with the sole qualification that regular attendance is required. Despite the unusually large attendance Dr. Peaker would welcome more high tenors and low basses and hopes that they will be forthcoming at the next two meetings. Tentative arrangements were made to hold the weekly meetings on Tuesday at 5 o'clock.

The Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner to the United Kingdom, paid an unexpected visit to the practice and commented favorably on the club's performance.

Dents Move Fast Don't Miss Dance

Johnny Giordmane and his Box of Magic will be the feature of the floor show at the Faculty of Dentistry's Annual Banquet-dance at the Royal York Hotel, Friday, Oct. 5.

Other stars of the floor show include Corinne Ott, with something new in tap-dancing and Bernice Baldwin and her golden-toned French horn. Wes Dunn as Master of Ceremonies will also direct several novelty dances. The ball, following the chicken dinner, will feature the music of Jack Evans and his orchestra.

Joe Rife, social convener, announces there will be a limited ticket sale to other faculties, today, at Hart House between 12 and 2 p.m.—tickets selling at $3.00 per couple.

They Must Find A Room Victoria. B.C. Is Far Away

Two careers will be blighted. Six thousand miles worth of train fare will be wasted.

Furniture will be sent back to the dealer. The University of Toronto will lose two likely and likeable students.

All this because a pair of freshies in Occupational Therapy cannot find rooming accommodation. From Victoria, B.C., the two girls, Dawn Murray and Marcia Dorman, have travelled to Toronto, the only Canadian university where they can pursue their particular studies, only to find that they can't get a room.

When the girls arrived here they had reserved a room but now the landlady reveals that she needs the room for her own family. At present they are sheltered temporarily, but if they do not find another room very soon they will have to board that eleven o'clock Transcontinental and journey back to Victoria. They even bought furniture for their original room. And when you're put out on the street with your furniture it really hurts.

Now, is Toronto so crowded that we cannot find room for two more freshies? Small freshies at that? Can't we double up just a little more to make room for these Westerners? Even if only for the sake of the good will it will create?

Here is Toronto's opportunity to strengthen the ties that bind our East and West. Our country is even now too widely divided to afford to send these ambassadors scuttling back to their homes. Toronto has not too hospitable a reputation as it is.

Therefore we commission you to find a room for our British Columbia guests. Sweep out your storeroom or your unused den and send us the for rent sign now. If you have any available accommodation please get in touch with us immediately. Phone The Varsity office at M.L. 6611 today. May be you will be the means of establishing two freshies in their careers.

Chancellor Cody Receives Title, Appointed President Emeritus

The Hon. and Rev. H. J. Cody, Chancellor of the University of Toronto, has been given the title of President Emeritus of the university by resolution of the Board of Governors, President Sidney Smith announced yesterday.

"This honor has been conferred on Dr. Cody in recognition of his distinguished service as President of the University of Toronto for 13 years," Dr. Smith said. "Coming to that position from a long experience as Chairman of the Board of Governors, he guided the University with consummate skill and tact through the difficult depression years and through the equally difficult war years. Now he maintains his relationship with his Alma Mater, not only as Chancellor and ex-officio member of the Board of Governors, but also as President Emeritus."

Dr. Cody was born in the village of Embro, Oxford County, in 1868. After receiving his secondary school education at Galt Collegiate Institute, he entered the University of Toronto in mental and moral philosophy and civil polity. He graduated a Gold Medalist in Classics.

After holding various offices in the Church of England, including Canon of St. Alban's Cathedral and Archdeacon of York, he came to the University Board of Directors in 1923. Six years later he became its chairman, an office which he held for nine years.

When Sir Robert Falconer retired from the presidency of the University in 1932 he was succeeded by Dr. Cody. Upon his resignation in 1945 he was elected Chancellor by a unanimous vote of the Senate.

Chancellor Cody, a former Minister of Education for the Province of Ontario, has received many degrees honoris causa from different universities including Glasgow, Manitoba, McGill and Western Ontario.

Schoolmen Summer Slaves But Expenses Still Rise

That legendary figure of the campus, Joe College, shelled out ten per cent more money for his university education last year than his earlier counterpart did in 1943.

The cost-of-living index for the average student has risen that much in a two-year period, according to figures revealed today by Cy Read, 379 graduate in Chemical Engineering.

That discovery forms the most noteworthy feature of the report which was carefully prepared during the summer by Mr. Read and Bob McGilchrist, working under the auspices of the Engineering Alumni Association-Undergraduates and the Junior Panel of the Engineering Alumni Association. The survey was made on the annual expenditures of a representative group of engineering students who may be regarded as typical.

Students living in Toronto spent during 1942-43 an average total of $579. During the 1944-45 school term, they spent $636. A similar rise is seen in the expenses of out-of-town students, which in the former period totalled $805 and in the later period had climbed to $888.

The non-existent specimen—Joe College—paid out $27.90 for toothpaste, cough medicine and other toiletries and medical aids if his home happened to be in Toronto. If he was from elsewhere, his bill for such articles was $47.10.

The survey showed that students worked an average of 17.6 weeks during the summer and that the average pay envelope contained $32.09. Toronto residents earned more because, as the report explains, "Toronto students had more and better contacts." Figures for fourth year students taking employment indicate that a mean had been reached kinder to the out-of-towner by the final college year.

Student outlay for clothing remained almost constant. In 1943-44, the well-dressed Joe College ran up tailoring bills amounting to $72.48. But last year the average student had splurged on sartorial accoutrements to the pocketbook depth of $72.50. It suggests that the 1944-45 version of Joe College might have invested in a new shoe lace or two above the regular items.

Not-too-conclusive figures prove that the average student is thrifty and spends only $43 annually on what he likes to term luxuries. Astonished survey workers discovered one student whose luxury account was a tidy $1. On the other side of the ledger, highest figure offered was $400.

School equipment for engineers cost—with slide-rule—$38.50. The out-of-towner here, for some unexplained reason, spent some $9 more for such equipment.

Included in the figures are tuition fees which have been held steady. Average fee for shelter shows a wide range: from the Co-Op residence where accommodation is provided at $233 per annum to the fraternity where it costs $372. Boarding houses charge on an average $305 and University residences, $297. The roomer who eats out must spend $318. Incidentally, 22.3 per cent of the students polled were frugalists.

The complete figures did not include ticket money for transportation to and from home. The survey will be used by the Alumni Organization's counselling committees in the high schools. In addition 3,000 copies are to be printed and distributed to Schoolmen.

THE WRONG COURSE?

We hate to bring this up now, but there are some questions we'd like to ask; which is excusable in itself, since our business is asking questions. These particular questions may be old stuff. You should have posed them to yourself before you even thought of coming to University. Perhaps you did; but if not, it's not too late—not quite.

First off, and embracing all the other questions—what are you doing in the University, cluttering up these bulging classrooms? Because if you're not sure why, then you are cluttering them up.

The most penetrating after-dinner speech we ever heard contained the following bit of Socratic wisdom:

"What are you doing here at University?"

"Dunno."

"Not learning to think?"

"I never thought of it that way."

"Well, if you're not here because you want to think, get out. You're a fraud."

Our second question is briefer: what are you doing in your particular course?

LEARN TO THINK

If it's an Arts course, you should be learning to think. If, on the other hand, it's one of the courses that prepares its students for a specific profession, you have a double responsibility. You should be learning to think, and you should be learning your job. You should be preparing for what you are going to be, and for what you are going to do. The basic difference between an Arts and a Technical course is simply that the Arts course concentrates on the first of these jobs, and leaves the second till later.

But, Mr. Technical Student, why did you enter your present course in particular? Do you especially want to do that kind of work after you graduate? Or, irrespective of your secret desires, have you merely entered what looks like an uncrowded post-war field? And have you any aptitude for the work, or nothing more substantial than good will?

TECHNICAL STUDENT?

These, Mr. Technical Student, are all factors you should have considered before so much as registering. And, Mr. Arts Student, the aptitude question affects you, too. Do you really like your course? Are you taking it because you want to, or because you feel you ought to? If the work of your course, the kind of thinking it involves, is not what you are intrinsically at home with, you are in for much agony. We have not seen figures on year-end transfers to new courses, and figures on those unhappy in their present courses but resolved to stick it out would be impossible to gather: but we are convinced from private observation that too many students at Varsity enter courses in which they soon find themselves unhappy.

It is not our business to offer solutions for this state of affairs. The world is so constituted that some wastage at least is inevitable: wastage of time, of money, and of talent: wastage of whole lives. But there is no reason why this wastage could not be, if not eliminated, at least reduced. We would welcome our readers' opinions on the matter, and throw out for a starter the following specific questions:

GUIDANCE NEEDED

Would scientific guidance work in the schools be of any value? Or is vocational guidance, at present groping after its first principles of any potential value at all?

Is there room for a guidance department at the University?

Would the University be able to locate and channel its own misfits, if its colleges were smaller, its staff-student contact more intimate, and its professors less harried?

If a student wants advice on the choice of courses, whose business should it be to help him?

Is it fatal, after all, to be in what we have glibly called the wrong course? Or is the human mind more adaptable than we have supposed?

Our columns are open to anyone with a clear opinion, a concrete suggestion, or merely a calmer restatement of the question.

THIS IS CBS!

The Columbia Broadcasting System known around the broadcast band more familiarly as CBS, has just sent away one hundred thousand copies of their new 224-page 1945-46 program manual for "The American School of the Air." These manuals will ultimately come into the hands of teachers, adult education leaders and such people. Indeed, one has already arrived at The Varsity office.

Although made "in strict conformity with WPB regulations restricting the use of certain materials" (the "materials," we presume, are mostly paper), the brochure is tidy, attractive and informative. The Manual provides a working prospectus of the 150 broadcasts in the series of CBS American School of the Air which, we learn, has been going on for 15 years and which, we now feel, ought to continue for a like or longer period.

As Mr. Kesten (Paul W., Exec. Vice-Pres. of CBS) says, the purpose of the program series is "to bring education in an attractive form to children and young people, and to their parents and friends." And this it seems to do. Via the 45-46 schedule.

On Mondays of each week beginning October 1 and continuing until the end of April, the CBS people intend to present the story of America which will deal at the appropriate times with such things as The First Thanksgiving and Votes For Women and with such people as Lincoln, Jefferson, Jackson and Co. On October 22 the Monday half-hour will be piped from Canada and will dramatize The Founding of Quebec. The Story of America is perhaps not "must" but, anyway, "snaybe" listening.

Art, Music and Drama

Concerning Misused Talents

Contemporary Fiction

Muh of modern fiction reflects the analytic approach of our twentieth century hero, the detective. This operates in the obvious fashion, in the dime "shoot-to-kill" thriller, but the same approach is basic in a far more subtle manner in another large body of literature.

In this brand, things develop thus; we find the psychological data of life marked off as the source of all clues; the author (or the hero) scouts around, then usually picks out just one clue from this puzzle which enables him to interpret the total (crime) pattern of life. Usually of course the all-revealing clue is sex. This psycho-analytic approach appears to be a literary dead-end (as far as fiction is concerned) a dead end which James Joyce has succeeded in banging into the novel—a medium most adaptable for rambling psycho-analysis.

The virtue of the drama is that such a basically poor fictional conception cannot be glossed over. Patrick Hamilton as an oncopter of plays suffers from this fundamental limitation of the medium. He is a first-rate playwright, but he does not even rate as a dramatist because he has nothing to say.

However, Mr. Hamilton's aims are not nearly so ambitious as the best part of the psycho-detectivistic school of fiction. Indeed his stable medium prevents it: he finds no mighty psychological clue to everything in general; his psycho-detectivism gives little more than the atmospheric under-current to his plays. But, from his plays—if we could regard them as serious efforts—we would gather that if Mr. Hamilton had topped the clue to the conduct of man it would be the sadistic impulse.

Rope's End (Rope) is the only previous play of Mr. Hamilton's worthy of note. It centres on the macabre notion of a murder committed for the sake of adventure, with a tea-party held by the killers on top of a chest containing the victim.

Angel Street (Gastlight) in England and in the movies is an equally jolly type of thing, revolving around the attempts of one Mr. Manningham to drive his wife mad.

The reason for this procedure is very hazy, but it has something to do with rubies and a previous throat-slitting by the husband, and demi-rep actresses and possibly with Nancy the maid. The interconnection is not very important. The idea is to scare the living daylight out of the audience, which is a somewhat limited and mediocre ambition for a playwright. Mr. Hamilton drives straight at this unpretentious end and does his silly job well. There is no mystery the detective does not turn out to be the first murder victim—which is all to the good.

The production itself is superb. The tricky lighting, in imitation of the variable gas-glow, is exceptionally commendable. The Neo-Gothic architecture of the set has obviously been thought through to the last detail.

The actors are all excellent. Viola Keats as the harassed wife, Brent Sargent as the bad man, and John Adair as Sergeant Rough share the laurels. Unfortunately it is not the kind of play which gives opportunities for significant characterization. What melodrama does? The brilliant supporting cast referred to in the advertisement consists of two, both of whom are certainly very competent. We would suggest to the whole troupe that they employ their splendid talents on something more worthy of them.

Shepard Traube, the producer, in an article in the Theatre Arts of June '42 said: "It is the production technique, derived in large part from film methods and proceedings, that makes Angel Street significant." This means that almost all the action on the stage is photographic; the furniture is set at camera angles and most of the play consists of "two-shots". We could probably write a long article on this aspect of the show, but a slightly different stage technique hardly makes a good play out of a worthless one. We recommend that the spectator concentrate on the technical aspects of the production if he wishes to derive anything from the play.

Frosh Shot From Cannon

Gets Bang Out of After Dark Hazing

The lid on the garbage can behind Hart House Athletic Wing lifted slightly and 12 baleful eyes peered out. The midnight quiet of the campus was broken suddenly as the lid rose and fell, releasing the small furtive figure of a worn-out, discarded gym boot. Hopping along in a purposeful manner, the boot proceeded to the Great Hall kitchen where he found his tongue and called out softly, "Hey, Chicory, c'mon out and play—it's Psmith." The shadowy mass of Chicory drifted out through the kitchen wall and joined Psmith in the alley. Chicory, a misty-eyed, evil smelling little fellow, was the spirit who haunts Great Hall coffee. He looked over at Psmith bitterly.

"Well, what'll we do tonight?" Psmith waved his laces with glee. "Let's go hazz a freshman—everybody else is scared to. So they started out across the campus looking for a freshman."

They quickly caught up with a somewhat staggering along happily with the aid of a collapsible ruler. "Hey, bub," man, c'mon, we've got to find a Frosh."

"Whashat you shed," asked the fellow. Then, focussing finally on the querulous boot, he clutched the peculiar sliding ruler tightly to him and staggered away, muttering, "I swear off."

Chicory watched in disgust. "That wasn't a Frosh, that was only a Schoolman. C'mon, we've got to find a Frosh."

At that moment sounds of bitter weeping reached them, and they hastily traced them to a forlorn figure sitting on the steps of the University Library.

Chicory battled his way upstream to the sobbing lad. "What's the trouble, young fellow?" (Chicory was really very soft hearted).

The boy held a red bandana to his nose, blew The Last Post, and explained, "The Library doesn't open until 8.00 a.m.—it's only 2.00 a.m. now, and I want to work."

"Gee," Chicory muttered, "that's tough." Psmith nudged him, "Psst, Chicory—THAT is a Frosh. Let's take him up to the north cannon." Chicory smiled an evil smile and invited the Frosh to see the campus night-life. And in a very few minutes Psmith and Chicory had escorted the Frosh to the north cannon in front of Hart House.

Chicory conversed eagerly with the Frosh. "I'll bet you don't get much of a bang out of life," he said, rubbing his

TENNIS TOURNAMENT STARTS TODAY

Damp Courts Delay Tennis Frosh Entry Biggest Ever

The weather has stepped in to take a hand in the Intramural Tennis Tournament, primarily to keep up with tradition established in other years. Yesterday's rain has definitely postponed the opening round games at the Toronto Tennis Club, but it is hoped that those scheduled for St. Hilda's will still be played. In any case, watch the pages of The Varsity for announcements about the redistribution of the draw.

Some seeding has been done, but the large freshman entry has placed quite an obstacle in the way of any accurate pre-tournament information on the players' abilities. Feyerer of Meds, Grass of U.C., Lau and R. Bell-Irving of Trinity and S. Moses of S.P.S. are a few names that strike a familiar note from last year, while Bernhard of Trinity, Thompson of Vic, N. Moses of Pharmacy, and Baker of Meds are others who have received seeded positions.

INTERCOLLEGIATE OR SENIOR O.H.A.

A report from the secretary of the O.H.A. on Monday contained the following paragraph: "Toronto Staffords, Hamilton Tigers and Owen Sound are the only senior entrants to date. Other possibilities for the senior season are Camp Borden, U. of T. and a Niagara district team."

Rumors came thick and fast!

Yesterday evening, the Athletic Directorate of the University of Toronto spiked them by turning down the invitation to enter the senior team in the Senior O.H.A. "A" bracket.

The senior team will confine its playing to intercollegiate competition and rightly so! Just why the name of the University of Toronto should be mixed up with commercial teams is a puzzle.

The official explanation is that Varsity has a standing privilege of entering the league and until a refusal was posted, it could be classed as a "possible entry."

Now that the suggestion has been vetoed, it seems quite practical to plan for the future. Could the Varsity team hold its own in the tough senior league? If it could, would an entry be practical?

The answer appears to be an emphatic "NO" to both questions. Senior O.H.A. hockey is a business commonly referred to as "shamateur hockey." Would it be fair to ask a university to compete with commercial firms in this type of business? Would it be fair to ask students, who are only part time hockey players to compete against professionals hiding under the guise of amateurism. Again the answer is "NO."

Should the university ever decide to enter a league of this calibre, it would be forced to enter the player market or be marked as league doormats. That adds up to athletic scholarships and a big headache.

Let sleeping dogs lie, we say, and be thankful that the men at the helm of sports here know where to keep sport.

SPEAKING OF ASTROLOGY:

We abandoned that occult art due to inclement weather and took to our favorite sport, the ouija board, in deciding the fate of women's intercollegiate sports. The directorate hasn't met as yet, but some of the sports clubs on the campus have voiced their separate opinions on the subject. The basketball club was summoned by Sue Gray last Monday to discuss the latter question, and this year's schedule. The few that answered the call decided that they were unanimously in favor of intercollegiate sports, in harmony with the decision of the tennis club.

No innovations on this year's schedule will be introduced. In brief, the teams of each year will play the teams of the same year in other faculties. The teams will be asked to use their initiative in begging, borrowing or stealing their own coach.

Sue Gray, president of the basketball club, would like the members to congregate at 44 Hoskin at 4:00 Thursday afternoon. Sue says that it is important that all members turn up, as the game must go on, rain or no rain.

Announce S.A.C. Pres. To Be E. S. Kirkland

RECORD LOW 'CHUTIST

The man who made what is thought to be the shortest parachute leap in the history of the Fleet Air Arm jumped into a new role last night when he became president of the Students' Administrative Council of the University of Toronto.

He is Lieutenant (P.) Edwin Stanley Kirkland, whose record-breaking jump was made over Somerset, England, from a Corsair fighter at a height of between 500 and 200 feet. Forced to bale out when the tail unit of his plane was seriously damaged during a formation flight, Lieut. Kirkland's escape, unscathed, was judged by naval authorities to have been "a miracle."

His nomination as president of the S.A.C. was approved at the first fortnightly session held in room 82 of University College yesterday afternoon. A graduate from Victoria College in 1942, he studied Commerce and Finance and served the Council during his final year as First Vice-President.

He returns to head the Council after three years service with the Royal Canadian Navy Volunteer Reserve and the British Fleet Air Arm during which he had served on the minesweeper H.M.C.S. Sarnia and flown with the F.A.A. until V-J day.

With the navy he had served on convoy duty and on minesweeping action in the Atlantic. He transferred to the Air Arm in May of last year and trained with the R.C.A.F. in Scotland, graduating in Canada as a pilot.

Having arrived back in Canada only last Saturday, he is awaiting now his discharge to permit him to begin graduate studies at Osgoode Hall. His home is in Perth, Ontario.

"It's all happened so suddenly," he said when contacted by The Varsity within an hour of having been notified of his appointment by Maj. E. A. Macdonald, general secretary treasurer of the Council. "My prime aim," he commented, "will be to discharge my responsibilities to the best of my ability."

Conversion Problems

"Conversion from a military to a civilian role which is being undertaken by so many on the Toronto campus entails difficulties which I can appreciate and understand. I can assure the undergraduate body that I won't spare myself to carry out my duties successfully."

He was a member of a two-man debating team which journeyed to the Midwestern states to take part in a debating congress at the University of Missouri. "That was the highlight of my undergraduate career," he observed. I wasn't outstanding in any particular field," he said, "I always had my head in—but not very prominently so."

He was Vic Senior Stick Holder in his fourth year, awarded for hockey and swimming activities.

Offer Student Course In Social Leadership

The Volunteer Department of the United Welfare Chest is offering a course in volunteer leadership for recreation and informal education. Given on four successive Tuesday evenings in October at Harbord Collegiate from 7.40 to 10.00 p.m., this course is open to interested students especially those in Sociology and Psychology.

President Sidney Smith will be the chairman of the opening meeting on Oct. 9. Among the speakers will be Dr. William Line, recently returned to the University from his position as Director of Personal Selection for the Canadian army, who will discuss some psychological aspects of working with groups. Bernard Davis, acting Director of the Veteran's Service Centre in New York City, will outline the part that ex-servicemen can play in volunteer work.

Syrian Author Talks on Arabs

Dr. Costi Zurayk, Chief Adviser of the Syrian Legation in Washington, will lecture today at 5 p.m. in Room 8, U.C., on Problems of the Arab World. His lecture is sponsored by the Departments of History and Oriental Languages.

Dr. Zurayk was born in Damascus in 1909. In 1928 he graduated in Arts from the American University of Beirut. He received his M.A. from the University of Chicago in 1929 and his Ph.D. from Princeton in 1930. From 1931 to 1940 he was a history professor at the American University of Beirut and an associate professor for the next five years.

Campus C.C.F. Meets on Friday

The first business meeting of the University of Toronto C.C.F. Club is to take place in the Common Room of the Women's Union at 79 St. George Street on Friday, October 5, at 8.00 p.m.

The meeting will hear the reports of the executive, the summer planning committee, and will discuss the agenda of the approaching provincial C.C.F. convention, to which the club is sending a delegate.

The club, this year, is planning to form a number of research and discussion groups, including one on co-operatives, state medicine, social science and politics, and current socialist governments.

The balance of the meeting will be devoted to the planning of the year's program.

All students who are interested in learning something of the structure and policies of the C.C.F. at first hand are cordially invited to attend. Refreshments will be served too.

New and Renewed Activities Give S.A.C. Full Program

S.P.S. MEN DEFENDERS

Groundwork for the resumption of suspended activities, and new measures to cope with special post-war problems, were on the agenda of the Students' Administrative Council at its opening meeting yesterday. Accepting a committee recommendation, the Council chose as its president for 1945-46 Lieutenant Ed. Kirkland, Vic 4T2, newly returned from service with the Fleet Air Arm and currently planning to attend Osgoode Hall (see column 1).

Records and Hughes

The Council voted a $30-dollar grant to the committee in charge of the Carnegie Record Collection, to pay for needles, record player upkeep, and additions to the record collection. The upkeep on the high-priced phonograph mechanism, and the 620 records in the collection, has hitherto been financed privately by the committee themselves; while until yesterday's grant from the Council there has been no provision whatever for expanding the record collection itself.

Presented to the University by the Carnegie Foundation in the fall of 1942, the records and phonographs are used to give daily classical concerts, open to all students, in the U.C. Women's Common Room. The starting date for this year's series has not been announced.

The Council also appointed Miss Aileen Hughes, IV Music, Trinity College, as Chairman of its Symphony Orchestra Committee. Manned by volunteer student players and sponsored by the S.A.C., the Orchestra, usually under a professional conductor, rehearses annually throughout the winter for its Spring Concert in Convocation Hall. Announcements regarding the personnel and rehearsal dates for the present season will be released shortly.

The Old "Rah-Rah"

With the return of Intercollegiate Sports, potentially the strongest all-university morale builder, the Council voted to re-establish its Sporting Activities Committee. Responsible for the organized hilarity of the big games in the bowl, the Committee in former years provided bands, cheer-leaders, parades, publicity, and all the frills. Members ex officio are the Men and Women's Athletic Commissioners, Mr. D. Langmaid and Miss Dorcas Beaton, and the editor of The Varsity, Hugh Kenner. Elected as the Committee's fourth member was Whitey Belshaw, IV S.P.S.

Masthead Official

Ratification of the Masthead of The Varsity, the undergraduate daily, was another council action. Chosen by the Editor-in-chief, the senior staff members of The Varsity serve in an acting capacity until formally appointed by the Students' Council. "From this moment," editor Kenner remarked, "we can all stop acting and get down to work."

Ex-Servicemen Represented

Representation on University executive bodies of students recently released from the armed services was furthered by the Council's decision to co-opt five such undergraduates to serve on its own committees. Four men and one woman are to be selected from the faculties having the largest enrolment of ex-service personnel.

Co-optation of this kind, currently the policy of a number of undergraduate executives across the campus, is designed to secure for students formerly in the armed services the representation of which they have been deprived through the holding of most University elections last spring, before the return of the majority of student veterans now on the campus.

In Offing?

Resumption of the Intercollegiate Debates, a principal undergraduate activity in pre-war years, was foreshadowed by the acceptance by the Council of the new constitution of the Interfaculty Debating Union, as submitted by Debates Commissioner Graham Cotter. The new constitution provides for the selection of University debaters under the chairmanship of the S.A.C. Debates Commissioner. Specific announcement of the first intercollegiate debate must await further clarification of plans.

Clothing Drive

A campus Clothing Drive sponsored by the Council on behalf of UNRRA was also announced, and Peggy Bates, Woman's Editor of The Varsity, was named chairman of the committee. Committee members from all the colleges and faculties of the University will be selected by the S.A.C. representatives involved.

Radio Drama Is New Feature

At the organization meeting of the Newman Club Dramatic Society held in Newman Hall last night President Jack Conway outlined the program for the coming year to approximately 25 club members.

The Club is planning to conduct a unique experiment in the field of radio drama this year in addition to the usual stage productions. Although the shows will not be broadcast they will take the form of radio variety revues and standard network procedure will be used throughout. They are designed to provide practical broadcast experience. Once a month the Newman Club House Party will be presented at Newman Hall, featuring an orchestra and quartet, a short dramatic skit and a guest star. Plans have been made to stage the first of these shows early in November.

At the next meeting the executive will choose the play for the annual stage presentation which will be produced in December. President Conway emphasized the need for new members, particularly those interested in the technical aspects of the theatre. Property men, stage managers, technicians, make-up experts and costumers are all urgently needed.

Drama Festival Planned by U.C.

At a meeting last night of the University College Player's Guild in the Women's Union, Joy Sanderson president of the Guild, told a large audience of Guild plans for the coming year.

The big event of the year is to be a drama festival in which the whole university will participate. In preparation of this festival to be staged in Hart House before Christmas, U.C. is running a contest of experimental plays from which the best play will be chosen for the festival.

The Guild's most ambitious effort will be production of Thornton Wilder's Our Town in Hart House in November. Vincent Tovell, who will direct the production, said the cast has 24 speaking parts, ten choir voices—five men and five women—an orchestra, and several pantomime parts. For the first time in three years there will be understudies for all the major roles. Tryouts for the cast will be held in the Women's Union today and tomorrow and by appointment with the executive. The executive urged anyone interested to come and try out for the cast or stage crews. Next Tuesday,

Toronto Advertising Club Aids New Varsity Course

SALESMANSHIP--ADVERTISING

Evening courses in advertising and salesmanship under the Department of University Extension of the University of Toronto have been announced by President Sidney Smith. The courses, arranged in co-operation with the Advertising and Sales Club of Toronto, have been specially designed to meet the needs of former service personnel.

The classes in salesmanship will open Monday, October 15, and will run for 10 consecutive weeks under the direction of G. F. Morris, vice-chairman of the board, International Business Machines Co., and A. E. Wall, superintendent of agencies, Confederation Life Assurance Co. Director of the course in advertising is G. Alec Phare, a director of R. C. Smith & Son Advertising Agency. The latter course, also given in the Economics Building, 273 Bloor Street West, will continue for 20 weeks, beginning Wednesday, October 17.

Originated Ad. Course —

Mr. Phare has had 11 years' experience in conducting an advertising course at Northern Vocational School in the city, having originated the course which is continuing there this winter under the sponsorship of the Advertising and Sales Club. Mr. Phare told The Varsity that the new university course will in no way conflict with the already existing vocational school training. The University course will concentrate on the "why" of current advertising practices, leaving the "how" largely to the other course.

Ushers Required Varsity Stadium

A number of undergraduates, senior students or ex-servicemen preferred, are required to work as ushers on Saturday afternoons at the football games. Applications are being accepted at the Athletic Office, Hart House, and all those interested are requested to register as soon as possible. The pay is $1.00 per game.

Track Shoes Needed

Further appeals for track spikes have been issued by Hec Phillips. While the first appeal brought a few pairs of shoes, the outlook is anything but promising as training has been slowed down to a walk.

Track officials claim that there are many old track men around who own shoes, and if these men would get in touch with Hec, training sessions could be speeded up.

tentative lists will be posted in the U.C. rotunda.

Before Christmas there will be tryouts for Hippolytus by Euripides which will be produced in February by the U.C.—Trinity Classics Club with the assistance of actors from the Guild, announced Martin Oswald, president of the Classics Club.

A further distinction is that the vocational school course is primarily for those already started in the advertising or allied fields, while the extension lectures are exclusively for returning servicemen.

"There is ample evidence of demand for this sort of course in the files of Department of Veterans' Affairs counselors," Mr. Phare said. "As a matter of fact, in the two-hour period Wednesday morning, after its first public announcement, I had 10 men apply to my downtown office for interview."

Members of the Advertising and Sales Club are slated to appear as guest lecturers; and several visits are planned to show engraving processes, advertising agency and publishing plant procedures at first hand. Certificates are to be awarded to students completing the course successfully.

Split Sessions

The salesmanship course is intended to provide a fundamental background in the principles and practices of merchandising. It is also to give, in outline, some idea of current and future sales opportunities in major merchandising fields. Each two-hour class is to be split into a lecture period with possible illustration of methods by movies, dramatizations, sales presentations, and a concluding period in which some recognized leader in the sales field will present his case for a given field, stressing opportunities and qualifications necessary.

These courses constitute one portion of a "Careers Program" sponsored by the Advertising and Sales Club of Toronto as a service to returned men and women. Other phases of the program include individual counselling by business management, wide circulation of free classified advertisements as an aid to bringing together prospective employers and employees, publication of booklets on advertising and selling as professions. All phases of this program are available to students of the extension course in advertising.

Record Hour

It doesn't matter what faculty, race, religion, you belong to, you are welcome at the Record Hour meetings according to Mr. David Savan the chairman.

"In 1940 the Carnegie Foundation gave the University of Toronto six hundred and forty classical and folk tune recordings as well as an excellent player," continued Mr. Savan.

The meetings are held five times a week in the Women's Common Room the program being announced the day before in The Varsity. Students who are interested are asked to watch The Varsity for announcements of the first meeting.

Editorial

WANTED!

This is an advertisement from Politica, leading newspaper of Yugoslavia's capital. This was only one ad. picked at random from a page full of such appeals, and the newspapers of the countries of Europe are printing similar notices daily. Behind the offer of "Ample reward" for a patched old shoe lies a story of want and a fear of facing the coming future of which we in Canada have little conception.

Overseas, in the Allied Nations, more than 125,000,000 people, 30,000,000 of them children, are looking forward to the coming winter not only without adequate housing and transportation facilities, but without sufficient clothing to protect them against cold and disease. In the horror-filled years when war at its most ruthless burst about the population in Europe, garments were paper-thin, were patched and repatched, often with paper and paste, until there was nothing left to patch. During those years unnamed thousands died from exposure, others lost precious limbs to the biting cold, millions contracted tuberculosis and other deadly diseases, or, with no resistance, became easy victims of wartime epidemics.

First Hand Reports —

Appalling figures have been released to the world by dispatches from relief workers on the scene. In Greece alone, six persons out of every seven are shoeless, and more than 1,000,000 are tubercular or pre-tubercular. In Belgium, a family of eight are forced to share a single shirt. From France comes the report that "Either a child stays away from school while its mother washes and dries the child's only garment, or it goes to school wearing the garment wet, and so inviting serious illness and possible death."

This week sees the opening of the National Clothing Collection sponsored by the Canadian United Allied Relief Fund on behalf of UNRRA. This will be the only national clothing drive for 1945, and comes at a time when the need is at its greatest. We in Canada know what cold is, but few of us know the fearsome aspect it bears in Europe. Skiing is a fine sport, but its finer points would fade perceptibly if skis were the only equipment available. In Europe, the mention of skis would bring forth thoughts of fuel instead of sport.

Our Part —

On this campus are few who have not some odd articles of clothing locked away somewhere that have no immediate use, but are being kept for an emergency, should one arise. Now, a real emergency has arisen. A clothing drive will begin on this campus in the near future in aid of the national collection, and it is hoped that depots will soon be established in the various faculties and colleges. Until this is brought into effect, the Post Office in Simcoe Hall will accept bundles of clothes for the drive.

This drive should have the co-operation of all students. The sweater-girl with seven sweaters can do as well with five or six, and the boy with a dozen-old pairs of socks won't feel bereft if he donates two or three pairs of them to the clothing drive. The student here knows that if his clothes wear out they can be replaced. In Europe the average person has no clothes to be replaced. Many are dressed in rags, and think themselves lucky.

Your Part —

To wax specific, there are numerous girls on the campus who have perfectly good Red Cross uniforms which they would probably wear as dresses, if it were not for the fact that a platoon or so of other young ladies might turn up at lectures wearing one just like it. Those uniforms would be far more than appreciated by people whose need is so great.

We could go on, enumerating all the various articles of apparel that may be hanging in the dark corners of clothes closets all over the campus waiting for their owners to use them when the time comes—a rather vague time in the minds of those concerned. The time has come now. Root out those clothes and send them where they are really needed.

Cinemagoers
Holler Uncle

It is probably just as well (for the economy of space) that we caught only enough of the second feature at the Uptown Theatre to be qualified to another picture, that it is called (we saw it on the marquee) "Easy to Look At," and that that title is not, strictly speaking, apt.

With the threadbare GJ opus is "The Strange Affair of Uncle Harry"—a film we intend to recommend: Uncle Harry and his two sisters, Lettie and Hester, comprise "the sensible Quinceys of Corinth," as incompatible a group of relatives as ever settled 'neath the same roof. Geraldine Fitzgerald, as the infuriating Lettie, is the same fine hypochondriactress we seem to remember her being in "Dark Victory," who drives the inconsequential Uncle Harry to an abortive try at her murder. George Sanders is (tedious adjective!) good. Ella Raines is metallic.

Our downtown colleague, Young of the Globe and Mail, has already spilled Hollywood's indigestible beans regarding the picture's ending, which cinemagoers were all pledged not to divulge to friends. We won't betray Universal's trust this time. But just let them give us a feeble finale again!

A technicolor musical comedy is once more on the M.G.M. menu and the recipe remains much the same. Ingredients include one lovely lady who, if she doesn't sing or dance, ought to swim, and in this case does; one name to oblige with assorted rhythmic fillers and whose leader is required to deliver several lines, wodenly, of course; and, as concession to whatever longhair enthusiasts might be in the theatre to escape the elements, how about using someone like, say, Jose Iturbi, or, if he's busy teaching Cornel Wilde the piano, let's try Lauritz Melchior, this time.

And there, you have it. Messrs Metro, Goldwyn and Mayer have concocted this time around something they've dubbed "Thrill of a Romance" with the added box-office inducement of that divine Van Johnson. The orchestra is Tommy Dorsey's. The girl is Esther Williams. And, as hinted above, the alien is Lauritz Melchior. The theatre is Loew's.

It's all very pleasant indeed. E.R.M.

Art, Music and Drama

The Object of Non-objectivism

No matter how violent your opinions on non-objective art may be, the current small but discriminating exhibition of Edna Tacon's non-objectivism at Eaton's College Street is calculated to make you think well of it. Especially will this be the case if you have the opportunity to talk to the artist herself. Mrs. Tacon's sincerity is very evident, and must impress even those most sceptical out of the purpose in this type of creation, with the seriousness of intent behind the dozen-odd pictures on view.

The principle of non-objectivism is, of course a concentration upon graphic media of expression, to the exclusion of all reference to natural objects, and comes as quite a shock to those accustomed to the traditional forms of representational painting. Mrs. Tacon is convinced that non-objectivism is the form most eminently suited to modern conditions of living, and is as superior to the representational mode as "electricity is to gaslight." That the old masters, if living today, would paint non-objectively, is her firm belief. Those qualities of beautiful form, color, and line which constitute the permanent worth of the old masters are present in non-objectivism in their clear essences, unmarred by the fixed associations implied in set subject matter. This modern idiom is a development which has been going on in painting for the last seventy-five years, ever since French artists, began their attempts to correct the insipid sentimentality and essential emptiness public should be free to make its own judgement. When minorities seek to impose censorship they work against their own cause."

of nineteenth-century ultra-representational painting. Mrs. Tacon believes that the color camera and Cezanne have been the twin points on which painting has been orientated towards non-objectivism; they have freed the artist from the limitations of verisimilitude, and thrown emphasis upon creative imagination. Music has provided the major inspiration for this art; the sense impressions provided by the artist in this medium must necessarily be translated into representation solely by the imaginations of those to whom the work is presented. Thus, for each person viewing a non-objective painting, something entirely different in the way of emotional associations is brought to mind. This, it might be noted cynically, is a rather convenient doctrine for the propounder, since to the objection that such-and-such a work falls a trifle flat, its creator can retort that the trouble is a deficiency of imagination in the beholder. Such a theory of art leaves loopholes to bolster technical incompetence or just plain artistic racketeering.

An interview with The Griffin, seated at the end of the bannisters Leading To The French Department in U.C. revealed some startling facts. (Those wishing material for an Edgar Allan Poe short story may apply with a Self-Addressed Enclosed Envelope.)

It seems that the U.C. Griffin has an aunt residing in Paris and a father, still alive, living in A Peat Bog up in Maria Chapdelaine country. Although a slightly smaller example of The Species than Childhood Tales had led us to believe, The U.C. Griffin possesses twenty-three separate bones in its spinal cord and in its Salad Days was accustomed to feed on orphanages with a dash of poor-house inmates.

"Once," muttered The Griffin, "I devoured A Whole Sunday-School Picnic." But, continued our mediaeval monster, they had lacked The Usual Orphanage Flavor.

It appears that The Griffin intends to stay at U.C. only another fifty years. By that time, he said, A Position might open up in some other university; His preference, a young ladies' seminary giving instruction in The Art Of Painting Moustache Cups.

When asked, what were His Favorite Books, he replied: The Novels Of Henry James.

We realized, immediately, that with His Sinister Background, their charming and effective innocence probably appealed to Him.

At This Moment, suddenly remembering A Cake In The Oven, we cased all His Twenty-Three Backbones and politely withdrew.

RECORD ENTRY FOR GOLF TOURNAMENT

Intercollegiate Team To Be Picked Saturday

The place: St. Andrews Golf Club.
The time: Friday, commencing at 9 a.m.
The event: The Intramural Golf Tournament.

With the closing of the entries last night, the harassed staff of the athletic office found a record number of some 160 entries. The draw is published elsewhere on page 4.

Post entries will be accepted but the deadline is set for 2.30. Potential entrants are advised to find a hole in the schedule and then report to the official starter at the club.

The individual championship will be decided on a low gross basis. Defending champion MacGibson of Dents will tee off at 9.35.

The team championship will be awarded on the best-four-card score of any faculty. The golfers from the School of Practical Science will assume the role of defending champions.

According to further information, the top thirty men together with ineligible golfers will be invited to play a 36-hole qualifying round next week to determine the intercollegiate team.

The senior intercollegiate team will carry six men while the intermediate squad is allowed four.

All participants in tomorrow's event are reminded that they must tee off at the required times due to the heavy entry list. The responsibility for the proper teeing-off time is entirely that of the entrant.

Cancel Games Due to Showers

Yesterday morning, while most of the students on the campus were digging into the mothballs for last year's ear muffs, tennis enthusiasts in white ducks, were starting the first round of the University of Toronto tennis tournament.

The brief flurry of snow, and the prolonged wet weather forced the cancellation of the nine o'clock matches, as well as all the games at the Toronto Tennis Club, where the clay courts have given up the struggle of being anything but mud flats. This is causing a great deal of difficulty, as all the matches scheduled for the Toronto tennis club, have to be played at St. Hilda's, although two courts have been obtained from Victoria College.

Of the play in the first round, none of it was inter-collegiate calibre, but as most of the contestants were freshmen, they should be able to contribute a lot to tennis in a couple of years. Gibson of U.C. was one of the most noticeable, turning in a nice effort by defeating Bettson of Trinity 6-2, 6-2. He has a fair service coupled with a good backhand.

One of the seeded players from last year, Baron of Victoria, displayed a greatly improved service, as he defeated Klein of U.C. quite handily by scores of 6-1 and 6-0. The first of the higher seeded players will see action tomorrow.

U.C. was the big faculty winner of the day, with contestants entered in all but two matches, and winning 13 of them. Trinity placed next with five wins out of nine entries. S.P.S. captured four out of four.

All contestants are reminded that the draws are published in the Globe and Mail, and in The Varsity. As the Globe is on the streets earlier than the Varsity, it should be consulted for the nine and ten o'clock matches. Due to the crowding of the St. Hilda's Court, contestants are urged to be on time as there are six matches scheduled for each hour.

Speaking OF SPORT

JOTTING ON A FRAYED CUFF . . .

Intramurals are definitely in for a boom. No sooner had the opening gong sounded than some 200 eager racquet wielders rushed for the tennis eligibility list at the Athletic Office. That was one record? . . . Number Two: A total of 164 names was discovered on the golf list. This almost doubles the entry list of a year ago. Add to this the post entries and you have another record that will take some beating. . . . Thirty dozen tennis balls are required to run off the tennis tourney, but the main worry around the tennis department is—what happened to "the disappearing five dozen"? . . . A total of ten dozen were placed on a truck yesterday at Hart House. On arrival but FIVE dozen were evident. . . . Paging Invisible Scarlet O'Neil . . .

The Intercollegiate program is almost as bright, what with soccer, football and track training in full swing. . . . Track Coach Hec Phillips was spotted yesterday showing a number of runners the fundamentals of the proper start. . . . Claimed that he lacked good field men. . . . The football squad has been pared to 52 men as name players were prominent last night for the first time. Callisthenics seem to be one of Warren Stevens' most potent weapons and as one of the track men exclaimed: "if the team has nothing else, it will have conditioning." . . . Soccer? Jimmie Paton seems to be having his troubles, too, what with players attempting to train for track and then attempting to play soccer.

News from McGill begins to seep in. . . . The football squad possesses strength in every department save outside wing. . . . Dave Greenberg, the former Winnipeg Blue Bomber, adds strength to the backfield. His kicking will give McGill a great edge in that department, BUT, remember Greenberg in the Grey Cup finals of 1943? . . . Van Wagner, the track coach, promises to give other track coaches a battle in an effort to retain the Championship Trophy. . . . Well, Hec?

What we would like to know is HOW any man could possibly enter the sacred portals of Smith College as a registered student? . . . It was tried before, but to no avail, darn it!

The Sportswoman

IF, IF, IF . . .

If there were a president of the University Women's Athletic Association there might be action. There might even be intercollegiate women's sport. Since Dr. Benson resigned as President of the Association there have only been rumors nominated to the position—as far as we can find out. Until there is a President there can be no meeting of the Directorate. Until there has been a meeting of the Directorate, nothing much can happen. And nothing much is happening.

Last year there was nothing much happening until latish in November, when the Directorate finally struggled into one room. This year, if anything is to be decided or run smoothly there should be a meeting very, very soon. If not, another golden year has slipped away and the thrill of intercollegiate sport has been denied for another class of women, war babies even without a war!

ANYWAY. . .

In the field of Intramural baseball, basketball, tennis and golf, things are popping right along. Baseball practices have started, the games start October 20th barring weather accidents. Basketball practices start October 11th. Tennis starts next week, too, and we advise all readers and those who get this by hearsay—that this year's tourney should be one of the best. The golf tournament will be held on Thursday, October 11th, at St. Andrew's Golf Club. Bring back your clubs this week-end!

So-o whatever you do, please don't forget to make your medical appointments at 44 Hoskin—and keep them.

Honor Leaders At McGill

Montreal, Oct. 3 (CUP).—Dr. James B. Conant, President of Harvard University, will receive the honorary degree of D.Sc., while General H. D. G. Crerar, C.B., D.S.O. former G.O.C. 1st Canadian Army; Vice Admiral G. C. Jones, Chief of Staff of the Royal Canadian Navy, and Air Marshal L. S. Broadner, former A.O.C. R.C.A.F. Overseas, will receive honorary L.L.D.'s at McGill's fall convocation on Friday.

This will be the first peacetime convocation to be held at McGill, and besides the honorary degrees, degrees will be awarded to those who graduated from the summer course.

The anniversary of the birth of James McGill, founder of McGill University, is the occasion for the presentations. The convocation address will be delivered by Dr. Conant.

Several receptions and entertainments have been arranged to welcome the recipients of the honorary degrees.

Ex-Servicemen Receive Training

Montreal, Oct. 3 (CUP).—McGill University is giving, this year, an extension course in advertising and merchandising. The course, which is under the sponsorship of the Sales and Executive Club of Montreal, is directed by Clement W. Cook of the Canadian Advertising Agency, and will be primarily for ex-servicemen.

The purpose of the course is to give the student as wide experience as possible in the various fields of advertising and merchandising, and to demonstrate the various techniques used in this work. Field trips will be made to a printing house, an engraver's, an advertising agency and a photographic studio, under the guidance of club members.

Although a fairly heavy enrolment is expected, officials said that present facilities will allow for only 100 students.

The course will comprise 20 lectures, taking up two semesters, at the termination of which credit certificates will be issued. First ranking students will be given special awards.

THE GIRLS FROM SMITH

Smith College is a college for women. It is in Northampton, Massachusetts. It has an enrolment of 2,100. Its architecture is nothing definite. Last year it had three fires. It is situated seven miles from Amherst College, a college for men, although not really men, you understand, since they are all seventeen. Its president is Herbert I. Davis and its girls don't wear dresses but rather blue-jeans and old men's shirts. We happen to know all this because we talked yesterday with a quartet of Smith girls who are now attending the University of Toronto under a lend-lease arrangement about which we may speak later.

The girls are Sally McDevitt, Phoebe Taylor, Anice Aurbach and Barbara Tomb. They arrived in Toronto a week ago Monday, attracted by the glamor of distant parts (Anice), the desire to get out of a rut (Barbara). Phoebe thought they ought to mention, too, the fostering of distant parts (Anice), the desire to also mentioned curiosity as a motivation.

How has Toronto impressed the Smith ladies so far? We are more courteous and more reserved and less formal than they had supposed. We don't, you see, demand that heels shall be worn to dinner and we don't, as someone had warned Sally, wear elbow length gloves. We are, they admit, strangely like every other human being they've ever met. You can pronounce every name on our rugby teams and Union Station has the nicest baggage man Miss Tomb ever met. And she, we understand, has met a few baggagemen in her time.

Our street car system is efficient, moves in a straight line (Phoebe's observation) and "gets us there." Wednesday afternoons disturb them because shops are closed and what, they wonder, do people do on Sunday. They can't even study, they've discovered, because even the library is closed.

Our uniformed men, they comment, look very nice. The kilts, berets and pom-poms (we're sure Sally said "pom-poms") they like, just positively they like. I saw a boy today with red plaid slacks," reported Barbara Tomb who, we had learned by this time, is called Bubbles.

We haven't seen so many good-looking men, Sally claimed strategically, in flourish at Smith. The girls used to I don't know how long.

What should she say, she wondered. Play bridge all the time, and said Bubbles, practically flunked their year because of it. There you have nothing to distract you, you waste your time anyway, Sally mused with somewhat foggy logic. And soccer! Why don't we have girls' soccer teams? We were sure we didn't know.

Sally is the daughter of a retired manufacturer of tools in peacetime and, lately, bullets and enjoys the luxury of having several options in listing her hometown.

What should she say, she wondered. Providence? That wasn't exactly right. Say Florida. That sounds nice, suggested Phoebe. But she had put Rhode Island at the registrar's, reasoned Sally. Could she say Rhode Island and Florida. Or would that be extravagant? Oh well, say Shannock, Rhode Island.

Sally comes from Shannock, Rhode Island.

Bubbles said she came from Boston but the girls shamed her into admitting that it was really Newton Centre. Well, argued Bubbles, in Boston you have to live in a suburb. Bubbles' father manufactures fluorescent lights and one brother, a Princeton grad, is with the True-Bite New-Hue Teeth Manufacturers who make, she boasted, the most famous teeth in the world. Another brother was formerly with the Bubble Bath Scoop Industry. Miss Tomb is studying history. Phoebe's father teaches abnormal psychology at Smith and, she maintains, practices on her. Anice grew up in England, went to "Hamp" after war's outbreak, is now here and hopes to take her M.A. in England.

Smith has always supported the student exchange system. A quartet of U. of T. co-eds are currently there. Before the war they sent their girls to Germany, France, Italy and during the war to Mexico, to keep their hands more or less. Smith's president, the aforementioned Mr. Davis, taught in the English department here for ten years.

Vic's S.C.M. Begins Year

The Victoria Students' Christian Movement began its working year last night with an Open House held in Victoria Alumni Hall. The party started with mixing games and singing led by Muriel Stevenson.

In the absence of the president, Doug Jay, Florence Wilkinson, the associate president introduced the executive of the new year Muriel Stevenson, the secretary, Lloyd Ackert, the treasurer, Betty-June McKenzie the associate treasurer, Muriel Thomson the publicity manager, councillors Doug Lapp and Kay Morrison, Ralph Howlett the first year representative and Graham Tipple the ex-servicemen's representative, Alice Brown and Art Edmonds as study group conveners.

The highlight of the evening was Morley Clarke, past president and this year's president of the Toronto S.C.M. as he introduced his World Student Christian Federation in a panorama. Jim Seunarine, master of ceremonies spoke on India.

"The Christian population in India adds up to two percent of the total population," said Mr. Seunarine. "In these critical times the S.C.M. has been doing a magnificent job of negotiating with the British S.C.M. and publishing the agreements all over the country. The British, on their part have concurred that India should be freed of the imperialistic government."

"The whole credit goes to Sweden for starting the S.C.M. In spite of the two different churches that govern the country, the Lutheran and the Free church. Holland, Belgium, France and Spain and all the other European countries have been quite badly broken up but the common need is starting them up again," said Muriel Stevenson.

Reports on Canada were divided into three groups: western, central and eastern, given by Marie Bond, Marg Smith and Betty Fowler.

Varsity Golfers Ready for Hazards

The pre-tourney dope on this year's Intramural Golf Tournament at St. Andrew's seems to indicate that competition will be the keenest in many sessions. The entry sheet in the Athletic Office still only boasts about sixty names, but tomorrow, the final day for registration, will likely see the usual last-minute rush.

Several well-known Intramural golfers have already deposited their signatures on the dotted lines, and the many students returned from active service promise to provide at least a few upsets as the untried quantity of the tourney. S.P.S. seems to dominate the entries again this year, and with such names as Spence, Ball, Sree and Simonson on hand thus far, are favored to cop the team championship.

scribed the university setup. There are five different groups in which each college forms its own unit.

"The S.C.M. is a fellowship of students of the university based on the conviction that Jesus Christ has found the supreme revelation of God and leads to the full revelation of life," said Mr. Lute. "Each of you students has a place in this organization and a job to carry out. This is not a closed corporation or a religious club, but it is composed of people who want to enjoy university life to the full through Christian faith. Everybody is part of the great movement of all churches in the past and not just of the local group. For the purpose of helping you we have two offices, one at 67 St. George Street, where Miss Marjorie Peck will be eager to aid you, and the other in Hart Where you can find me and our distinguished guest of the evening Captain Douglas Candy the chaplain of the S.C.M. The meeting was closed by a short Bible reading and a prayer.

Science Annex Opens at McGill

Montreal, Oct. 3 (CUP).—Dawson College, formerly No. 9 A.O.S., St. Johns, has been opened to meet the increased enrolment at McGill University. Science enrolment has increased fifty per cent, and Engineering registration is up one hundred from last year and has made this move necessary.

The buildings at St. Johns, which are well built and fully equipped, have been placed at the disposal of the University by the courtesy of the Air Force. The new college is named for Sir William Dawson, a McGill scientist.

Students will live at the college, paying forty-five dollars per month for residence fees. Instructors will have to commute thirty miles between camp.

A. H. Gillson, Professor of Mathematics, and late Supervisor of Navigation Training of the Joint Air Plan, was two years chief instructor at the has been appointed Vice-principal. He Central Navigation School at Rivers, Manitoba, and was later made Wing Commander and presented with the Order of the British Empire.

Lectures at Dawson College began on October 3 with over seven hundred students, five of whom are women.

Aim of League of Arab States Is Independence and Unity

Modernization Planned

"The Arab problem," said Dr. Costi Zurayk, counsellor of the Syrian Legation in Washington, "is the same problem that faces the world."

Spokesman Thursday morning in a University College lecture sponsored by the Department of History and Oriental Languages, he defined this problem as "whether world affairs are to be controlled by power politics or by a world organization based on rational thinking."

Dr. Zurayk pointed out that isolation of any single country is today impossible, saying, as illustration: "In the Arab States, Britain seeks assurance of her route to India, Russia an outlet to the sea, the United States oil, while, in an effort to gain control of her route to Indo-China, France used force this June. My land is the centre of the inter-play of power politics."

Independence and Unity were the chief aims responsible for the formation of the League of Arab States. The members, Egypt, Iraq, Syria, and four others, have tried to reach this target through strengthening bonds of race, religion, and history, and settling disputes that would weaken these, said Dr. Zurayk. "In this league, as it should be in a world organization, each country sacrifices some of its rights for the common good instead of being subjugated by some big nation."

In an effort to name the ideal of the Arab States, the Syrian delegate said, they "must strive for modernization or westernization with its recognition of the rights of the individual, and its exploitation of natural resources, industrialization. Westernization however, would mean that Arab culture, language and traditions would be submerged in the flood of the so called progress."

The Arab States with their sixty million people and their important geographical position are a problem for all the thinking people who must solve it rationally," he concluded. "The use of force will only result in revolution and a retreat from western ideals."

Terms Students Alert

Dr. Costi Zurayk, counsellor to the Syrian Legation at Washington, B.C., believes University of Toronto students to be particularly alert to what goes on in the world outside the campus.

"University of Toronto students take a great interest in topics such as the struggles for recognition that are going on in the Near East," Dr. Zurayk told The Varsity.

Here on the invitation of the History Department of the University, Dr. Zurayk has had time to see the Toronto campus and the city at his leisure. He is the joint guest of the History staff and of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs.

A graduate of the University of Beirut, Dr. Zurayk took his Ph.D. at the University of Chicago when he was 21 years of age.

"I remember fitting extra lectures into my timetable so I could listen to Dr. Saunders when he was lecturing at Beirut," he said, recalling his undergraduate days at the Syrian university.

Dr. R. M. Saunders, associate professor of history here, held the history chair at Beirut for several years.

Receiving his doctorate from the University of Chicago at the age of 21, Dr. Zurayk returned to Syria for a time. It was last March that he assumed his diplomatic post at Washington. He brought with him an intimate and up-to-date knowledge of conditions in the Near East and their relation to activities in the Western world.

Prominent Graduates Were Rhodes Scholars

One more feature of the normal academic calendar has been restored to universities in North America and through the British Empire with the re-introduction of the annual Rhodes Scholarships.

As announcement came that the annual awarding of the prized Scholarships was to be resumed after a five-year wartime suspension, speculation began on the Toronto campus as to this university's prospects for earning one of the 20 scholarships which are to be presented to Canadian students under the terms of Cecil Rhodes' will.

During the 30 years of successive awards, this university has consistently provided its share of the Canadian Rhodes Scholars to travel to Oxford to study.

Calibre of the Rhodes scholars and their progress in later life in political and other fields is revealed by a check of Toronto's list of scholarship winners.

The list contains the names of an unusual proportion of men prominent throughout the Dominion today.

Edward B. Jolliffe, leader of Ontario's CCF party since 1943, went to Oxford on a Rhodes Scholarship 15 years ago. Mr. Jolliffe graduated in Modern History from Victoria College in 1931, after a brilliant undergraduate career.

Another Varsity graduate on the list is George Ignatieff, now at Canada House in London. A native of St. Petersburg, Russia, and the son of a Russian count, Mr. Ignatieff graduated in Political Science and Economics.

On the staff of the British Legation in Kuybyshev, Russia, is another Toronto Rhodes Scholar, Arnold C. Smith, a U.C. graduate in 1935. Before going to his Russian post in 1943, Mr. Smith was employed by the British Legation in Tallinn, Estonia, and in Cairo, Egypt.

Journalists have qualified, too. Now Editor of the Toronto Star, Mr. Robert Cyrus Reade was one of the earliest Rhodes Scholars to be selected; he graduated from U.C. in 1905, and attended Oxford from 1906 to 1909.

Author of The Rise of Anglo-American Friendship and the best-selling Peace with Power, Lionel M. Gelber was a 1930 Rhodes Scholar. A graduate of University College, he is now an R.C.A.F. Flying Officer.

Mr. Escott M. Reid, whose Scholarship was awarded in 1926, was a graduate of Trinity College. In 1937 he became secretary of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs, and his latest address is the Canadian Legation, Washington, D.C.

From the Faculty of Medicine came John W. Magladery, a graduate of 1935. An undergraduate president of the University Track Team, and member of the Athletic Directorate, he is now with the London, England, Ministry of Health.

Another Rhodes Scholar from Varsity is Prof. M. St. A. Woodside, now Registrar of Victoria College. Prof. Woodside graduated from the University in 1928.

Terms of the will provided some 400 scholarships of which 11 were awarded in pre-war years in Canada. The United States furnished the largest block of Scholars with the British Empire and its colonies sending most of the remainder. A few Scholarships, now discontinued, were originally earmarked for candidates from Germany.

Veteran Missionary Discusses Geisha Girl Problem in Japan

Miss Irene Webster-Smith, veteran missionary to Japan, visited the University of Toronto yesterday to address the Varsity Christian Fellowship on her experiences in the Orient. Currently, as a staff member of the International Christian Fellowship, she is making a tour of Eastern Canadian universities before returning to the United States.

Miss Webster-Smith told The Varsity that the Geisha or dancing girls are a major problem in Japan. Children unwanted by their parents, the girls are taken at an early age and trained as the Geisha. Miss Webster-Smith told of opening "The Sun-Rise Home for Little Girls" at her own expense. Here she brought up 86 girls during the home's quarter century of operation.

When she left Japan in 1941, eight of the girls were happily married. One of the missionary's happiest moments was when she saw seven girls, the first to enter her home, graduate from high school in 1939.

"It is better to put a fence around the top of a cliff than to have an ambulance at the bottom," Miss Webster-Smith said as she summed up the work of her home.

It was on the advice of the British Consulate that she left Japan in 1941. Although the people were still courteous, the ever-growing incivility of the military police made life embarrassing. Shortly before her departure, Miss Webster-Smith said a delegation of Christian families came to her to thank her for her years of service to them. They promised to continue taking into their homes young girls who might otherwise become the Geisha.

S. C. M. Fall Camp Again at Westover

For the third successive year members of the various university Students' Christian Movement groups will be attending the fall camp at Westover 20 miles outside of Toronto, Ed Lute, general secretary of the Toronto S.C.M. announced today. The camp is planned to give all the S.C.M. organizations a chance to get together to plan the coming year's activities and consider the task before the S.C.M.

The program will include worship, bible-study and discussion periods relative to problems of university life. A play party on Saturday night will also be featured.

Fun and Games for Freshies At Last Night's All-Girl Initiation

St. George Street was alive last night with all the pranks, costumes and laughter of initiations.

Dressed in green dance caps, paper spectacles and riding on sticks, the Occupational Therapy freshies visited fraternities and residences. At the bidding of unrelenting juniors, they left their all-day suckers and red pin wheels and took up rags to polish wood-work and shoes. They proposed to startled males, sang their song "Little Peter Rabbit Had a Flea Upon His Ear" and rolled marbles up the hall of North House with their noses.

Their rival faculty, Physio-Therapy, toured the frats in a combination of pig-tails and war-paint. After cleaning a street-car, they danced an impromptu can-can, then tried selling The Varsity to the amazed public.

Most of the Therapy girls wound up the evening at the Women's Union where the Juniors and Seniors performed for their freshie sisters and an intrepid Varsity reporter who was the only male present. He is now under

Governors Laud Late Dr. Moure

At the first meeting of the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto held since the death of Dr. Ferdinand Mouré, former bursar of the University, a resolution was passed to the effect that the body wished "to place on record their high appreciation of the services rendered by him to this University during a long period of employment," Mr. C. E. Huggenbottom, Secretary to the Board, announced yesterday.

Dr. Mouré entered the Bursar's Office as a junior clerk in 1888. He advanced in office rapidly, until 1904, when he was appointed Bursar of the University. He acted in this capacity with distinction until his retirement, in 1938. For some years, in addition to his other duties, Dr. Mouré filled the position of University organist, and gave afternoon organ recitals in Convocation Hall during the winter seasons. In recognition of his contribution to music at the University, the Senate, in 1922, conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Music, Honoris Causa.

Dr. Quinlan Fills W. A. A. Vacancy

Dr. Sidney Smith yesterday announced the appointment of Dr. Florence Quinlan to the Directorate of the Women's Athletic Association as one of the two representatives of the teaching staff. Dr. Quinlan is Assistant Professor of Physics.

Born in Barrie, Dr. Quinlan received her elementary education in that city before proceeding to the University of Toronto. After graduating from St. Michael's College she obtained her M.A., and later her Ph.D. in Physics. Upon finishing her post-graduate work, she became a demonstrator and lecturer in physics until her appointment to an assistant professorship in 1941.

Long an ardent sportswoman specializing in golf and bowling, Dr. Quinlan will bring the benefit of her experience as a participating athlete to the W.A.A. Her fellow members of the Directorate are Miss A. E. M. Parkes B.A., of the Student's Administrative Council, Mrs. W. A. Kirkwood, of St. Hilda's College, who has been a member of the governing body since its inception and six student representatives.

observation for any possible ill effects. Cody House freshies, dressed like babies in diapers and towels were initiated by the girls of No. 5 Willocks Avenue, who made good use of a shower bath and very black shoe polish. With modest equals of embarrassment they dashed through crowds of over-sympathetic males across the road to the hot dogs and milk which rounded off the evening.

Both Falconer and Mulock House freshies have already gone through formal initiations, but not with the wild wanderings of last night.

And what did the freshies think of all this? Most of the freshies had "Piles of fun" but none failed to register the reminder "Just wait until we have our turn next year!"

Argentine Police; Students Battle

Many students were reported to be injured in clashes with the police in Argentina on Thursday. The students are out on strike in protest to the government's "repressive measures" in the political situation.

Barricaded in their university buildings, the students have been engaging in passive resistance until today, when they were routed by police using clubs and tear-gas.

The police claim that students fired on police from the buildings, injuring several.

Rifle Association

The University of Toronto Civilian Rifle Association will hold an organization meeting in the Debates Room of Hart House on Wednesday, Oct. 10 at 5 p.m. under the leadership of Dr. G. H. W. Lucas, M.A., Associate Professor of Pharmacy and Pharmacology.

The Saga of the Thumb

By Ross McLean

Twenty-five dollars and 24 days took them 7,000 miles across North America by car, truck, freight and foot, and this week they re-assembled in Toronto to piece together The Saga of the Thumb—1945 edition.

They had hitch-hiked to Hamilton early in June to see Patty Conklin about a carnival job again this summer. But Patty put thumbs down on hiring university students and so the three of them put thumbs up and were off on their trans-continental trek.

After working a summer for a carnival, they couldn't enjoy an ordinary job, they had decided as they planned their itinerary. On June 7 they set out equipped with hope, a sense of adventure, a certain amount of daring, a haversack and a ground sheet. Travelling as a threesome lessened their lift-ability, they discovered, and so in Nebraska they separated. Syd Jourard continued alone, Bob Marjoribanks and Jack Shapiro together. Their rendezvous was to be the San Francisco city hall steps.

It was a rendezvous they didn't manage to keep. Fate intervened, if we may coin a cliché. Syd was its principal victim. He became stranded in Sacramento. Purchase of a cowboy shirt had reduced luxury-loving Jourard to bankruptcy and he was forced to take a position with a Sacramento warehouse where his salary was established at $1.02 per hour. What about your alien registration number, his employer had casually inquired at the end of the first day. He didn't have one, Jourard had confessed. Well, run over to the immigration office and pick one up, his boss suggested.

It was at the immigration office that Jourard was enlightened on a few facts pertinent to his status quo. He was, it turned out, guilty of making an illegal entry into the U.S.A. He had violated the alien registration act and it was, on the whole, just too bad that he had ever bought that shirt.

Twenty Rhodes Scholarships, each financing two to three years' study at the University of Oxford, are to be awarded to Canadian candidates this year, Registrar A. B. Fennell announced yesterday. They will be the first Rhodes Scholarships to be awarded since 1939.

Two scholarships apiece have been allotted to Ontario and Quebec, and one apiece to Alberta, British Columbia, Manitoba, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, and Saskatchewan. In addition, ten Service Scholarships-at-large are allotted to the Dominion as a whole. Application forms and detailed information are available at the University Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall. Applications must be submitted before November 15, 1945.

Valued at £400 a year, the scholarships were provided for by the will of the late Cecil Rhodes, to make it possible for students from around the world to pursue studies at Oxford.

Candidates must have completed at least two years' study at a Canadian University by October 1st, 1946, and must at that date be between 19 and 25 years of age. However, candidates with at least one year's war Service need have completed only one year's University study at the time of application, and will be eligible "if at any time during the period October, 1939, to the time of application they have been between the ages of 19 and 25 years." Time lost in the armed services will therefore not push an otherwise eligible candidate out of the age-group.

Jourard whence he was a few days later transferred to an internment camp at Sharp Park, California, where for three weeks he hobnobbed with German and Italian seamen and a few pathetic Mexicans who had violated justice in much the same way that he had, but a little more so. Given the option at the end of this time of leaving voluntarily or of being deported, Jourard chose the less troublesome departure, wired home for bus fare to Seattle and took it on the hasty lam.

He rejoined Marjoribanks and Shapiro at Victoria, B.C., where the pair of them had recently retired from the profession of shack-banging for Colliers which involves door-to-door subscription-peddling. Bob had found a position with the British Columbia Electrical Railway Company track gang. Jack had decided to hit the road for Calgary and back down into the States to satisfy more wanderlust. And Syd decided to try shack-banging for Colliers. He got the job, went out to cash a cheque, and returned from the bank with his first subscription sale. The teller, it seems, was a Colliers' convert.

Bob and Syd remained in B.C. for a time while the former recovered from a chip of steel that had lodged in his arm while with the track gang. After his recuperation he joined a roofing company, where he presently picked up severe arm burns while stoking pitch too high.

It was time, it seemed rather obvious, to take to the highway again. Back down the west coast they hitched toward their journey's climax.

The pair walked across the Golden Gate bridge. They stood at the fabulous corner of Sunset and Vine in Hollywood and gave the traditional wolf whistle. They saw an NBC program—Roundup Time. At Grauman's Chinese they saw Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, Bette Davis, Leopold Stokowski and Frank Sinatra giving a benefit for wounded servicemen.

Editorial

Rhodes Scholarships

In yesterday's issue The Varsity published an interview with four exchange students from Smith University, and today's news columns carry an announcement of the resumption of the Rhodes Scholarships, which annually collect students by the hundred from across the world to study at the University of Oxford.

Much has been written on the grandiose plans of the late Cecil Rhodes. It has been said that his was the broadest educational vision of his century; it has been urged with equal acumen that he was merely a missionary for the meanest conception of Empire; so that his vision was narrowest precisely where it is usually said to be broadest. It will be many years before history settles that argument. But whatever the worth of his ultimate ends, there can be no argument about the value of his means as ends in themselves. The Rhodes Scholarships established on a grand scale what the Smith exchange system achieves on a small scale, and what should be achieved on a greater scale far more widely than it is—the exchange of students, cultures, and points of view between University and University.

The idea of a University, as we shall not tire of reminding you, is to make its students more intelligent citizens; to prepare them for what they must do, and for what they must be. It should make them more intelligent citizens; but of what? Of a campus? Obviously not; the aim is to make them citizens of the world. Unfortunately, a campus of its very nature is something less than a world.

We do not mean only that a University tends to withdraw its skirts and maintain its academic isolation intact. We mean also that a University is an organization into which, after a brief adjustment period, a student may all too easily fit. It is inevitable that a student past the first months of freshman bafflement will rapidly learn the rules of frictionless campus life. He will know what lectures can be safely missed, what officials should be cultivated and what ones impressed, what organizations can receive him easily to their numbers. Worse, he will learn what intellectual tone is fashionable, indifference or eagerness or solid practicality or sceptical cynicism, and will assume that tone the better to "belong."

And having rounded off his corners to fit the campus hole, having passed four frictionless and even stimulating and successful years in the University, he will congratulate himself on his smooth adjustment to the world. But he has only adjusted himself to the campus. The world will soon un deceive him.

That, at its blackest, is the picture of student adjustment. The fundamental trouble is that he has adjusted himself not to society at large, but to a certain artificial society in particular. We do not think of a man as a universally experienced citizen of Toronto, if he has only lived in Chinatown.

Now that is the trouble that exchange scholarships are designed to counteract. To have adjusted oneself to two Universities is a better qualification for citizenship than to have become moulded by one. Nor are the academic benefits to be despised. The ordinary student will notice a certain stimulation in exchanging one set of lecturers for another. The brilliant or sensitive student may soon feel that he is exhausting the resources of his professors, not because he is catching up to their scholarship, but because he has acquired their point of view and can anticipate too easily their attitudes and conclusions. For him, a change to another University will come as a cooling breath.

The practice, almost general, of moving to another University for post-graduate work is a good thing; the change is good in itself. But too few of the majority who will stop with their first degree are granted the opportunity to sample life at any campus but the home one. Exchanges among the Canadian Universities were fairly frequent before the war; exchanges with the Universities of other countries less common. As the list of specific prizes and scholarships lengthens, prospective donors seeking new enterprises to finance would do well to consider the endowment of further exchange scholarships. That way, we suspect, lies one of the radical educational changes of tomorrow.

Readers of this column are requested to preserve a respectful silence in memory of Editor Woo Sinner, who last night, distracted by mounting pressure of advertisements, dropped eleven stories into a waste basket.

Members of the Varsity staff were the only mourners, Fearless Fosdick, linotype operator, dissenting.

An inquest will most certainly be held.

Correspondence

Dear Sir:

Even though intercollegiate football competition has been dormant in Eastern Canada since the outbreak of the Second World War in 1939, the game American continent. The Rose Bowl Game, played on New Year's Day at Pasadena, California, a city of 90,000, of football has continued to make progress in keeping with its position as the major college sport on the North people attracts an amazing total of 90,000 football-frenzied fanatics every year. Football is now firmly established, also, in the field of professional sport entertainment. Curly Lambeau, owner of the now famous Green Bay Packers, purchased his first franchise in 1921 for $50. Despite the fact that Green Bay, Wisconsin, home of the Packers, is only a city of 43,000 people, the Packers have been so successful that Lambeau says he wouldn't sell his franchise for less than $250,000.

In the United States, college football revenue has been sufficient, in most cases, to finance the entire athletic program each year. In Canada the same success has been met with, but, on a smaller scale.

Last year 6,000 football-loving youngsters jammed Osborne Stadium in Winnipeg to watch St. Michael's College junior team of Toronto play St. John's College of Winnipeg for the mythical junior championship of Canada. At Varsity Stadium, 14,000 scholars were on hand last fall to witness Toronto's high school finals.

Now that the war is over, intercollegiate football is to be resumed this fall to the great satisfaction of the thousand of football-hungry fans. The future of football appears very bright as the O.R.F.U., the Interprovincial and the Intercollegiate Unions go in full swing.

There is one hindrance however, which may keep football in Canada from doing as well in the post-war era as it might. I refer to the non-uniformity of rules of play. Not only do Canadian teams play different rules than American teams, but eastern clubs in Canada play different rules than western squads. This is a leftover of the early days of college football in Canada when almost every college had its own version of football.

In his classic record book "The Blue and White," the author, T. A. Reid says, "In 1907 the Interprovincial Rugby Union was formed, the teams from Montreal and Ottawa leaving the Quebec Rugby Union to join the new union with Hamilton Tigers and the Toronto Argonauts. This made four major groups in Eastern Canada each of which had its own interpretation of what the rules meant and annually introduced changes without any regard for the other Unions or consideration for the long suffering public. In Toronto for instance, three senior Unions might, on successive Saturdays, demonstrate three different interpretations of what were ostensibly the same rules."

Are we today to maintain the confusion of 1907 on the very eve of what is undoubtedly to be football's greatest era? Canadian football officials have been stubborn far too long in their attitude towards adoption of American football rules. Canadian football must inevitably adopt the American rules if progress is to be made proportionate to the opportunities offered.

Canadians were the pioneers in making hockey a great international sport. However, once it was adopted in the United States and other foreign countries, those countries unanimously adopted Canadian rules. International competition, based on uniform rules, has been the key of hockey's present success. Uniformity of rules in games such as baseball, basketball and soccer have permitted international competition, good will and progress.

The Canadian Intercollegiate Rugby Union should take the initiative now and adopt the rules of its sister organization in the United States. Once this is done, the future of college football in Canada has a future unlimited and hitherto undreamed of.

Sincerely,
Irvin Rechtshaffen,
II Optometry.

Letter Writers

The Varsity has already received a number of letters from readers, and is anxious to receive more. Some of those on hand will be published in early issues, as pressure on our space eases up. Prospective letter-writers will increase their chances of securing an editorial hearing by observing the following specifications, which are laid down for the convenience of our editors and of our overworked typesetter:

1. Letters should be plainly written, typewritten if possible, on one side only of white paper.

2. Letters of less than 300 words stand a greater chance of being published intact.

3. Letters must bear for publication the name, year, and course of the writer.

4. Address communications to the Editor of The Varsity, c/o Students' Administrative Council Office, Hart House.

Improvement at Proms

We came away from last night's Prom Concert with mixed feelings. The performance, generally, was good. The orchestra under Franco Auriol seemed better disciplined than in the past and, except for some flagrant noises from the woodwinds in Tchaikowsky's Fourth, was played effectively. The soloist was Emanuel List, a true artist. Encouraging though this was, there were some aspects of this program, as of others, which contributed to defeat the purpose of the Proms.

Of these, the most serious is still the misuse of program time involved in the playing of such works as the Gold and Silver Waltz by Lehar. When it is considered that some meritorious work was excluded from the program so that the waltz could be played, the objection to the practise of playing invidious music becomes more obvious. There were other compositions of the same musical worth as the Lehar, although not so well-beloved. Because these pieces were included only two movements of the Tchaikowsky Symphony could be played, denying the audience "the appreciation of a complete work to which it is entitled."

Of Emanuel List's singing there is not much more to be said other than that it is superb. His use of dramatics is particularly fine; he "puts over" every song he sings. The Song of the Flea, though sung so many times, was as amusing as ever.

Of all Mr. List's selections, the one with the most audience appeal was Schuman's Two Grenadiers. This we find difficult to understand since it is replete with ideas completely repulsive to a democratic people. These ideas, extolling unconditional subjugation to an emperor, permeate the song so thoroughly that they make the music a secondary matter. Our programs could well do without the Two Grenadiers and other songs like it.

We can advise music lovers on the campus to take heart. Next week's program promises two complete major works.

Drama Club Plans Program

The first meeting of the St. Michael's College Music and Drama Club was held last night in Brennan Hall. The retiring president, Ezio Cappadocia, welcomed all new students interested in joining the club, and after outlining the club's activities during the past year, promised more and better entertainment to the members, with a club dance to be held during the winter. During the coming year, the club intends to hold fortnightly meetings with recitals by well-known local musicians.

THE HOUSING PROBLEM . . .

It seems that students are not the only people suffering from the housing shortage. As of this morning, the sports department of The Varsity has been dispossessed. The cold, cruel eviction notice came last night in the form of ads.

We have yet to discover why page three is so popular with the advertisers. Could be that it is merely an underground movement to eradicate those pests called sports writers. If so, we have our union fee ready. We are ready, willing and able to strike at the earliest opportunity. On with the rally, Komrad!

TORONTO'S TINIEST SPORT PAGE . . .

With any favors from the old weatherman today, the tennis singles will be down to the sixteen. From 200 to 16 in three days is an organizational miracle. . . . St. Andrew's and Varsity golfers will be re-united today as over 164 golfers will swing out. . . . The charges of head coach Warren Stevens are still in there faithfully plugging away. . . . Mel Lawson was in action with Hamilton on Wednesday night while Stew Scott has received permission to give Teddy Reeve a boost come Monday. . . . Jack McReynolds, Orr and Bark are the kickers on the team, but the latter is ineligible as he is potential Ajax material. . . . Jimmie Paton's chief soccer hopes rest on the shoulders and boots of last year's intramural stars. Nikaido and Hassanali have shown good form in practices to date. . . . Hee Phillips is all smiles again with a policeman at the Stadium. Hee's close friend, Jimmy Courtwright of the Toronto police force, has offered to lend him a coaching hand. Courtwright is a former British Empire javelin champion and is the holder of the Canadian javelin record. . . . We was scuttled, robbed, sabotaged, and knifed by two doity bums. Both Hank Greenberg and Virgil Trucks should have stayed in bed. It still hoits. . . . The pride of Boyceville, Wisconsin, Andrew Pafko, is still our man of the hour. . . . Even with Claude Passeau's calcium arm, his 34 years and his 17 wins, we are still with the Cubs to win their first world's championship since the days of Frank Chance 'way back there in 1908. . . . We take this opportunity to send out a personal invitation to all potential sport writers to attend the TEA party at Wymilwood this evening at five o'clock. . . . And when they say TEA, they aren't fooling.

MORE ADO!

At the risk of repeating ourselves, we beg to present some salient facts concerning women's intercollegiate sports. Discontinued in '41 due to a state of total war, the women confined their activities to intramural sports. Now that V-E Day and V-J Day have nominally precipitated the campus into peacetime, the question of the hour is—"Can, and should we have intercollegiate sports again?"

The desire to carry on in pre-war style is hampered by lack of funds, poor travelling conditions, and cramped living quarters, as those perched happily on upper bunks can testify. It has been suggested that the funds can be raised by donations from the women of each faculty, in '39 style. The grapevine optimistically has it that travelling chaos will lie down shortly. As for accommodations, the theory was hopefully advanced that the students living in the city would be able to provide room for the visiting teams. The reader will note that these conditions depend wholly upon the support of the entire feminine student body for their successful fulfillment.

During the past five years, Varsity has proved that intramural sports can be of consequence. The numerous faculties have carried on energetic competitions in a laudable fashion. Intercollegiate sports will mean concentration on fewer members of the Athletic Association. We would appreciate hearing from the readers of this column, to measure the temperature of public opinion. Are the women of Varsity eager to spread the fame of their prowess by solid support? Or are they content to carry on as during last year? What

The ten Service Scholarships-at-large will be divided into two groups:
five are allotted to servicemen in the Dominion, the other five to candidates in the armed services awaiting demobilization in England, Europe, or elsewhere

While ordinary candidates must be unmarried, the Rhodes Trustees have decided that Service candidates will not be disqualified by marriage. The question whether married scholars shall be permitted to bring dependents to Oxford, however, has been reserved for future decision.

A candidate may apply either for the province in which he ordinarily lives, or for the province in which he has taken his University course, it was ruled.

For each province there is a Selection Committee, in whose hands, subject to ratification by the Rhodes
Trustees, the selection rests.

F. C. Auld Made Advisor For West Indian Students

PROFESSOR AULD REPLACES DR. HANCOCK

The appointment of Professor F. C. Auld, Professor of Jurisprudence in the School of Law, to the position of advisor to the West Indian students at the University of Toronto has been announced by President Sidney Smith. Professor Auld is replacing Dr. J. E. M. Hancock, who is now on the staff of Dalhousie University.

West Indian students began to arrive at Toronto at the start of the war when transportation facilities were disrupted between the West Indies and Gt. Britain. An arrangement was made with the University of London enabling students wishing to practise law in Gt. Britain or the West Indies to proceed to their degrees at the University of Toronto. The only condition imposed was that such students must be called to the bar in Gt. Britain.

Leaving behind them the only group on the campus whose numbers are decreasing, some of the law students have left for England to complete their courses there. Some have remained, believing as one student explained, that there is "a certain value to a degree from the University of Toronto." Upon graduation they will proceed to Gt. Britain where they will be called to the bar after further studies.

Other West Indian students are studying at the university through scholarships set up under the Stockdale Scheme. These scholarships students are graduate doctors and engineers taking special one-year courses in Public Health. Five students are in each course, one from British Guiana, one from Jamaica, one from British Honduras and two from Trinidad.

The Stockdale Scheme sprang from the report of the West Indian Welfare Commission appointed by the Colonial Office in 1939 to survey economic and social conditions in the West Indies. As a result, scholarships were established to equip specially selected students to improve conditions in the West Indies.

Better Debates For Engineers

According to R. A. Singer IV S.P.S. Chairman of the Engineering Parliament there are to be more and better debates this year at School, debates similar to the famous controversy of last year on the subject of the importance of women in the life of the engineer.

The Engineering Parliament, or Debating Club is a society controlled by the Engineering Society with the objective of giving student engineers the opportunity to express their ideas and to get experience in public speaking. With this objective there is very little of the formality of the other student parliament but rather a series of informal debates and impromptu speeches.

Those who are interested are asked to watch the Varsity for an announcement of the first meeting which will take place within the present week.

Chapel Service Ends Initiation

Last night in Victoria chapel the traditional candlelighting service closed the freshie initiations.

A mock court preceded the ceremony at which Pegi Brown played the judge supported by jurymen, charwomen and policemen.

Dr. Brown explained the college crest to the students. Then Miss McPherson and Dr. Bennett in their turn welcomed the first year girls. After the sophomores handed the Lamp of

Former Theolog Flays Foe With Flying Fists, Gun

A bare handed attack with an empty revolver and flying fists which forced a group of Nazis into submission won The Distinguished Service Order for a former Divinity student of the University of Toronto.

Capt. Norman A. Ballard went into the army in December, 1942, after five years in arts and theology. The question now being pondered by the staff in Theology is whether it was because of, or in spite of, his years as a Theolog that Norm Ballard got the inspiration for a fist-flying free-for-all with a bunch of German soldiers.

When he captured the group, Capt. Ballard was at the Hitler Line in Italy with the 48th Highlanders, the same glorious 48th which captured the heart of Toronto in the dramatic ceremonies of a few weeks back. Home in Brantford now, Capt. Ballard, when inter-

I.S.S. Nominations Occur Next Week

The International Student Service, an organization designed to aid students throughout the world, will be functioning again this year. President Gordon Stulberg assured The Varsity over the week-end. "Our post-war plans," he said, "are the rebuilding of the universities in prisoner of war camps in Europe, Canada and the United States, where the P.O.W.'s can take courses leading to a degree from the University of London."

"We strongly urge all of last year's committee and any others who are interested, particularly ex-servicemen and women to attend the organizational meeting next week," the president further stated. I.S.S. plans for this year demand an even larger committee than the 35 who worked last year and nominations for this year's committee will take place at the meeting. Remembering previous accomplishments of I.S.S. and the hilarious events of last year's campaign, President Stulberg hopes that Varsity students will again this year give their full support to the International Student Service.

Arts and Letters To Hear McIlwraith

On Thursday October 11th at 6:45 the Arts and Letters Club of the Medical Society will hold its opening meeting at Wymilwood Professor T. F. McIlwraith, Anthropologist of the Royal Ontario Museum will speak on "Race and Race Prejudice" and following his lecture will lead discussion on the subject.

The purpose of the Arts and Letters Club is to bring Medical students together with men and women of other faculties for the free exchange of ideas on subjects outside the Medical course. In the past the Club has presented such speakers as Miss Marion Anderson, Col. George Drew, Dr. William Boyd and Dr. W. E. Blatz. Other meetings and discussions will be held on every second Thursday throughout the season, to which students of all faculties are invited.

viewed, declined to comment about his winning the D.S.O. Instead, he is quoted as saying, "The men with a did a wonderful job."

When discharged he intends to pick up the threads of his college career, to seek the future he postponed in order to personally bear into submission any Nazis too tough for his regiment to handle.

Captain Norm Ballard went to Britain in 1942 as a reinforcement officer of the Royal Regiment of Canada and transferred to the 48th Highlanders. After the Italian campaign he went to France and Belgium and subsequently home. His brother, P.O. Donald Ballard, served with the Royal Canadian Navy, and his sister, Miss G. Marie Ballard was with the Canadian Women's Army Corps.

POLICE STORM LA PLATA UNIVERSITY

Military Training Voluntary At Western Universities

Winnipeg, Oct. 6.—(CUP)—Major G. P. R. Tallin, Commanding Officer of the University of Manitoba COTC, has informed the Military Committee that the COTC would be returned to the voluntary status this year. The decision of the senate is expected to release the University's military organizations, the COTC and the UNTD, from the compulsory basis on which they have been operating for the past six years.

"The program in effect during the later war years, which closely paralleled the training of men called up under the NRMA has been modified," said Major Tallin. "The new policy is designed to achieve the original purpose of the COTC, namely to qualify students for commissions in various branches of the army and stimulate interest in all problems of national defence."

The program will be closely co-ordinated with the students' time-tables yet offer subjects like motor mechanics, artillery, tactical exercises, open and indoor range firing and military history.

Vancouver, Oct. 6.—(CUP) Military training has been offered as an alternative to physical training both by Lt.-Col. G. M. Shrum, commanding Officer of the C.O.T.C. and Cmdr. H. N. McIlroy, commander of the U.N.T.D. at the University of British Columbia.

The period of military training will be three hours a week for twenty weeks with the emphasis on leadership so as to produce potential officers. The students will be paid for the parades on the campus but will be able to get their discharge without delay from any of the services.

It is not yet known whether air force training, discontinued before the end of the war, will be started up again. "If there are enough interested we will make arrangements to give you some sort of training," said Col. Shrum, "but you will wear khaki uniforms instead of blue ones."

Dr. Gossage Praises Urquhart For Handling Health Service

The expansion of the University Health Service under the directorship of Lt.-Col. Ian Urquhart in the past three years was highly commended by the permanent Director, Dr. C. D. Gossage, in an interview with The Varsity on his return from active service this fall.

When Dr. Gossage returned to active service in January 1942 the University Health Service which he had just started to reorganize was serving only the first and second year Arts Students. Lt.-Col. Urquhart, who is now remaining with Dr. Gossage as Assistant Director, obtained leave of absence at that time to carry on the reorganization of the Health Service while Dr. Gossage proceeded overseas as A.D.M.S. of the 1st Cdn. Div.

Now the Health Service serves every student in the University except the divinity students of Knox and Trinity Colleges. A completely equipped infirmary has been set up, and the Women's Health Service has been brought under the University control.

These developments, Dr. Gossage explained, have been carried on by Lt.-Col. Urquhart under the most trying conditions, and with such a shortage of staff that the results are little short of miraculous.

Dr. Gossage expressed his appreciation or having Lt.-Col. Urquhart carry on with now as Assistant Director. It will enable the service to have a Director present at all times.

Classics Club, Soph-Frosh Banquet Activities Scheduled on U.C. Agenda

This year's program of the U.C. Trinity Classics Club will place more emphasis on student participation and less on guest speakers according to President Martin Ostwald, IV Classics U.C.

Two meetings, in November and January, have been set aside for student papers; and for the December meeting a puppet performance is planned. The puppets, directed by James Reaney, II English Lang. and Lit. U.C., will enact a translation of a Roman comedy. Negotiations are also being carried on for a production by the U.C. Players' Guild of Euripides' Hippolytus.

At the first meeting of the club, to be held on Thursday, Oct. 18, at St. Hilda's, Professor H. A. Thompson, of the Department of Archaeology will speak on Apulia. Professor Thompson has only recently returned to Canada from that part of Italy where he was attached to Naval Intelligence. Up to May of this year, he was stationed at Bari in charge of the Adriatic theatre assisting the resistance groups in Yugoslavia, Albania and Greece.

The meetings of the Classics Club are open to all students and faculties. President Ostwald emphasized that classics students from Victoria were specially welcome.

The fire inspector has put his foot down and the torches will be imitation ones.

That's the ultimatum that faces officials planning the U.C. Soph Frosh to be held in the Crystal Ballroom of the King Edward Hotel this Wednesday. The passing of the flaming torch—symbol of knowledge—has been in past years a traditional part of the U.C. Soph Frosh ceremonies. But U.C. Lit and W.U.A. executives have this year been forced to abandon the realism of a live flame. The torches are to be artificially illuminated.

Special guests at the Soph Frosh banquet are to include Dr. Sidney E. Smith and Prof. W. R. Taylor, who will address the 700 first and second year students in attendance.

Gord McCaffrey, Lit president, Ross McLean, sophomore president, and the yet-to-be-elected president of the U.C. freshies will also speak.

Chess Exhibition

Everybody is welcome to a simultaneous chess exhibition by C. A. Crompton, on Thursday, October 11th at seven forty-five p.m. in the Music Room at Hart House. If possible, please bring a chess set.

Universities Defy Order To Resume Normal Activity

STUDENTS SET UP RADIO STATION

According to a report carried by the New York daily PM last Friday the University of La Plata has been attacked by Government police armed with sabers and tear gas and some 300 students barricaded therein have been placed under arrest.

The University, which is located in the capital city of Buenos Aires Province had defied the government order to resume its normal activity. Civilians joined the University students who were led by University Vice-President Martinez Cibelli in resistance to the police.

Similarly the High Council of the University of Buenos Aires announced their unanimous decision to close the University in open defiance of the government ultimatum that unless the University resume normal activity it would be permanently closed.

Students barricaded in the University stated through their "Occupation Board" that they fully expected a police attempt to eject them but that there would be no armed resistance. "We will continue to withdraw to the last stronghold, where we will sing the national anthem while police are battering down the doors," they said.

Students have succeeded in bringing their case before the public in spite of press restrictions forbidding any mention of the crisis by setting up their own radio station in the engineering school.

Future of Physics Is Lecture Topic

A series of ten lectures called "Physics for the Future" will commence Friday evening October 12th. These lectures will take place in Room 43 of the Physics building.

The first lecture on "Radioactivity and the Atom Bomb" will be given by Professor John Satterly. Although he worked on this subject for his Doctor of Science degree Professor Satterly is better known on the campus for his liquid air lectures. "Isotopes and the Atom Bomb" will be given by Professor J. C. Ireton, "Uranium and the Atom Bomb" by Professor Elizabeth Allin and "The Manufacture of the Atom Bomb" by Professor A. D. Misner.

Two lectures on the Electron Microscope are to be given by Professor E. F. Burton and Mr. S. G. Gillis. Professor Burton who is identified with the building of the first Electron Microscope in North America will speak its development. Mr. Gillis having worked on the machine in the Physics building for the past year will lecture on recent advances.

Geophysics will be the subject of the last four lectures, "The Precambrian Shield" the first of these will be given by Professor J. T. Wilson who is at present Director of Operational Re-

Former Bursar Dies Suddenly

Rev. Frank Louis Barber, former librarian of Victoria College, died suddenly at his Toronto home last week. Dr. Barber, a graduate of Victoria College and Edinburgh University, became bursar of Victoria College in 1921, librarian in 1924, and superintendent of buildings in 1933.

At the time of his death Dr. Barber held the degrees of Bachelor of Arts, Doctor of Laws, and Doctor of Philosophy.

Ordained a minister in the Methodist Church, Dr. Barber was one time pastor of Guelph, Preston, Listowel, London, and St. Clair Ave. United Churches. Dr. Barber who had travelled extensively in Asia, Russia, the Holy Land, the Pacific Islands and South America, made use of his foreign experience in his capacity as Director and Manager of the Canadian Journal of Religious Thought. He was the author of "The Philosophy of John Wesley" and Experiments of Color Aesthetics.

C. C. F. Club To Form Groups

On Friday evening, October 5th, Roy Clarke, third year president of the University C.C.F. Club opened the first meeting of the season.

This year the club plans to form interest groups to study the running co-operatives and the basic facts of socialism, and they plan to send a representative to the coming C.C.F. Convention.

The floor was opened to discussion of the functioning of the party in other provinces. A member of the University from Prince Edward Island said that in his province the party was just in the initial stages of organization with Prince County being the only one with an active group of members.

search for the army. The others will be "Eldorado" by Professor A. A. Brant "the Age of the Earth" by Professor N. B. Kevill, and "Seismic Prospecting," by Professor J. H. Hodgson.

These lectures which will be given in the above order are open to the public although they are planned especially for the students of the University.

Editorial

The Permanent War

On our front page this morning there appears what little we have been able to find out about the student strike at the Argentinian University of La Plata. It is impossible, from the contradictory and even self-contradictory reports of press bureaux, columnists, and experts, to make out exactly what is happening; as for that matter it is impossible to find out what is really happening in any issue of importance.

It is clear that the La Plata students have staged a sit-down in order to forestall a lockout, and that Venezuelan students are striking in sympathy, apparently with an extra political motive. But what exactly is at issue it is impossible to discover.

One issue at least is clear. We are not sure who is trying to close the University of La Plata, or why, or with what justice; but it seems plain that the students are defending the right of the University to remain open. In so striving, in defending that right against (we are told) sabres, truncheons, and tear-gas, they are doing nothing especially new. They are merely bringing into the open a permanent and universal war.

THE TWIN FOES

Every University—this one included—is at war to remain open.

It is at war against outward pressure, and against inner dissolution. In the same way a man may be said to wage continual war to remain alive—war against calamity without and against degeneration within. The war a man wages to remain alive is an unconscious war; so also is the struggle for survival of a University unconscious.

There is little immediate prospect of the University of Toronto succumbing to outward pressure, though a study of the daily papers, in particular their correspondence columns, over a period of months, will convince the candid observer that the pressure is real enough. Public hullabaloo has been raised over allegations of communism in the classrooms, charges of draft-dodging on the part of students, protests that the University mulcts public funds to teach the sons of the public nothing useful or even something dangerous.

THE OPPOSING FRONT

Every time an indignant editorialist slams at crackpot professors with their heads in the air, he is challenging the University's right to survive. Every time an inept pen-pusher writes to inform Mr. Editor that the Universities are all right, he supposes, but certainly not doing anything practical, he is accusing you and me of wasting our time. Every time an alderman with one eye on the ballot-box proclaims that housing or sewage or a new City Hall doorknob must come before education, he is insulting the starving students of China and their valiant war of the full stomach versus the empty head.

The pressure is there, we repeat; but the University is not likely to crumble before it. The University is in greater danger of suicide than of assault. It is in greater danger of ceasing to be a University by becoming something else, than of under compulsion ceasing to be altogether.

THE REAL DANGER

The pressing peril is that the University will cease to be a University at all. It may become a trade-school, for instance, and indeed we have read somewhere that one Canadian University has introduced, by request, a course in fish-worm farming. It may become an issuer of passports to jobs, as even today too many students use it. It may become an applier of social super-finish, like a chamois bootrag. It may become all these things, or any of these things, and cease to be a University with the function of teaching all knowledge. It may become any of these things, or all of them, if its students—lacking in their permanent war—

Since a University is largely its students, it will go where its students are going, cohere while they cohere, and fall apart if they fly in different directions, pursuing different aims. Students must determine to learn, if not all knowledge, then such knowledge as they do learn in its right proportion; for all philosophies, all directions, all desires, are matters of proportion. And it is by agreeing upon our common aims that we can side with the Argentinian students, locked heroically in their classrooms while the gas-bombs burst outside.

Hemingway and Steinbeck

Anthologies are always prime bait for critical reviewers. Obviously much that is pertinent to the general theme of the anthology must be omitted, and almost any reviewer can find something among the omissions that seems to him worthy of inclusion. But the real weakness of most collections is that they tend almost invariably to defeat their basic purpose. For if this purpose is to collect literature dealing with one specific subject (freedom, war, British literature, etc.), the mere fact that a piece falls within the required category is generally sufficient reason for its inclusion, regardless of its literary merits. And when the purpose is to present a cross-section of the work of a single author, the tendency to include only the best leaves gaps which render difficult a true understanding of his development and importance.

Both the Viking Portable Steinbeck and the Viking Portable Hemingway (each $2.75, MacMillan in Canada) are fairly good anthologies. They are too incomplete to be recommended as an only text, but they do provide the reader with a good general review of much of the best work of these two important American writers. As handy collections, they have the added values of compactness and good binding.

The chief weakness of the Steinbeck volume is the lack of comprehensive notes. We have a right to know why Pascal Covici included the pieces he has chosen, and it would be interesting to learn what he thinks of the development of a writer who is presumably one of his favorites. Steinbeck has written fine things; but it sometimes seems that most of his best work is in the past. Certainly his Saroyan-like dwelling on the humor and pleasures of poverty—represented here by Tortilla Flat—seems scarcely worthy of one who, according to Mr. Covici, "is thoroughly Jeffersonian, with high hopes for a more realistic and riper humanity."

Of Mice And Men, the most completely satisfying of Steinbeck's longer works, is presented complete in this volume. Several selections from The Grapes of Wrath are included but they simply emphasize that the only way to realize the full power of this novel is to read the whole book. There are a number of selections from other books and some of Steinbeck's best known short stories.

As an anthology, the Hemingway collection is more interesting. Mal-

College Life in 1830

Should attestation be required to the fact that standards of art change, The Student Prince provides it. The Romantic opera must have thrilled our parents or it would not be coming back year after year. Yet to modern youth it appears almost ridiculous in its romantic excesses. The revival of the opera cannot be meant for the younger set; nostalgia lies heavy upon it. If I had been young in the early twenties, instead of non-existent, I might have enjoyed it.

It seems to be a dictum that the stories attached to light operas must be entirely inconsistent. The Student Prince commits the more serious error of creating a false mood. A Victorian romanticism is superimposed on an early eighteenth century scene, with resulting inconsistencies that cannot stand up to the scrutiny of the modern analytical audience. Impossible situations keep re-

Friends of Great Music

Music lovers on the campus will be interested in an organization called the Friends of Great Music. It was this group that brought Arthur Schnabel to Toronto last May. This year their program has been enlarged and they intend to sponsor four programs given by the Albertain Trio. The Budapest Quartet, Joseph Szigeti, and Egon Petri. These are all first rate artists and their appearance in Toronto will make musical history.

The programs are to consist of classical works not widely known. And so the group is making the double contribution to the cultural life of this city in bringing the finest of artists to play meritorious works which have been unduly neglected. Inquires about the should be addressed to the A.M. & D. editor or to Victor Mann, 883 Logan Avenue.

— PHILIP FREEDMAN

So you're worried about the housing shortage? Relax. Forget it. In no time at all there won't be any problem. There won't be any houses.

The Tribe of the Terrible Termites has struck! Their stomachs are responding to the call of the delicious, mellow meal of the University of Toronto!

In the emergency the editor of The Varsity has issued a short message of 50,000 words (Inside News, page 10) which is summarized as follows: "Without exaggeration we may safely say there is a termite or two attending classes at the University."

Early this morning crowds of students stood in solemn groups around that magnificent masterpiece of modern architecture, the little oak skulhouse. Horrified whispers filtered through the tense crowds.

"I hear they have 150 Schoolmen under observation—blockheads, you know."

"What was that you said?" asked a Pass Arts frosh. "I didn't quite get it."

The University Police force, running up from all directions, quickly dispersed the hysterical crowds. Then he sped to Simcoe Hall to fill in his report—secret file No. J 542, signed Iggnutz Poop, a special signature conveying a great deal of meaning.

We understand the government has promised immediate steps. Word is expected hourly that all termites have been outlawed—even turnip termites. Meanwhile, Insect Minister Pew has issued a proclamation giving full power to everyone on earth to deal with the menace without delay, retroactive to yesterday.

Local Yoke of the Union of Button-Hole Measures is moving a vote of thanks to the government.

However, a special guard has been thrown around all University buildings. He's mighty tired of being thrown around all the buildings, but he feels as he was being thrown around the Mining Building. "This termite plague threatens the very foundations of our University."

Whatever you do, remain calm. What's a few holes in the ceiling? Everyone's living under a strain these days!

Spence, Ball Top Golf Tourney

Friday's Play To Decide Intercollegiate Team

Friday's Intramural Tournament gave ample proof, if any was needed, that St. Andrews is a fair test of that fascinating game, golf. Two men came in under 80—two Schoolmen, Bob Spence and Gord Ball with 76's—while the majority staggered around in ninety-someodd.

The 'also rans' found themselves a pleasant afternoon's golf in the stimulating competitive atmosphere of 'amateur versus amateur' sport. It was nice, amiable weather—no rain nor sun to carry things to extremes—and for fifty pennies the fellows had it for cheap.

Winter rules were the style for the tournament, and rightly so due to the water-logged fairways and bunker mud-puddles. This helped the boys considerably over the tough championship layout, with nearly all of the back tees in use for the day. Most participants also noted that the swollen creek was virtual river of tears in which to soothingly cool fevered brows and down troubled spirits.

Spence and Ball shot good golf, very good golf, but both complained about uncontrollable putters. Spence especially had the 'three put' headache on the back nine, nearly blowing his chances for a good score completely before he settled down to a couple of birdies on the way in to the clubhouse.

Both men took the long, straight first hole in their stride with one-putt greens. Spence dropped behind a stroke with a poor second shot on the 340-yard second, but got it back when Ball missed the par three third green from the tee. They each chipped within striking distance on the tricky fourth for pars, but Spence picked up two strokes as Ball bogeyed the fifth and sixth. Ball went a third down as he again missed the green on the 180-yard seventh, but he got this one back with a bird on the 495-yard dogs-leg along the creek bed. The ninth gave them both trouble, each taking five, thus leaving Spence two up at the halfway mark.

The team championship went to School by 27 strokes. Spence, Ball, Stee and Simonson at 83 made up the squad. U.C.'s Armstrong 84, Mell 85, Horkins 86 and Bain 88 were runners up.

The top thirty performers in Friday's tourney will play off on Wednesday to determine the ten men to represent the U. of T. in Intercollegiate competition this year.

Speaking of SPORT

Here And There With Football . . .

With Saturday comes McMaster!

With McMaster comes the first intercollegiate rugby tussle since that disastrous autumn of '39. Even though it be but a mere exhibition game, we can't help but feel a little enthused. Four days to go!

Little is known of the McMaster aggregation save that it is headed by a former Hamilton Tiger in the person of Tommy Henderson. A dirty rumor states that this same Henderson does not believe in huddles and relies on the out-moded signal system. If this be true, we hold our head, touch wood and keep our fingers crossed. Four days to go!

This system was quite evident over the weekend. Montreal Hornets used it against the powerful Argos but to little avail. Yesterday, Varsity's Mel Lawson put to good use for the Hamilton Wildcats. On second down and before Beaches knew the score, Lawson heaved a long pass after calling the signal. Teddy Reeve's men, for the better part, looked awe-struck. It shouldn't happen to a nice guy like Reeve! Four days to go!

More And More

At London, on Saturday, Johnny Metras split his gigantic squad into the Poiples and the Whites and proceeded to show the people what a football clinic looked like. His publicity agent must have really been on the bit since no admission was charged. . . The combo of Krol and Szamlinski may be rejuvenated by Metras with Joe's kid brother trying to fill those large shoes. . . News from Queen's is on the censored side. The much-rumored-about Jack Parry is slated to carry the largest part of the Tricolor attack but he has a bit of a reputation to live up to after being compared to a great like Fritz Hanson. Coach Bob Elliot was also reported steamed up about a former Western lineman answering to the name of Bob Stevens. . . McGill will face its initial test on October 16 when the Montreal Hornets will be out for an exhibition game. . . Murray Hayes, a former Navy star, appears to be headed for a banner year with the Redmen if his practice form is any indication. . . Johnny Tyler is another practice standout.

Those Clubs sure insist on doing things the hard way! That seventh game tomorrow should be the game. They will come through. They must come through. Mortgages are burdensome.

Please, Please, Cubs.
Four Days To Go!

The Sportswoman

By Polly Muiz

A New President —

A Directorate meeting was called last Friday, and a very important meeting it was. The first action taken was to elect the yearly president, according to custom. Mrs. W. A. Kirkwood, a member of the Directorate since 1921, is eminently qualified to fill the post chosen for her this year. With the guidance of the new leader, mighty problems were reduced into future policies.

First And Foremost —

Better attended and more energetic practice sessions are in order, for the honor of the Alma Mater is at stake. Women's intercollegiate sports were voted in. Celebrations are in order, but prepare to contribute to the "cause." The interrupted rotation system is to be resumed. Badminton champs of each College will travel to Queen's this year. Varsity will play hostess to the swimming teams. McGill has not as yet agreed to having the basketball tournament, but a definite stand is expected to be taken early this week. Tennis plans are still in the embryo stage. All we can hopefully say, is that Toronto will probably send a team to McGill. McMaster has not yet been heard from.

One small reservation has been made in the great plans. Intercollegiate sports may go on IF there are no displays of unnecessary hospitality. This is to rule out high costs of such a venture. As railway fares are still unsympathetic concerning reductions, expenses are a factor to be seriously considered. Perhaps the railway officials will present a Christmas present of special rates to the Canadian Public.

Back To The Intramural Scene —

To accommodate the vastly increased numbers clamoring for bowling cards, the price per card has been raised from $1 to $1.50. The first 250 students to reach their bowling representatives will reap the benefits of this scheme. The rest must be satisfied with the promise "Till next year."

Speaking of Swing

To all intents and purposes we went down to the Maple Leaf Gardens last Friday to review the Tony Pastor band. But since Tony's band didn't impress us much and Ellis McLintock's relief outfit did we have decided to devote a deal of space to the Toronto band.

Tony first. For your money you heard a fair rhythm section, a fair sax quintet, and a not so fair brass septet. Tony also regaled the audience with a song or two. It all depends on how you go for the gravel-throated school of chanteurs as to whether you thought yourself regaled. We were regaled to the greatest extent on Confessant and Sunny Side of the Street but blushed slightly at the double-entendre lyrics of Let's Do It.

Kid brother Stubby's trumpet playing is characterized by much buccal distension and a very nice tone both of which were much in evidence on I Surrender Dear, and an up-tempo Whispering. The big event of the evening to most of the fans was the inevitable Paradiddle Joe—Joe in this case being one Jimmy Vincent. We don't like drum solos.

In the McLintock orchestra there is a young man named Kenny Campbell who plays baritone sax and arranges. He is competent as a sax-man but he is much more than competent as an arranger. No other band in Canada can boast of such a modern sounding library—and we are Bert Niosi fans too. His own jump up instrumental such as Swingin' For Lil, and such trite pop tunes as I'll Buy That Dream are made interesting and listenable by the Campbell boys' arranging genius. Watch out for this lad.

When it comes to playing the Kenny's stuff Ellis and his men don't do so badly either. The saxes are easily the most polished of the three sections. Tenor soloists Gordy Evans and Mich Malnech and lead man Hank Rosati insure pleasant listening whether it be an ab lib chorus or an ensemble one. The trumpets are led by the firm tone of Bobby Van Evera and feature the driving ad libs of a much improved Tommy Cronin. The (with a long E) soloist as far as we are concerned is Don Humble who plays trombone better than most of the men in the so-called big-time—he plays both lead and hot.

Ellis is a symphony man who has turned to dance work. He both a lovely round tone and a very impressive technique; all that is required is an original style. Right now he is on a combination James-Spivak kick, which can and does become boring. But all is forgiven when you hear those Campbell arrangements—the big reason why we preface success for the boy with the golden horn.

Hornyansky

By Ross McLean

We have permission to expose a fraud.

Mr. Hanna had said he was one in a million. He was gifted, the principal of Oakwood Collegiate declared. In dramatics, in writing, in acting. He had been editor of the Oakwood yearbook, Mr. Hanna also pointed out. He had won the Prince of Wales scholarship, the Edward Blake scholarship in English and Latin and a Reuben Wells Leonard scholarship valued at $900. He was, he certainly was one in a million—this Michael Hornyansky.

"But," pointed out the 1-in-a-1,000,000 himself, "anybody that will win a scholarship will naturally be blown up. Mr. Hanna was just brimming over. He was just looking for things to talk about."

Well, he was gifted, wasn't he? In dramatics, producing, directing, writing and acting?

That was a myth. He had just produced four or five advertising skits for tea dances. It actually wasn't worth mentioning.

Well, he had been editor of the Oakwood yearbook, hadn't he?

He had been co-editor. There were two others.

He had won all those scholarships, hadn't he? Well, yes he had. And now he was in M. P. & C., I, but he didn't know for how long.

Truth to tell, this Mike Hornyansky seemed no more brilliant than any other genius we may meet some day.

Mike is 17, was born in Brussels, Belgium, was said by The Star in their issue of Monday, September 10, to have "won the highest honor for an entering student at the University of Toronto" and was described by a Star heading writer, whom Mike doesn't recall meeting, as being "proud of mother, shy about self."

And now he was at the U. of T., standing in the U.C. cloisters, with a slide-rule protruding incongruously from his inside coat pocket.

Was he getting acclimatized? (It's a word we learned from Tondelayo or someone in "White Cargo.")

Yes, but it looked as though he was going to have to work and nobody liked that. If he didn't get to be a chemist, he would be a novelist. In high school he had specialized in fiction. He didn't have a formula. He just tried to see what he could get down. He really hadn't done a darn thing worth noting. But writing was still his favorite thing to do in spare time.

He had moved to Canada in 1928. What had brought his family here, anyway? Well, they hadn't mentioned any reason to him. He had then been 1½ year of age and excluded from their confidence on such matters. It hadn't, perhaps, been discussed at the breakfast table sometime since? Things discussed at the breakfast table, he said in the tone of a Saroyan tossing off a spare philosophy of life, are very hard to understand.

Between 1935 and 1938 he was visiting in South West Africa (The Star said South Africa) where he learned English grammar. You would never learn it here, he remarked disparagingly. No never, we agreed.

About The Star story: "Some dull woman rang me up, listened to everything I said and took what pleased her."

The Star woman had asked about languages and Michael had replied in English that he spoke only English, and had only a nodding schoolroom acquaintance with French. That too had pleased her.

His mother is Mrs. Joyce Hornyansky. She was born in England and is on the faculty of the Conservatory of Music in charge of the conservatory quartet. She is a cellist. Michael plays no instrument but he can and does translate Virgil into verse on sight.

Really, where this "one-in-a-million" business got started, we don't know.

colm Cowley has contributed a number of essays and notes explaining the reasons for his choices and his impressions of Hemingway's development and importance. I do not always agree with Mr. Cowley's conclusions, particularly when he finds in parts of Hemingway's work intellectual and symbolic significance about which I am not always so certain. But at least he does present his own theories.

It seems to me that Hemingway's development has a dual nature. Actually he has developed in one sense, at the same time regressing in another. Thus A Farewell To Arms, chronologically his first novel, was followed by two weaker novels; then his career as a novelist was finally crowned by For Whom The Bell Tolls, in which he makes an effort to face the fundamental problem of our time—the significance of the individual as a member of a society for whose evil tendencies he must be partly responsible.

But as a short story writer Hemingway's literary history is not so happy. I have often been unable to understand why some of his later stories, in particular the slick and annoying Snows of Kilimanjaro, have taken precedent over some of his earlier short stories. These stories about the Michigan woods, while technically less expert than his later work, have the feeling for life expected in great literature. Mr. Cowley, who seems doubtful too, says, "Technically The Snows of Kilimanjaro is Hemingway's most accomplished piece of writing. That isn't the same as calling it his best piece of writing." But then he proceeds to write a minor eulogy about the story. He was right the first time. And it seems to me that we may perhaps blame the magazines for Hemingway's slick lifeless short stories of his late period. But Hemingway is also to

TO THE CLOCKWORK OF THE SKY

Copernicus, brilliant Polish scientist, was appointed Professor of Astronomy at the University of Rome in 1499. He became convinced that the sun and not the earth was the centre of the universe. Giving up his professorship, he spent thirty years in research work in astronomy, and so gave to the world the Copernican Theory of the movement of the earth and the planets around the sun.

JUST as Copernicus solved a vast problem through painstaking research, so Nickel scientists use research to solve many modern problems. When industry requires a special material to meet special conditions, Nickel scientists try to discover a new combination of metals that will meet those conditions. Thus are new alloys and new uses for Nickel added to today's long list.

Today Nickel is required in nearly every industry in making top quality products or for keeping production costs down. The research that has helped to bring this about will be expanded in the years after the war.

The information collected by Nickel scientists is available to Canadian engineers, designers and metallurgists seeking better materials for any product or process.

Research reveals new uses for Nickel. Increased use of Nickel from Canadian mines and plants means employment for Canadians and brings many benefits to Canada.

Japanese Canadian Citizens Faced With Deportation

S. C. M. SPEAKER URGES DEFINITE STAND

Decision to take action to prevent the deportation of several thousand Japanese Canadian citizens highlighted the Students' Christian Movement Fall Camp at Westawans this past week-end. "Several thousand Japanese Canadians are being practically deported from the country," declared Rev. Ted Nichols, associate secretary of the National S.C.M. "Here is one crisis which I think should especially concern us. These people have been coerced into signing declarations of their return to Japan."

They have lost their homes and property in many cases and have been separated from their families and now find little left for them in Canada, he said. They have had only one other alternative besides forfeiting their citizenship. That, he pointed out, was to move east to the Rockies and be willing to accept positions of the same status as "ditch-diggers."

"These people are Canadian citizens," he exclaimed in addressing one of the open discussions. "Some are Canadians by birth, others by choice. Is it just to take away their citizenship and send them off to Japan? In a few weeks they will be leaving. Something must be done about this—and done soon!"

The entire Japanese Canadian controversy had arisen from a discussion stemming from an address given by Miss Harriet Christie, associate general secretary of the Canadian S.C.M., who had just returned from a trip to Britain.

"Students in Britain and Europe," she had pointed out, "are more aware of their place in the world. They are beginning to realize their responsibility to the community."

Canadian students were, on the other hand, Miss Christie observed, not as mature in their thinking as other students of the world. They were not as wide awake to present issues.

"The students in Canada are still living in their tight little intellectual shells," she said. "It's time to look around at present conditions and participate in the responsibilities of the world."

Capt. Douglas Candy, newly appointed chaplain for the ex-servicemen of the campus, had also stressed the need for student acceptance of greater responsibility and independence concerning things which they believe to be right, in his Sunday morning sermon during the week-end conference.

Recommendation resulting from the Japanese Canadian discussion was made by Jean Swan of the United Church Training School, who said: "Our group recommends that the S.C.M. take a definite stand concerning the Japanese Canadian problem. We shall approach the committee in Toronto opposed to the situation and in collaboration with, or under the direction of, Rev. James Findlay, the chairman of the committee, we will make a protest."

Military Training Policy Undecided

While many former members of the armed forces continued to offer their services to the University Naval Training Division and the Canadian Officers Training Corps, both these Toronto units awaited word from Ottawa concerning their training policy for this year. The Varsity learned today.

As previously reported, all military training at the University of Toronto will be on a voluntary basis in line with the plan adopted at the majority of Canadian universities.

Pulp Paucity Proves Poser; Beg, Borrow, Burgle Books

From the morale-raising pin-up to the victory-heralding ticker-tape of V-J Day, including the blueprint-work of radar and the atomic bomb, it has been a war of paper as the university student is today discovering.

Paper supplies continue low and the book supply situation is accordingly desperate. Major G. Burns, manager of the University of Toronto Press, sees little prospect of improvement for at least another year.

The slow process of reconversion from war to peace finds shelves at the once well-stocked Press book store discouragingly barren of certain texts.

Dr. J. D. Robbins New Vic Librarian

The appointment of Dr. J. D. Robbins head of the English Department of Victoria College, to the post of College Librarian was announced today. He succeeds Dr. F. L. Barber, who died last week.

Dr. Robbins revealed that several changes were scheduled for the library building, plans for which have already been made. This extension would cover the tennis courts to the east of the stacks, and reach as far as Burwash Hall. This has been necessitated by the continuous increase in books and materials, and lack of space to keep them.

Dr. Robbins received his B.A. and M.A. from Victoria College, after which he studied abroad, particularly at Marburg, Germany, returning to take his Ph.D. in Chicago. He returned to Victoria College in 1914 as instructor in German, advancing to the post of lecturer in 1919.

In 1925 Dr. Robbins became an assistant professor in the English Department, a full professor in 1933, and finally head of the department in 1944. He has written one book, The Incomplete Angler, several articles for magazines, and has helped to compile several anthologies of poetry.

2 Students Killed In LaPlata Riots

Two students at the University of La Plata are reported to have died after clashes with the police in the course of the student strike against the Peron government in Argentina, according to a broadcast picked up by The Varsity last night.

It was further reported that spreading sympathy strikes threatened to close all Argentine's high schools. More than 2000 university students and professors have been arrested by the military government.

Concurrent with the culmination of the riots, Vice-President Col. Juan Peron, "strong man" of the Argentine government, has resigned, ousted by the army that put him in power.

Resigning along with Peron was the capital's police chief, Filomeno J. Velasco, whose hard-handed handling of disorders growing out of the university strike last week was vigorously resented.

No word has been received on the situation at La Plata University since the announcement of the Peron resignation; nor is there further detail on the strike of Caracas students, who demanded that their country, Venezuela, break off all relations with Argentina.

Unprecedented registration figures have also strained the available supplies as frantic clerks attempt to provide each student with his required texts.

Chief source of texts is the United States with overseas shipments gradually resuming their pre-war bulk. Language texts made in France, Spain, and Germany are unavailable.

Meanwhile, lecturers appear to romp unconcernedly on, leaving the students to consult library copies of specified texts, to share books where necessary, and to take the usual amount of notes. There is no reported shortage of note books.

Research Awards Announced For New Sugar Discoveries

Sugar's role in the dramas of war, medicine, agriculture, the arts and industry, is accentuated by the announcement that five annual awards will be presented by the Sugar Research Foundation Incorporation between 1946-1949 for the discovery of new practical uses of sugar. Closing date for the first award is January 1, 1946. Details and conditions of the awards are being provided on request. Communications may be mailed to The National Science Fund of the National Science Club of the National Academy of Sciences; 2101 Constitution Avenue, Washington, D.C.

Rhumba to Rumble At Spanish Club

"The aim of the Spanish Club is not to teach a language, but to provide broad and educational entertainment in a Spanish and Latin-American atmosphere," John Harbron, president of the club, told The Varsity yesterday.

The Spanish Club is planning its program for the season to include movies, plays, talks, rhumba lessons by Da Costa, and Spanish humor.

The group is not exclusively for language students, but for anyone interested in Spain, South America, music and dancing. Students will find the date and program of each meeting on posters which will be displayed in various University buildings.

Bluenose Students To Vote by Proxy

Students from Nova Scotia who are members of the Naval, Military, or Air Forces of Canada may vote by proxy in the forthcoming provincial elections, Edgar W. Mingo, special returning officer, announced recently. Further information may be obtained at the University Registrar's office by any students affected.

The privilege of proxy voting is reserved for members of the armed forces "who at the time of enlistment or enrolment had been living inside Nova Scotia for the immediately preceding twelve months and who are presently on duty outside the Province."

The election will be held on October 23, 1945, and Nomination Day will be October 9. The proxy form must be mailed to the selected proxy in time for him or her to present it to the Returning Officer on or before the closing day of the poll, October 23.

Announce Lecture On Night-Editing

The first in a series of lectures on the technique of night-editing, to be given by members of the staff of The Varsity, will begin at four o'clock this afternoon in Room 37 of University College.

The technical aspects of the daily production of The Varsity will be fully dealt with in order to instruct and guide potential night-editors in their work. Among the particular topics to be covered will be make-up, proof-reading and headline writing.

Since nightediting schedules will be drawn up according to attendance at these lectures, all those expecting to nightedit are urged to be present.

Following the policy inaugurated during the war years, Hart House theatre will again open its doors to campus productions for six weeks during the first term from Nov. 1 to Dec. 15, The Varsity learned today.

Already a number of campus productions have booked the theatre to capacity, said Vincent Regan, associate manager of the theatre.

Regan and his co-manager, Norm Nicol, will supervise the productions of the Vic Dramatic Society, the U.C. Follies, Meds' Daffydil Night, the U.C. Players' Guild, School Nite, the Vic Music Club, the U.C. French Club, and the German Club.

Notable in this list is the Meds' Daffydil Night which was dispensed with by the Caput in 1939 with the result that no undergrad on the campus has ever seen it.

Regarding the question of the permanent opening of the theatre, officials are close-mouthed. "No policy has yet been settled upon by the Board of Syndics," Mr. Regan said.

CLOTHING DRIVE

The first organization meeting of the Campus Clothing Drive will be held in the Women's Union, 79 St. George St., today at 5:00 p.m. Representatives of all faculties are requested to attend.

Bears and Snakes Fail to Daunt Cyclists As Female Duo Tour Western Canada

Lightning flashed and awakened the pair of cyclists who sat up in their home-made sleeping bag to stare horrified at a monstrous black bear.

"There he was," the girls report, "about fifty feet away and carefully surveying us. Now, we distinctly remember a light into the eyes of a wild animal he will go away. He couldn't have read the same book we did. When I turned on our flashlight he just kept on coming toward us."

This adventure highlighted a bike tour taken through Western Canada and the Northwest States by a courageous two-some, Dorrner Ellis and Bev Meredith, now in third year engineering. Part of their summer's trip—from Banff to Jasper Park and Seattle to Duluth—was done on bicycle.

Escaping the bear and taking their leave of Jasper Park, the girls entrained for Vancouver and thence to Seattle, where they again took to their bicycles. The tumult of V-J Day caught the

Intercollegiate Debates Resumed After Five Years

AMBITIOUS PROGRAM OUTLINED

Three intercollegiate debates and plans for a series of inter-faculty contests after the style of the last few years were discussed at yesterday's meeting of the newly-constituted University of Toronto Debating Union, Graham Cotter, IV Trinity, Debates Commissioner, and Chairman of the Executive, announced last night.

Sketching an ambitious program for the first of the post-war years, Cotter stated that a tender was being sent to McGill University and that the Union hoped to sponsor other debates after Christmas with Laval of Quebec City and Cornell of Ithaca, New York.

Simultaneous home-and-home debates are being arranged, so that Toronto contestants will be guests in Montreal on the same evening that another Montreal team debates here, it was announced.

The Union hopes to broadcast the initial debate with McGill on a national network to students all over Ontario and Quebec.

Argentine Revolt Topic

The U.T.D.U. is also sponsoring a series of home debates to carry on the work of the Interfaculty Debating Union. First of the series, to be held next month, will discuss the justification of the recent student revolt at the University of La Plata in Argentina.

A team from University and Loretto Colleges will contest this first debate against a pair from Trinity and Victoria, it was announced.

"We expect our topic to arouse wide interest on the campus, and give expression to the beliefs of University students on a vital subject," Cotter stated. Topics for later debates in the Interfaculty series remain to be decided.

REORGANIZATION

Prior to the war, debating was looked after by the Debates Commissioner of the S.A.C. in conjunction with a debates committee of S.A.C. members; but a definite need was felt for an organized body that would embrace all campus debating societies.

The new Union was formally created on October 3 of this year by the S.A.C. and the constituent debating clubs. The central executive of the Union is composed of the senior officers of all the debating societies on the campus, with the Debates Commissioner as chairman. The S.A.C. committee has thus been dropped.

The executive works for the promotion of debating in the University, especially intercollegiate debating, leaving interfaculty planning to a committee. Represented at present are University College, Victoria, St. Michael's, Loretto, St. Joseph's, S.P.S., Trinity, and St. Hilda's. All faculty debating clubs are eligible for membership.

"It is our purpose," says the Chairman, "to sponsor all good debating for the promotion of better speaking and high standards of democratic expression."

McGill, prior to the war, had a student body of approximately 3,000, but this year an all-time high has been reached in the registration of 5,500 students.

continued. It was at this point in their travels that they discovered that rattlesnakes do exist.

Accepting the hospitality of a farm family for several days, Dorrner had gone into the cellar to get a jar of peach preserves when "something made a sound that no law-abiding peaches ever made."

Dorrner's hasty withdrawal to the main floor—sans peach preserves—saved her from a dangerous set-to with a North Dakota rattlesnake.

The girls were de-mechanized and forced to become pedestrians when a minor accident on the road bent the front wheel of Bev's bicycle into a U-shape. Leaving both their vehicles by the roadside, the girls went for assistance. When they returned, both machines had been stolen. From then on the girls proceeded by thumb.

Bears, forest ranger celebrants and rattlesnakes, nonetheless, the girls are already mapping an itinerary for their proposed jaunt next summer by bike through the Gaspé Peninsula.

The Japanese Question

Peculiar point is given to a letter recently received in these offices by the resolution of the Student Christian Movement to take action to prevent the deportation of several thousand Japanese-Canadians, as reported on page one of today's issue. What action the S.C.M. intends to take is not altogether clear; and it is difficult to offer a suggestion. The writers of the letter alluded to above appeal for "the awakening of the student body," an end which The Varsity is glad to further on any subject.

Our correspondents, M. Thomson of III Sociology, D. Franco of IV History, and J. Gipton, a graduate, have amassed an impressive array of facts which bear on the Japanese-Canadian question. We consider it part of our normal service to our readers to make these facts available to them for discussion; we do not publish the complete letter only because of its excessive length.

RIGHTS DENIED

According to our correspondents, the government's policy towards Japanese-Canadians, culminating in the deportation of over one-third of their number, "is not entirely a wartime phenomenon, but has been preceded by a history of provincial denial of citizenship rights and economic and social discrimination. Despite these discouragements, a high standard of civil responsibility was developed. The Japanese-Canadian rates of crime, juvenile delinquency, and receipt of relief have been the lowest of any group in Canada. During the last war, their armed service record was out of all proportion to their number."

The specific injustices under fire, however, arose from the Relocation Policy of 1942, which followed agitation in the press and in B.C. legislature for the removal of the Japanese-Canadians from the Pacific war zone.

FARMS EXPROPRIATED

Six months after assurances that their property would be pro-veteran settlement, and the Exchequer Court of Canada refused to give a decision on appeal. Conditions in the relocation centres were "far from satisfactory. . . . Neither the provincial nor the Federal government assumed responsibility for providing adequate educational facilities. Another demoralizing factor was the inability of these people to engage in those vocations for which their training suited them."

Dispersal of the Japanese-Canadians and their permanent relocation east of the Rockies brought "far from inviting" prospects for the relocatees. "He was faced with federal, provincial, and municipal restrictions, regarding the communities he might own, the vocations he might pursue, ownership and rental of property, and freedom of travel. All this because of his unfortunate choice of ancestors."

REPATRIATION URGED

The deportation alternative was at this point subtly insinuated. "While contending with this, the relocatee's family and friends in the relocation centres were being presented with a 'voluntary repatriation' questionnaire, to be answered individually before a detachment of the R.C.M.P. At this time the Security Commission stated that it would consider any intention to resettle west of the Rockies as an indication of disloyalty," by implication sufficient grounds for deportation to Japan. "Furthermore, the decision to remain in Canada resulted in loss of employment in the relocation centre. That over 50 per cent decided to go to Japan is indicative of the coercive conditions under which the questionnaire was conducted. A similar questionnaire submitted to Japanese-Canadians under less prejudiced conditions resulted in only 7 per cent signing to go to Japan."

We thank our correspondents for an exemplary piece of research. Their facts, if unchallenged, will furnish a valuable spearhead for the protest launched by the S.C.M. Furthermore, we recommend this topic, or a topic of this kind similarly documented, to the sponsors of the newly-launched interfaculty program Student action in national matters accomplishes little. But student interest in national topics is an invaluable qualification for post-graduate citizenship in a democratic nation.

Records

Better Sound,
Worse Music

The new records for October include five major works, three released by Victor and two by Columbia. Surprisingly enough, the recorded sound on all five sets is on a level with the best production so far obtained by Canadian record companies. The Victor records, especially, are sonorous and clear with almost perfect balance of treble and bass. Good progress has been made in trying to eliminate the fuzzy sounds at the inside of the discs.

This improved recording, however, has been coupled with inadequate performance of good music or with adequate performance of poor music, with the result that there is little in the new releases that the serious collector will wish to acquire. For instance, Victor album DM 1001, A Vladimir Horowitz Program, is the embodiment of poor taste. For six sides Horowitz plays in his brittle and brilliant manner music that a true artist would hesitate to perform in recital, let alone have it permanently associated with his name through the medium of recordings. Similarly, it is beyond understanding why Rodzinski and the New York Philharmonic, in a new Columbia album, should wish to record such rubbish as the Rachmannoff Symphony No. 2.

Stokowski's performance of Music from Carmen can in no way be considered an improvement on the older Beecham recording. In typical style, Stokowski distorts the tempi at will, and in so doing distracts from the spontaneous charm of the music.

Victor has also released a suite from Strauss' Der Rosenkavalier, arranged by Antal Dorati, and played by the Cincinnati Symphony under Eugene Goossens. The suite has been endowed with all the characteristics of ballet music—a consequence of Dorati's long association with that art. It is interesting and delightful music. Were it not for the fact that the brass section of the orchestra is not up to the demands of the composer, it might have been described as well performed.

A single disc comprised of Debussy's Chansons de Lully and Liszt's Liebestraum No. 3, played by Iturbi, deserves mention inasmuch as it reaches new depths. The playing is sloppy, the phrasing idiotic, and only the Debussy is music worth recording.

The highlight of the month is Columbia's album of the Symphony Espagnole by Lalo. This recording by Milstein and the Chicago Orchestra under Stock surpasses by far the older Victor set. For the most part, but not completely, Milstein has freed the music from the fearful tones violinists usually impart to it. And the recording is relatively free from preponderance of the bass, which is the major fault with most Columbia records.

Readers with record collections may be interested in a set of extensive experiments carried out last summer and designed to determine the effects of various types of needles on the lifespan of records. Surprisingly, these tests showed that good steel needles, used for four twelve-inch sides at most, served best in the protection of records.

The much vaunted fibre needles, it was found, acted as abrasives and after fifty playings, left visible marks. After seventy-five playings the records were no longer usable. With steel needles, the records lasted for one hundred and three playings, and although visibly defaced, were still playable. Chromium and permanent needles were found to be not as destructive as fibre, but not as good as steel and not worth the extra cost.

PHILIP FREEDMAN

"Tear out page one! Just got the dope on the officer election of the Audubon Club!"

"This is the office of the student newspaper, the Minnesota Daily. Come along, 'Yetta said."

But please don't think that Barefoot Boy With Cheek is a light book. It has the marks of learning upon it. For in what but a subtly learned work do you find at the head of each chapter French quotations such as:

Le crayon est sur la table.—Voltaire.

Ou est mon chapeau?—Anatole France.

Ouvrez la fenêtre.—Zola.

The typical co-ed will soon be in season again. We have our own candidate. Meet Lottie Dodd. To us she is typical. Perhaps you'll agree. Perhaps you'll argue. It depends on your gender.

Sometimes after she has made some 25-watt remark you wonder: Did she say what she said?

Take from Lottie's script the interjection, "Oh!" and its surprised brother "Oh!" and its bewildered sister "Oh!" and you reduce her repertoire of intelligent comments to O, meaning nothing.

How she manages to build a mountain out of nihil.

Lottie doesn't like to wear her glasses. Actually, these spectacles flatter her. But to Lottie, looking in a mirror first with her glasses and then without, the answer is obvious. She is much more attractive without.

This is ultra-escapism as anyone in psychology 1a will agree.

Racial Prejudice?Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

I would like to comment on the article written on the play "Night Must Fall" in a recent issue of The Varsity. Mr. Chapman states that "the lack of support received from the Toronto public was shameful," and that he "would hate to think the public's absence was due to race prejudice."

I would like to remind him that the Negro Drama Group is by no means a well-known organization, nor do the actors stand out in the public's eye. Jimmy Wright did turn in a "superior performance," but who is Jimmy Wright?

Secondly, as the writer mentioned, Eaton Auditorium is really no place in which to hold a play. The lighting is bad, the acoustics worse. The seating accommodation is not good, the floor being completely flat and the chairs very hard.

Thirdly, when Paul Robeson, Marian Anderson and a host of other Negro artists come to Toronto, their reception, to say the least, is enthusiastic. They are well-known artists and the public can be sure of a good show.

Lastly, though there were spots where the acting was indeed good, there were scenes that made me think of my high school days. One actor continually bumbled his lines and there were lapses in the direction. The play, in my opinion, was not bad, but it was not good.

Let's have no more talk of "race prejudice" unless there is adequate basis for it.

This is C-DAY (Column-day). We have looked forward to it for a long time. What with welcoming our returning fighting men (and isn't it a joy!)—getting the gen on new courses—Saturday afternoon in the bow again—it looks like the greatest year in the University's history.

Our small part in it is through this column. Here we plan to talk about rugby, Ajax, music, fashions (we fear nothing—occasionally even insurance).

Also—providing that it is in the University's interest—we shall be glad to donate this space at any time to any individual for any cause whatsoever.

Track Season On Tomorrow

The Freshman-Novice Track and Field Meet, the opening event of the fall season, takes place tomorrow afternoon, starting at 1:30 p.m. at the Stadium. Hec Phillips, U. of T.'s track and field professor, has the boys working out daily and they show a marked improvement under his expert tutelage.

Two of his leading stars are Joe Taylor, former St. Andrew's College athlete, for the distance runs, and J. T. Doll, a P. and H.E. student in the high jump. Ken Rock, colored speedster from Meds, via Windsor and the R.C.A.F., is entered with Thornton of S.P.S. in the low hurdles. Bill Dean, ex-aircrew officer returned from overseas, looks good in the shot putt. For the sprints, Earl Deacon, former McMaster track man, Charlie MacDonald of S.P.S., and Doug Phelan of P. and H.E., show fine form. Giles of Forestry has trained hard for the high jump. Adams of S.P.S. and Dennis of P. and H.E. are two distance men who will likely do well.

Top Golfers Play Today

The thirty golfers who qualified last Friday at St. Andrews will tee off today at the same course at 8:45 a.m. The low six will be members of the Senior Intercollegiate team, while the next four scores will make up the Varsity Intermediates. Two more will be selected as alternates.

A score of 84 or better was necessary on Friday in order to place in the first ten. Those qualifying in today's 36-hole match will play this Friday and Saturday at an unnamed Toronto course.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Jerry Ewins

Wednesdays Wandering Whispers . . .

A smooth, efficient football machine in operation on the gridiron makes the game look easy. Take that Saturday bunch of Argonaut boys that appeared at the Bloor Bowl for instance. Copeland, Smylie, Doty, Karys, Tommy—why the ball snuggled under that arm like a cat to a tweed pant-leg—they fumbled not, neither did they err. Here was judgment, co-ordination and drive. And don't sell that front wall short either. Men like Upper, Reid, Wedley and Levantis opened wide-plug holes that a Sherman could negotiate with ease. That, friends, was a momentary glimpse of football as it should be played.

But what will unfold before the eyes of Miss and Mr. Varsity fan on Saturday? To watch the motly crowd of effervescent humanity at the Stadium these afternoons is to realize that the game of football is not easy—far from it. The imagination toys with the coach's headaches, the players' aches, the waterboy's heartaches—the gruelling grind that means so little and yet so much in a game that takes all a man can give and then asks for more. The constant practice to attain the required physical condition and precision of movement is oft forgotten in the glory of the contest.

The Varsity Blues look better and better, day by day. They toss the ball around a lot at practice, and their forward passing seems very accurate. They look a bit light, but possibly the wide-open type of game they shall exhibit will more than atone for this.

Will Saturday's game send fans and scribes alike home talking to themselves? Saturday's game will tell.

The Sportswoman

Yea Varsity!

After the welcome inertia of the summer, events are slowly winding up to a powerful pitch. The underground has it that the tennis eliminations are being played according to schedule, and some mighty fine players are participating.

Keep Your Eye On The Ball . . .

Is a standard rule of all good golfers except, that is, in times of bad shortages. The golf ball shortage seems to be on the wane, just in time for the golf tournament. According to custom, this show belongs to the women of U.C. Betty McMillan (who can be reached at M1. 5515 for further details), has announced that the tee-off will take place at St. Andrew's Golf Course on Thursday, October 11.

No Exception . . .

To this promising beginning is basketball. The practice schedule is out, and teams will start Thursday, October 11, with P. & H.E. III initiating the O.C.E. floor. Sue Gray announced that any team unable to hold their practice at Lillian Massey or O.C.E. must get in touch with Miss Henry, Superintendent's Office, before 3:00 p.m. Though a basketball is an item more difficult to misplace than a golf ball, this shortage is just as evident. Each team is responsible for bringing its own ball.

Note to U.C. women baseball players: There will be a baseball practice today at 4:30 p.m. on Trinity campus. Please see that your medical appointments have been made.

Interfaculty Rugby Schedule Announced

At a meeting of the Standing Rugby Committee last Thursday, the team set-up for this year's Interfaculty League was decided upon as follows:

Group I—Sr. S.P.S., U.C., Sr. Meds. (two teams to play-offs).
Group II—Vic, Jr. S.P.S., Jr. Meds. (one team to play-offs).
Group III—Dents, St. Mike's, Trinity. (one team to play-offs).
S.P.S. III's and Forestry are unknown quantities. If they enter, the teams will be in Group III, and Dents will then shift to Group II. The play-off arrangement would then require Group III to send two teams instead of one.

The games will start at four p.m. and four ten-minute periods will take place with ten minutes for a break at half-time. The fact that the campus is now on Standard Time makes it increasingly important that games be started on time.

This year's games are expected to produce some of the best rugby seen around U. of T.'s Intramural circuit in quite some time. Players trying out for the various faculty teams are so numerous that obtaining adequate practice space has become a problem. Competition for each position is the keenest in many years, this due no doubt to the increased registration in male students. The season opens Thursday when Victoria meets Junior School, followed on Friday by a game between Trinity and St. Mike's. The rugby pot is boiling, and at this stage it looks like hot stuff.

PHYSICAL TRAINING---MEN

By order of the Board of Governors each man proceeding to a Bachelor degree must take Physical Training during the first and second years of his attendance at the University. The physical training requirements include a swimming test for all first year men.

For the current session the Board of Governors have seen fit to make the attendance of ex-service men in this course optional.

At the same time the University Health Service and the Department of Athletics and Physical Training wish to emphasize the importance of recreational exercise and athletics. The course as offered in this University provides a means of maintaining physical fitness and of assisting the ex-service man in his adjustment to the relative sedentary type of life of the average student.

Physical Training credits may be obtained by participation in the following intramural team sports and activities:—

Football	Hockey	Track
Soccer	Basketball	Boxing
Lacrosse	Water Polo	Wrestling
*Swimming League	*Volleyball	Fencing
		Gymnastics

*Regular teams, only.

SWIM TEST

The Physical Training requirements include a swimming test which must be taken by all first year men, by men admitted to the second year from other universities, and by those repeating first year. If unable to swim at least 50 yards satisfactorily the student must enrol in a learn-to-swim class. Failure to observe this regulation shall prevent a student from securing standing in Physical Training.

Varsity Soccermen Off to McMaster

The resumption of Intercollegiate soccer comes with a smash this weekend, when the Varsity Blues move into Hamilton on Saturday for a contest with McMaster. The Blues have been drilling for over a week now, and a strong squad of the campus' best players has finally been selected.

Although five faculties are represented, players from Vic's and Meds' finalist teams of last year's Intramural loop form the backbone of Coach Jim Paton's 1945 squad.

From Vic's runner-up team of last fall come Noor Hassani and Erri Thompson as halves, and Claude Elliott, who is performing the goal-tending duties. Meds, present holders of the Arts Faculty Cup, are fielding Joe Fyfe, full-back, Roy Shimobu, inside left, and Stan Spooner, outside right. Representing S.P.S. is Art Riquero, who played standout soccer for the Engineers a few years ago. Upholding the English tradition in soccer are Max and Willie Clarkson, prominent players from the Trinity team.

Says Coach Jim Paton . . . "A good team this year . . . shouldn't lose a game . . . they'd better not!"

Remember—first game—Saturday, October 13—Varsity vs. McMaster, at Hamilton.

New and Entrenous

In Honor of McGuire

By Ross McLean

We're three or four days late but, if you don't mind, we'd like to go along with National Newspaper Day and pay tribute to Jack McGuire who, single-handed, constitutes the delivery force of The Varsity. McGuire is 16 and must have felt excluded last Saturday when press and radio were fanfaring the efforts of Canada's 35,000 carrier boys.

The Prime Minister made a speech about them.

The Government and the people of Canada, he felt, had good reason to be proud of Canada's fine army of newspaper boys for their devoted contributions.

The C.B.C. presented a special program Saturday evening that starred a pair of V.C. winners who had graduated from the ranks of the newspaper boys.

Every newspaper in the country made a polite curtsy in editorial or advertising columns to the energetic battery of delivery boys.

But McGuire was missed. The Varsity slipped up.

And McGuire has such a route! He delivers daily 6,000 copies of The Undergraduate Newspaper to Victoria, the Medical and Economics Buildings, to University College and elsewhere.

Through rain, hail, snow, he delivers the paper.

He's been doing it now for, oh, almost two weeks.

He likes it. He thinks it's fine, oh, fine.

How does he handle circulation? He, oh, uses a bike.

He delivers 6,000 papers, as we said a few ems above, and he doesn't think there can be a much bigger route than that.

He hopes to keep the job which involves, in addition to distribution of The Varsity, numerous office chores for the S.A.C.

Before joining the S.A.C. staff in this capacity, Mr. McGuire had been in the employ of the Laura Secord candy manufacturers at one of their retail outlets. Before that he went to school—which he continues to do, incidentally.

Monday evenings he takes middle school classes at Jarvis Collegiate and on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings he attends Harbord. It keeps him pretty busy, he admits, but in a year or so he'll graduate, and then, he hopes, he will enter medicine at this university and become in due course a doctor.

That he will fulfil this ambition seems likely. His marks have been good. Well, last year he got around, well, his lowest mark was 67!

McGuire's father is a postman. Other close relatives with whom he lives are his mother, two brothers, and one sister.

McGuire is a good man and we hope we've made it up to him.

We used to deliver papers ourselves, you know.

The Varsity Reviews

THE TRINITY REVIEW

First of the new term's crop of campus magazines is the Trinity Review, whose editor has achieved the Cyclopean feat of filling an issue during the summer doldrums with some of the best material the Review has amassed under any circumstances. It is true that an Active Service list, exam results, and similar utilitarian matter take up well over half of the sixty-four pages; but the quality of such literary matter as has managed to find its way in makes up easily for quantitative slowness.

Best of the literary contributions is A. G. McKay's Modern Criticism, a straightforward academic treatment of "Goosey goose gander" which underlines that classic's "tragic view of life" and irretrievably ascribes its authorship to Shakespeare.

More openly lighthearted is Dorothy Harley's Father, Mother, and Nico-line, an incredibly successful pastiche of Clarence Day. A piquant sidelight on the Victorian cult of Darwinism is Margaret Cockshutt's I'm Sure Great-Grandpa Never Studied Philosophy, while in The Land of Twilight Rose Marie Moore achieves a delicate, studiously pointless satire on the rival colleges of Airoctiv and Yunitr.

The heavier matter, as usual, is less successful. Why this should be we have never been sure. Perhaps undergraduates are intrinsically light-hearted, and secretly ill at ease in pontifical robes. Perhaps they concentrate too intensely on the subject to admit stylistic graces. At any rate, we found that we had to force ourself through Mansions of the Universe, The Artist, Life is a Race-track, and similar pieces. Perhaps we were just tired.

Splendidly exempt from this stricture, however, is the editorial, sincere, lucid, and pointed. Seldom has the new world's challenge to students here and elsewhere been better expressed. For this, as for the entire issue, the editor is to be congratulated.

P.S.—The poetry is comprehensive, too!

Knox Induction Ceremony Sees Dr. Bryden Principal

NEW PROFESSORS INSTALLED

Dr. W. W. Bryden, the new principal of Knox College, was inducted into his new office Tuesday night in the college chapel. The ceremony was featured by the presentation of the first distinctive principal's gown to be worn in Knox's century of existence.

In his inaugural address, Dr. Bryden spoke of the Church's attitude to the world and the attitude of the world to the Church. Dr. Bryden advised the Church to adopt an attitude of humility and to remember that its strength is in God. He said that criticism of the Church would be more worthwhile if the critic based his ideas not on what the world thinks the function of the Church should be, but on what God has ordained it should be.

Dr. Bryden, who received his secondary school education at Galt Collegiate Institute, graduated from University College in 1906 and from Knox in 1909. From there he went to Glasgow University and Strasbourg University to do post-graduate work. He has been on the staff at Knox for 20 years; as a lecturer in Church History in 1915 and professor in 1926. He became head of the Department of History and Philosophy of Religion in 1927.

Also inducted were Dr. David K. Andrews and Dr. J. Stanley, two professors who were former students of Dr. Bryden. Dr. Andrews has been on the staff of De Paul University in Indiana for the last nine years after post-graduate studies at Knox College, Chicago University and the University of Edinburgh. In 1939 he had a teaching fellowship in Hebrew at the University of Chicago.

Dr. Glen has degrees from Emmanuel College and the Universities of Toronto and Saskatchewan. He will teach the New Testament at Knox while Dr. Andrews will lecture on the Old Testament.

Smith Stands Pat; No Student Cuts

"There is no foundation for the belief that examination standards are going to be raised this term to weed out the excess registration in first year," stated President Sidney E. Smith last night.

In a special statement the president said, "I have been disturbed to hear that a number of students are afraid that owing to the large numbers at present registered in first year, some efforts will be made at examination time to reduce the ranks so that a smaller quota may be passed into senior years."

"To this impression I would issue an unqualified denial," He continued, "Furthermore, steps are being taken every day to increase the teaching staff. No one need fear that he will be failed by inadequate instruction or heightened standards."

At the University College Soph-Fresh banquet last night President Smith emphasized the pride of the University in its registration of ex-service personnel. He spoke of the "unparalleled situation" caused by the increase of registration from 8,000 in 1939 to the present number of about 9,500 exclusive of 1,500 at Ajax.

Explaining that "larger numbers are realizing the need for higher education," he promised "the University won't ever revert to the pre-war level of registration."

Dr. W. R. Taylor, principal of the University College, spoke of "the great part of undergraduates and graduates in war and in times of peace" as part of the great traditions of University College.

Science Workers Sponsor Films

Four scientific films will be presented by the Toronto Branch of the Canadian Association of Scientific Workers in the auditorium, Bloor Collegiate, 1141 Bloor West, on Thursday, Oct. 11, at 8:00 p.m. One film will feature the results of scientific planning in the reversion of the erosion-ravaged valley of Tennessee. Two color productions are also included in this showing. All science students or those interested in science are cordially invited to attend.

Pharmacy Students Elect Executives

H. A. Simmons has been elected president of the largest junior year in the history of the Ontario College of Pharmacy, according to class election results just announced. Vice-president is W. J. Burgess; secretary, A. J. Williams; and treasurer, Miss J. L. A. Carpeneto.

Dean R. O. Hurst, honorary president of the class, said in commenting on this unusually large class that one-third of the 146 newly enrolled students are girls, 65 of the men are returned from service with the armed forces. The dean said that first year students in pharmacy are not, strictly speaking, freshmen—"They have completed at least a two-year apprenticeship and have had their edges rounded off, as it were."

Other officers installed at a joint party of the O.C.P. junior and senior years include: Committee members H. B. Bagshaw, C. B. Carruthers, Miss F. C. Fairley, R. P. Friday, Miss R. Y. Fulton and W. A. R. Murray; S.A.C. Representative, G. E. Belyea; honorary vice-president; Miss D. J. Taylor; official correspondent, Miss E. Greben. President H. A. Simmons announced that the Junior Pharmacy Dance will be held Friday, Oct. 26 at Eaton Auditorium. Bobby Gimby and his orchestra will provide the music, and dancing will be from 9 to 1. The dance will be informal. Members of all faculties are welcome; tickets may be purchased at the door or from any Pharmacy student.

Who may go to it?

Any student or prospective student who is or has been enlisted in the Armed Services.

Novel Collection Planned For Campus Clothing Drive

"The Campus Clothing Collection in aid of the National Clothing Collection opens officially today," said Peggy Bates, chairman of the Clothing Committee, in an interview with The Varsity. Posters will appear on the walls of the various colleges, faculties and residences, and tomorrow collection depots will be set up in the rotundas of each college faculty, and in other central positions on the campus.

The first organizational meeting of the Clothing Committee, which met yesterday and is composed of representatives from each faculty, has decided on a campus-wide campaign. The students' entrances to the McMaster-Varsity intercollegiate this Saturday will be flanked by room boxes in which football fans may place their contributions.

A frat-to-frat campaign will be carried out by groups of freshmen on Monday evening. The girls will go directly to every man's fraternity on the campus and will take bundles of clothing directly to a central depot. The service is provided free of charge, for the convenience of the students.

The drive will continue through the week, and will be climaxed by a "Fun-fairall," the nature of which cannot yet be disclosed.

"The need for clothing of all descriptions cannot be overemphasized," Miss Bates continued. "Conditions among the people of Europe are almost beyond the comprehension and imagination of people of this continent. The coming winter presents an appalling vista of want and misery to families who are without adequate shelter, transportation and food. Clothing is one of their major problems and we can all help to solve it for them by contributing clothes which we no longer need."

"The clothes donated should be clean and serviceable," she said. "Fashion is of no import. Summer or winter garments will be accepted and all kinds of footwear. All shoes should be tied securely in pairs. Everyone has something to give. Here is the chance."

Trouble-Shooting Clinic Open For Business Monday

COL. LINE HEADS COMMITTEE

An advisory bureau for all students who have been members of the armed services is to be opened Monday at 67 St. George Street, former C.W.A.C. headquarters, the President's Advisory Committee for ex-service students announced yesterday. Text of the Committee's statement is printed elsewhere on this page.

Chairman of the Policy-making Faculty Committee of Consultation and Advice for Ex-service Students is Col. Wm. Line, a member of the staff of the Psychology department and for the last few years on leave of absence as Director of Personnel Selection Work with the Canadian Army. Chairman of the Bureau proper and in charge of its actual workings is Dr. McIntosh of the Ontario College of Education, while Major E. A. Macdonald, General Secretary-Treasurer of the Students' Administrative Council, will serve as liaison officer between the Bureau and the S.A.C.

"The ex-service students have problems peculiar to themselves," Col. Line told The Varsity yesterday. "Many of them need financial help, advice on choice of courses or methods of study, or help with personal difficulties."

"The new bureau will give them all possible help in solving their problems, sort of making decisions for them. The decisions they must make for themselves."

Col. Line emphasized that the Bureau was to be in no way coercive, but prepared to offer advice on every possible problem, however small, with the assurance that it would be dealt with promptly.

"There is no need to establish a full-dress Counseling Department," he said. "College Registrars, professors, department heads, and the Students' Administrative Council are already equipped to give help and advice, if only the students get to them."

Follies, French Club Seek Talent To Brighten Campus Productions

"We're on the talent trail," Carmen Guild confided yesterday.

The producer of the U.C. Follies stated that a search is going on for a reasonable facsimile of the "Swoon Swami," as well as a capable cast of singers, dancers, musicians, ventriloquists, and so on, for the specialty acts which have been woven into the Follies.

Up to now, the dancing chorus has been a feminine affair, but this year tall and short male choruses are being added.

Casting for a score of top roles in the Follies, as well as a practice for the male chorus will take place at the Women's Union this afternoon at 5 o'clock. A full turn-out of all undergraduates interested in volunteering for Follies duties is urgently requested by the producer.

The U.C. French Club will stage its annual production in Hart House on Wednesday, December 12th. Because of the reception given Moliere's Le Bourgeois gentilhomme last year, another of his plays will be presented. Le Malade Imaginaire has been tentatively chosen.

M. Stanislas Aquarone, newly come to the University of Toronto as a member of the staff in the French Department of University College, will direct the production. A former student of University College, he took great interest in U.C. productions as an undergraduate and he has had much experience along these lines.

This afternoon, at 4 p.m., in Room 51, M. Aquarone will meet all students interested in participating in the play and its production. Students who cannot attend the meeting should report in M. Aquarone's office any afternoon from 2 to 5. Casting will be completed by the end of next week.

Committee Releases Statement On Ex-Service Students Bureau

Following is the text of the official statement released after yesterday's meeting of the Committee in charge of the new ex-service students' advisory board:

The University of Toronto is to have a Veterans' Bureau. The Bureau, to be known as the University Advisory Bureau for Ex-Service Students, opens Monday and will occupy quarters on the main floor of 67 St. George Street.

The Bureau will attempt to serve the Ex-Service Students in a variety of ways. They may visit it at any time in connection with any matter—financial, educational, or personal, and be assured that the problem will be dealt with promptly. While certain services will be provided at the Bureau itself, there is no intention of duplication or overlapping.

Where possible, the veteran will be referred to the appropriate existing services or agencies on the campus. Direct appointments will be made for him, thus saving waste time and movement. A permanent executive secretary, who knows the campus intimately, and who will be supplied with up-to-the-minute information, will be in charge of such referrals.

In addition, a qualified faculty member, who has seen service in the present war, will be in attendance at all times to act as personnel counsellor. Among those who will give half-days each week to the bureau are: Prof. T. Taylor, Mr. E. Belyea, Prof. T. Goudge, Mr. Shepherd, and Mr. A. Wilkinson, all formerly in the Navy; Prof. M. Long, Prof. I. J. Fisher, Mr. E. A. MacDonald, Prof. D. J. Griffin, and Mr. A. G. Burns, all formerly in the Army; Prof. C. Williams, Mr. D. Edmond, Mr. I. Signori, and Mr. J. Sawatski, all formerly in the Air Force.

Not only are these men fitted by civilian training and experience for work of this nature, but most have been associated in some (Continued on page 5)

Smith Applauds Service Bureau

When the Service Advisory Bureau was set up there was no question in anyone's mind that the ex-service men and women on the campus would in themselves present problems for the University, President Sidney E. Smith told The Varsity last night. "A great deal of nonsense has been talked about them being psychiatric cases," he said. "They are not that at all."

"They will not be problems, but they have problems of their own," Dr. Smith emphasized. "They will have problems in becoming oriented within the institution after years with the Armed Services. That is why the Board of Governors have established this Bureau."

"It should be of great assistance to the campus veterans of World War II in their relations with the University and with the Department of Veterans' Affairs, Dr. Smith continued.

"The services of the Bureau will be offered freely to every member of the group, and it is my personal wish and hope that they will take full advantage of the facilities and assistance offered."

Varsity Lecture For Staff Today

The first lecture on night-editing, erroneously reported to be given yesterday afternoon, will be held in Room 37 of University College at four o'clock today. As previously announced the lectures will be delivered by members of the staff of The Varsity to instruct potential night editors in the technical side of the production of the campus newspaper.

This afternoon's lecture is intended to introduce night editors to the general aspects of make-up, proof-reading and headline-writing. Each topic will be dealt with more thoroughly in succeeding lectures.

Since a full grounding in technical policy is necessary before taking on night-editing duties, all those who intend to offer themselves for such work should attend the lectures.

The second in a series of discussions dealing with Peace Perspectives for 1945-46 will be held under the chairmanship of Professor B. McDougall, Professor R. Birdwhistell, and Mr. J. H. Biggar. These discussions are promoted by the United Nations Society of Canada, a branch of the League of Nations.

Editorial

Advice Is Dangerous

We are not vain. We will not say that the establishment on the campus of an Advisory Bureau for men and women students who have served in the Armed Forces was called into being by a recent editorial of ours. We will even admit that we had, at the time of writing the editorial, some vague notion of what was already in the wind.

Now that the Bureau has been established, we can only add that we have no idea why something of the kind was not done long ago. No one, perhaps, is so desperately in need of expert counselling as the average freshman about to enter University. And on no campus, we imagine, is advice, while rampant everywhere, so hard to come by.

THE NEED IS PRESSING

The curious federation system at the University of Toronto, with the consequent duplicate applications to a University Registrar and to the head of a college or faculty, breeds confusion at the outset. Merely to register in a given course is sufficiently complicated to crowd out of mind any qualms about whether the course in question is the right one. And the numbers that swamp registration facilities at the opening of term make the student feel that he is imposing on someone if he asks questions. All too often, therefore, the square peg with insane precision selects and enters the round hole. And not until Christmas at the earliest does he detect the discrepancy.

THE DANGER OF GUIDANCE

It looks as though someone wiser and more experienced in both courses and careers should help every student decide, on the basis of adequate information, what he wants to do. That is the ideal of guidance. But in the twentieth century too much is done by machine. A great deal of so-called "Guidance Work" is being done with filing cards in place of counselors. This tendency arises from two mistaken ideas: the idea that the world is too complicated for any individual to offer advice on the basis of his private experience with it; and the idea that three hundred precedents are somehow more reliable than one reason.

Much of modern psychology, if we may say so, is a fraud. It is fraudulent because it is unphilosophical. The general idea behind much present-day guidance work is that because, for example, a large number of red-haired men with a taste for potted clams have been successful engineers, therefore Joe Doaks, Jr., who has red hair and likes potted clams, will probably also be a successful engineer. That is the statistical fallacy, and it rules too much of modern thinking.

The thinkers who propound such theories as the above have never grasped the obvious principle, submerged as it is by talk about preponderances and averages, that if a statement is probably right it is also probably wrong. Once admit the possibility of error, and in a given case the "balance of probability" vanishes.

A SOUND BASIS

We do not write this in proof of the staff of the Servicemen's Advisory Board, for they apparently have not been taken in by the statistical fallacy. The counselling they will offer is to be of the most personal kind. There has been no mention of a battery of aptitude tests, such as the author of a recent Toke Oike editorial was considering to screen out engineering applicants.

And, as Col. Line has emphatically pointed out, there will be no "guidance" of the heavy-handed variety. There will be no attempt to switch a prospective artisan into Forestry. There may be a tactful suggestion that he think about Forestry, and an interview with the Dean of Forestry may be arranged for him. But the student alone will decide.

This is guidance of the most enlightened type. There are on the campus experts in every field, if the student can only find them. And the Bureau proposes to send him to the experts, instead of fitting him into a statistical framework. In time, if the system works, we hope it will be extended to every student at the University. And its working is up to the student veterans for whom it is at present designed. To them we commend it.

Berlin Was Pushed

22,000 guns—each levelled at Berlin—begin the ruination of the world's capital of infamy. The Fall of Berlin, filmed by Russian Army cameramen, which begins at the Royal Alexander on Oct. 15, tells the story of the Red Army's grim victory.

Actually, the Battle of Berlin began with the Germans' retreat from Stalingrad. Months of planning and preparation preceded the campaign. The heroic Russian Army under Marshal Zhukov pressed forward to the banks of the Oder. Here Russian power was massed to surge onward by land, by air to encircle Berlin. In Berlin the Russians advanced slowly at first, then fiercely, thoroughly, until the chancellor—the very heart of the city—was crushed.

Berlin might have seemed invincible. Stirring parades, exhibitions of Nazi might seemed to be daily occurrences in the flag-supporting capital. The Russians came. Sieg-heiling Berliners are shown with arms outstretched—not in salute but for crusts of food. Such is the irony shown in a series of flash-backs of Berlin before and after.

The repelling of the Germans from Stalingrad; the massing of Russia's might on the banks of the placid Oder; the opening of the gigantic artillery barrage on Berlin; mobs of hunger-crazed Germans looting and wrecking and the bitter hatred of the captured German general staff: these sights will remain after you have left the theatre. Too, you will see the charred but recognizable body of Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels lying in suicidal anguish below the very radio mast which had sent his cunning lies to the world.

Don't expect to be merely amused or entertained by The Fall of Berlin. The picture is grim—there's no opportunity for laughter and very little for relaxation. As a war picture this is perhaps the best produced. The English commentary by William S. Gailmore adapts the picture to our ears. You will be impressed by this gripping battle—the crushing of the centre of Nazidom. After seeing The Fall of Berlin you will realize Berlin didn't fall—she was pushed!

—BILL BELT.

"Psmith, the worn-out discarded gym boot hung limply by his laces from football posts. No life showed in his twelve brass-ringed eyes and his tongue was hanging out in a loose and grotesque manner in the still night air.

Out on the field the dim shadowy form of Chicory (the misty-eyed, evil smelling spirit who haunts Great Hall coque) was searching for his friend. "Psmith," he called, "Psmith, where are ya?"

"Perhaps he's found another boot," mused Chicory. "I know he'd hock his sole to get paired off again. Wait until I find him—boy, will I lace into him!" Then he spotted the suspended form of Psmith. Swiftly he flew to him and in one flashing movement untied him and lowered him to the ground.

Chicory breathed on Psmith anxiously. "He's got to live," he whispered, "or what'll FRDL do for a Cat?"

Psmith stirred and Chicory inquired solicitously, "More sugar?" Psmith stopped stirring and murmured, "You oughta do something about your breath, Chicory—and why didn't you let me do it?"

Chicory looked hurt. "Psmith," he asked, "why did you do it?"

Psmith dropped his laces and replied: "It all happened yesterday when I decided to go to a lecture and get educated. I went to a Psychology lecture and sat in the waste-paper basket listening. The professor slighted me when he said something about a foul odor and opened the window. But that was just the start."

Chicory listened sympathetically. "What happened, Psmith, old pal?"

"I'm frustrated," muttered Psmith. He made a disgusting noise with his inner sole and a couple seated under a tree left hurriedly.

"And I've been trod on all my life," he continued. "People have always walked all over me. In fact I've been treated like an old boot."

Chicory puffed indignantly and Psmith moved up wind. "How else do you

Art, Music and Drama

The Cook And The Collectors

An exhibition of wide variety, with a rich range of contrasts, at present hangs on the walls of the Toronto Art Gallery. In the main it consists of the Members' Loan Exhibition, i.e., works culled from private collections of Art Gallery members, but there is also a room devoted to a showing of the Cook Collection of Richmond, Surrey. This latter proved disappointing in many respects, chiefly because some of the better known pieces in it have not arrived for its Toronto showing. Also, many of the pieces that are here are not particularly good examples of the masters they represent. Some are overshadowed by finer works of the same masters in the Collectors' exhibition. In this class I should place the Cook pictures by Raphael, Turner, Rembrandt and de Hooch. However, there are some definitely pleasing works in the exhibition as well. Among the finest may be cited an interesting little portrait in Holbein's characteristic hard lineality, and a fine Early Renaissance Majesta attributed to Lorenzo Monaco.

Turning to the Collectors' show, we find an interesting panorama of nineteenth century trends in style and taste. "European" and "excellent" were for long indiscriminately synonymous in Canada, and perhaps still are, as far as some collectors are concerned. Here are the usual revered examples of nineteenth-century academism, with their characteristic "old masterish brownness, and their minute archaeological detail; here are, of course, the inevitable Dutch Jimmers—Maris, Blommers, Kaemmerer, and the rest—whose peasant ant firesides and domesticated landscapes bulked so large on the Canadian art market a few years back. But I had the feeling that many of the works shown were not now prized by their owners primarily for aesthetic qualities, but as quaint or nostalgic reminiscences of a past age.

Native Canadian art, which had to abide the wave of Europeanism to come into its own, takes a deservedly large and prominent place in the show, illustrating the gratifying change in collectors' tastes in the last twenty years. I thought that the work of Emily Carr and Lawren Harris, each represented by several first-rate pictures, dominated an excellent and representative showing in this department.

In the "Old Masters" category there were some fine works in the exhibition. A small history of portraiture could have been written from the four portraits representing Rembrandt's late manner, Moroni, Raeburn and Van Dyck's Italian period. In two landscapes the characteristic iridescence and shimmering light of Turner were well displayed. This type of landscape, representing centuries of evolution, contrasted nicely with the quaintly angular archaism and picture-book quality of a landscape forming the background to a little tripartite altarpiece from fifteenth-century Flanders.

All in all, the Toronto Gallery offers a most worthwhile and satisfying exhibition.

Rugby Lid Off; Debut Saturday

Saturday's program at Varsity Stadium reads: McMaster University at University of Toronto.

After five years of absence, intercollegiate rugby returns. Although Saturday's game is of the exhibition species, it may also be referred to as "opportunity day."

Warren Stevens will have his first opportunity to put his offensive and defensive plays into force. The players will have their first opportunity to display their wares in the blue and white uniforms of their alma mater. The students will have their opportunity to prove that the college spirit has not wholly died out. Cheer leaders will have their day. Perhaps the con coat will have its day also.

From McMaster comes word that Coach Anderson will "shoot the works" on Saturday. He hopes to put on commendable performance which would enhance the chances of McMaster entering the senior intercollegiate picture a few years from now.

Henderson has eliminated all huddles for offensive play and for the defence he relies on a four-man secondary. The team is comparatively light, with the line averaging 180 and the backfield 170.

The visiting backfield will be headed by ex-Hamilton Wildcat Bob Leggat, who will verbally call the signals. Other backs include Norm Smith, Art Jerome, Bill Traut, and Jerry Wagar.

Found along the line are Norm Maxwell, former Wildcat, Al Orr of last year's Camp Borden Hurricanes, Roy Campbell of Oakwood Indians, Charlie Robinson, Roger Allan, Barney Lewis and Tom Clarke. A regular middle, Gerry Brown, is out for the season due to a broken leg sustained in practice.

The line-up of the Varsity team is still up in the air. Last night some forty-nine gridlers were still out with the squad and cutting is in order before Saturday. Even more cutting will be necessary come a week Saturday.

Those likely to see action against McMaster are Tommy Walden, Colin Crahan, Stu Scott, Bill Lawrence, Bob Henry, Joe Woodyatt, Al Jacobs, Bert Hamm, Ted Toogood, Jim O'Brien, Jack Reynolds, Orr, Hall, Daniels and Grierson.

Linemen apt to be called for action will be picked from Gord Lawson, Johnny Farmer, Bert McCormick, Wayne Pyne, Gus Campbell, Al Scott, Egan, Volpe, Guppy Kilpatrick, Smith, Will Henry, Jim Carson, Davey, Grass, Baron, Cross and Armstrong.

Just who is who will show when the team gets rolling. In the meantime, Head Coach Warren Stevens is sweating it out along with assistants Bobby Coulter, Jimmy Folwell and Don Graham.

Speaking OF SPORT

Missing, One Sports Editor . . .

With the last strike of yesterday's world series game, a piercing wail was heard in the vicinity of St. George Street. That was the last seen of our beloved Sports Editor. The Cubs took a beating. So did he!

Ominous hammering sounds seem to suggest that he is beating his head out in some dark wine cellar. His professors have not marked him absent as they understand his errors. They, too, were backing the Cubs. In fact, his remarks seem to have held considerable sway with the student body as several members of the said body were spotted wearing black crepe.

We are not here to mourn our Sports Editor but to praise him. The tragedy of the Cubs will go down in history alongside the defeat of Napoleon, the fall of Custer and the decline of the Roman Empire. If and when we again see our erroneous Editor, we will welcome him back to the fold. After all . . . Damon Runyon was once a bum, too.

The Sportswoman

They've Got Me Covered

When a gal's got a date, the book says she has to be ready on time—more or less. But if she's gonna be on time, she can't spend a couple of hours beating out her column. Consequently, on these auspicious and momentous occasions she must needs resort to a combination of cudgelling and cajolery in order to get a pinch-hitter.

She did.

At Long, Long Last

Today the wires were burned up with what everybody hopes will be a long series of similar propositions. McGill has put a chip on its shoulder and challenged all and sundry to an intercollegiate tennis tournament. We (or rather you) have accepted. Tentative plans have the tournament slated for October 20—providing the weatherman is happy about the idea. Western and Queen's are also being approached on the subject.

The local standard bearers will be chosen on the basis of next week's intramural tournament. The four finalists will automatically constitute the team, unless there are violent objections from anyone who doubts the ability of the aforesaid four finalists. If such there be, they are cordially invited to engage in a knock 'em down and drag 'em out court clash with the aforesaid four finalists, and may the best man win.

Note to the Missing Sports Editor

Any resemblance between Damon Runyon and the missing Sports Editor is strictly in the missing Sports Editor's imagination.

Record Entry In Track Await Starter's Gun

A record entry of over 170 will wend its way onto the cindered paths of Varsity this afternoon to participate in the initial track treat of the season—the Freshman-Novice Track and Field Meet.

A good portion of the contestants have been working out faithfully under the careful eye of Hec Phillips, who expects to see record figures fall by the wayside as the young hopefuls take over for the day.

The first events are scheduled for 1.30 when the discus and pole vault events will be held. All contestants are warned that events will be run off as scheduled and therefore they should put in an early appearance for their respective events.

Soccer Team Hamilton Bound

On to McMaster! That is the slogan of the Varsity Blues soccer team which hits the road to Hamilton this Saturday for the opening game of the intermediate soccer league.

The Patons, Sr. and Jr., have been hard at work the past two weeks desperately attempting to round the team into shape. Fourteen men have won places on the team while another position is held open for some capable late-comers.

On to McMaster!

DESIGNED TO "SAVE YOUR FACE" when a big date appears at an hour's warning, Du Barry Rose Cream Mask is a fragrant, velvety cream developed for the purpose of making the face soft as satin and giving it a look of firm new youth. Spread the mask as smoothly as possible over the face and throat, using an upward sweep, then lie down and relax for fifteen or twenty minutes. The stimulating qualities of this mask are soothing, and as it dries it "sets" the face, lightening temporary fatigue lines and bringing to the complexion a refreshing glow.

IN THE SPACIOUS SHOWROOMS of Fairweather's Furs, at 32 Yonge Street West (for years at 88-90 Yonge Street) we chatted with Miss Bostwick and were instructed by her to invite University ex-service girls with new wardrobes to build to come in and have a personal chat with her on Fur Coat Futures. Miss Bostwick sympathizes with restricted budgets and can also be depended on to produce something very special for the gal with an easy bank account. Don't let the impressive new look of the salon scare you. Fairweather's Furs are the same old reliable Toronto furriers which built up a friendly reputation on Yonge Street, brought close to the campus at this new convenient address.

We hail this tendency of better shops to collect various departments of interest for economy in shopping. It's an important step, we say, toward a more cultural shopping technique.

THE COLLECTION of young clothes on Fairweather's Downtown, at 88 to 90 Yonge Street has been built up for the benefit of just you, clothes that "Zing" for the college and career girl where deft fashion touches bespeak a canny eye for that thing called personality plus. This collection is a group to watch because it is being constantly re-vitalized with new arrivals, all of them chosen for the purpose of doing homage to the fashion judgment of the verree discriminating taste and calculating eye of bright young people.

New and Entrenous

Horace and Boogie

By Ross McLean

The classics student confessed that he had done fairly well.

He had, he said, managed to win three entrance scholarships, two in his first year, and had for the past two years split the scholarship money with his colleague in the course.

The classics student said that he was due to graduate this year. He intended to get his doctor's degree, he revealed, and then to teach.

He hoped he would be more sympathetic toward the people with whom he would come in contact because of it.

It?

Jazz!

Come, the classics student invited, and listen. See if you can identify my boogie woogie style with any named pianist. He didn't know how good he was, he said, but he had never heard anyone else play quite like himself.

He had been playing boogie before the trend toward music eight-to-the-bar began in Canada. He had developed his own style. And then Miss Chandler—she was now in IV Moderns, he parenthesized—had had some new records. And there it was. Boogie! He couldn't remember the exact year. She would probably remember the year.

The classics student began to play. His left hand moving skillfully to establish the rhythmic chords of boogie. His right hand fashioning the intricate melody pattern.

Little Joe From Chicago, he identified.

He and Jazz had connected in high school. He had abandoned the slide trombone (it was a lovely instrument; but his ear was not really good enough) and taken to cutting keyboard capers with a swing quartet which would entertain during the dinner-hour.

That summer the group had played a two-month engagement at the Muskoka Lodge and again the next summer but this last sum——mer he had worked in the Department of Education.

There goes Mr. McCaie, he interrupted.

Sorting papers?

Yes, as a clerk.

He had played dance engagements evenings and had, he boasted, played in the toughest joints in the city, and if ever you want to go to a Sunday night dance in Toronto, well—

He had such a great interest in all sorts of people and, believe you him, you meet all sorts in that business! That was an additional stimulus. One fellow in the band had worked at de Havilland, another in a war plant, another ran a hardware store.

Sociology would have been his second choice if he had not taken classics. And playing in a swing band is sociology the easy way.

As he had said, jazz will make him more sympathetic toward people with whom he will come in contact as a classics professor. Maybe. He did not know.

He didn't go for personalities in swing. Just for music. But there was that recording by the old Will Bradley band with the magnificent section work.

In The Hall Of The Mountain King?

No! No, it was Rock-a-bye The Boogie. Dum-da-da-dum-dum. That, he would say, was perfectly executed.

The last time Hugh Graham had made The Varsity was when a reporter sounded him out last year on mixed sexes in the library.

He had told the reporter then that it really didn't matter to him. He was always in the stacks. He has seen no reason to change his mind.

Once before that he had been mentioned when summoned before the U.C. Parliament for skipping his freshman initiation. He had been busy at the Y.M.C.A. that night.

And that is Graham on Jazz! Are you appalled, Apollo, pal?

Tennis Tourney In Quarter Finals As Pre-Season Favourites Dominate

After a fast beginning, the singles tennis tournament has bogged down in the quarter finals. With 16 entrants in the fight, four are still in the fifth round while two have reached the quarter-finals bracket. The championship will be determined early next week.

Up to this point, no upsets have been recorded. Defending champion Roy Lau of Trinity, seeded number one, reached the quarters yesterday. Moses of Pharmacy was the only other entrant to join Lau as he trimmed Doran of St. Mike's by scores of 6-4, 6-3. Second-seeded Joe Feyerer, of Meds tackles Balmer of Vic today as does number three man Mort Grass of U.C., who engages Butt of Meds.

The doubles tourney is struggling along and it is hoped that the quarter-final round will be reached by the weekend. Mackan and Mynahan of St. Mike's are the only team thus far to reach the quarters as they edged out the U.C. team of Rosenfeld and Bennett.

Extension Dept. Popular Again

The perennially crowded night classes of the Department of University Extension, with an approximate enrolment of 8,500, are more crowded than ever this year. For the first time, all courses listed in the syllabus have an enrolment large enough for the Department to offer lectures in each.

Many engineers, with their eyes turned toward the field of Applied Science in the Far East, are among the approximately 50 taking the Chinese lectures. About 100 are now enrolled in the course on Russian.

The Pass Course for Teachers, a five year course which is not restricted to teachers, is the only one which leads to a degree. The other, the Evening Tutorial Class, has a wide range of subjects, including Russian, Chinese, Heating, Ventilation and Refrigeration, Public Speaking and Metallurgy.

Of the 60-odd entries but four of the team appear to be in the outstanding class. Grass, U.C., and Bennett, St. Mike's, Feyerer and Baker of Meds, Lau and Bell-Irving of Trinity and McDonough and McTague, S.P.S., all face minor opposition in their next pair of matches.

The senior and intermediate intercollegiate tennis teams will mainly be picked from the top-notch players of this tourney. The intercollegiate tourneys will be held at McGill and McMaster respectively.

men they ought to see. We intend to promote the best possible conditions under which a man may make academic and vocational decisions intelligently, through consultation with the appropriate individuals in schools, faculties, and colleges."

In charge of referring enquirers to the appropriate people and of making appointments for them will be Mrs. Marjorie King, Permanent Executive Secretary to the Bureau.

"The opening of the Bureau in no way lessens the functions of the Students' Administrative Council," Major MacDonald told The Varsity. "The Council has always met student needs on such practical matters as money and jobs, and will continue to do so. The Bureau will see that students who need our services know about us and come to us."

Students discharged from the armed forces and wishing to enter the University will henceforward be referred by the Department of Veterans' Affairs directly to the Bureau, it was announced. All information on courses, residences, etc., will be made available, and an effort made to prevent over-hasty choice of fields of study.

"Too many students register in the routine way in courses for which they are not fitted, when a few minutes' chat with a department head would have shown them that they were misguided," Col. Line said. "We hope to check the student's rush toward the Registrar's office just enough to make sure that he has thought about what he is doing, and decided on the basis of adequate information."

Contact with the Department of Veterans' Affairs and dissemination of information concerning student veterans will be another of the Bureau's functions.

Pigone Freshie Tops Election

Two former members of the Royal Canadian Air Force were announced last night as first year presidents of the University College W.U.A. and Lit.

Other members of the two executives announced by Lit President and Toastmaster Gord McGaffrey at the annual Soph Frosh banquet attended by more than 700 students from the two years, were: Eileen Sanders, Nancy La Sœur, and Joyce Leeming, on the first year board of the W.U.A.; Perham Stanley, fourth year president of the Lit; Fred Garner, treasurer; and Al Marshall, first year athletic representative.

Councillors elected to the Lit from the large body of ex-servicemen were: Wes Knowlton, Tom Lillico, John Palmer and Ken Robinson.

Ex-Comptroller Feted By Hart House Members

Through their committee representatives, the undergraduate and graduate members of Hart House last night paid tribute to Mr. J. R. Gilley, B.Sc., who is relinquishing the Comptrollership of the House to become Director of the University's Ajax Division.

As spokesman for the members of all the Hart House committees, Prof. Harold Wasteneys, chairman of the Board of Stewards, presented Mr. Gilley with a dining-room set consisting of a table and four chairs, the gift of the committees of the House.

Paying tribute to Mr. Gilley's work as Comptroller of the House for over 22 years, Prof. Wasteneys recalled that his own chairmanship of the Board of Stewards had coincided with Mr. Gilley's term as Acting Warden of the House during the absence of Warden Bickersteth in England.

"He and I had a special and close relationship," Dr. Wasteneys said, "in attempting to carry on the spirit and tradition which had developed under the inspiration and guidance of the Warden."

"The position of Acting Warden, like that of Warden, demands qualities which cannot be described in such terms as business ability, administrative skill and sympathetic appreciation."

"The success of Hart House and its influence on the lives of its members is due mainly to the spiritual, moral, and aesthetic vision of its directors. For these qualities we honor Mr. Gilley, expressing our affection and vowing our everlasting gratitude to the man who for 22 years has put such qualities at our service."

Warden J. B. Bickersteth paid tribute to Mr. Gilley's business capacity, but said that his greatest interest had been "the promotion of all the things for which Hart House should stand."

"On behalf of the committees of Hart House," the Warden assured Mr. Gilley, "I wish you the greatest success in the highly important and responsible work which you are now called to do. I assure you we shall do all we can to help in the tremendous problems we are now to face."

News Technique To Be Dealt With

First of a series of lectures on the technique of news writing is scheduled for Room 37, University College, at 4.30 p.m. today. All members of The Varsity staff and any students not yet registered with the paper but interested in journalism are asked to attend.

Given by members of The Varsity staff with practical knowledge of the subject, the lectures are intended to relate directly to the production of the undergraduate daily.

HART HOUSE OPEN TO GRADUATES

Membership in Hart House as part of the educational benefits provided for students who have served in the armed forces is not restricted to undergraduates alone, President Sidney Smith told The Varsity last night.

"Under the provisions of the Post-Discharge Re-Establishment Order, all male students, undergraduate and graduate, receiving benefits thereunder are entitled to membership in Hart House," the President stated.

DIRECTORY

Students are requested to verify their addresses and telephone numbers for the Directory of Staff and Students now being prepared at the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall.

No "Race" Exists Says McIlwraith

"Though biologically there is no such thing as the French, Nordic, or English race, the problem of race is paramount today as never before," Prof. T. F. McIlwraith of the Anthropology Department told the Medical Arts and Letters Club at Wymilwood last night.

Speaking on "Race and Race Concepts" at the club's opening meeting for the year, Prof. McIlwraith pointed out that the basis of racial discrimination is cultural rather than biological. "A more exact term for what people call races would be 'Us-Groups,'" he said.

"Man is essentially one in his make-up," he said, "and the concept of race has been present throughout human history. Each centre of culture has regarded itself as an 'Us-Group,' laying emphasis on cultural differences such as religious denominations and clan groups, rather than on physical differences such as color, height, weight, and size of head. For what are commonly called races—French, Nordic, or English, for example, there is no biological basis."

"What is truly significant in the life of a people is not physical appearance, but rather patterns of action, with education as a basis," Prof. McIlwraith concluded.

OTTAWA TO HEAR STUDENT PROTEST

Stadium Dons Blue & White For First Inter-Collegiate

There will be an official cheering section at Varsity Stadium tomorrow afternoon when the charges of Warren Stevens open the 1945 rugby season with an exhibition game against McMaster. That means that the old college spirit, missing for the past five years, will return when the referee blows the first whistle.

Pretty co-eds, gaily bedecked in University colors, will add no little to the scenery. Pennants are still in the post-war world and the con coat is still in mothballs, but the spirit is there. Yesterday afternoon, the Hart House athletic office was the scene of long line-ups for tickets. Tickets moved much faster than athletic officials had anticipated but the supply is still unlimited. The deadline for the free tickets is six o'clock tonight.

Yesterday the Blues went through a brisk scrimmage game with Teddy Morris' Argos seconds. The practice game was arranged to brush up the plays of the team.

The team has been pared to 26 players for tomorrow's encounter but a handful more will not be dressed for the game. This will be the first intercollegiate game in Toronto since November 13, 1939, when the McGill Redmen bowed to the Blues. The last appearance of the McMaster squad in the Bloor Street Bowl was on Oct. 21 of the same year when the Baby Blues swamped the visitors by 15-0. John Lucas was the spearhead of the attack and was credited with all the Toronto points.

That was five years ago! Tomorrow will see another picture with the senior versus intermediate clash. The McMaster team comes here highly regarded by football experts and this is due no little to the reputation of their new coach, Tommy Henderson, who has inherited his fighting spirit from his old club, the battling Hamilton Tigers.

According to reports from Hamilton, athletic officials at McMaster are interested in the senior-intercollegiate picture and hope to build their team into senior calibre. With this in mind, the McMaster team is primed to make the most of every game, be it scheduled or exhibition.

All students attending the game are reminded that boxes will be conveniently placed at the entrances for the collection of clothing for Campus Clothing Collection.

Co-Eds To Guard Clothing Depots At Entrances To McMaster Game

Tomorrow sees the first intercollegiate football team to visit this campus for four years, and hundreds of students are expected to turn out to see it. Stationed at the students' entrances to Varsity Stadium will be co-eds presiding over huge receptacles for the Campus Clothing Collection, and all those going to the game can conveniently deposit their contributions to the Collection on their way into the Stadium.

Any articles of clothing in good repair will be accepted gratefully—sweaters, coats, suits, dresses, socks, hats, gloves, shoes tied in pairs, mittens, scarves, underclothing, shirts, jackets, stockings, skirts, trousers—all are at a premium in Europe.

Officials of the National Clothing Drive in Toronto have emphasized the fact that clothes contributed must be wearable, though not in perfect condition, for people are not being asked to give away clothes that are indispensable and irreplaceable. All shoes, boots, and other articles that come in pairs should be tied to their mates tightly.

At the present, officials said, there are hundreds of pairs of shoes at the central depot of the National Clothing Collection which may have been gathered to no avail, for thoughtless people sent these shoes in without trying them together. One shoe is, in this case, not better than none.

Clothing donated should be clean, though not necessarily dry-cleaned. The success of this drive depends on the students of the campus, and all have some clothes of which they are not in active need, and could give away to those whose need is so great.

World of Physics For Tomorrow

A course of lectures will be given on "Physics of the Future" Friday evenings in room 43, McLennan Laboratory, by members of the staff of the Department of Physics.

The first of the lectures, "The Atomic Bomb I: Radioactivity," to be given by Professor John Satterly, M.A., D.Sc., F.R.S.C., will take place tonight. The one-hour lecture will begin precisely at 8 o'clock.

The series will be made up of four lectures on the Atomic Bomb, two lectures on the Electronic Microscope, and four lectures on Geophysics.

While these two lectures are planned mainly for students of the University, they will be free to the public.

Next meeting of the United Nations Society is to be held Nov. 8, at which time the topic of discussion will be "The Problem of Japan." The chairman will be Wilson Woodside, and Miss Emma Kaufman will participate. On Dec. 6 another meeting will discuss "Is Full Employment Possible on a World Scale." C. S. Jackson, Drummond Wren, and Gilbert Jackson are scheduled to participate in this discussion.

Enrolment Up Nearly 60 Percent Official Registration Figures Show

Almost overnight, with this fall's flood of registrations, the University has grown nearly 60 per cent, according to figures released last night by President Sidney Smith. Estimated total registration this year is 9,537, of whom 3,219 are former members of the armed services, the report shows. Total registration in all faculties, colleges, and courses last year was 6,048.

Biggest increase is at University College, where 1,807 students are registered, compared to 1,013 last year. The Faculty of Arts, with 4,365 students, has nearly doubled in size.

Forestry, whose registration of 182 triples that of last year, shows the biggest percentage increase; Physical and Health Education takes second place with a climb from 97 to 233.

With 1,626 students registered, the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering shows a comparatively small increase over last year's 1,164. Officials expect 1,500 more to be added to the Engineering totals with the opening of the Ajax division on January 14.

Especially significant of the cessation of military call-ups and the dropping of travel restrictions is the mushrooming of the School of Graduate Studies. From 411 students last year, the School has jumped to a record-breaking 718.

Only the two smallest departments in the University showed a decline. Household Science registration dropped from 16 to 6, and the School of Hygiene from 4 to 4.

Varsity SCM Opposes Jap-Canadian Deportation

PRIME MINISTER PETITIONED

A petition of protest to be wired immediately to Ottawa was unanimously voted yesterday by the central council of the Students' Christian Movement as the first step in its campaign to avert the deportation of 10,300 Canadian residents of Japanese origin.

Copies of the message were sent to Prime Minister King; Hon. Humphrey Mitchell, Minister of Labor; Hon. Norman Robertson, Undersecretary of State for External Affairs; and the two major opposition party leaders, Hon. John Bracken and Mr. M. J. Coldwell.

Text of the petition follows: "We, the members of the Central Council of the S.C.M. in the University of Toronto, view with alarm the impending action of the Canadian Government in sending to Japan within the next few weeks 10,300 Canadian residents of Japanese origin... because we believe that this contradicts the principles of justice and is a denial of the democratic rights of minorities, which would be a blot upon the name of our country. Therefore we respectfully urge the Canadian Government to delay action until the facts may be more widely known and a full expression of informed public opinion can be given."

A meeting of representatives of the campus organizations concerned about this question will be held Monday at 5 p.m., time and place to be announced later. Further details and information can be obtained from the S.C.M. office, Hart House.

"The problem must be taken up on the campus immediately," stated Morley Clarke, president of the S.C.M. "A mass meeting of students must be held as soon as possible."

"The issue is bigger than the present question alone," Clarke said. "It may be the Ukrainians or some other minority next."

Mr. MacRansom of the National S.C.M. staff pointed out to the central council the need for immediate action. "The government is bending every effort to obtain ships to get these people away," he said, "and when they are out to sea nothing can be done."

"Some of these Japanese-Canadians have wanted to revoke their signatures already, but will they ever get a chance?" he exclaimed. "They can be on ship before the tribunal the Government is always talking about can be set up."

Comment on Jap-Canadian Problem By Interested Faculty Members

Seeking professional comment on the Japanese Canadian deportation issue, raised on the campus by the stand taken by the Students' Christian Movement, The Varsity yesterday approached a group of staff members. Their remarks are reported as follows:

The problem was caused by "racial indigestion" in the opinion of Dr. Griffith Taylor, head of the geography department. Its solution, he said, was for Canada to "swallow this minority group."

"Absorption will take several generations; prejudice is the big stumbling block," he warned. "We feel that the Japanese are an inferior race; similar sentiments were held toward the Russians a few years ago, but today the situation is vastly different."

"The real problem," he concluded, "is the fact that the Japanese-Canadians provide us with cheap labor. We must hope that in the future they will not be content with a low standard of living, and that wage differences will be eliminated."

The Japanese are not cattle to be herded in whichever direction we deem desirable, stated Professor C. W. M. Hart, of the Department of Sociology. "Much of the hostility against them has been due to their success in various lines of business where they have offered stiff competition. The Japanese should not be coerced into coming east, although it would be to their advantage if they did so."

All minority groups would be better workers."

Intetnationalism Said Essential

"An international organization within which national groupings and loyalties form an integral part is essential for world peace," stated Professor Bertie Wilkinson, as he opened the second in a series of discussions held under the auspices of the United Nations Society last night. The topic under discussion was the compatibility of nationalism and internationalism.

Participating in the discussion with Dr. Wilkinson were Professor R. Birdwhistell, Professor B. McDougall, and Mr. J. H. Biggar.

Prof. McDougall said the old European nationalistic state had entered a new phase. "No longer can there be any strategic frontiers," he said, "and to put it on material grounds, since the national state no longer serves, it is bound to undergo a vast change and to find its place on a lower level of political power. Consequently, some form of international institution is necessary in order to promote co-operation on a larger scale than the national state."

Prof. McDougall concluded the discussion by saying that the need for internationalism was evident and would evolve as an organism growing with the needs and functions of the people, within which national loyalties would form an integral part.

Jonathan Swift Was Merely Lucky

"Jonathan Swift was neither a clairvoyant nor a physicist," said Dr. C. H. Goudge of the Victoria College Classics Department yesterday before forty members of the Mathematics and Physics Society.

In a talk entitled "Gulliver and the Moons of Mars" Dr. Goudge explained that the amazing accuracy of certain astronomical suppositions made by the noted satirist in "Gulliver's Travels" is due merely to chance, not to any knowledge or clairvoyance on the part of the author.

Dr. Goudge, a graduate in Mathematics, developed mathematically Newton's principle of universal gravitation and Kepler's three laws.

In an earlier part of the meeting, John Duggan was elected treasurer of the society, while the selection of the first year representative was deferred.

Editorial

Time For A Laugh

Time for a Laugh

Said somebody slyly, thinking to get our editorial goat: "I hope everyone on The Varsity staff read Rex Wilson's review of Barfoot Boy With Cheek in last Wednesday's paper—particularly that bit showing up the mock Bohemianism of the local undergraduate daily."

Frankly, we hope so, too; and add the further wish that everyone on the campus may have read it. It's high time we all sat back and had a good belly laugh at ourselves. There are few more effective antidotes for overweening conceit than a thorough-going session of self-deflation. Laughter, the ability to laugh at one's self, is a first-rate catharsis for swollen ego. And swollen ego is a common enough complaint in university circles.

An Humbling Experience

University should, ideally, provide an humbling experience. Introduction to the thought of history's greatest thinkers should affect the undergraduate in the same way as would a personal introduction to the men themselves, were that possible in some houseboat on the Styx. Unfortunately, however, there is scant evidence that this ideal is approached. For some not-too-nebulous reason, the president of the class, or the Chief Whatsit of the Society for the Propagation of Student Ego, or, for that matter, an editor of the campus paper, frequently rates his professional dignity too highly. In fact such undergraduate dignitaries have been known to approach Plato, or Shakespeare, or Jeans with a distinct air of condescension. Such undergraduates are primarily campus leaders, and only secondarily students.

The plight of these professional undergraduates is, admittedly, amusing; but it is also most lamentable. We do not for a moment question that our Chief Whatsit has the ability to pass his annual examinations and so to proceed to his degree in due time. (It would be better for him were he to fail and so to be disabused of any illusion of his own invincibility.) We do, most definitely, question that his degree, so obtained, will benefit him spiritually or materially in the post-graduate world.

A Big Frog

The biggest frog must feel quite lost when he graduates, albeit summa cum laude, to the boundless waters beyond his familiar pond.

This would seem to be an argument against participation in undergraduate organizations. It is not so intended, for we would certainly not subscribe to the conclusion reached the other night at campus debating society meeting "that extra-curricular activities are a hindrance to college education."

The point made here is that the leaders of various undergraduate organizations may discover too late that their positions of honor are a potential threat to the fulness of their development. This undesirable potentiality need not be realized if the student in question recognizes his peril in time. He can then take recourse to the prescribed tonic and laugh at his own self-importance. That will restore his ego to normal proportions and permit him to enter the same classroom doors as other, less exalted, students.

Our cry, then, is not raised against Chief Whatsits at large, but only against those of their enviable and distinguished company who may have had their perspective dimmed by the greatness of the height from which they look down upon the rest of the campus world. And for them, we feel no envy but a certain, chuckling pity.

And so we are most happy to take up the criticism of him who suggested that campus newspapers and those who work on them are wont to take themselves too seriously at times. We'll even go along with him and freely admit that there is a certain justification in the accusation. It is hoped, however, that our critic can also see the justice with which this specific allegation is turned outward on the campus at large.

At least it is a hopeful sign that the weapon which was turned upon The Varsity—that bit from Rex Wilson's review—was found nowhere else than in these pages. We can laugh at ourselves; and the same to you, thank you.

About "Eddie"
And Things

Captain Eddie, depicting some scenar-ist's notion of the life of Eddie Ricken-backer, was to be seen this week at both the Tivoli and the Eglinton theatres. Fred MacMurray, last seen hobnobbing with the Fleagle family and romping through American history at random, is the hero.

"The portrayal," as criticized by J. W. in a note deposited yesterday at 42A,
"never attains the dramatic qualities inherent in such a career owing to a lack of unity and force; it seems content to merely piece together a few highlights substituting a jarring flashback technique for progressive interest."

The result, says J. W., is "a highly entertaining picture which is disappoint-ingly ineffective." * * *

Harem-scarum entertainment, eye-fillingly extravagant, is A Thousand And One Nights which the Columbia people have miraculously compressed into one evening. Phil Silvers of "gladda-seeya" fame continues spontaneous, insane and extraneous to the romance which involves Evelyn Keyes and Cornel Wilde, whom you will never forget at that pianist in "A Song to Remember."
It's an Imperial hold-over.

Some nice people are innocently extricated in Her Highness And The Bell-boy, which title neatly summarizes the plot. Gingenating June Allyson made it worth while for us. Robert Walker is shy again. Hedy Lamarr. That's all.
Hedy Lamarr!

"Yes." This was the scintillatingly different comment of the chairman of the Clothing Committee, Miss Leggy
Dates, in an interview with The Varsity.
"We plan to pull off the biggest clothing stunt in this University's history."

As is usual with the great people interviewed by the world's largest University of Toronto daily, she said, stated, commented and mentioned, "We plan to strip this University clean of every particle of clothing."

A special delegation of out-of-town
Medical students has offered Leggy 19 shoelaces, all for left shoes. In a hysterical frenzy of joy, the entire Clothing Committee went on a binge expected to last for two years. "We never hoped in our wildest dreams for such a miraculous success," said one of the committee, his face flushed from its normal leaf-green hue.

"We will continue. We are sponsoring a terrific advertising stunt. Think of it! Twenty thousand people jammed into Varsity Stadium watching 24 men racing around the field in their underwear!"

"Can we miss?" And the smiling advertising genius leaned back in his large easy-chair uttering a profound, satisfying belch.

"And furthermore," he said, "Get this." He paused, reflectively. "Change that," he said, as, with the force of inspiration blood gushed out of his ears,
"to 'Get this.'"

"On Monday evening a squad of lovely, beautiful, shapely, and gorgeous University of Toronto co-eds will visit all the fraternities to collect for the drive. Obviously the fraternity men will all faint dead away from the shock.

When they revive—no clothes!"
"After that we can call the clothes drive closed."

Correspondence

Tut, Tut,
Mr. FreedmanEditor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir,

About the article in The Varsity of Wednesday, October 10, on "Better Sound, Worse Music," I would like to comment that, although I have heard none of the new records mentioned, I have heard actual performances of "such rubbish as" Rodzinski and the New York Philharmonic's rendition of Rachmaninoff's Symphony No. 2.

I feel that Mr. Freedman should state clearly that it is his own personal opinion that Rachmaninoff's music is rubbish, especially his Second Symphony, which is, in my opinion and that of several other gentlemen much more qualified to judge than myself, that it contains some of the most beautiful contemporary themes written. It is by far the best of his symphonies and could stand much wider publicity than it has had so far.

It is quite obvious that Mr. Freedman is not too familiar with this work or he might realize its very meritorious values.

Several people with whom I have talked agree with me that the tone of many articles in The Varsity seem to be sarcastic and destructive lately. We wonder if this is policy, or if it is that now the war is over we are finding fault with the ordinary things because of a lack of breath-taking developments to draw forth our armchair criticism.

Post-war is a time for construction and optimism, not destruction and pessimism. It should be exemplified in our thoughts, speech and action. IS IT?

F. C. BARNES, II S.P.S.

(It is clearly understood that all signed articles represent the opinions of their authors alone. As for the "sarcastic and destructive" nature of "many articles in The Varsity lately," we would welcome further examples.—Ed.)

Art, Music and Drama

There's A Moral To All This

It is well known that the average critic is given to excesses. Vergil Thompson, in describing Carroll Glenn as a "top-notch," proved himself to be an average critic. Miss Glenn does play the violin well; she does have an extremely good technique, and her stage presence is excellent. But several important aspects of her musicality make
Mr. Thompson's description of her a gross exaggeration.

In performing Mendelssohn's Concerto last night, Miss Glenn felt free to play any passage at any speed she desired, whether or not it was consistent with the rest of the work. This characteristic, as well as that of cutting short the rests, might be attributed to a youthful exuberance, or an anxiety to get ahead with the work. However admirable these characteristics may be elsewhere, they contributed an element of chaos to the performance of the concerto. From where I sat, her tone sounded thin, but others who heard her at a more favorable angle were impressed with its fulness.
Otherwise, it was a good performance, endowed with a great deal of lyricism.

As a conductor, Anatal Dorati was impressive, in spite of the fact that there was no perceptible improvement in the woodwind section. He is both precise and artistic. His beat is well defined and his manner of giving cues clear. Because of these, the music is more easily followed.

There have been some doubts expressed about the wisdom of playing so heavy a work as the Borodin Symphony
No. 2 on a Prom Concert. Mr. Dorati's treatment dispelled these doubts, and the audience enjoyed the performance. This, despite a set of nonsensical program notes, the only effects of which were to mislead the audience. How "the imagery ... of knights, of boyards, ... a banquet of barbaric chiefs" can be connected with a piece of pure music, or why it should be, is beyond comprehension. If program notes had to be written about the Borodin Symphony it would have been much better to point out to the audience the unusual modal harmonies, the composer's fine sense of structure, and his tendency towards polyphony.

There is a moral to be drawn from last night's program and we draw it with a feeling of satisfaction. The audience was more receptive to this program of fine music than it has been to the so-called "popular" programs. It was a quieter, more attentive audience than I have ever seen at the Proms. Perhaps this will convince the management to line up a series of concerts for next year on which good music will be featured.

multiply by millions!

You've often watched the teller stamp your cheque. Every day, in every branch of every bank in Canada, cheques are being scrutinized, stamped and recorded. During the war years, this daily flow of cheques through your bank has swollen to a torrent.
Deposit accounts are more numerous and active than ever before. This increase reflects the tremendous activity of Canadian life and business. Production, purchases and payrolls have all reached record levels.

In addition, three-quarters of a million men and women in the armed services must get their pay, and their dependents receive allowances regularly.

The handling of this wartime volume of cheques is quite apart from numerous special services which the banks have undertaken—the delivery of millions of Victory Bonds and the sale of countless War Savings Certificates; ration coupon banking; subsidy payments to producers; foreign exchange operations.

Yet all this extra work has been carried out at a time when new help has had to be trained to take the place of more than 8,500 bank workers now in uniform.

Phelan, Deane, Winners

With a fair student crowd in the stands to cheer them on, the Freshman-Novice Track and Field men of the University of Toronto put on their first exhibition yesterday afternoon.

Don Phelan and Bill Deane, both of P. & H.E., distinguished themselves in the day's events. Don copped the 100 and 220 yard sprints, while Bill won both the shot put and javelin throw.

The March Forward

Tomorrow afternoon at Varsity Stadium the 1945 edition of the Varsity Blues will make its local intercollegiate debut by carrying on once again the friendly rivalry between universities on the football and athletic fields.

It is a happy comment that in spite of six tedious war years, that flaming intercollegiate spirit has been able to survive. And now, the spirit that was forced to mark time while the world struggled, is on the verge of revival.

When the opening whistle is blown in tomorrow's encounter, it will be the first opening whistle in five years and eleven months. Yes, it was five years and eleven months ago that the senior rugby team last walked on to the green sod of Varsity Stadium. On that occasion the men of Warren Stevens walked off with a convincing 19-6 victory over McGill. It is the hope that the charges of Stevens can start off where their older brethren left off. That is the hope of every red-blooded student who has so much as an ounce of pride in his alma mater. It is the hope of every undergraduate and every graduate, that this 1945 edition will live up to the high standard set by past Blue teams.

Thus, all who owe allegiance to the University of Toronto will have their eyes focused on the team of 1945. It is up to these players to prove that they are worthy of sporting the blue and white uniforms of the University of Toronto. Their first test comes tomorrow. Time alone will tell.

Badges of Honor

More often than not used as decorations on Varsity blazers are athletic T's. After much research, it was discovered that these T's are awarded to the members of the winning teams in intramural tournaments, on the recommendation of the captain. To the innocent bystander, it might seem that the teams of the smaller colleges would be trampled in the rush. But no... they aren't forgotten. The cases of outstanding players, not on winning teams, are considered, and special athletic T's are awarded to them upon their graduation.

Another proof of athletic prowess is the athletic guard—a letter on the graduation pin. To obtain the privilege of wearing his guard, one must be a member of a winning team. For other guards, such as debating and dramatics, a student holds points during her three or four year period at college. For each debating or dramatic event in which the student participates, a certain number of points are added to the total. The question had been raised, "Why not award athletic guards on the same basis as the other types." If any reader has an answer, pro or con, we would be grateful to receive same.

The Blue Team Vic Edges SPS In Opening Tilt

The following is the line-up of the Varsity team for tomorrow's game, with their numbers: 1, Waldon; 2, Jacobs; 3, Hall; 4, Grierson; 6, Farmer; 7, O'Brien; 8, Pyne; 9, Hamm; 10, McCormick; 11, Lawson; 12, Davey; 14, Grass; 15, McReynolds; 16, Egan; 17, Henry; 18, Carson; 20, Cranham; 21, Smith; 22, Campbell; 23, Stu Scott; 24, Guppy; 25, Lawrence; 26, Toogood; 27, A. Scott; 34, Kilpatrick.

S.A.C. MEMBERS

S.A.C. members who have not yet appointed a college or faculty representative for the Clothing for Europe Drive are asked to do so immediately.

These representatives should contact Miss M. G. Bates, Women's Editor of The Varsity, who is the chairman of the committee.

Intramural rugby got off to a flying start yesterday afternoon as the red and gold Vic team nosed out Junior S.P.S. 1-0. The bruising work of the linemen of both teams was the feature of the game, as the play followed the conventional "two bucks and a kick" routine. School opened up with a desperate passing attack in the dying moments of the fourth quarter and were threatening to tie the score when time ran out on them.

Burford, London and Heinbuck played well for Vic, while Robbins and McCann were School's best men.

Soccer also had its coming-out party yesterday, with S.P.S. I trouncing U.C. 4-0 on the front campus. The Schoolmen assumed an early lead, and were definitely superior to an inexperienced U.C. eleven.

Mount Allison University

Sackville, N.B., Oct. 11 (CUP)—Campus activity at Mount Allison University has been extended on a large scale. Proposed new activities include an inter-class drama festival, a three-act play, an opera and a French play. The Ski Club facilities will be enlarged and student trips are planned.

Large campus dances are as yet impossible since some of the men students are housed in the gymnasium, but small dances are being held in Beethoven Hall.

Academic changes include a Seminar System which will enable students formerly in the armed services to enter three times a year, in October, February and July.

Sir George Williams College

Montreal, Oct. 11 (CUP)—The social season at Sir George Williams College started with a big dance, music supplied by a Montreal name band. This year, as at other universities, there was no freshman hazing.

This year for the first time in history the frosh won the annual frosh-upper class tilt. Club activity has reached a new peak; and ex-service men are participating in all activities.

McGill University

Montreal, Oct. 11 (CUP)—The keynote of McGill's post-war campus is the re-allocation of classes to utilize a maximum of academic facilities. Dawson College, 30 miles outside of Montreal, with its 800 first year science students and commuting professors is a result of this policy.

Football rallies have been revived with the return of intercollegiate football, and bonfire snake dances are once more in order. The McGill team is scheduled to play an exhibition game with the Montreal Hornets Oct. 16, and the first intercollegiate game with Western will take place on the twentieth.

University of Manitoba

Winnipeg, Oct. 11 (CUP)—Bigger and better than ever was this year's freshie day on campus of the University of Manitoba. Each Freshie Queen was under commercial sponsorship.

Academics are fairly stationary but in order to accommodate the enlarged enrolment, classes are being continued to 6 p.m. and the library is being opened on Saturdays.

Rugby is being instituted in the spring.

U.N.T.D.

All U.N.T.D. ratings and those interested in enlisting are to report at 1930 Tuesday 16th October, 1945, to H.M.C.S. York, at which time the Commanding Officer will outline the future training program for the coming academic year.

Information will be given regarding enrolment, advancements to higher rates, Commissions and discharges. Naval ratings "Demobilized" from Active service may apply for enlistment in the U.N.T.D.

Rig of the Day for all U.N.T.D. ratings will be No. 3's with lanyards.

I. S. S. Faces Biggest Year Aiding European Students

DE BLONAY STRESSES NEED

"This year will be the most important in the history of the International Students Service. This is the year that will decide the future of university students in the recently freed countries of Europe," said M. Andre de Blonay, Secretary of the World Student Relief at a meeting of the I.S.S. yesterday in the Women's Union.

M. de Blonay is familiar with conditions among students in most of the countries in Europe and gave an account of the situation which prevails on many camps.

"There has been a great split between the European university world and the North American university world. This is due to differences in experiences, contacts and conditions. During the war university students were almost completely isolated from each other and from students in other countries," stated M. de Blonay.

It is difficult for students in this hemisphere to appreciate the danger and suspense under which European students have lived.

"Your security cannot be maintained in the long run if things are unsettled in Europe. It is the task of all students to help to establish settled conditions in the European universities," M. de Blonay continued.

Many of the people entering university this year are men who have been prisoners-of-war for periods of four or five years. One of the responsibilities of the student relief societies is to form rehabilitation centres that will prepare these men for their return to the class room.

In Greece, among other nations, studying went on under great difficulties. Student worked long hours during the day and studied in the evening. They saw their professors for about ten minutes in the year before writing their examinations. Usually they could not afford to attend classes in the ordinary way, owing to the effects of inflation, which left them unable to pay for even the bare necessities of life.

M. de Blonay announced plans for an exchange of students between Europe and North America, starting next year. These exchanges will meet with European university representatives at a Student's Conference each year.

After the address, Gordon Stulberg, chairman of the University of Toronto committee of the I.S.S. announced that an organization meeting will be held on Tuesday, Oct. 16, at 8:00 p.m. in the Women's Union.

Genial Genie Of Campus Locks Helps Key-Crazy Staff, Students

By Sid Jourard

To supply the keys for locks that have none and the locks for keys that have none, works Harry Taylor in a small workshop beneath the Superintendent's office in Simcoe Hall.

It is Harry to whom professors turn when they find that the closet containing precious lecture notes is irrevocably sealed. Frantic froth, fearing to be late for any of Chester Martin's invigorating Hart House sessions, run to Mr. Taylor, that he might perform his mysterious rites with file and tweezers, to produce the necessary shorts and running shoes from the obstinate locker.

Freshies, pretying for their first big dance, find themselves ready to meet their swains, but for one sartorial omission—a dress. It's in that cupboard that suffered the fate of the recent "rah-rah" fad. One of the girls swallowed the key last night.

Enter Harry Taylor, on white charger, to free the maiden from her distress!

Students take the services of the Superintendent's staffs so much for granted, that it might as well be a crew of robots who work to keep the campus running.

Harry Taylor is no robot, though a robot might better tolerate the excruciating sounds emitted by a file against steel.

When we entered his office, he was concentrating on the carving of a key; one among the thousands lining the wall of his office. Our plate on edge, we numbed through an interview which took more the form of a political bull-session.

Embryonic political scientists who have haversack or suitcase trouble, would do well to drop into the workshop, that they might supplement their lecture courses.

Locksmith Taylor, in University employ for 25 years, has seen the keys, their bearers, their losers and Varsity interviewers come and go.

From our brief visit with him, we attempt to deduce a poetic generalization on his philosophy of life:

*The door is locked, you can't unlock it,
But Taylor's master-key's in pocket,
"I do your work, for it's my calling,
But frankly, I prefer lawn-bowling".*

BLUES VICTORIOUS IN TEST OPENER

Victoria Inducts Matheson Dean Of Emmanuel College

Reverend A. Dawson Matheson, D.D., was inducted as Dean of Emmanuel College and Professor of Homiletics at a special convocation Friday in celebration of the 109th anniversary of the granting of the Royal Charter to Victoria College. Dr. Matheson, a former gold medalist in philosophy, has come to the post from a United Church pastoral charge in Quebec City.

"It is surely a good thing," said the Dean in his address, "to teach the techniques of living. But the function of a University is something more than that."

In discussing the university's role, Dean Matheson stressed the importance of a philosophy. The Nazis had to have one, he declared, so they formulated an organic philosophy of blood and soil. It was a group of corrupted intellectuals in Germany who played a vital part in the growth of Nazism.

"The issues before humanity are life and death—eternal life and the wrath of God," the speaker continued. "Our help is in the name of the Lord, who made Heaven and Earth."

Rev. Philip Duncan and Rev. John H. Garden both received the degree of Doctor of Divinity honoris causa. After the convocation a reception was held in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Matheson.

Appeals For Aid

The need of aid from students interested in social work was apparent at the University Settlement tea, Thursday at 21 Grange Road.

"Wartime difficulties have left us very short-handed," said Mrs. F. Crowther, Head Resident. "We have been forced to give mass instruction instead of individual attention."

The Settlement is a "general practitioner" in the field of social work, and thus has interest for all age groups—infant to grandparent. Situated in an industrial district, it faces problems of inadequate housing, neglect of children, and insufficient play facilities.

The Settlement combines baby clinic, nursery school, group activities and clubs, classes, offered to attendants of thirty-six nationalities.

Fate Of 10,300 Will Be Told

Further action on the petition protesting the impending deportation of 10,300 west-coast Japanese-Canadians has been announced by Morley Clarke, president of the Student's Christian Movement. A mass meeting of all interested students will be held in Cartwright Hall, St. Hilda's College, at 5 o'clock this afternoon.

Rev. James Finlay, the minister of Carlton St. United Church, and Mrs. Hugh MacMillan, the president and secretary respectively of the Toronto Co-operative Committee on Japanese-Canadians will address the meeting and supply the latest facts on the situation.

Representatives of all campus organizations concerned are expected at the meeting. Discussion will be held and plans made for any additional action.

The meeting is planned to follow up the petition which was sent to government and opposition leaders last week.

CLOTHING COMMITTEE

There will be a special meeting of the Campus Clothing Committee in the Women's Union this afternoon at 5 p.m. Representatives are requested to attend.

Satterly Gives Radio-Activity Lecture With Usual Humorous Showmanship

The story and some of the more interesting facts of radio-activity were dealt with by Professor John Satterly in a lecture in the Physics Building last night. Illustrated with experiments and punctuated with humor, his lecture was, according to the spectators, well up to his annual liquid air lecture, and a masterpiece of showmanship.

Most of the development in the field of radio-activity has occurred in the past fifty years and Dr. Satterly remembers such important things as the discovery of X-Ray by Rontgen and the Curies' work on radium. Dr. Satterly was at Cambridge when Rutherford from McGill University spoke there on the subject of atomic disintegration, the breaking up of some elements into others.

This discovery by Rutherford explained some of the curious behaviour of uranium and other elements which had previously puzzled scientists. "One scientist," said Professor Satterly, "even went so far as to suggest that it was a mouse that caused changes in uranium."

On another occasion when he and other students were in a dark room examining the latest wonder, Crook's Spintarscope, they were rushed out to the room to permit King Edward VII to cure upon it.

The story of Radio-Activity has a good many highlights. Some of these were the discovery of cathode rays, an electric discharge in a vacuum tube which has paved the way for the Cathode-ray tube used in television and radar. Then there was the discovery that pitchblende would fog a photographic plate resulting in the discovery of radium and uranium. The work of Rutherford on the kind of rays that were given off by radium and the discovery that it broke up into lead showed that there were unstable elements that break up and release great amounts of energy in doing so. But in nature this disintegration takes millions of years and if atomic power were to become available for the use of man, some artificial way of breaking up the atom had to be discovered. In 1932 the neutron, a particle without any charge was found. This particle is able to pass through an atom without being attracted by either the electrons or the protons and its discovery made the atom bomb possible.

The equipment which Professor Satterly used to illustrate his lecture included Cathode-ray tubes which showed some of the properties of the electric discharge, pieces of fluorescent mineral which showed many beautiful colors under the effect of the electric discharge and a model which illustrated the rate at which uranium changes into radium, and radium into lead. Perhaps the most interesting thing he had was a capsule containing one-tenth of a milligram of radium.

The next lecture of the series, "Isotopes," will be given in Room 43 of the Physics Building next Friday evening at 8 o'clock, by Professor J. C. Ireton.

Excited Students Cheer As Varsity Out-Scores Foe

LAST MINUTE EFFORT FAILS

Neither a cool, cloudy sky nor the McMaster team could stop the Varsity Blues at Varsity Stadium Saturday afternoon as they out-played, out-scored, out-classed and out-fumbled their opponents by a score of 18-9 in their initial football test of the season.

The game, billed as an exhibition encounter, attracted a crowd of over 6,000. It displayed a variety of play and, considering the short training period, it was good football.

Stu Scott was the highlight of the Varsity win and accounted for ten points with a touchdown, a placement and two singles. However, the whole team came in for its share of good play as well as bad.

Colin Cranham earned his spurs with a 35 yard plunge in the first minute of play. He climaxed his day's work by tossing a 25 yard pass to Scott, who romped another fifty yards for the major.

Bill Lawrence, Alex Jacobs, Bob Henry, Bert Hamm, Jack McReynolds, Ted Toogood and Don Bark all came in for their share of offensive play and all served notice that they will be heard from in the near future.

A large question in the mind of Warren Stevens was self answered when the line came through with a good display. The outsiders were especially noticeable as was the play of Rod Smith at middle. Smith, a converted backfielder, climaxed a good afternoon's work by failing on a loose ball behind the McMaster line for the second major.

The McMaster attack was centred around ex-Hamilton Wildcat Bob Leggett, who received able assistance from Al Gurney and Art Jerome.

Applications should be sent to the Director, Department of University Extension, University of Toronto. A fee of five dollars will be charged groups of five or more enrolling from the same organization may receive a reduction to three dollars.

Vancouver, Oct. 11—(CUP)—One hundred men at the University of British Columbia are being forced to find temporary shelter in two military huts heated by coal stoves. They share an outdoor washroom and eat their meals at the university cafeteria. Later the men will move to buildings now occupied by women who will move to new steam-heated huts with separate rooms. The huts will be turned into a dining room and a recreation hall.

Research In U.K. Offered To Scholars

A total of 25 one-year scholarships for October, 1946, open equally to men and women graduates and undergraduates in such subjects as Music and Drama have been offered by the British Council, to Universities, Medical schools or academic institutions of similar rank, in Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and the Union of South Africa for research in the United Kingdom.

With an approximate value of £300, the scholarships are intended to enable specially qualified men and women to visit the United Kingdom in order to study conditions in some departments within their particular field. Candidates must be British subjects, normally resident in one of the overseas Dominions, to be 23 years of age, a graduate of a recognized Dominion academic institution, and to be able to produce evidence that his qualifications are such as to permit him to undertake research work in the subject which he submits for approval.

Administration of the scheme will rest with the Student's Committee of the British Council, which will be responsible for the final selection of candidates, approval of the courses of study or research proposed, and for the general supervision of the scholar's work during the year in the United Kingdom.

Scholars will not be permitted to hold any paid position in the United Kingdom that would be likely to conflict with the devotion of full time to the objects of the scholarships, save with the previous permission of the Council.

Applications should be made to the Registrar's Office in Simcoe Hall not later than the 1st of December, 1945.

Pessimistic Piffle

Overhearing a chance remark which was later repeated in several different forms, both by students and lecturers, we have come to the conclusion that a tendency to look on the worst side of things is beginning to develop. While this feeling is not to be found solely on this campus, it seems to be prevalent among students in general, because, perhaps, they are students. In university, many become engrossed in a search for Truth, then turn precocious pessimists and decide that it does not exist. "What has the whole benighted human race, and myself in particular, got to be grateful for?" is their cry.

University is a place where disillusionment and illusion run a parallel race for possession of the student. Most arrive with illusions, then lose them with the gaining of hard facts; many go through a cynical period, then seem to find the answer and emerge with ideals of changing the world for the better. Some remain in a pessimistic fog for several years after graduation. Most, however, survive to become really helpful citizens.

It is to the pessimist in our midst that we want to point out the fact that there still are things for which to be thankful. "So he war's over. Hooray! And what of the terrible cost in manpower and other resources? Are we to be thankful for that, too?" inquires the lordly pessimist.

SOMEHOW GOOD

Truly, it is difficult to find good in a war apart from the thankful fact that there still are things for which to be thankful. "So the war's are being turned to constructive rather than destructive ends. Still, it is a long-established fact that greater social, scientific and medical progress takes place during war years than in peace. In a war so wide-rung as that which recently shook the world, there has been an unparalleled opportunity for peoples of different countries to understand each other's problems—the racial, economic and religious characteristics inherent in each nation. A tremendous step has been taken towards a realization of what we believe to be the sole solution to the problem of wars—internationalism.

The past grim struggle has had a great educational value. Lessons have been learned by more people in an emphatic and lasting fashion than fifty million textbooks could not have hoped to achieve. Today it is not only a cloistered few who have pored over books, or had sufficient funds to travel and see the world for themselves who can profess to know about the countries of Europe and Asia. It is the average man and woman, many of whom travelled overseas "at the expense of the Government," or remained at home where they read letters from friends and relatives who were seeing things at first hand.

THE COMPARISON

A greater number of us, then, know more about world problems than six or seven years ago. In the solving of today's problems lies the founding of the world of tomorrow. Yesterday's student graduated with the thought of getting a job which would give him personal security uppermost in his mind. Today's student graduates with a bigger job ahead of him, and a greater, more impersonal security at stake.

THE CHALLENGE

Such far-seeing men as the President of the University have said that the greatest challenge in history now faces us. First comes the immediate problem of reconstruction, and then other weighty matters. The vast proportions of this challenge were voiced recently by a professor of history on the campus, when he said that man has suddenly been placed in the midst of the Atomic Age at a time when he is still trying to adapt himself to the Steam Age. Man, it would seem, has to catch up with himself. At university, track shoes for that race can be donned. The social sciences are lagging behind and it is up to the men and women in these and other courses to give them a helping hand, by accepting their value, by continuing the work, and above all, by widening the field and by preventing an "ivory tower" attitude from developing.

If everything came easily, there would be no progress. Here, today, is issued the greatest overall challenge of all time. It should result in an era of great achievements, and a large percentage of university graduates, among others, ought to have a part in it. Here is the chance for each of us to become the world's oyster. Try for that chance, and be glad for the opportunity. M.C.N.

Records

Better Worse
Than No Music

The new records for October now showing in Mr. Erasmus Z. Humphreys' Chestnut St. culture centre and antique bedspring emporium are the same old records that he had there last month and the month before. This month he dusted them off and threw away the one that formerly reposed in several pieces in various parts of the window.

This record Humphreys has repaired with a bit of Pharaoh's Own Egyptian Gunk and, having reversed some of the segments, rents the monstrosity to a local radio station as the theme song for "Club 52 for 40" and the gators (gators?) swoon to it by the ton.

Of the four records he grudgingly released to us the other day for 25 cents, two were disowned by Columbia and the others were long ago removed from the Victor catalogue.

While the companies originally manufacturing these records cannot be held responsible, Mr. Humphreys should be brought under critical censure for offering these brittle disks for sale. They crack.

Also, horrors, his antiquated method of packing the records in furnace ash has allowed a large pit to occur in our recording of Sir Harry Lauder singing "Rrrrramin' in the Braw Bricht 'Moonlicht Nicht Tonight wi' MacKay Who's Mo Trrrrue Friend so Hit Me, Daddy, Wi' a Wee Deoch-an-Dorris Blues causes a sound which is transparently suggestive of the good Scots knight committing an abominable social error.

But what do you expect for two bits? Readers with record collections may be interested in an interesting experiment recently carried out to try to do away with record wear in reproduction. They will be pleased to hear that it has been found that you can now not only do without needles you can also do without a loudspeaker—in short, you can throw away the radio and just keep the turntable. A piece of bond paper held cornerwise to the record groove will give a satisfactory acoustical reproduction: faint, it is true, but just what you think wants to listen to your bourgeois taste in records? Readers with good co-ordination could even do away with the turntable. Disadvantage of this method is that the wear and tear on the paper is terrific. SAVE WASTE PAPER!

Porcupine needles are good too, but do you know how to get them?

Do you know how to get them out? Ouch!

Books

"Cattle--Cars . . .
.... Scholars"

Ralph Gustafson's new anthology, Canadian Accent (Penguin Books, 25 cents), is an important little book. Penguins and Pelicans generally have a large circulation, and I think it may be assumed that most readers of these books have a genuine interest in intelligent literature. For many people, particularly in Great Britain, Canadian Accent and the earlier Gustafson poetry anthology will form the sole basis for a general impression of contemporary writing. These readers are fortunate; both anthologies provide excellent surveys, although this new one is marred by one or two unaccountable omissions.

Almost all the fiction in Canadian Accent is brief, sad and perceptive. Reading these little sketches, we gaze through a series of small windows; what is perceived in one runs into and blends with the view from the next, until in the end we have obtained an impression of contemporary Canadian life. This provides the choice of characters with a new importance and a deeper meaning; the sketches are about farmers and the "little" people of urban society, whose lives are neither dramatized nor romanticized but are presented realistically.

In seeking the roots of Canadian life as a prelude to, as much as a part of, an understanding and truly creative literature, these prose writers are attempting something long overdue and terribly important. This is part of a trend which has clearly dominated the work of the more important Canadian novelists during the past several years. And it provides an answer to the challenge of Leon Edel, who, writing in Canadian Accent, calls upon our writers to "Let the work seek its own identity and one day it may be discovered to be Canadian as well." I can think of no better way of establishing both the individual and the Canadian identity of a book than by turning to those problems of Canadian life which, in one way or another, are basic to the entire world.

The sketches by Patrick Anderson and P. K. Page are infused with poetic sensibility. Katherine Marcuse's Soldier is harsher, but deeply tragic; and this story about a communist has a barely discernible 'surprise-ending', which—even more of a surprise—becomes an organic part of the whole. Two Fishermen is probably Morley Callaghan's best short story; and from Barometer Rising Mr. Gustafson has chosen Hugh MacLennan's long and striking description of the Halifax explosion of the first world war.

My feeling that Mr. Gustafson has correctly gauged the general trend of recent Canadian writing leaves me at loss to explain his omissions. Frederick Philip Grove is certainly not one of the younger novelists; but his books are still being published; and there have been reports that he has a number of completed novels ready for possible future publication. And Grove has consistently written realistically of Canadian life, even in those days when puritanism was at its height in this country. More surprising is the lack of adequate representation of the younger poets. One of Mr. Gustafson's own poems is here; and, as I have already pointed out, Patrick Anderson and P. K. Page have contributed prose. But the latter two are better known for their poetry, and completely ignored is the work of such important younger poets as Dorothy Livesay, Irving Layton and Miriam Waddington.

Because younger poets are silenced, the poetry seems less vital and colorful than it should. There are a number of poems about social problems, and the

Sound In A Vacuum

The Don Cossacks

The value of a musical performance may be based either on the understanding and technical adequacy with which it presents a specific piece of valuable music or merely on the ability with which it exploits a particular medium, namely sound. The Don Cossacks, heard at Massey Hall on Saturday night, make an attractive contribution to the second category. It is less easy than it seems to exploit music without becoming too involved in pieces of music. The compositions which are used for the purpose must not be too interesting in themselves, otherwise there is liable to be a clash between the style of the performers and the style required for the piece of music.

The Don Cossacks have solved this problem in two ways. The short pieces are gay or lively or sad, but without any melodic or harmonic distinction. In themselves they are trivial. For that reason they will accept without strain or incongruity whatever sounds the conductor wishes to impose on them. If he wishes to imitate a balalaika or an accordion or a horse's hoofs the music does not suffer because there is nothing in the music to engage our interest. In the longer ecclesiastical pieces there is less triviality, but less individuality of style also. Some of the melodies are supposed to be medieval, but the setting is much more recent. By using nondescript religious material of uncertain style the conductor, Serge Jaroff, absolves himself of any responsibility to the individual composition, and can spend all his time demonstrating the astonishing variety of texture and color which he can get out of his excellently disciplined organization.

The variety of color is far greater than that of the average chorus, male, female or mixed. The exceptionally low basses contrast effectively with the unusually steady tones of the male altos. Mr. Jaroff makes full use of solo voices within the choral texture and is particularly fond of resting the entire choir on a solo bass note. Having demon-

Varsity Golfers Win; Taking Both Trophies

Over the weekend, football was not the only sport in which the Blue and White were successful. The first post-war Intercollegiate Golf Tournament was held on Rosedale and Royal York courses and after two days of play, University of Toronto is in possession of both golf trophies, the McCull Cup for individual play and the Rutan Cup for team supremacy.

Gord Ball of Toronto, playing a steady game, carded a 77-114 score for 36 holes for the lowest score. Frank Pope, of McGill, posted a 79-77 for 156, Ernie Bentley, of Vic, Toronto, was third, 81-76 for a total of 157, followed by Picky Morrison of McGill with an 85-77 to 162 and Mac Gibson of Toronto with an 88-75 for 163. The first University of Montreal man to place was Remi Decory with an 89-82 score for 171.

McGill played off with Toronto in the team play for the Rutan Cup. Thirty-six holes were played and scores were taken for individual holes.

At the end of the first day's play on the Rosedale links, Toronto scored 12½ points to McGill's 5½. On the second day, at the Royal York course, Toronto again outscored the Montrealers, 7½ to 1½, taking the total score on the two day's play, 20 points to 7.

With cool breezes whipping over the greens, fine play for both days was recorded. Under the management of Tom Stee, S.P.S., the Toronto golfers showed fine form, playing steady golf for their wins.

SPORTS NOTICE

A practice of the Varsity Soccer team will be held tonight at 5 p.m.

Blues Blank Foe In Soccer Tilt

The Varsity soccer team helped to give Toronto a perfect week-end record with its 4-0 win over McMaster in Hamilton on Saturday afternoon. Varsity netted only one goal during the first half, but came back strong in the last to gain their four-goal shut-out.

Coach Jim Paton carried only eleven men to Hamilton, with no substitution in sight for any of the players. A small number of enthusiastic supporters accompanied them to cheer their team to victory. A mile past Brown's Line, postponement threatened the game, when the drive shaft of the bus broke, but the breakdown only held the team up for about forty-five minutes, time enough for some last-minute practising.

In the first half of the game, Varsity was handicapped slightly by the wind, but managed to carry the play for the first fifteen minutes. In the next five minutes of play McMaster took the offensive but were held to two or three shots on goal during their drive. Varsity regained the ball, and on a forward drive, centre half Hassanali took the ball deep into Mac territory, passed to Boyd on left outside, who crossed the ball into Mayne, who scored the opening goal.

Half-time score: Varsity 1; McMaster 0.

In the second half Varsity carried the play all the way, holding McMaster to only a few rushes, and preventing any shots on goal. A strong backfield and capable goal-keeping kept Varsity down to their three goals.

The first counter of the second half came early, when Mayne scored a direct goal after a throw-in by Eaton. Towards the end, Willie Clarkson picked up a brace of goals, the first from a corner scramble beside the Mac net, and the second on a centre-right-centre passing play set up by Max Clarkson and Spooner.

As a team, Varsity starred, but on the day's play Hassanali, Thompson and Willie Clarkson stood out. For McMaster, Davey in goal, and Stasiuk at left back shone. Mac's whole backfield played good defensive soccer throughout.

Varsity—Claude Elliot, Max Clarkson, Joe Fyfe, Erry Thompson, Noor Hassanali, Willie Clarkson, Stan Spooner, Jack Mayne, Doug Eaton, Roy Shinobu, Dave Boyd.

McMaster—Davey, Stasiuk, Checkland, Walsh, Merritt, Cox, Greer, Cross, Bonkoff, Quirk, Smith, Penner, Beveridge.

Irish Lads Lose Opener

In their initial start on Fri. night, St. Michael's College were handed a 6 to 1 defeat by Trinity's rugby team. St. Mike's threatened to turn the tables all through the game, but were foiled in successive attempts by the Trinity crew.

In the first quarter, O'Brien from Trinity smashed in to block a kick by Niero, and Trinity got the ball on St. Mike's 20. Aided greatly by Huicke's plunging, Farquharson took the ball across the line for Trinity. The convert failed.

The Irish got their first point when Rocchi blocked a Trinity kick in the third quarter and kicked the ball to the deadline.

Trinity gained its final point in the last quarter on a rouge off Farquharson's kick.

Speaking of Sport

By Mickey Michasiw

DEAR ONE-TOOTH:

On Saturday, Scratchy, Weasel and I arrive in Toronto and it is bad enough to arrive in Toronto but it is much worse to arrive in Toronto with a bank roll worn down to slugs and nubbins.

Well, it seems that while waiting around trying to dream up a way of making some fresh scratch, we invade a popular dinery which is the hangout for the guys and gals which goes to college.

No sooner are we positioned than we spot a Nifty Ned. He is a tall, dark slick who wears fancy clothes, a sammy tait, a moustache and a heart of gold which can be seen in the faces of the three Judys he is sporting.

Anyway, Nifty overhears our troubles due to our conversation which is only slightly louder than is the required customary.

Well, six minutes and twenty-three seconds later, Nifty is positioned beside us while the three lovely Judys sit stary-eyed wondering what they had done or hadn't done that he should leave them in a huff.

We don't quite get the drift but the gift seems too much the same as the racket we once used around a little known university near a little known town called London but with the green stuff in sight, we allow ourselves to be dragged to a walled establishment where we are given uniforms. I am glad to inform you that this establishment is not the usual institution to which we are accustomed and the uniforms are white as opposed to the striped variety with which our complexion goes very well.

Furthermore, he gives us a whistle and something called yard sticks which aren't a yard and aren't sticks. We decide to appoint Scratchy our spokesman because he is the longest talker this side of City Hall and also because he is big and can defend himself with or without a jack or betsy.

Our positions on the field are good and we can see most of the play when our heads happen to be turned in that particular direction and not pointed at the fair-haired doll in the third row and Weasel is disappointed no little when he finds that he must blow the horn whenever I do not feel like walking up the field after some character has carried it too far.

Things are progressing at a reasonable pace until one of these college citizens makes an uncouth remark at which I reach for my betsy but find that the uniform contains none and then I decide that I am not the type that argues especially when I see that his college training has taught him more than I care to bargain with. At this moment I turn around for help and I spot Weasel flipping coins with another citizen commonly called the timer and since the crowd is yelling and rah-rahing, I figure they want more so I hurriedly pull out my two-headed deemer and head for the sidelines where the grass is greener around and about as is the scratch situation.

It seems that the citizens of the college do not take kindly to our entertaining them rather than watching the proceedings on the field and we find ourselves surrounded by a crowd of unfriendly looking citizens and I am hypnotized and cannot make my tongue move a lick and I have lost interest in the racket as well as the mooah that goes with it so I pick 'em up and lay 'em down as fast as the terra firma will meet them.

A few hours later we are sitting in surroundings only too familiar with us so please, One-Tooth, leave us see you in police court Tuesday morning with enough scratch to bail the three of us as they are thinking of sending us to Kingston and since after last Saturday I have developed a severe case of claustrophobia which comes on whenever I am in the vicinity of such institutions. In future I shall forget all about this racket called football even though the white uniform is very becoming and I shall confine my activities to making books and ticket-hustling.

Anticipatorily yours,
DOG-FACE HASENPFEEFER

Varsity vs. McMaster

Scott kicked off in the opening quarter but a quick return gave Varsity the ball on their own 50 and on the first play Cranham plunged to McMaster's 25. Scott carried it to the 12. A fumble gave McMaster the ball, but a return fumble paved the way for a placement attempt by Scott which was wide but good for a single.

The second quarter found Varsity kicking with the wind and the hoists of Jack McReynolds plus a 20-yard Cranham-to-Jacobs pass placed the Blues in pay dirt territory but the steady McMaster line played forced them to be satisfied with three singles. Half-time score: Varsity 4, McMaster 0.

Using the wind advantage, McMaster relied on first and second down kicks and drove to within 22 yards of the Varsity goal-line. Art Jerome kicked a 28-yard placement from a difficult angle to place his team within striking distance.

Then the combination of Cranham and Scott took over which resulted in the first major, which Scott also converted. The score at the end of three-quarters was Varsity 10, McMaster 3.

Fumbles and blocked kicks took over for the next few moments as the Varsity line came through to block three kicks. Toogood intercepted a pass on the centre stripe and Bark plunged to the 38. Toogood went around the left end for 19 more, on the next play, Jacobs went over but the play was called back. The Varsity kick was fumbled back of the goal line and Rod Smith pounced on it together with half his line-mates. The convert was wide. Again the Blues drove down the field and again Scott attempted a placement; this one was good.

In the dying moments of the game McMaster came to life with Gurney heaving passes. Jerome attempted a field goal from the 35 and was wide, but the visitors were given the ball on the Varsity 10. Traut took it to the one inch line on two plunges before Maxwell ran it over. Jerome converted to make the final score 18-9.

STICKS-IN-THE-MUD:

Tired, wet, bedraggled, a contestant in the women's golf tournament sagged into our quarters late Thursday afternoon. After removing a pair of mud-and-water saturated shoes, she commenced to report. The condition of St. Andrew's Golf Course could be described in a word of one syllable: "mud." A cold drizzle, manufactured especially for the discomfort of golfers, fell sporadically. Nonetheless, there was an encouraging number of players who battled their way around the eighteen holes.

Three competitors tied for low gross score. . . Phyllis Waters of Vic, Louise Lloyd of Meds, and Shirley McIsaac of U.C. May we echo the sentiments of Betty MacMillan, golf representative of U.C., and organizer of the tournament, who says: "Orchids to all who turned out under such trying conditions."

THE MOUNTAIN TO MOHAMMED:

This year freshmen who have chosen bowling as their P.T. elective will not have to spend long hours searching for their bowling representative in order to put their $1.50 on the line for a bowling card. Judy Henderson, the worrier-in-chief for the bowling club, has arranged to have given people at a given place at a given hour for the convenience of said freshmen. On Monday, from 4.00 to 5.15, Judy will sell cards in Room 203 of Mulock House, Whitney Hall. On Wednesday and Friday, from 11.45 to 12.15, freshmen from all colleges can contact card salesmen at Lillian Massey. Again, we remind our readers of the advantages of punctuality, and the dangers of procrastination. Only a limited number of cards are on the bargain counter.

Indians Edge Mustangs In London Exhibition

University of Western Ontario Mustangs served notice on the Eastern Canadian football teams that they will be heard of in no small way make playoff time. Last Saturday the Mustangs were edged out by the more experienced Toronto Indians by a 13-9 count in an exhibition game played at London.

The margin of victory was provided by the aging Annis Stukus who accounted for eight of his team's points through two placements and two singles. Western came through with a dazzling passing display in the closing quarter which terminated with Bob Krol's touchdown which was converted. The other Western score was Bob McFarlane's placement late in the opening half.

Indians found the Western line surprisingly tough and it was in the third quarter that they first crossed the line for a major as Don Crowe crossed from the one yard line. Stukus converted. His placement came in the second and final quarters.

Double Trouble

By Ross McLean

"Twins Pose Problem For McLean", the caption above the picture and story declared. The McLean in question was Jackie McLean who coaches one of the O.R.F.U. teams and whose grid line-up includes a pair of twins. Coach McLean, as the story explained quite thoroughly, did have a problem which was of no interest to us or, we suppose, to you.

But it occurred, in good time, to us that the University of Toronto might have among its registrants a pair (a set?) of twins. And, of course, it has.

We spoke to them Thursday, as a matter of plain fact, in the Anatomy Building which seemed mysteriously appropriate as a setting for the interview. The twins had just emerged from a psychology lecture and were headed dinner-ward.

They were Birdie and Betty Tate, wearing identical sweaters, skirts, tweed coats, red hair ribbons, silver locket, black leather zipper note books and looking altogether quite alike.

Birdie and Betty are 21 and which of the two is the older has never been divulged since, although as they point out it doesn't matter much now, in their younger days it would have been used as a dividing line. If Birdie, for instance, were 20 minutes older than Betty and word had gotten around to that effect then friends and relatives would have looked to Birdie to set the young Betty an example. It would have been an unfortunate situation. Although, as they point out, it really doesn't matter much now, they still aren't talking.

The girls are distinguished only by their personalities, they claim. In lieu of their personalities, we—as a new acquaintance and one, therefore, not too familiar with their personalities—concentrated on a silver bracelet which Betty was wearing and which Birdie wasn't, in order to call Betty, Betty and Birdie, Betty, or rather, I'm sorry, Birdie.

Also we made them stand still which did facilitate things.

The girls are from North Toronto and have been on the campus in duplicate for two years now. They are registered in the same course (Pass Arts) and in the same subjects and get much the same marks. They attend lectures, together, eat together, have the same friends and separate only for special social occasions or to study.

They also work together in the summertime. Last year they worked at Eaton's office which doubtless interfered with the office's smooth routine for a while.

In the pass course their professors do not get to know them well enough to be bewildered. Their friends usually get to know one of them and then meet the other one, remembering her as the selections from the work of E. J. Pratt and A. J. M. Smith, both of whom generally impress me less forcefully than they do, many of our critics are particularly fortunate. But where is the new and striking imagery, the immediacy, the anger of the younger men and women?

Perhaps the saddest and most tragic comment on our civilization is contained in A. M. Klein's poem, Upon The Heavenly Scarp.

"The Lord looked down and saw the Cattle-cars. . ."

"Unto him came the odour Hunger made,

And the odour of blood before it is quite dry."

and, worst of all,

"Scholars he saw, sniffing their bottled wars,

And doctors who had geniuses unmanned."

I recommend Canadian Accent to the student who has begun to believe that Canadian writers have nothing to say; and do not even know how to say it. You won't find much reason to change your opinion in the newspapers, or the Star Weekly, or MacLeans. But you can find something here. You can go on to the younger poets and novelists. And in that way you can discover what Canadian literature has already achieved and is becoming.

strated in the first half of the program what his chorus can do by sounding like a chorus, Mr. Jaroff, in the second half of the program, showed what they could do by sounding like an orchestra.

MILTON WILSON

Eaton Auditorium

Two meteorites presented their respective talents at Eaton Auditorium on Friday evening. One, if brought within the proper sphere of influence could create a conflagration. The other has veered from the original path and is wandering harmlessly toward oblivion. I speak of Pearl Palmason, violinist, and Carl Horthy, tenor, respectively.

Miss Palmason's charmingly awkward entrance was forgotten when she lost herself and entranced the audience with her presentation of La Folia by Corelli-Kreisler. Her technique was particularly masterful in bringing out of the three distance themes of the passage marked allegro. Runs were effortless in Saint-Saen's Introduction and Rondo Capriccioso, Op. 28, and her obligato to Strauss's Morgen was pleasing. But in her encore Romance by Rachmaninoff she brought out with deep viola tones the fullest meanings of the beautiful melodies. The superb interpretation made this her finest piece. She is not yet too old to make her powers felt by the public.

Mr. Horthy on the other hand has passed the age of promise. He is not a poor singer, but neither is he, nor can he be a great one. His composed melancholy manner and his powers of voice-control are indicative of years of experience. Incorrect placement in the upper notes of Donaudy's Vaghissima Smbianza imparted a harsh rasping quality to his voice. The German songs, of all the language groups, were most flattering since this language utilized the throatiness. But Carl Horthy is one who "struts and frets his part upon the stage and then is heard no more."

U. of M. Men Still Scarce

There is a definite shortage of men at the University of Manchester this year. In spite of the end of the war, men are still liable for military service and there is great difficulty connected with the release of members of the staff.

However, there has been some lifting of red tape. Deferment has been extended so that Arts students with high qualifications are permitted to attend and not just science students. But in spite of this, women remain a predominant bloc.

An innovation is that there are two hundred Canadian and American servicemen and women taking a three-months course in the courses in which they were enrolled before the war.

INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT OIL

HOW OIL WAS BORN

... MILLIONS* OF YEARS AGO ...

Illustrated above is the birthplace of oil. Drawn from a model built by modern scientists, our picture shows the marine life that existed on the floors of ancient seas which covered large parts of our continents and more than half of Canada—300 million years before man came upon the earth.

A miracle took place

As generation after generation of these strange-looking plants and fish and underwater animals died, they settled down into the mud of the ocean bottom. And all the time, great prehistoric rivers were sweeping seaward the remains of animals and plants that lived in the forests. Along with millions of tons of silt, these too were deposited on the sea floor.

As the ages rolled by, a miracle took place. Buried under the salt water, the mud and silt turned to limestone and shale . . . the fatty parts of the plant and animal matter underwent a chemical change and became oil.

The earth's crust shifted

Then came a time of great upheaval, when the submerged lands thrust upwards, pushing back the shallow, inland seas. The old sea floors, with their layers of rock and oil, were cast up high and dry to form parts of today's continents.

Some of the oil seeped to the new earth's surface, to form asphalt pits such as are found in Trinidad and California. But most of it was buried thousands of feet below ground level. There, mixed with salt water and gas, it soaked into sandy pockets and pools where it was trapped and walled in by masses of hard rock through which the oil could not seep.

Hundreds of useful servants

Today these underground stores of oil, found in many parts of the world including Canada, are of great service to mankind. Not only do they provide the gasoline and oil to drive and lubricate our motor cars; they are also the source of essential petroleum products that serve the factory worker, the painter, the printer, the doctor, the railroadman, the roadmaker, the housewife and the farmer.

It may surprise you to know, for example, that Imperial Oil Limited makes several hundred individual petroleum necessities for Canadians, in its refineries in British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia and Northwest Territories.

* According to geologists, some of today's oil-bearing earth strata were formed in the "Ordovician Age" which began 300 million years ago.

CAMPUS CLOTHING COLLECTION

Campus Clothing Crusade Yields Variegated Gear

By Reg Herman

Six comely co-eds stormed the fraternity houses on St. George last night determined with the single-mindedness of crusaders to drag out every last stitch of old clothing.

Although some of the fraternities were sadly uninformed and unprepared, most fell victim to the winsome smiles of the cute canvassers and brought up wondrous assortments finally identified as clothes. In one house the cry "What about a dirty old yellow and blue sweater?" sent a sophomore Schoolman huddling into a corner clutching his precious garment.

Old army shirts seemed to predominate in the accumulation, and the girls received two pairs of army boots, most of C.O.T.C. vintage. The Clothing Committee is trying to decide whether or not to inform the C.O.T.C. until after the drive is completed. Meanwhile, many more no-longer needed uniforms are cluttering up closets. If you're saving the uniform to show your grandchildren, try showing them pictures instead—it doesn't work for the people in Europe.

Besides uniforms the girls filled two cars with a load that varied from a slightly too-tight pair of ski-pants to a couple of slightly worn fedoras. A pair of U. of T. gym shorts will gladden the heart of some refugee, and a bunch of colorful ties may help the Sunday dress of a gay Parisian.

Victoria Debating Parliament Does Not Welcome Atomic Bomb

The resolution of the government, "That this house welcomes the use of the atomic bomb" was defeated by a narrow margin at the first meeting of the term of the Victoria College Debating Parliament, held in Victoria College last night.

Speaking in defense of the resolution Prime Minister Stephan Skykolt contended that because of the aura of irrational fanaticism thrown around the question of the atomic bomb in the press, dispassionate appraisal of its merits is impossible. The atomic bomb, he continued, has eliminated the growth of nationalism and although by the summer of 1945 victory for the Allies was assured, yet the use of the bomb considerably hastened that victory and saved countless lives in so doing.

In conclusion he stated that the effects of the bomb were not entirely due to its destructive power but also to the fear which it inspired in the enemy and to the fact that it hastened the entrance of Russia into the war against Japan.

Leader of the opposition Dorothy Clarke asserted that in the wholesale slaughter of innocent civilian population who had actually little to say in their own government were more at fault than the Germans whom we censured for initiating the custom of indiscriminate bombing. She contended that some means less destructive of human life could be found for inspiring fear in the Japanese; and suggested that they could have been given safe conduct to witness the trials of the weapon in New Mexico.

Betty Harris, second speaker for the government pointed out the fact that there were no secrets about atomic energy which could not be discovered

However, the cascade of clothing, welcome as it was, represented only a small percentage of the fraternity house. Pleading unpreparedness several issued invitations to return later in the week, Thursday finally being chosen. One fraternity even offered to throw a party in honor of the girls, slyly suggesting that business and pleasure can be mixed.

Thursday is thus being declared C-Day, the clothing date for the St. George fraternities to donate to the drive, and incidentally, their last chance to complete their list of phone numbers.

Attention Bandsmen!

All students who have left their name at the Students' Administrative Council office, Hart House, as wishing to join the University of Toronto Blue and White Band, will meet to-night at 5 p.m., at the Drill Hall of U. of T. C.O.T.C., 119 St. George St., where band practices will be held.

Mr. W. M. Dudley will act in the capacity of band master. Time of future practices, and the time of issue of Blue and White uniforms will be announced at this meeting.

by other nations within a short period of years. The atomic bomb will do away with the necessity for a balance of power and will create harmonious international organization without the use of an international police force.

Second speaker of the opposition, Alan Brown stated the use of blockbusters was less reprehensible morally than the atomic bomb because in the former case individuals had at least some chance of survival and in the latter almost none.

In addition to discussion of the resolution at hand, the house also discussed the motion introduced by Margaret Albright, former Prime Minister that the house approve the action taken by the central committee of the S.C.M. in reference to the deportation of Japanese-Canadian citizens.

WORLD YOUTH CONFERENCE TO MEET

Student Committee Formed To Aid Japanese-Canadians

"The unjust expatriation of over ten thousand Canadians of Japanese descent is definitely the concern of the students of this university," said Don Franco, chairman of a committee formed last night to promote student interest in the deportation problem.

"The student body," he continued, "must be informed of the urgent situation created by government policy with respect to the Japanese-Canadians, in order that it may as a whole express its disapproval of the measures which have been adopted."

The executive of a larger group which met yesterday in Cartwright Hall, this committee represents over a score of undergraduate societies. Its formation meeting was addressed by Rev. James Finlay, minister of Carlton St. United Church, and Mrs. Hugh MacMillan, the chairman and secretary of the Co-operative Committee on Japanese-Canadians.

Mr. Finlay declared that the sensible policy put forth by the Prime Minister MacKenzie King is not being followed because of the outspoken objections of British Columbia M.P.'s. These objections do not represent the feelings of West Coast people, but are the result of an economic prejudice, the influence of atrocity stories, and political capitalization of war hysteria. Anti-Japanese feeling, he declared, is the expression of a general race hatred, and must not be allowed to become rampant.

Mrs. MacMillan, in outlining the activities of the Committee on Japanese-Canadians, declared that the committee had been informed in Ottawa that the government would be unable to carry out a fair policy unless the public was trained to accept the Japanese-Canadians. The necessary training of public opinion, she continued, becomes the task of the committee and of all interested bodies.

Included on the student executive are Don Franco, (the Humanist Club) Chairman; Constance Bolton (Trinity) Secretary; Cynthia Allum-Poon (S.P.S.) Treasurer; Murray Thompson (Victoria College Union); Don Dewar (Vic); Shelagh Kennedy (S.M.C.); Gordon Russon (Campus Co-operative); Jim Gribbon (Humanist Club); Roy Clark (C.C.F. Club); Jean Swan (United Church Training School); John MacDonald (S.P.S.); Vincent McNamara (Newman Club); Morley Clarke (S.C.M.); and Paul Takahashi (Dentistry).

Panorama Of University Activity Is Task Of Torontonensis In 1946

To chronicle campus events during the biggest year in the University's history is the task of the 1946 Torontonensis, today announces Ross McLean, editor of the University of Toronto yearbook.

"To provide a picture-prose panorama of life at Varsity for graduating students is our aim," Editor McLean reported. Department organization has already begun he said, with a view to accomplishing as much in this first term as possible and to have the book ready by the date of graduation.

"Torontonensis will operate this year on a rigid timetable," he stressed. Numerous setbacks postponed the distribution of the 1945 volume and forced the S.A.C. to send the majority of the books through the mail at considerable expense. The last of these were despatched only two weeks ago.

"Most pressing item is the need for all colleges, organizations, groups, teams and fraternities to make immediate arrangements with their photographers. Deadline for all such photographs has been set at January 31.

"Despite the remoteness of that date," he cautioned, "appointments must be made for photographs without delay. A shortage of photographic supplies still exists and as a result studios which handled university work in the past years have made urgent requests to that effect.

"Faculties which have thus far failed to appoint Torontonensis representatives or to arrange for graduation portraits are urged to do so immediately. A meeting of all Torontonensis representatives will be announced next week at which biography cards will be distributed.

"Meanwhile," he continued, "all groups that intend again to purchase space in the yearbook must sign space contracts in the S.A.C. office as early as possible. All space contracts must be signed before December 1 in order that the content of the book can be ascertained and a dummy drawn up. Further particulars with regard to space contracts will be contained in letters being sent to former space-purchasers.

Format of the yearbook will follow the pattern established by last year's editor, Hugh Kenner, in an endeavour to make the book more attractive and more interesting.

United Nations, Fascism Topics Of London Meeting

LONDON, ENGLAND TO BE SCENE OF

Recognizing the significant part youth must play in post-war planning, youth organizations from all over the world are sending 400 delegates representing 57 different countries and 30 million young people, to the World Youth Conference to be held in London, October 31 to November 9, of this year.

Styled as a "junior" San Francisco, the conference had its beginnings in London with the formation of a World Youth Council by young people of the oppressed countries in the blitz year of 1942.

"The conference," stated Ted Nichols, of the S.C.M., "has tremendous potentialities. Information-starved youth from the occupied countries will no doubt have a collective viewpoint very much left of centre and a maturity born of years of hardship and suffering."

"The attendance of youth from the Soviet and Baltic Republics has been assured," said Jessie Storrer, delegate from Toronto. There are to be six Soviet delegations, representing the Ukrainian and White Russian Republics, the Baltic Republics of Lithuania Latvia and Estonia, and from the Soviet Youth Anti-Fascist Committee.

Canada's contribution to this conference will be ten delegates and one advisor, Mrs. W. H. Clark, of Toronto, chairman of the Canadian Arrangements Committee. The Canadian delegation will be augmented by members of the armed forces serving overseas, two of whom will be official delegates from Veteran and Farm groups. Delegates leave from Toronto this Wednesday, boarding the Queen Mary at New York Friday.

On the basic assumption that all attendants will be anti-fascist, the conference plans to consider the following topics:

(a) The responsibility of young people and the part they have played in the War of Liberation.
(b) Causes of the war.
(c) The meaning of Fascism.
(d) The future of the United Nations.
(e) The development of Democracy.

ped, may carry a new lesson along lines like these:
To stop your angora sweater from shedding, place in a wax paper bag and leave in the refrigerator overnight.
All lessons are brief and to the point. This new education advocates the removal of all superfluous padding which the present tutorial generation delights in. With concise and strictly factual curriculum the street railway commission believes that it can contact the most students in the least time. Here is a sample lesson which carries out such policy to the utmost:
The stale odour of cigar and cigarette smoke can be removed by leaving a saucer of vinegar in the room overnight.
Notice how the copy writer has gone right to the crux of the problem. In the first half of the sentence he presents his project and in the second he provides the solution. How neat! Not a second of the commuter's time is wasted.
We can thank the T.T.C. then for their pioneering work in this field of abbreviated education. It remains only for the more formal institutions to follow the lead. To get on the right track we might say. And we, for one, are looking forward to the day when we will stroll into a lecture room equipped with chrome fixtures and fluorescent lighting, to read and digest such pointed lessons as this:
To calculate the length of the long-side of a right-angled triangle, find the square root of the sum of the square of the other two sides.

Household Economics Course Available In Mobile Classes

By Phil Shackleton

Although Varsity's household economics course has long been a leader in its particular field of study it has lately encountered a rival which threatens to cut down its registration. "The educational institution is the local tramway corporation which has filled Toronto's streets with mobile classrooms of cream and crimson hues."

The classrooms, the most well known of which are recognized by the sign they bear, Jane-Bloor and Yonge-Union Station, are presided over by uniformed attendants who collect the purple admit-to-lecture cards (four for a quarter).

Once the students are well packed into the classroom the attendants draw attention to their daily lessons which are posted among the various lithographed displays which adorn the sides of the rooms. A typical lesson runs something like this:
Berry fingers? Carrot hands? Always use lemon juice to remove such stains from your hands.

The honour system is used exclusively, the attendants leaving students entirely to their own resort while in the classroom. Hence, through individual effort, each student may get the most out of his or her exposure to the lesson. The attendant, however, is always available should the student raise questions regarding the fine points of household economics.

When the attendant believes that a student has had sufficient exposure to his lesson he gives him a transfer slip which enables him to switch to another classroom. This one, similarly equip-

Freedom Of The Press

Last Sunday night, only 15 of 250 Newman Club members voted against a resolution that the Toronto Press is abusing its freedom. Although inclined to agree with the conclusion, we were rather surprised that the majority was so overwhelming; especially since no one throughout the debate had troubled to define the right use of the Press's freedom, so as to show wherein its abuse consisted.

If you would accuse a man of abusing his can-opener, you must first of all settle, and make plain to him, how a can-opener should rightly be used. You cannot say that a thing is abused, until you have settled its right use. You cannot say that Jones's face is dirty, unless you can somewhere point to a face that is clean, or at least imagine a face that you would call clean. What is the right use of the Press?

Precisely here there arises a major controversy. The editors of the London Times would say that the job of the Press is to present facts. The editors of Time would probably say the same thing; but under further pressure they might admit that there is no harm in predigesting the facts. We doubt whether any editor would claim that the job of the Press is to do what he is in practice doing most of the time—selecting facts to bolster a set of opinions.

The quarrel between Time and The Times is in practice less important than it sounds; there is scarcely a clear-cut division between facts and predigested facts, because all of them are pre-selected facts. The teaching of arithmetic, for example, would seem to leave little room for injected opinion; but merely by teaching it one expresses the opinion that it is important. Printing all Mr. Bracken's speeches; selection; printing all the speeches of both would still offend the CCF and none of Mr. King's would be an extreme example of pre-printing every political speech of the day would offend those readers who feel that politics gets too much space as it is.

The idea that a newspaper can banish opinion from its columns is therefore groundless. By merely printing a story it expresses an opinion. And its editor, if he is responsible and conscientious, will make these inevitable decisions concerning opinion in the light of certain things which he believes to be true and right.

The publisher of the Star apparently believes that the Russian doctrine is true, and the Socialist inevitably right; the news in his paper is chosen according to that principle. The publisher of the Globe and Mail has his paper balanced and written according to the premise that Mr. Bracken and corporate finance can do no wrong. The Varsity has throughout the years sacrificed many meaty stories in the interests of unity within the University. One may dislike any of these premises; one may passionately disagree with these premises; but until a formula for an un-slanted newspaper can be devised, it is foolish to complain that editors are working according to such premises.

The whole question is one of those complex razor-edge matters of degree that have pestered critics and lawyers alike for centuries. It is difficult not to conclude, after reading some of to-day's newspapers and even some of Toronto's newspapers, that the press is abusing its freedom. But in view of the impossibility of achieving objectively in any human presentation of human affairs, it is tempting to conclude that the bias, since it is inevitable, had better be marked, and had better be in accordance with certain principles which the editor upholds as a responsible citizen. On that concomitant question of the balance between the editor's duty to his readers and his duty to his principles, we may have to say more in a future column.

The Bell Is Hung

It is the misfortune of Hollywood films that most of their heroes portray exceptions to the rule. When, therefore, John Hodiak in a fine human performance as the AMG officer in "A Bell For Adano," creates goodwill and introduces disguised Socialism into a small Italian town, his example is a rare if shining one.

In short, he takes the harder road, refuses to prefer the clean shirt of the Fascist to the clean conscience of the latter's victim.

Hardly has he set foot among the ruins of Adano, than a conflict between materialism (in the form of food) and symbolism (as represented by a church bell) descends upon him. He has to obtain both to please all his subjects, though all arguments in the world fail to justify sentimental values while a people is described as starving.

But Hollywood, always fond of symbols when the hard facts offend the box office, has here adopted the strangely Marxist solution. The hero first secures a material basis (fish) and only later founds the "spiritual values" (a new bell) upon it.

The film has its share of weakness; they concern the heroine who has come a long way from the book's "after many months, a moderately pretty girl" to become a beauty with a scant vocabulary which—though aimed at simplicity—misfires into idiocy. Her scant attire is clearly not meant to illustrate the Italian clothing shortage. In fact, Hollywood, always a failure in portraying poverty, has again romanticized it.

And why add a half-hearted balcony scene, in which the lonely major explains the blessings of American surplus Capitalism, to a fisherman's daughter?

The story, nevertheless, shows fine acting and presents a wide array of colorful, if extreme Italian types; it is clear-cut and sometimes moving and it has a meaning.

Art, Music and Drama

Amateurs Foster Canadian Drama

The last 25 years have witnessed the phenomenal development of our Dominion industrially and commercially, and as Canadians we can be proud of this progress. But culturally we are inclined to lag behind, especially in the art of the theatre. During the war, the arts of peace of necessity held a subsidiary position, but now that we are entering the period that we plan will lead to this "brave new world" we dream about, let us bring forth the arts from their shelter and fit them into our scheme for the future. Let us plan the development of a professional theatre which will be for Canadian talent.

Drama in Canada has had a remarkable growth in the amateur theatre. But now there is a growing dissatisfaction with this amateur status and more and more people are becoming conscious of the need for a professional theatre. Up to the present there is no professional theatre in Canada for Canadians. There are only a few legitimate theatres which for the most part import their talent. These perform a necessary function, but they can not answer the cry of many Canadians for an opportunity to employ their talents for the benefit of both themselves and the community without leaving the country.

As our theatres now exist, we receive both the best and the worst of the American commercial theatre, but we see more of the worst than of the best.

coming in B.C., it seems. We hope the province's majority of fair-minded people will soon give the heave-ho to the prejudice-mongers.

Extreme consternation faces the members of the Campus Clothing Committee today as they find themselves without a chairwoman. The former chairwoman, Miss Leggy Dates, missing since Saturday afternoon when she was seen stripping sweaters from members of the McMaster rugby team, has been given up for lost.

Serge O'Coat, first year exchange student from the Universities of Kharkov and Dublin, believed to be the last person to see Miss Dates, gave the following story when interviewed by The Varsity this morning:

"I had just dropped my slightly used Kleenex in the clothing box at the Stadium when Miss Dates rushed up to see if the box was full. She climbed up the side of the box and peeped over the edge."

"As she clambered up the side of the box she lost her balance and toppled, head first, into the confusion of clothing which the students had donated."

"Then, before she could cry out, two husky committee members rushed up with hammers and nailed the lid on the box. They labelled it for Albania and carried it away to a truck. And that is the last I saw of Miss Dates."

Mighty Belch-haw, right hand man to the former chairwoman, told The Varsity this morning, "We never expected to send a broad abroad."

In regard to the question of choosing a new chairman or chairwoman Stoolie Stoolberg, another committee member, said, "I can't take the job. I just gave my last suit to the clothing drive, and you know what I look like in Harvey Woods."

An auxiliary clothing drive is at present being planned for the benefit of Miss Leggy Dates who had contributed everything from her wardrobe except her bobby sox to the original drive.

Space contracts must be signed at the S.A.C. office in Hart House before December 1. Organizations again wishing to purchase space in the yearbook are advised to act promptly.

Biography cards will be distributed within the next two weeks to faculty representatives, who should all have been appointed by this time.

It is imperative that arrangements for the taking of graduation portraits and group pictures be made immediately. Supply-short photography studios can promise nothing unless early appointments are made to permit them to gauge distribution of their film and paper quota.

Staley Sparks Artsmen To Take Sr. Meds 8-0

Paced by the perennial Art Staley, the defending championship University College football team coasted to an 8-0 victory over Senior Meds in the game played on the back campus yesterday.

The long hoists of Staley nullified the best efforts of the fighting Med team but the numerous fumbles in their own zone helped the embryo physicians very little.

The defending champions drew first blood in the second quarter as the result of a rouge after one of Staley's kicks.

In the third quarter a 20 yard Staley pass placed U.C. deep in Med territory. Two plunges moved the sticks again from where Tetmar carried the ball over for the major.

Phil Rosen came through the Med line to block a kick as the U.C. line ploughed through to fall on the ball for a safety touch.

Staley, Tetmar and Maxwell starred in the winner's backfield while Rosen stood out along the line with his Medicos, Smith, Finn and Cochrane turned in a good game.

Invite Entries For Track Meet

TRACK

The entry list for the senior intramural track meet to be held at Varsity Stadium on Wednesday afternoon is still open today. All those considering entering the meet are reminded that the eligibility list at the Athletic Office in Hart House should be signed by tonight.

All medically fit students are eligible to enter regardless of year. Participating in the novice meet of last week does not bar entry in the senior event.

O'Brien Fans Support Hero

That portion of the crowd at Saturday's Varsity-McMaster game which sat in the open stands was accorded an extra-curricular treat in the form of a small powerful cheering section.

"We want O'Brien . . ."

"Yea, O'Brien . . . give us O'Brien."

That went on for a good portion of the afternoon. Finally the ears of Warren Stevens must have contacted the sounds as out the hero trotted. Some thirty-five hundred students yelled for varsity while this small section confined its cheering to their hero—O'Brien.

Then an empty vial was thrown onto the field and this section groaned in unison: "You brute, O'Brien may slip."

Speaking OF SPORT

By Mickey Michasiw

Jottings on a Frayed Cuff . . .

With intercollegiate football competition but four days away, the four respective coaches are busily brushing the cobwebs off the 1945 editions of their respective teams . . . Locally, Warren Stevens has his hands full in attempting to cut the team down to the twenty minimum allowed by the C.I.A.U. ruling. The McMaster game showed an abundance of material, most of which is in the raw, unpolished stage. The fight and the drive is there and the team exhibited great promise to become a title contender when, and only when, the tackling and the blocking improves . . . With the talented coaches behind the squad, there is little doubt but that the twenty taking on to the field at Queen's on Saturday will have all that is necessary to cop a victory. . . . Down London way, Johnny Metras has also been stumped by the twenty-player ruling. With the abundance of excellent material on his hands, Metras has found that the rule will handicap the Mustangs and create difficulties in the choice of the final squad.

In Montreal, this afternoon, the McGill Redmen will face their first test in the form of the Montreal Hornets of the Interprovincial Big Four. The game is being held in aid of the War Memorial and a better reason for a game is yet to be discovered. The students will pay a quarter a head for the combined privilege of watching the Redmen and aiding the vital University project. In this venture, the students of McGill seem to be a number of steps ahead of the other members of the Intercollegiate Big Four. . . . Doug Kerr seems to have built himself a powerful club spearheaded by a fast and clever backfield. Murray Hayes, Brian Little, Hugh Norsworthy, Jon Ballon and Doug Heron will carry the mail for the popular McGill mentor. . . . The immediate opponents at Queen's are again hard at work after blasting the blitzes out of the Vimy Signals on Saturday. Bob Elliott is relying on the starry backfield combination of Milliken and Parry to carry the Queen's banner into the football fray. . . . It appears that the local football machines which insist on making an issue of the Varsity football material passed up a good bet in Art Staley. In yesterday's intramural game, Staley hoofed the ball consistently for distances varying from fifty to sixty yards even in the face of an angle wind. To top off his performance, he recovered two fumbles and intercepted a pass. . . . Quite an afternoon's job for a chap that no football team wants.

The Sportswoman

By Polly Mutz

If Wishes Were Ducks . . .

We would take a hint from the V formation that stole the show from the game Saturday afternoon, and fly south, far, far, away from these wintry blasts and nasty head colds. But the scantily clad tennis tournament players seemed unaware of the low temperature yesterday. They all commented, losers and winners alike, that the weather was fine, the courts ditto and the competition was of the best.

The first round was run off as per schedule, with no hitches, and no rain or snow. The P.H.E. team, all six of them, were undefeated. On the other side of the ledger, U.C. players, all six of them, lost their games. The Saints have a credit of five, and one lone player from St. Mike's survived the blast.

To the query, "Who looked like a good bet for the finals?" came the reply—

Jan Rutherford of P.H.E. (match!), displayed beautiful form, and we are referring to tennis. The word around is that Jan is a former champ in the tennis courts of Eastern Ontario. The most noteworthy game was played between Natalie Faver and Janet Hughes. For two solid hours they fought it out, and the scales didn't tip in either direction. Finally the Fates smiled on Natalie and awarded the victory to her. Observers noted that many more games were just as close, and just as interesting to watch. It would take someone of the order of a teacup-reader to forecast who will be on the top to travel to McGill next week-end, but we feel safe in bragging prematurely about what an excellent showing Toronto will make in the fair city of Montreal.

Ten Men Seek Tennis Title

The mediocre tennis of a week ago has disappeared entirely from the St. Hilda's Courts, and in its place are ten men, fighting hard to gain a berth on the intercollegiate team, and to carry off the honours of the University of Toronto Tennis Tournament.

"You can forget a lot in five years", said MacCutcheon, when discussing the rules governing the choosing of the intercollegiate team with the two tennis coaches, Sydney Hermit and Bill Noyes, both former Varsity champions.

The main difficulty in interpreting the rules is whether the team can consist of five or six men. Back in 1936, six men made the trip to McGill, but the rules say that five men comprise a tennis team. This means that every man on the team must be a good single player. If this is the case then at least one of the very good doubles players at Varsity might not make the team, as he isn't in the same class as the others in singles.

As it stands now, the two finalists will be assured of a spot, the two beaten semi-finalists will play off for the third position. An elimination round will supply the other two players for the first team, which makes the trip to McGill and all the players for the second team, which goes to McMaster. Anyone who can show that he is worthy of a position on the team, may enter the elimination round, by making application to his faculty athletic rep. This also includes players from the School of Graduate studies, who were ineligible for inter-faculty competition.

The main news from the court to-day was the elimination of seeded player number three, Mort Grass, by McFarland, by scores of 8-6 and 6-4. This places McFarland in the semi-finals to play off against Roy Lau, last year's University champion. The other competitors in the semi-finals are Thomson and Feyerer. In the doubles, Lau and Irving defeated Gress and Bennett to-day, to go into the semi-final against the winner of McDonough and McTague against Feyerer and Baker.

Club To Discuss Woolf, Maugham

Papers on Virginia Woolf and Somerset Maugham are scheduled for the regular meeting of the University College Modern Letters Club at the Women's Union tonight. James Raney, II U.C., will discuss the work of the former, and Sheila Kennedy, II U.C., is to deal with Mr. Maugham's writings.

The meeting is called for 8 o'clock, and the executive is extending a special invitation to students formerly in the armed forces.

Poll Shows Neglect Of Breakfast; "Results Dire": Health Officers

Does your nervousness result in riffity in making decisions? Does your tiredness cause lack of muscular co-ordination? Is your low blood pressure responsible for your susceptibility to disease?

The above six symptoms of ill-health are not the commercial prelude to a soap opera but, according to Health Service officials, are chronic and common campus ailments.

College trends showed neglect of breakfasts to be as frequent among students as neglect of classes, sleeping in classes, or going home. The Varsity, inquiring into this phase of undergrad life, found it merited a trip to the Health Department.

Were breakfasts of little consequence before a nine o'clock lecture? Was extra sleep of greater advantage after a late night? These and more questions were posed to the Health officers by your reporter but all met with a reply negative, spelt with a capital "no".

Students are promised nervousness, tiredness headaches, lack of muscular co-ordination, susceptibility to disease, and low blood pressure as reward for neglecting breakfasts.

There recently came to the attention of the Feature Department a sad story. It concerned a law student who attended University three decades ago. He graduated and began his practice in a northern city. He became prominent as a criminal lawyer and was elected representative for his constituency at Ottawa where for ten years he shone.

His fame grew. He was offered the speaker's chair in the House of Commons. But, on advice from his physician, he declined the honor and retired to the county court bench of an Ontario city.

"You have to take it easy," his doctor had warned. "Your digestive system won't stand rugged treatment." And this was so, the doctor explained, because the distinguished law student had failed to eat breakfast while at college. He had prepared his mind for the future and had neglected his body.

The moral is clear.

U. of M. Veterans Approve Hazing

Winnipeg Oct. 15.—(CUP) Veterans in the first year Engineering at the University of Manitoba have overwhelmingly decided to accept the freshman initiations or hazings as part of their university life. This was the result of a cross-section poll of 104 first year Engineering veterans, conducted by a discharged soldier. Eighty-six percent of these students wish to enter into the full spirit of the event, while the remainder either wish modification or veto entirely.

Commenting on the recent press statement from McGill that returned men there consider initiation beneath their dignity, the returned soldier states that many students are grieved at this news, as this outlook does not reflect the opinion of these first year students. "Furthermore," it was stated by the interviewer, "the vets wish to Napoleon may have been right about an army, but the modern-minded varsity student travels on an almost empty stomach until noon. In a poll recently made on the campus, it was found that most students have coffee and toast. These are the ones that droop and fidget through morning lectures.

Another group adds an ingreting menu by passing quickly through some orange juice and cereal. These are the students who survive the before-noon lectures with almost a minimum of discomfort.

Of all the students interviewed on the topic, only two were heard to boast about their consumption of the whole menu, orange juice, milk, toast, coffee, cereal, eggs and bacon and whatever else if handy.

Among the other details discovered was the amount of valuable time consumed in this breakfast business. Again almost all the students interviewed stated that they take no more than five minutes, then rush to school.

One mentioned that he took twenty minutes for his breakfast.

It was also ascertained that the older a student is, the less he (or she) eats for breakfast; and that the female element eats far less than their male classmates.

Year Dance and in addition 93 St. George St., U.C. Men's residence. Due also to the increased enrolment Ted Clarke expressed regret that the "Lit" would not be able, this year to extend its customary hospitality to the other colleges and faculties. "This will be strictly a U.C. dance," he said, "Admit-To-Lecture cards will be insisted upon."

At intermission dancers will be allowed to view a preview of the forthcoming "U.C. Follies" which will feature the renowned "Follies" chorus. In addition to this there will be the customary Paul Jones tag dances and other popular ice-breakers.

In keeping with tradition the dance will again be "come single: go home double." Three hundred and fifty tickets will be sold to male undergraduates and three hundred and fifty to co-eds of the college. The tickets have been on sale in the U.C. Rotunda for the past few days to members of the freshmen class only and will go on sale to the members of the upper years on Wednesday at noon.

Mr. Clarke added that refreshments would be served and that the tickets were fifty cents.

New and Entrenous

Chess Watching

By Ross McLean

C. A. Crompton pouted a moment and pinched his chin meditatively. Impulsively, he nudged a white knight around a corner and moved on to his next opponent.

Sufficiently historic to warrant of the presence of the press, this was the exhibition. Mr. Crompton, the star of the intriguing chess drama, had pitted his talents against those of 19 contestants. Mr. Crompton is president of the Toronto Chess League and something of a "strong player".

As he skipped about from board to board, his 19 opponents returned to concentrate speculation about their next move.

We waved quietly across the Hart House Music Room to John Patterson-Smyth who looked up from his game and we watched and waited as Mr. Crompton shuffled from table to table.

This was the first simultaneous chess exhibition in the history of the University. Mr. Patterson-Smyth later confided. It was a popular stunt nowadays in chess circle, he explained.

Mr. Crompton and his 19 partners would continue to play until 11 o'clock, he said. But at 9:15 the games would cease and there would be a little talk.

The University of Toronto Chess Club was sponsoring the affair and it was serving as the Club's auspicious entry into the sancta of campus organizations. Membership of the University of Toronto Chess Club was at present, to be frank, three or four. But the Club had only that very day been organized and it would probably soon swell to 30 or more.

Roy Orlando was president and John Patterson-Smyth, with a "y" and no "e"—was secretary treasurer. The Club has big plans, he revealed. On the season's agenda is a student-staff tournament and a ladder tournament which is a unique plan whereby the first player takes the first place and the second player takes the second place and in the game between those two, if number two wins then number one drops. Say there are ten players; if he wins the game he moves up but if he loses or draws he stays where he was and the next...

Shorthand, come to think of it, might have been more useful than Greek.

About the simultaneous chess exhibition: Mr. Patterson-Smyth felt that Mr. Crompton would lose one or two games and maybe draw one or two. Indeed, a couple of games were already in a very draw position, he announced. The kibitzers are unusually quiet tonight, he observed. Usually, there is a lot of talking, he whispered. Mr. Patterson-Smyth has himself been playing chess since he was six. Yes, six! His father taught him. For all that experience, he dismisses himself as a "B" player. A "B" player, incidentally, is one who takes the game seriously but who doesn't have the winning knack of an "A" player. A "D" player (let's not do anything halfway!) would be a beginner. And a "C" is a person who just plays the odd game. Mr. Crompton was an "A".

A very strong player, Mr. Crompton. We spoke next to Mr. Orlando who is another "B" player (he claims) and a Schoolman. Mr. Orlando has been playing for six or seven years. He picked the game up by watching other people play it and by asking some questions. It's not very difficult, he said, but you have to study the game if you're going to excel.

Mr. Crompton was pouting and pinching his chin again.

He nudged another white knight and we said good night.

realization of this goal, like all institutions they must have money, and they are calling on individual subscribers—individual citizens like you—to purchase a $2.00 associate membership in order to obtain $20,000 to meet their initial expenses.

Whether this particular venture succeeds or not, one thing is certain. There will be a Canadian professional theatre. It may not come this year, or next, or for ten years. It may not arise here in Toronto. Already Montreal has an organization known as "L'Equipe" which plans professional ventures next year. In the west dramatic circles are stirring with plans for future development. Then there is a plan drawn up for a National Theatre. That something will arise from these movements is certain because too many now realize that Canada is losing too much through the flow of our talent to the United States to allow this drain to continue.

Appointments For Big Year Ahead T.B. Check Now For Spanish Club

Starting Oct. 29, an X-ray survey to detect tuberculosis cases among all First and final year students will again be made this fall, Dr. C. D. Gossage, Director of the University Health Service, announced yesterday. Appointments should be made immediately at the Health Service offices, 49 St. George Street.

X-ray surveys for the detection of pulmonary tuberculosis are now an annual service at all Ontario universities, Dr. Gossage said. This is the fourth year the University of Toronto has provided the service.

"In 1942, at our first survey, we found eight active T.B. cases," he recalled. "In January, 1943, we found three active cases. In October, 1943, there was none at all, and in October, 1944, there was only one. In each instance these active cases were hospitalized preventing the possibility of further cases developing on the campus as the result of these contacts."

The University group is not the only section of the public to be reached by these surveys, Dr. Gossage said. Surveys have become general throughout the province and, indeed, throughout the Dominion, and about one per cent of the population surveyed have been found to have pulmonary tuberculosis. About one-tenth of one per cent have had active lesions requiring treatment or close supervision.

"Do your part to help in the stamping out of this disease," Dr. Gossage urged freshmen and graduating students. "See that you make an appointment for your X-ray, and, having made it, be on time for it."

As the foreign language clubs of the university are renewing their activities, the Spanish Club once again is planning a program on a wide scale. In addition to such general features as music, dancing, refreshment and the homestyle "Hispanic Hit Parade", the club offers movies, plays, topical talks and such special items as last year's dancing show of Sonorita Trilna and Professor Cano's discourse on Spanish humour, which are still savoured in the memories of club patrons.

"We are trying to make this year into the biggest and most varied one in the club's history," Miss Dorothy Kescheiner, executive member, told The Varsity today.

Thirty-five posters have been displayed in most major buildings and residences on the campus. Besides announcing the first meeting for Thursday, 18, at 8.00 p.m. at the Women's Union, the purpose of this campaign has been to widen the basis of the club, according to club members.

"Students of Engineering, Medicine, Forestry, as well as other faculties and arts students not in language courses are as much invited to our program, as are students of Spanish," Alan Boyd, Treasurer, commented. "Whilst the latter naturally attend the Spanish Club to round off their own studies, science students and others will find a pleasantly entertaining contrast there."

Highlight of the first meeting will be the presentation of a one-hour movie: "Away to Argentina," by Dr. Willinsky.

Science and Culture Battle in Meds

Initiation of a two-year Pre-Meds course to precede the University of Toronto's four-year medical course has roused considerable controversy on the campus this fall. Opinions range all the way from the disgruntled Pre-Meds freshman who finds himself exposed to too much culture, too little science, to the graduating doctors who complain of having missed something in their too-technical years of straight Medicine.

"The University of Toronto has not been original in its introduction of a Pre-Meds course. In fact, the University of Toronto and Queen's are the last to establish this system which has been in existence at other universities throughout Canada for 25 or 30 years," Dr. Ryerson, Assistant Dean of the Faculty of Medicine, told The Varsity.

"The doctor," Dr. Ryerson said, "will be a better educated man. Too often doctors will look at patients scientifically, without realizing their merits and cultural attributes."

"You can't analyze personality in scientific terms."

Dr. Ryerson said that the disparity between the five years of the former Meds course and the four years of the new medical course proper is compensated for by lengthening sessions by two months each year.

Here are some campus opinions on the cultural hypodermic that is being administered to Varsity Meds-men—

Jim Ferns, I Pre-Meds: "It is rather discouraging to plan on getting right into Medicine and find yourself confronted by a two year Arts course, however I can see in the long run that it will help us in our work. The cultural subjects will aid us in dealing with different types of people. But at this point, I want Medicine. That's what I'm here for."

A. N. Rota, I Meds, who had completed first year Meds last year—equivalent to the new premeds course—felt he had lost out in the bargain. His only comment: "We wuz robbed—I ain't got no culture!"

George Callahan II Pre-meds, who has just returned from serving in the Navy, is in favor of this system. "I think it is a good idea—however I feel that it should be shortened to a one year course. That would be long enough to become acquainted with the humanities, yet not long enough to get bored—and I would be in first Meds."

Bill (Mouse) Fielding, VI Meds. "Our year has not been involved in this mix-up and we alone have avoided slipping into that morass. Although it is rather disturbing to know the boys behind us are in fourth year. Actually it is a good idea—though the scientifically-minded boys are going to have a tough time. Fellows who might normally have had no difficulty in first year, now may have trouble with Arts. What I can't understand is why break up the course? Why not have a straight six year course rather than split up as it is now? There's where the confusion lies!"

John Hazlett, III Meds: "A cultural two year course is an excellent plan in my opinion—but if it is to be broadening and enlightening to the doctor I feel the choice of subjects is wrong. There is neither Economics nor Law in the course yet these are the very subjects most useful in the Arts line of a doctor. Very often, doctors appear in the courtroom, yet they know little of the technicalities of law. Again, economics is an intrinsic part of a broad education, yet the boys have no opportunity in the course to take it."

Novelists Woolf & Maugham Modern Letters Club Topics

A dryly ironic writer and a quiveringly sensitive one were discussed at the first meeting of the U.C. Modern Letters Club last night. Shelagh Kennedy, II U.C., presented a paper on Somerset Maugham, and James Reaney, II U.C., gave an appreciation of Virginia Woolf.

Miss Kennedy gave a comprehensive outline of the life and works of suave, detached novelist Maugham, whose lasting influence, she said, "will tend to be stylistic rather than ideological." The value of Maugham's ideas, she said, is slight; but his style will live. "In all Maugham's works," she added, "we see the influence of the short story form, particularly as exploited by de Maupassant."

Miss Kennedy's paper was centered on Maugham's most recent novel, The Razor's Edge. She contended that the central episode of the novel was Larry Darrell's discovery of Indian mysticism as the governing philosophy of his life. The novel's random structure, she said, detracted greatly from its potential attraction.

Emphasizing the airy subtleties of her style and dwelling on the poetic aspect of her novels, Mr. Reaney traced the effect of Elizabeth literature as well as modern influences on Mrs. Woolf. He impressed upon his audience her ability to concern herself with minute psychological detail in such novels as Mrs. Dalloway, the stream-of-consciousness account of a single day. Under her sensitive touch, a routine reaction becomes an intensely personal experience for the reader.

"Virginia Woolf is to her age what the Brontës were to the last," Mr. Reaney concluded. Of her fanciful delicacy he added, "When cream-colored paper is again obtainable, there will be many reviews of Mrs. Woolf's works."

Founded last year by a group of students who sought greater scope for creative writing and the discussion of contemporary writers than English curricula allow, the Modern Letters Club is open to all interested students. Monthly meetings featuring papers by members, and at least one creative writing session annually, are featured on the club's calendar.

Feature Six Bands At All-Varsity

The annual line-up for All-Varsity dance tickets is scheduled for tomorrow noon in Hart House. The dance will be held Friday, October 26, with six dance bands in attendance.

Eight hundred double tickets will be sold between 12 noon and 2 p.m. tomorrow; and 400 more between 5 and 6.30 p.m.

"After much discussion," E. A. Wilkinson, Assistant Comptroller of Hart House, told The Varsity, "we decided against allocation of tickets to the faculties and colleges. We felt that the hours of sale would afford equal opportunity for everyone, insofar as it is possible to do so."

Last year's All-Varsity admittance ceiling has been raised to 1,250 couples. In addition to the rooms used last year, the Great Hall will be used for dancing.

Entering its eighth season this fall, the All-Varsity fall dance is the only dance on the campus calendar that is open to students from every college and faculty. It was instituted in 1938 to replace the Masquerade Ball.

European Parley Planned by I.S.S.

The first meeting of the I.S.S. was held last evening, in the Women's Union, conducted by Gordon Stulberg, retiring chairman of last year's committee. Last year's activities were reviewed and plans discussed for the coming year.

This year, the main activity of the I.S.S. will be relief for the destitute students of Europe and China. The I.S.S. will make every attempt to help them in their reconstruction. In order to understand the problems of these students, an International Student's Conference will be held in Europe this summer. It is likely that one or two representatives will be sent from U. of T.

Elections for I.S.S. executive for the coming year will be held next Tuesday evening, place to be announced later this week.

Pistol Club Plans Include Archery

The first meeting of the Revolver Club will be held at the Hart House rifle range on Oct. 24. This year the club will include archery in its activities. Dr. G. H. W. Lucas of the Pharmacology Department, an expert with all types of firearms, has been working for some time with archery, and will act as captain.

The club has already purchased four bows and several sets of arrows. Inspector William Boyd, of the Provincial Police, and one of the outstanding archers and bow makers in Canada, will act as instructor. Inspector Boyd has offered to take those interested into his own shop and teach them how to make their own bows, strings, and feather arrows.

The Revolver Club, meeting on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 7.30, is a graduate organization, but undergraduates belonging to the U. of T. Rifle Club may become members for a small fee. As usual, at Christmas time they will have their annual Turkey Shoot, which is the highlight of the year.

For those interested, additional information may be obtained from Mr. W. Burwell at Hart House.

SASK. U. ON AIR

Saskatoon, Oct. 16—(CUP)—The Radio Directorate of the University of Saskatchewan is negotiating for the presentation of a series of radio programs, President Fred L. Patterson has announced.

It is hoped to obtain radio time on Wednesday evenings, Dr. Patterson said. Last year a series, "The Voice of The Green and White", could take the air only on Saturday afternoons.

Japanese-Canadian Facts To Be Put Before Students

EDUCATION FIRST COMMITTEE JOB

"We must acquaint every student on the campus with the facts concerning the present position of the Japanese-Canadians," said Don Franco, chairman of the university branch of the Co-Operative Committee on Japanese-Canadians at the first meeting of the committee last night. The committee was chosen from representatives of various campus organizations at a mass meeting Mon. afternoon.

"Our primary task," continued the chairman, "is to get the facts before the students as quickly as possible, because the government has already asked for shipping space to transport these people. Once the student body is in possession of the facts, we feel sure that we will have their whole-hearted support."

The committee plans to distribute pamphlets describing the history of the Japanese-Canadians. Members will endeavour to contact all student organizations, but in case of incomplete coverage the literature may be obtained from the S.C.M. office in Hart House.

After its educational campaign, petitions will be circulated among individuals as well as student societies. The petitions, which will be sent to the government, will request the rehabilitation of dislocated Japanese-Canadians, removal of restrictions on property ownership, compensation for any financial loss resulting from internment, and a new opportunity to decide whether or not they wish to go to Japan.

Don Dewar, acting as spokesman for the committee, told The Varsity that "the student body is largely unaware of the fact that considerable coercion was brought to bear upon these people to induce them to agree to go to Japan. They were told that if they did not agree to go to either Eastern Canada or Japan it would be interpreted as an unfriendly act. If they agreed to move east, they were forced to take any employment, in any locality that the authorities ordered and were given no guarantee of permanent residence after the war."

"On the other hand," he continued, "if they agreed to return to Japan, they were offered considerable financial assistance. They were led to believe that there was no future for them in Canada."

"While the present issue involves the future of more than 10,000 Canadians against whom there is no suspicion of disloyalty, the whole future of democracy is involved," Mr. Dewar continued, "When you discriminate against one group of citizens and undermine their security, you automatically undermine the security of the nation as a whole."

"Oust Argentina From U.N.O."

Montreal, Oct. 16—(CUP)—McGill University students voiced their protest of the Argentine government's action against revolting students of La Plata University in a special meeting here Monday. The meeting of the McGill Students' Society was called as a result of a petition signed by 800 students.

A set of resolutions was drawn up which stated that the government of Argentina had violated the principles of the Atlantic Charter, the Act of Chapultepec, and the conditions by which they were admitted to membership in the United Nations. McGill students called upon the Argentine government to restore the rights of academic freedom of speech, of assembly, and of the press.

A resolution was sent to the Canadian government demanding dismissal of the Argentine from the United Nations and the cutting off of diplomatic relations with that country.

All other Canadian universities were urged to take similar action.

Better Citizens Object of I.S.C.

Opening meeting of the International Students' Club, in the form of the annual tea, will be held in the Women's Union tomorrow afternoon, Oct. 18, at four o'clock. An executive for the current season is to be elected and new members will be enrolled.

"Our purpose is to establish a congenial atmosphere for foreign and visiting students and to permit an exchange of ideas and cultures leading to a better mutual understanding," Lloyd G. Singer of the club executive told The Varsity. "The club welcomes all foreign students on the campus as well as Canadian students who may be interested in becoming better citizens of the world."

Program for the ensuing year includes discussions by members and special guests, dinners, musicales, and general social gatherings.

U. of T. Organist Completes Opera

Dr. Healey Willan, Professor of Music and organist to the university, has recently completed the score of a three-act opera, Dierdre of the Sorrows. The opera, centered about the Celtic legend of The Knights of the Red Branch, was commissioned by the C.B. Cand based on the text of John Coulter with whom Dr. Willan collaborated for the production of Transit Through Fire, which was performed in Convocation Hall three years ago.

The work started in September, 1943, was completed by May this year. The scoring was done during the summer and was finished only last month. Tentative date for the radio premiere has been set for next April.

At present, Dr. Willan is at work on a musical pageant, Brebeuf and his Brethren, based on the poem of Professor E. J. Pratt of Victoria College. The work will probably be presented at the Midland Shrine in early 1947.

The St. Mary Magdalene choir, of which Dr. Willan is director, made a two-concert performance in the Town Hall in New York last September, and received an invitation to return on a tour next year. The choir will make an appearance in Hart House on December 2nd.

Scientists Unite

The past war has proved, if proof be needed, the necessity of a union of all men in the common cause of insuring lasting peace. This has been seen in the co-operation of scientists from many countries and Universities during the war years which resulted in the development of radar and atomic energy. Today, they must unite in harnessing their new-found powers to make them a lasting benefit to human society rather than the agents of its destruction.

Behind the problem lies the age-old bickering of the sciences. Medical, physical and social sciences can no longer work behind their separate bastions walled against one another by mutual contempt. All must try to recognize the human factor with which, in the last analysis, all science is concerned.

To this end, the Canadian Association of Scientific Workers was recently founded, a body with the aim of uniting all scientists, irrespective of race, creed, religion, or thought. The organization of all scientific workers for the advancement of science as an agent in human welfare is a primary aim, with the promotion of the economic interests of those workers as a necessary corollary. The linking of these two objectives can neither be avoided nor denied, for without good working conditions, sufficient money for research, and social security, the scientist cannot be expected to give his complete genius to completing the task he has set himself.

Originally organized in Ottawa, the C.A.Sc.W. has spread until there are now branches in Montreal, Kingston, Toronto, London, Guelph, Winnipeg, Edmonton and Vancouver.

In Toronto, a student branch is being formed on this campus where there are so many potential scientific workers. The ranks of the body have been swelled by graduates from universities across Canada, but it is only fair that undergraduates should have an opportunity to find out the inner workings and future aims of an association which might mean much to them in later life.

One of the privileges of University is this chance to expose oneself to the elements of the various political, philosophical, literary, engineering, medical and religious clubs while at this job—or pastime—of learning, and before the girl or boy of the campus becomes the man or woman of the world. Too often have people been plunged suddenly into the world of work and politics before they are ready to face its problems, and more important, before they can find a means of combating those evils and protecting themselves.

An essential part of the education to be gained on a university campus is to be found in the various clubs and organizations, all within the comparatively small bounds of the campus. In addition to the tolerance which should come with discussions with students from other groups, comes the chance for an inquiring mind to seek and sift out the basic problems of the world in a rudimentary form. While this will not provide everyone with a foolproof shield against the shocks of the "rude world," he will at least be more ready to meet the future than with no means of preparation.

In the student branch of the C.A.Sc.W., applicants may choose from the activities of the organization the ones in which they are interested. Activities including publicity, advertising, publication of the organization's monthly tabloid, The Canadian Scientist, the dissemination of scientific education, collective bargaining activities, or the post-war planning of science, all enable the student to take part in a progress toward mass education, scientific advancement and social welfare.

In a club like this, where science students may find a means of helping forward their intended profession and perhaps protect their own future is an integral link in the chain of education.

Readers will note a radical difference between the organization outlined above and whatever may have been their earlier conception of a Scientific Association. An Association of Scientific workers thirty years ago would have spent its time exchanging technical information among its members. However socially conscious the rare biologist or astronomer may have been (the name of Huxley especially comes to mind), scientists as a group until just recently tended to be regrettably cliquish.

But with recent thinking closing up the gap between technology and philosophy, and writers during twenty years shouting loudly in the scientist's ear that he has created modern civilization and will be held responsible for it, the scientist has stirred uneasily in his sleep. The blast of the atomic bomb prodded him into an instant and awful wakefulness. The socially-conscious scientist to-day is in the position of a parent suddenly conscious of his connection with the squalling infant in his lap.

Fashions

The Dame
Relaxes

"Mayfair," official herald of such things, has made the proclamation: Fashion is relaxing at last!

And Dame Fashion, we have it from Miss Mildred Spicer, our style authority, is more herself on the campus too.

"Wartime restrictions," Miss S. notes, "are gradually becoming a phase of the past and we college gals can actually replenish our wardrobes with gay and more frivolous fall-of-45 clothes."

Notebook in hand, Miss S. has spent the past week in random research into the garb of the U. or T. Co-Ed.

"At the annual Soph-Frosh banquet," she reports, "U.C. girls literally blossomed forth in a gala color array." Our lady saw "Exotic prints, sophisticated blacks, and simple but smart blouses combined with the ever popular black crepe skirt."

"For a version of the typical 'dressy' dress that our co-ed will wear this fall and winter, let's consider the stunning little black silk crepe creation worn by Betty Dowd (U.C. II.). Plain, with the popular cap sleeves, this dress featured four frilly flounces of same material running down from waist to hem line on either side. The 'wasp' waist with its V-neck has two tiny flounces from neckline to sleeves."

"A very smart version of the popular blouse and skirt twosome was worn by Barbara Milburn. The blouse, a dove grey-and-white stripe silk, complete with cap sleeves and bow, was worn with a fuchsia belt and a sleek looking black skirt. For an added touch of color Barbara wore a fuchsia band in her hair and matching gloves."

Neither belt nor band, Miss Spicer later discovered, actually was fuchsia.

Our lady was on hand at Saturday's game to witness the fashion pageant provoked by the revival of intercollegiate rugby.

"Amid a gala medley of streamers, plaid blankets and Varsity yells I saw gals sporting the latest in tweeds, full length box coats and shorties. Jolly Davis of St. Hilda's looked dashing in a navy and white, pepper and salt checked suit, wearing a cherry-colored sweater with a matching shorty coat."

"Bev Ehlén of Vic looked warm, woolly and wonderful in her black wool-suede coat, which was gathered at the waist with a wide belt of same material. Featuring the new wide

We publish a short alphabetically-arranged guide to University buildings for the handy reference use of the traveling undergraduates:

1. The Anatomy Building. This building is full of long, indirectly lighted labyrinthine corridors, the walls of which are hung with drawings and paintings of beautiful girls which have been culled from the pages of the last nine years of Esquire. Students proceeding to a M.D. are required to walk through the corridors (a total distance of 23 miles) at least twice during the Michelmas term.

2. Burwash Hall. This building is inhabited by monks who cultivate burrs and make a kind of paint out of them called 'burwash'. The walls of the Tuck Shop in Hart House are painted with burwash.

3. The Biological Building. A game goes on here all the time between the male and the female students. Pasted on the noses of the contestants are small bits of colored paper called Limbus Paper. The girls have pink pieces and the boys have blue pieces. In this game the players who are armed with hypodermics (containing hormones of a certain nature) chase each other around the rooms. When a contestant is stabbed by one of the needles, his or her piece of paper changes color and he or she retires from the game. At the end of the game, all the pieces of paper are collected and a graph is drawn.

4. Botany Building. The word botany here is a corruption of the word botty from the word bot or bot from the Gaelic botus a body worm or botteag, a maggot. As you have no doubt already guessed, the Botany Building is filled with dead horses and rotten apples. No one has ever been inside except Salvador Dali who visited it in the autumn of 1923.

5. The Chemistry Building. Entirely devoted to the production of poison gas.

Don't spit on the sidewalk.
It is said that no one has ever seen them in action but, you will agree, (Continued on page 4)

It's The French and English In Us

Art Exhibitions

The work of two artists currently showing in Toronto affords an interesting comparison in the treatment of Canadian landscape artists of different temperament, origin, and cultural tradition.

Charles John Collings, whose formal exhibition left Carroll's last Saturday—individual pieces still remaining—came to this country in 1910 and painted here the last quarter-century of a long life, concentrating on British Columbia scenery. A remarkable watercolorist, his brittle-brush technique so forced the color into and through the paper that his design often appears on the reverse side, and makes his surface colors almost impervious to washing out.

Working in close association with Frank Brangwyn, he produced similar decorative patterns of dappled lights and darks with striking effect. Their high-toned color schemes frequently caused critics to rank his name with Turner's. But I felt, on looking at his handling of Canadian landscape, how unmistakably English it all was. The catalogue—quoted critics who praised his impressions of the Rockies so highly—were Englishmen and Americans. Poetic, certainly; beautiful, undoubtedly—but not quite Canadian landscape. Rather was it English scenery magnified.

For contrast, there is Henri Masson's exhibition at Eaton's College Street. Belgian-born Masson never let you forget his French heritage for a moment. But this is legitimate for a man who paints the life and landscape of Quebec, which never lets you forget its French heritage either. The geometric construction of nature in color planes, so obviously derived from Cezanne, is adapted by Masson to rendering the rough Quebec country or the ungainly plain wooden box-houses of Hull and the Gatineau villages, where the painter does so much of his work.

Masson's painting is, like Collings', brightly colorful and decorative, but only in a very few pieces does one feel that the French element predominates to the exclusion or distortion of the Canadian essences. Rocks and Trees, a close translation of Cezanne's nature studies of similar subjects, may be cited as one of these. In the main, however, the French tradition is Masson's servant rather than his master, and heightens the flavor of Gallic authenticity in these charming, swirlingly colorful renditions of landscape and human types peculiar to French Canada, in a peculiarly French-Canadian way.

ALAN GOWANS

Conservatory Concert Hall

Heard in song recital at the Toronto Conservatory of Music Hall last night, Leslie Holmes, baritone, gave a finished performance with regard to technique and diction. Much of his programme seemed to have been chosen for the express purpose of displaying these talents at their best. But the soloist's limitations of range and tone depths left much to be desired.

McFarland Star

McFarland of U.C. scored the big upset of the Intramural Tennis Tournament yesterday by downing Roy Lau of Trinity, last year's champion, in three sets. He showed an excellent backhand to top off an all-round fine performance, winning 6-1, 2-6, 6-3.

McFarland has appeared out of nowhere to gain a place in the final and an almost certain position on the Intercollegiate team. He will face Joe Feyerer of Meds in the best three out of five set affair today at one o'clock. Feyerer disposed of the pesky Murray Thomson of Vic in the other semifinal yesterday. He had plenty of trouble however, losing the first set 6-2 and dropping behind 3-1 in the second, but some sound net play pulled him out of the hole and he went on to win 6-4, 6-3.

The doubles final will also take place today, probably around three o'clock, as Jos Feyerer has reached the last round in this department as well. He and Baker polished off McDonough and McTague of St. Mikes in two straight sets, 6-2 8-6, and thus qualify to meet Lau and Bell-Irving for the honors.

The weather has that "fair and warmer" billing set out for today's matches, so conditions should be ideal. Both finals will be at the St. Hilda's courts, with plenty of space for spectators to enjoy these finishing touches.

Prospects Good For Lacrosse

Bigger and better things are expected in the Intramural Lacrosse League this semester, as interest in the sport has visibly increased on the campus. Strong teams loom up in several faculties, and potential players are already working out in the gym in preparation for the tough season ahead.

School have entered a team in each of the four groups, Meds are the only other faculty to exhibit more than one team so far, with a possible third team, Junior Meds, still in the offing. Vic and Forestry are considering a second entry, with no definite decision made as yet.

Group I will have three powerful teams—Meds I, Sr. S.P.S. and a new P.H.E. entry which promises to give a good account of itself.

Group II will comprise Jr. S.P.S., U.C. and Meds II. These two groups have been definitely settled.

Group III is tentatively made up of Forestry, S.P.S. III and Dents, with the possibility that Dents will drop back to Group IV if a new team is admitted to the League. Group IV has S.P.S. IV, Trinity and St. Mikes for sure, with room for Dents if necessary.

The first game is scheduled for next Monday in the big gym.

Something New Added

While strolling aimlessly through Hart House the other afternoon, with nothing in particular in mind and just naturally looking for a means of killing a couple of lonely hours, curiosity was aroused by a throaty roar from environs of the very back campus. On glancing out a westerly window, the sterling spectacle of two rugged rugby teams engaged in competitive combat met the eye. But the crowd! Both sidelines were filled to overflowing with mobs of ardent football fans. The shouting and the din echoed and re-echoed about the surrounding structures—in short, here must be a rugby game.

Up popped visions of an Argonaut-Indian exhibition game, or at least some name team and our Varsity Blues in action in a practice scrimmage. Hurriedly we left the hallowed halls and, scampering across the nearby turf, elbowed through the crowd to a vantage point on the sidelines. Didn't those sweaters look familiar? They weren't Varsity—or Indians, or Argos, or Beaches, or... But the faces looked familiar too. What a disappointment! It was just an Intramural "after-school" game.

But where did the crowd come from? And why all the shouting, and even cheerleaders? Could this be inter-faculty rugby? Why the last game of that kind of rugby we watched, we watched alone—or practically. There was one of the team managers there, a waterboy complete with sponge, bottle and pail, the referee, the umpire, the linesman (but they got paid for it), and a coy coed leaning on the wire fence to adjust a hurtful harauche.

There were the facts, staring us right in the face—a crowd at an Intramural. Was there really this much interest in this secondary system of Athletics? But people always said... "best on the continent"... mebbe so... f

The League Thus Far

No team has showed any real co-ordination in their play to date. The potential is there, but not the kinetic. It's still early in the season as yet—only six teams have shown themselves—so judgment will be reserved till a ladder of comparison can be established. As individual, Art Staley and Dave Bauer have looked good. Staley boots a long, high ball that will be hard to beat in inter-faculty this year. He uses his head when he's out there too, and his drive and size make him tough to bring down without that extra couple of yards.

Dave Bauer seems to be the spark plug of the Irish squad. He's another heady ball player, more by instinct than anything else, and if St. Mikes can get their light team to operate to satisfaction it might go places this time. Last year's outfit was disappointingly inept with a complicated formation which kept them more baffled than their opponents. This year—well, give them a few games to get going.

He Who Laughs

It is not a safe policy to enjoy another's misfortune, as events more often than not prove that the last laugh is the loudest. But when the unfortunate personage turns the tables around and loudly guffaws at himself, then news is made. The scene is placed at St. Hilda's courts amid the deadly earnest atmosphere evoked by tennis finals. Two of the cream of the tennis crop were exhibiting excellent prowess, placing their shots with breathtaking accuracy, when one of them sat down suddenly in the middle of the court. Spectators' smirks were turned into hilarity when the following poem issued from the victim's mouth. We quote, with apologies to Joyce Kilmer... "I think that I shall never see Such slippery branch as off a tree Did fall and catch unwary step Of tennis' champ about to be."

On Other Courts

More tennis finalists with an eye on the intramural title rather than poetry scanning, carried on with the tournament in a dignified manner. Jan Rutherford emerged from her match looking serene and comparatively unruffled after defeating her opponent with a score of 6-4, 6-2. Two more competitors who looked promising from the sidelines were Harriet Morton, of St. Hilda's, and Molly Beley, of P.H.E. P.H.E., St. Hilda's, and Vic, are the three teams still in the running. The St. Mike's player has yet to play off the second game.

Puffing Lilliput Engines Displayed In Mech. Bldg.

A group of wonder-struck children stand around watching little engines puff busily. The owner, proudly and anxiously, lest grubby hands touch them, stands by. Such is the story of every model-maker's masterpiece and the work of the late Major Rupert MacKeen of Huntsville is no exception. However, his models are of more interest to university students than most others, as some of the best of them are now on display in the Mechanical Building just outside Professor Alcutt's office.

From boyhood, Major MacKeen built models of steam engines and dynamos. His interest in machinery led him to take two years of the Electrical Engineering course at McGill although he was unable to finish the course. He taught himself the use of the lathe and other necessary tools, and in 1926 he completed the locomotive which is on display in the case.

This model is an example of the problems that faced him in his work—the and the plans, which came from England unsatisfactory and had to make his own drawings. In later models he changed both the plans and the castings and the resulting models were his own product in both design and construction. After his retirement and before his death in 1942 most of his models were made.

His models are masterpieces of workmanship and yet, his sister, Miss Amy MacKeen, tells us, "He was never satisfied". The models on display are not only perfect replicas, but they will also run under steam. Indeed he had both compressed air and a little steam plant to run them. Among those on display are several horizontal engines, a steam pump, a vertical and two compound.

Presented to the University after Major MacKeen's death, the models were placed on display in their present site, the Mechanical Library. Prof. Alcutt told The Varsity that he hoped a compressor could be connected to them some day, so they could be run under their own power.

Varsity tracksters line up at 1.30 this afternoon for the starting gun of the Senior Interfaculty Track Meet at the stadium. From the winners of this meet will be chosen the team to represent Varsity in the first Intercollegiate track and field competition in five years.

Fordyce, Goering, Kerr, Jackes, Shaw, Thornton, and Dales of School, Desne, Sabiston, Phalen, Denis, Parkin, and Doll of P.H.E., Fielding, Antoni and James of Meds, and Taylor of U.C. were a few of the stars that Hec Phillips, Varsity's track and field coach, expects to show up well in their respective events.

Juniors, especially those who placed in the meet last week, are eligible to-day, and will battle in stiffer competition this time.

A Varsity cross-country team will also be chosen from the winners in the three mile event. To avoid delay all contestants are requested to consult the time table in the Athletic Office and be ready half an hour before their events are scheduled.

New and Entrenous

Alas, Poor Chopin

By Ross McLean

The letter, strictly speaking, is gone of our business. But, you may agree, there are moments when one has no wish to speak strictly.

Written on the back of three sheets of Cloverhill Island Home stationery and comprising "six hundred words of polemical invective" which the author doubts that The Varsity pages can accommodate, the letter is from "Oscar" Halina, an electrical engineer of some articulateness.

"In the numeration of gripes," he writes, "this must mount high up into the ranks of infinity. And yet, if it be only an unintelligible choked cry of outraged decency, I must make it or put forth into the wilderness and be lost."

His subject is one Frederic Francois Chopin who was born near Warsaw in 1810 and who died a consumptive, in 1849. This is the man, Mr. Halina points out, who in Paris in 1831 completed a Polonaise which "somehow stands toweringly apart from the mere grace of the rest of his piano compositions. The flame, the spiralling emotion, the possessing drive the claim to immortality of Chopin is somehow distilled and crystallized in it. Into it went the national exultancy, the cavalading measure, the inspiring earth and the aspirations of a national spirit.

"Naturally," Mr. Halina realizes, "the only possible complete expression for the content of the Polonaise is the composition itself."

Mr. Halina triple-spaces his type-writer and continues:

"But Eureka! immortals notwithstanding, a certain whatsinname, in 1945, touched by the divinity of the gods, descended condescendingly upon this earthly clay to interpret in words for speechless humanity what one Chopin in presumably left (uninterpreted)."

"This super genius," Mr. Halina writes with a shade of sarcasm, "found the lost words at last!"

"Till the end of time, I'll go right on loving you... cling to you..."

"And we who have listened to the music and thereafter vainly wrestled for words, need suffer no longer for the ethereal lips have spoken. How unutterably wonderful.

"I ask in tears," Mr. Halina asks in tears, "could this dear bard not have found an equally sick-swooning love-wilted drummer boy from Tin Pan Alley to beat out a ya-ta-ta-unpah-dumpah chime to his verse and left the temple unmocked?"

"Have even such simple souls as this not the creeping thing's God-fearing decency to humble themselves in the presence of greatness and pass on silently? I beg leave to enquire into the license which a bungler receives to take a masterpiece and mutilate its form, emasculate its character, efface its features, dilute its blood stream with the gangrination of sentimental drooling and force it down the throats of honest citizens who pay their taxes and revere the intrinsic goodness of the human conscience through ten million vociferous Wurliizers which deny you the right to replenish your being without consuming their output.

"I swear," Mr. Halina finishes tenderly, "that each time a nickle rolls out 'Till The End of Time,' Frederic Chopin, or at least that part of him which wrote the Polonaise, dies another bitter, tormented and mutilated death—and I with him."

shoulders, it is beautifully tailored with black braid trim."

She noticed several gorgeous plaid and check suits but, she says, one in particular caught her eye.

"It was a three-toned hounds-tooth check, navy, white and pale blue. The neckline was softly rounded and the jacket had one large button. Tiny tucks formed the pocket to the waistline, gave the jacket a semi-fitted appearance. The suit was worn with navy and blue accessories, cashmere pull-over (nice work if you can get it), over-the-shoulder bag and matching pumps."

The name escaped Miss Spicer but will the wearer please blush.

A Twist in the current trinket-jewelry craze was noted at a Fine Arts lecture at the Museum Monday morning. Tis Thornes appeared jingling many copper bangles. They were, Miss Spicer asserts, of a variety of styles, definitely different and very effective.

"But," she concludes, "the campus classic is the Tooke shirt, the college gal's stand-by, crisp and trim and the best thing to combine with that serviceable jumper."

Incidentally, the Meteorological building on Bloor Street has nothing to do with the weather—it is a honey factory as you can easily tell by the beehives which they keep in the back garden. The frosted glass dome on top of the Observatory is to prevent the birds from watching the old man.

Ex-Servicemen Members Join Student Council

NO WOMEN'S REP AS YET

Appointment of four ex-servicemen representatives to the Students' Administrative Council for the duration of the 1945-46 term of office was announced following the Council meeting yesterday afternoon in the Medical Board Room. A former member of the women's branches of the armed forces remains to be co-opted to the elected body to be selected from an arts college.

R. D. Leuty, Dentistry; Al Weir, Medicine; Dalton Stubley, Applied Science and Engineering; all with former service in the Royal Canadian Air Force, were chosen to represent the ex-service registrants in those faculties.

Paul Johnson, St. Michael's, was selected from a list of four nominees offered by the governing student bodies of the four arts colleges, Trinity, Victoria, U.C., and St. Michael's. Johnson served in the U.S. Army.

All ex-service personnel will immediately be absorbed into the Council's various standing committees.

Canada And Australia Compared In Govan Talk To Social Workers

"The social worker who can see the implications of his job in terms of the broad social problem is the one who is able to prove himself professionally," stated Professor Elizabeth Govan in her lecture on "Social work in Australia" yesterday afternoon.

Professor Govan, who is a member of the staff of the School of Social Work, dealt in her lecture with the six years which she spent in Sydney Australia, and a comparison of conditions in Australia with those in Canada.

Professor Govan pointed out the fact that in Australia there is conflict between the state and commonwealth because all powers go to the commonwealth unless specifically assigned to the state. Although the state has control of education, public health, housing and child welfare, the commonwealth has entered these fields because it holds the purse strings.

She continued that the commonwealth nevertheless has been able to bring about an amazing amount of social reform. It has started old age pensions, invalid pensions and a program for unemployment and sick relief which supplies food, medical and clothing relief.

In addition to these social services the speaker mentioned various plans on which the commonwealth is working. A housing plan calls for a rent rebate system in cases where the rent paid takes more than one fifth of the family income. This is in practice in Victoria under the Housing Commission. There is also a home purchase plan under consideration to make it economically possible for a man on the basic wage of £5 a week to buy his own house. There is in this regard an opening for social workers to be used as housing administrators.

The Australian Red Cross has developed in the field of social work. Professor Govan continued to say, and has been affiliated with the military services.

President Smith Maritime Bound

Dr. Sidney Smith, president of the University of Toronto, left early yesterday for Sackville, N.B. where he will take part in the installation of Dr. Ross Flemington, new president of Mt. Allison University.

Dr. Flemington served as headmaster of Mt. Allison School for Boys from 1930 until 1941 when he was called overseas to serve as the Assistant Principal Protestant Chaplain. He held the rank of colonel while serving in this capacity at Military Headquarters, London. He returned from overseas to succeed G. T. Truman, past president of the university. Dr. Smith is due to return to Toronto Friday afternoon.

Engineers Primp For Freshman Do

On the night of Tuesday Oct. 23, the annual freshman Reception Dance of S.P.S., will swing to the rhythm of Trump Davidson and his band in the Royal York Banquet Hall. At one dollar per couple, the 600 tickets are expected to vanish like beer.

An innovation in 1942, the Freshman Reception Dance is that moment when the frosh doff their green ties and become more 'Schoolmen' than Frosh. And the class of School 479 will have an easy time of it since the organized initiation in Varsity Stadium has been abandoned.

The results of the class election which are to be held the same day, will be announced at the dance.

Freshman Dance Is Crowded Affair

At the annual U.C. Freshman Dance last night, a capacity crowd filled the three dance floors at the Women's Union and at 73 St. George St. While more than 600 tickets were sold, through some mysterious channel the crowd swelled far beyond that figure.

Under red and white decorations the crowds swirled to the music of three orchestras. At intermission a skit of gags and music was highlighted by a new tune: "Ajax Blues."

BILLIARD HALL TO BE CONVERTED

Editor Turns From Press Duties; Urges Newmanites To Think

"A fundamental sin of this world is the failure to put one's life under the power of moral intelligence. I believe that at the heart of the overwhelming majority of the blasted hopes and blighted careers which mark this generation is the refusal to think, leaving life and the making of character to chance," stated Mr. Fraser MacDougall, Ontario Editor of the Canadian Press yesterday at the annual Newman Communion Breakfast.

The speaker said that the growth of the soul was the secret of building character. This growth of character, he said, is the thing supreme in life, and it seems that the youth of today are neglecting the inner growth of the soul necessary to character.

"Man must shake himself free from the fatalistic idea that he is solely a victim of circumstances by using his free-will to profit by Divine aids offered him from above. Gradually, by overcoming the obstacles that lie before him, man will acquire a strength of character, a firmness that will enable him to persevere in his journey towards the eternal goal."

"Character is the maker of destiny, but Christ is the maker of character," Mr. MacDougall concluded.

Pool Tables Coming Out; Lunch Counters En Route

EXCHANGE CUES FOR QUEUES

Hart House billiard room is being converted temporarily into an emergency lunch room, complete with an auxiliary Tuck Shop, in an effort to provide luncheon facilities for present overflow crowds each noon hour. This move was announced last night as a unanimous decision of the House Committee and Board of Stewards.

It is estimated that between 700 and 800 students can be provided with seats at lunch tables when the billiard tables have given way to six-foot, folding, army type tables and folding chairs. This new equipment is expected to arrive within the next 10 days from War Assets Corporation. The billiard tables will be put in storage as soon as the new Tuck Shop counters are ready for installation.

Decision to suspend billiards temporarily was made by the House Committee and Board of Stewards only after several alternative suggestions were considered. The Varsity learned, Committee members who themselves play billiards reported that the present crowded conditions of the room does not permit of satisfactory play. They were also of the opinion that all billiard players would agree that the greater number who will now be provided with a reasonable degree of comfort while having lunch warranted the temporary discontinuation of the room's original purpose.

It was estimated by the committee that approximately 10 times as many persons can be accommodated for lunch in the room as were able to crowd into it around the billiard tables.

The auxiliary Tuck Shop will provide the same type of light lunches as have been available in the Tuck Shop pro-

McGill Classes On The Move

Montreal, Oct. 16 (CUP) Since the government is taking over the Aviation building on St. Joseph boulevard east and the dental buildings at St. Hubert Street, the University of Montreal was forced to rebuild the old buildings on St. Hubert Streets. The Provincial Secretary stated that the buildings would soon be ready for classes.

The lectures which are to be moved into the old buildings were formerly held in the Aviation Building which the Provincial Ministry of Labor has taken over for the use of apprenticeship classes for soldiers and men who are victims of industrial accidents. The Dental Building is now to be occupied by the Department of Health of the Provinces.

U.C. Is Somewhat Historical; Once Booby Hatch Research Finds

The fact that University College was once a lunatic asylum and, to add insult to injury, was called the University Lunatic Asylum, will no doubt be a blow to those who point with pride to the historical traditions of their college.

In 1853, U.C. was established, replacing King's College, and it was in 1854 that the government requisitioned the old King's College buildings for the asylum. U.C. was moved to the former medical building, but accommodation was so poor that in 1855 F. W. Cumberland was appointed architect for a new building, on the present site of U.C. the style finally agreed upon was a mixture of Norman, Early English, Byzantine and Italian palazzo. To economize, sections of the plans calling for students' seats were erased.

The plot was restaked since the original staking would necessarily call for cutting down the Governor-General's favorite elm tree. The corner stone of U.C. was laid on October 8, 1856, by John Langton, and the building was completed in the autumn of 1859. At the first convocation in the new buildings the next year, the number of students graduating was eighteen, a figure comparable to the numbers in the older American universities.

In 1866, three undergraduates from U.C. lost their lives while serving with the U. of T. company of the Queen's Own Rifles in the Fenian Raids. A memorial window in honor of their sacrifice was placed in the East Hall of U.C.

James Loudon was the first graduate of U.C. to be appointed to the staff, in 1867, and he was instrumental in introducing honor classes to U.C. Loudon also established in U.C. the first physical laboratory in Canada.

Shortly after, in 1879, the first undergraduate paper on the campus, the Blue and White, was edited and published weekly by men of U.C. and it was replaced in 1880 by the weekly Varsity.

In 1884, nine women, the first co-eds, entered the Halls of U.C. which at that time was "the" university containing offices, lectures rooms and residences. Although not related to this event, six years later a fire almost completely gutted U.C. leaving only the western wing and the walls of the remainder intact. The historical U.C. bell was shattered during this fire.

From the ashes of this fire arose the "Royal College" which now stands as a memorial to those who fought for its constitutions, and to the first graduates who disregarded the sneers of the short-sighted residents of Upper Canada to give U. of T. its second oldest and most historical college. Many of Canada's great statesmen can look back happily to their undergraduate days at U.C., the most prominent of whom is our Prime Minister, the Right Honourable Mackenzie King.

Underhill Lectures To C.C.F. Club; Listeners Seek Student Government

In his address last night to the University C.C.F. Club, Professor Underhill declared that a socialist policy guaranteeing social security and reasonably high employment was the necessary solution for the problems of the new era that Canada is entering.

Reviewing the past development of the country, he described the Macdonald and Laurier policies as bold, nation-building schemes, which had made use of the great private corporations of the time, but which had left Canada with a "lop-sided" economy with the wealth concentrated in the central provinces of Ontario and Quebec.

He declared that the King and Bennett governments, faced with the changed conditions of the effects of World War I and the depression, had no such constructive policies, and that the social security measures of their administrations had been largely due to the demands of the new C.C.F. party.

Full employment during the war he saw as being a result of the wartime emergency controls of the federal government, and that these would be automatically removed by the courts as soon as they considered the war to be at an end. This situation he blamed on the limited power of the federal government as laid down in the provisions of the British North America Act.

Continuing his analysis of the part that private enterprise had played and was playing in Canadian affairs, he said that the chief problem facing Canada is not "free enterprise versus public enterprise, but free government versus private government", and that practical socialists want to socialize the huge semi-monopolistic and monopolistic enterprise such as Canada Packers which he described as a "great segment of private government."

"All the other countries in the world

"The University of Toronto must have a students' representative body that will express student opinion authoritatively," was the conclusion reached at an open meeting of the C.C.F. Club at Cartwright Hall last night.

The text of a motion passed unanimously is as follows: "It is moved that the C.C.F. Club, in co-operation with all other campus organizations, establish a comprehensive democratic Students' Legislative Body which will give students an opportunity to express officially their views on current local and world issues."

It was felt that such a body is sadly lacking on the Toronto campus, especially in view of the fact that virtually every other Canadian university has such means of expressing their opinions.

A tentative committee was formed from those present at yesterday's meeting to take preparatory steps in regard to setting up some such student body. Letters to The Varsity, voicing opinion on this subject, will be welcomed.

All student bodies interested in taking action along these lines are asked to contact Jack Granovsky at KI. 9534 as soon as possible.

"We sincerely hope that all campus groups will give their wholehearted support to the establishment of this long-needed representative body," Roy Clark, president of the C.C.F. Club, told the reporter.

are going in for socialist policies except North America" he said, and declared that European nations saw the United States headed for a depression, and that we in Canada "apparently are copying the American example."

Editorial

Backseat Lecturing

Backseat Lecturing

"I have a kick," complained the student who sought out our editorial ear yesterday. "It's a kick about the supercilious manner of some of my classmates. I don't see why they bother to come to lectures when they spend most of their time there wisecracking instead of listening to the lecturer. They could at least shut up and let other people get something out of what the professors have to say."

The gentleman with the beef went on to point out somewhat deferentially that he was only in the Pass Course, a third year student. He said he was perhaps a bit older than some of his classmates, having been in the services since 1939. But, he hastened to add, he was drawing no distinction between ex-service personnel and other students who had not been in a position to serve in the armed forces. In fact, he said, two of the episodes giving rise to his complaint centred about chaps who were able to wear servicemen's lapel badges. No, he played no favorites. He simply had a grouse about the general objectionability of backseat lecturers.

A Bisexual Complaint

The complaint should not be confined to the male of the species, either; for many's the time we've been regaled, quite involuntarily, by busily chattering feminine tongues. These, by their indefatigable energy and their breathless urgency as well as by their inevitable proximity, can far outstrip any mere lecturer. And the scientific method of Francis Bacon is no match, under such circumstances, for the world-shaking revelation that Phoebe has a ravishing new purple toenail polish to match the darling little ballet slippers her doting aunt smuggled in from New York. No, the guilt is in this instance not exclusively the property of the male.

Neither exclusively male nor female, perhaps backseat lecturing hits its all-time worst when it is bisexual; that is, when it involves a case of mutual impression-making between a wisecracking upper classman and his sweet and admiring co-ed shadow. It is at such times that the backseat lecture becomes most intolerable. But this is not the time to discuss the respective demerits of assorted backseat lecturers.

Why, we would ask our exasperated friend, must there be backseat lecturers at all? Do the offenders set out each morning with malice aforethought and a series of prepared lecture notes carefully synchronized to bear no possible relation to the university lecture schedule? Or is it practice in the irksome art of ad libbing that they seek? Perhaps they believe it will lead them into radio and fame—some do sound, you know, not unlike those early morning record men.

Inconsiderations

Seriously, though, the answer to backseat lecturing is probably to be found in the thorough-going inconsiderations of many undergraduates. They simply don't think of the other fellow. It never occurs to them that their idle chatter may be robbing a neighboring student of the meaning and value of the professor's words. An irrelevant phrase whispered to the person in front may switch another's mind completely away from the immediate train of thought, and by the time it gets back on the right track it will be lagging far behind. These things cannot be done intentionally. They must be but an outward evidence of the guilty student's failure to consider others.

Shouldn't Be Here

What's to be done about backseat lecturing? Well, there may be a clue in that phrase quoted above. Our friend said he failed to see why the persons about whom he complained should come to lectures at all. We don't see why they should, either. In fact an airtight case can be made for removing them from lectures with which they interfere. If a lecturer proves to be so unenlightening to one or two students that they find no occasion to listen to his words, then they should quietly and politely get up and leave and not bother to come back. They are in the wrong course, perhaps even the wrong university.

"They won't get away with this," snarled the President of the newly-formed Committee for Better Living Without Food, as he peered up at The Varsity under his pool-table squint. "Food instead of pool? What will happen to that beautiful, soul-stirring atmosphere, of the sweet sounds and celestial incense of the REAL Hart of this University?"

His huge frame was wracked with great sobs, pool balls dribbling down his cheeks. "Where will the Pass Arts men skip lectures? Where will the Skulemen figure their geometrical ratios? How will Medsman learn to slice into the side-pocket? Horror was deep in his limpid, doe-like eyes, sunken over pool-pocket pouches.

"But," asked The Varsity, "what about the starving crowds that fight their way into the Tuck Shop every day?"

"Good exercise," snapped the President. "Get to know people that way—broadens you socially."

Visibly shaken, The Varsity murmured, "Pardon me, I'm not myself today."

"Whoever you are, you're getting a dirty deal. Your personality is a perfect example of the degeneracy that will result if pool-room training is replaced by cheese sandwiches." Here he broke stretcher of pool cues.

Meanwhile the exuberant Committee for Food, Food and Still more Food is gleefully going ahead with more plans. As soon as minor difficulties are overcome, the pool in Hart House will be filled with chocolate milk. The squash courts will be filled with coffee. "This will improve the taste of the coffee," assured President Egg-Breath of the Committee. "Anyway, it can't make it any worse."

To help solve the problem, the Biology department has agreed to allow students to eat their specimens after dissection. They are offering one pint of formaldehyde with each protozoan. Bananas are to be swung from the

The Queue Must Go

Daer Sir,

May I make an urgent appeal through your column? It is of the endless line-up in Hart House at dinner hour that I wish to speak. At first there are eager expectant faces, but as the line grows and stretches beyond the range of human vision the expression changes to dejection and despair. A sorry sight! No doubt part of this is unavoidable due to enlarged enrolment. But some of the trouble could be avoided. How? By staggering hours. Why not have Arts stop for lunch at 12 p.m. and S.P.S. at 11 a.m. or vice versa? This would help immensely in easing congestion and would cause no clashes in time table.

I must confess I have considered competition—perhaps in the form of a hotdog stand in the grounds. But while this would satisfy nagging hunger it would destroy the beauty of the campus. Or one could sell peanuts, popcorn etc. to the waiting students in Hart House if one could get the Warden's permission. No I think not. The answer is staggered hours. Don't let the students stagger. Stagger the hours!

bell in Peace Tower, at a height of fifteen feet from the ground. Sharpened pool cues are to be used as spears to snare them. This is to avoid crowding.

As the committee expands and grows, future plans will include reconversion of Convocation Hall into a lunch counter, the library will be turned into a hot-dog stand and the Premier of Ontario has offered to hand out ice cream pies to University Extension night students who sing "Roll Out the Barrel."

However, one problem remains unsettled. No, I don't mean the pool tables—they're being folded up and put away in the Warden's best vest pocket. Poor Phil. The Committee has decided not to keep the sacred third door locked. This last bit of blasphemy has resulted in four S.P.S. students committing hari kari with pool cues.

Harris In Hart House

Lawren Harris, a selection of whose latest works is now showing in Hart House, has arrived at his present non-objective, or at least, highly abstract style, as the culmination of a long artistic career. Even when working in the decoratively impressionistic manner of the Group of Seven, Harris showed a predilection for geometrically abstract rendering of nature, favoring especially architectural and mountain motives; as time went on, his city building moved to lonelier spots and progressively lost their traces of human occupancy, while his landscapes became more and more barren and devoid of human implication, until they became the cold bare bones of nature you see on the walls of the Hart House Gallery.

The latest part of Harris's evolution can be traced in the current showing. In some of these works, a natural devaluation is fairly obvious—it does not take much imagination to discern mountains, lakes, islands, trees, glacial canyons—but in several, the process of sublimation has gone on so far that only those very well acquainted with the Harris iconography could impute to them any familiar forms of nature at all; that is they approach the realm of non-objectivity.

A remarkable feature of many of the workers shown is their startling three-dimensionalism. One is particularly—you'll recognize it when you see it—almost require a touch of the hand to convince you that it is not folded down the middle and bulging out at an angle.

A number of these abstracts, seen together in a room as here, give a convincing demonstration of the highly decorative value of art like this. A casual walk past these pictures is not really sufficient; full appreciation of abstracts, or of any kind of art, for that matter, requires that you sit for some time and take them in—just as you could hardly expect to appreciate a concert if you left after the first few bars of music. To get the full decorative effect of these pictures, they should be viewed from different angles, as they would be if hung in a room where people passed and repassed them every day. I think they are especially effective if viewed from a distance—say, the opposite wall of the gallery.

Masterfully harmonic balance of color, line and three-dimensional form, pleasing to the eye and stimulating to the imagination, characterize this exhibition, in which is embodied Harris' lifetime of study and experience in painting, and make it well worth a few minutes spent in the Art Gallery by any member of Hart House.

Richard Lambert

A promising and original young artist, Richard Lambert, is holding his first exhibition of seventeen paintings at the Arts Club, 12 Asquith Ave. His subjects are varied and experimental as are his techniques. The emotion in several works is stronger than the subject but the actual theme is still evident. In this division are his most immature paintings and also his most original ones; the latter the focal point of the exhibit. Another division might include those for which he conjured up symbols and abstract impressions to express intense emotion.

Mr. Lambert is inexperienced. That is to be expected in a first exhibition. He is however intensely sincere in emotion and desire. One cannot fail to recognize his excellent design, balance, and rhythm. He has great promise and his imaginative interpretation of Greek mythology is something new and exciting in art. —SHELAGH KENNEDY

Jackes Breaks Record As School Wins Track

Yesterday afternoon under a warm sun and clear sky, the Senior Track and Field Meet was held at Varsity Stadium. A large crowd of sport enthusiasts was on hand to view the pick of the Blue and White track and field men.

On point totals for the afternoon's events S.P.S. garnered forty-two points. Meds placed second with thirty followed by P.H.E. with twenty-five. Vic grabbed fourth spot with nineteen, U.C., next with thirteen, followed by Trinity with ten and Forestry with six.

The highlight event of the program was the high jump. Art Jackes, S.P.S., a former airman and Etobicoke High School star, stole the spotlight by clearing the bar at 5 ft. 10 1/4 in. This jump bettered the previous record mark of 5 ft. 10 in. set by R. O. Brett of Denis in 1940.

The officials at the meet were grads of U. of T., who in former days were stars on that same track and field who could not lose the urge to return with many memories of their days at college.

Jim O'Brien, ex North Toronto and Navy athlete, coped both the 100 and 220 yd. dashes in fine style and came back to grab fourth spot in the running broad jump. Joe Talyor, former St. Andrew's star duplicated his feats of the Novice Freshman meet of a week ago, by winning the one and three mile runs. Bill Deane, of P.H.E. showed a fine arm to win the shot put and place second in the javelin throw.

Hec Phillips was very pleased with his athletes and if they all stay with his training schedule, prophesies good results in the Senior Intercollegiate Meet against McGill at the end of the month.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Mickey Michasiw

From Here and There

Intercollegiate are around and about! Saturday finds the Mustangs from Western invading that fair metropolis popularly referred to as Montreal while the favorite sons of this campus take on Perry, Milliken & Company at Queen's. . . . Next Monday finds senior tennis enthusiasts wielding their trusty rackets at McGill. According to our secret correspondent Dog-Face Hasenpfeffer, the Varsity contingent will be made up of Lou McFarland, Joe Feyerer, Roy Lau, Murray Thomson, McDonough and possibly one other. It is the hopes of the local sporting fraternity that these racketeers will follow the example set by their golfing brothers a week ago. . . . Hec Phillips and his track men are hard at work for their encounter come Friday. One of his disgruntled runners was seen in the dressing room yesterday afternoon during the senior meet beating his head and loudly bemoaning the fact that the C.I.A.U. allows too few men to travel to McGill for the meet. That same complaint is quite prevalent these days as the same story has come from Western as well as McGill. Could be but that there is some truth to the statement. . . . London is certainly taking the Mustangs seriously. Arrangements have been completed for the broadcasting of all home games over the London radio station. The broadcast will provide a play-by-play report, half time interviews with well known sport figures and music by the Mustang band. Sounds like something out of Buck Rogers, 25th Century. . . . Alderman Sprague of Ottawa will now retire from the head of the class as Wilfred Kennedy McDonald, Liberal member of the House of Commons for Pary Sound is about ready to take over. Mr. McDonald announced recently that his spare time this winter will be devoted to the Hull Volants of the Quebec Senior Hockey League. Could be that Bucko is beating that old publicity drum rather loudly. . . . Hither and Yon Department: A not-too-starry quarter on a not-too-starry football team of the intramural league was discovered in a prone position on the completion of a not-too-starry play. His team anxiously gathered about him. Finally someone gathered up enough wits to inquire "Are you hurt?" From the prostrate citizen came those immortal last words: "No I'm not hurt, I'm just figuring out the next play."

Tears In Your Beers

The housing shortage has hit the campus again. This time it is the inhabitants of the famed Green Room that take it on the chin what with the closing of its famed portals. It seems a shame that the frequenters of this institution should be driven to the library or to lectures and labs or even to Karry's.

The Sportswoman

By Polly Mutz

Sportmanship, Good, and Bad.

There are several ways and means of earning the title of "sport," each worthy of some comment on our part. First, there is the real thing, the sport who indulges in athletics, whose conversation centres around golf swings, the technique of placing a tennis ball, and left-handed baseball pitchers. Second, the term is used to label the sort who can take a joke as well as play jokes on others. They can keep a party in full swing for hours at a time, are flush with brilliant ideas on entertaining the "gang." Everyone has nightmares about being called a "spoilsport," and tag along in the perpetual competition of proving himself the best sport in the crowd. When this takes place, common sense often suffers, as well as the innocent bystander. Such was the case not too many hours past, when a crowd of high-spirited students broke into a building containing many priceless volumes and scattered the documents about the room in a decidedly ungente fashion. This is to be condemned, as destructive, thoughtless, and juvenile. We do not wish to dis courage high spirits, but we are all for the intervention of thoughtfulness when irreparable damage is contemplated. A good sport is one who considers his neighbor as an individual endowed with rights, rather than as bait.

The Latest Tennis Bulletin:

Jan Rutherford defeated Molly Beley yesterday afternoon, which places her in the semi-finalist class. Rosemary Cunningham, of St. Mike's, is also a potential champ after winning her sets with Harriet Morton. This latter game was reported to be quite a battle, lasting a goodly time, and fairly even up to the last moments of the third set. Today Sally Fox, of P.H.E., and Judy Price, of St. Hilda's, will compete to decide who will play Jan Rutherford in the semi-finals. Dorothy Sanders and Natalie Faver will match their strength, the winner to play Rosemary Cunningham.

The intercollegiate match with McGill is still unsettled. The time has been postponed for at least a week, as accommodations in Montreal are a negative quantity at this time.

One, Two, Three, and Your Out

Is the cry that can be heard any evening after five, when the women's baseball teams practice on the field. Margaret Fletcher, president of the baseball club, is happy to report a well organized club, and enthusiastic practices in full swing. As baseball is a comparatively new campus activity, Margaret hopes to see the interest grow in the next few years, to rival that of basketball. The purpose of beginning the practices at such an early date, we are told, was to make it more interesting to student spectators as a sport rather than an amusement.

Tennis Singles Title Taken By McFarland

By H. G. Westcott

McFarland, the man who appeared from nowhere to defeat Roy Lau on Tuesday, has done it again. In the intramural tennis tournament finals yesterday the Saskatoon gentleman forced the better known Joe Feyerer to accept defeat, with scores of 6-4, 6-3, 4-6 and 6-2. With his fast foot-work and his baseball back-hand both acquiring difficult points for him, he was rarely on the spot, except in the third set when he seemed to be tiring. In the last frame however he recovered his energy and played a game more like his earlier effort. Feyerer seemed to find no little difficulty in finding the end tape, often losing a point by a very, very near miss.

With his win yesterday the western gentleman (no relation to Mart Kenny) clinches first position on the inter-collegiate team which entrains for Montreal next week to bat the ball about with McGill's best. The others making the journey to the Quebec metropolis are Manager Joe Feyerer, Thomson, Lau, McDonough, and either Baker or Bell-Irving.

The 'either' or the sixth slot on the team will be decided at high noon today at St. Hilda's with Feyerer and Baker battling Lau and Bell-Irving. If the former twosome win, Baker travels with the first crew but if the latter couple emerge victorious, Bell-Irving gets the nod. The loser here visits Hamilton with the second team.

This jolly McMaster bound group will have on the roster the aforementioned underdog, Manager Pawling, and probably Morrison, and Burnhardt. As has been shown in recent days at the St. Hilda's proving grounds, these tennis fiends are no mean artists at the game and will doubtless provide the Hamilton gentry with extremely stiff competition.

The tennis shoes may well be resting on the other muscled foot at McGill however. By some horrible mischance Dufort, Mackem, and Duff who all place high on the lists of tennis stars in provincial contests, elected to pursue their studies at the Montreal University.

WHEN YOU BUY A FUR COAT you usually have an eye on next season and the next. It's smart to total up the amount you'd probably spend in cloth coats over the next few years, then tally it against the price of a good fur coat this year. New and Entrenous

Wally Tells Me

By Ross McLean

It's quite a task this living up to as such a successful Star feature that it still runs—though with a different teacup-diller—Claire Wallace adjourned for a year to England where she became associated with a magazine known as Everyman. At the end of what her son (who is Wally Belfry, if you recall) describes as a lonely, bitter year, she returned to Canada and took to the ozone which is a rather cute way of reporting that she went on the air.

And when she shuns church socials to belong to the Short-Snorter Society and insists on flying across the Dominion ahead of almost anyone in her sex that you'd care to mention, well!

At first Wally Belfry was self-conscious about his parentage and would introduce himself as Wally Belfry, which is a perfectly proper thing for him to introduce himself as. The reception awarded Wally Belfry was coolish, he maintains, and the attitude melted only after it had been learned that he was, besides Wally Belfry, also the son of Claire Wallace of the CBC Happy-Gang-following-Claire-Wallace.

Then, Claire Wallace's son reports, the new acquaintance would coo and inquire in a pseudo-confidential tone: "What is Claire Wallace really like?"

What Claire Wallace is really like, incidentally, is not a thing that Wally is especially well equipped to discuss. He and his mother manage to look each other up once or twice a week, despite the fact that they live in the same home. Better the question be directed to Melville Grummett, or whatever his name is who announces the Claire Wallace program and sees the radio personality for a guaranteed 15 minutes a day, five days a week—and perhaps sometimes for 20 minutes.

To be designated not as himself but as the son of his mother would rattle any man, Wally was developing an inferiority complex when he discovered that filial pride was beginning to disintegrate the complex.

Now he introduces himself thus: "How do you do. I'm CLARE WALLACE'S SON. My name is Wally Belfry." It saves time.

How Wally came to be the son of Claire Wallace he confided to us is explained by the fact that his mother married and had a son named Wally Belfry. When Wally was five his father died and his mother, with, he says, dogged determination, snagged herself a job on The Star and graduated quickly from social-page-small-items to sob sister and columnist by working a nice fifteen-hour-day schedule.

Having established Over The Teacups

She began her radio career at CFRB for Bristol-Myers, who were then (and probably still are, for all we know) manufacturing Sal Hepatica for the smile of health, or vice versa possibly. She and her program were heard nightly at 6.15 and Tea-Time Topics became such a popular feature that the National War Finance Committee pricked up their ears (how picturesque!).

Her theme song for Tea-Time Topics was España Walts which is quite extraneous information that we happen to have. But to return to the National War Finance Committee who had just pricked up their ears: The Committee offered her a 15-minute show on every station in Canada to peddle her gossip, features and, slyly, war savings certificates. This was born "They Tell Me."

Government sponsorship of "They Tell Me" was withdrawn last fall in a great press flurry of "how-much-are-they-paying-her?" which we haven't time to go into here.

She's back on the air now—Monday through Friday at 1.45—for Robin Hood products and is also women's editor of New World which simply means, her son explains, that once a month she is four times as busy as she is any other time in the month.

About this son of hers—this Wally What's-his-name—he has just been discharged from the Navy and is now enrolled at the University of Toronto with intentions to follow his family's newspaper traditions. Two of his mother's brothers, his grandfather and his grandmother, have been mixed up in things literary. He himself has worked for the Midland Free Press, Canadian Press and now for The Varsity and Torontonensis.

And that, he declares, is the aura in which he was raised, reared, or rotting.

That seems to be all, or "30" as everybody says. Oh, yes, when Claire Wallace was in high school and had to speak a sentence, she would break into tears and run home. We thought that was interesting too.

McGill Students Donate Clothing

Montreal, Oct. 16. (CUP)—The Students' Executive Council of McGill University announced the opening of the drive to collect clothing for the stricken European countries in conjunction with the National Clothing Collection. Besides city depots there have been other collections centers established to the convenience of the students at the Union, R.C.V. and the Arts, Engineering and Medical Buildings.

"Search every clothes closet for cast-offs, which will be immeasurably appreciated in war-ravaged Europe," said Mel Shiffman, chairman of the committee. We have made a late start in supporting the National Clothing Collection Campaign. Let us see to it that our contribution is worthy of McGill. Do not delay, you have not time for procrastination. Look everywhere and you are bound to find something."

McGill Urges Protest Against Argentine Gov't.

LOCAL ACTION AWAITS DEBATE

Possibility of a protest from the student body of the University asking that Argentina be ejected from the United Nations was mooted at Wednesday's meeting of the Students' Administrative Council, it was announced yesterday.

The discussion was touched off by receipt of a telegram from the Students' Executive Council of McGill University, asking that other Canadian camps follow the McGill lead in protesting to Ottawa the "suppression of democratic rights in Argentina."

The S.A.C. passed a motion expressing accord with the objectives of the McGill protest, and sympathy with the besieged students at Argentina's La Plata University, but shelved the proposal to protest directly to Ottawa demanding suspension of diplomatic relations with Argentina and her ejection from the United Nations.

Action on this proposal awaits the outcome of a forthcoming debate on the Argentine question at Trinity College, in the course of which it is hoped that student opinion on the matter can be gauged. Time and place of the debate will be announced later.

"While the Council agreed in substance with the forthright action taken at McGill in protesting the suppression of free speech in Argentina and the killing of University students by the military police of a dictatorial government, it felt it could not commit the student body as a whole by an action of public protest until the opinion of the students can be better ascertained.

"Hence we are delaying further action until after the forthcoming debate, where the whole question will be publicly ventilated."

The action of protest at McGill followed a petition signed by 800 students. At a special meeting of the McGill Students' Society, a protest embodying four resolutions was sent to the Argentine government, to the students of that country, to the Canadian government, and to the students of other Canadian universities. Dismissal of Argentina from the United Nations and severing of diplomatic relations was demanded.

Text of the McGill telegram as received here and debated in Council last Wednesday is as follows:

"To the Students of Canada.

"Whereas the students of Argentina have taken up the fight against the military dictatorship which has suppressed all democratic rights in Argentina,

"Whereas two students have been killed and 80 wounded to our knowledge, during peaceful demonstrations against the repression of free speech and assembly at the Universities,

"Whereas these events affect all peoples throughout the world, in that we must recognize that Fascism, and all Fascist tendencies must be destroyed in all parts of the world if this war, so recently won, is to bear fruit,

"Whereas students are particularly concerned with the suppression of academic freedom,

"Whereas we, the students of McGill University, have sent expression of our solidarity to the students of Argentina, have sent a protest to the Government of Argentina, and a resolution to the Canadian Government demanding that our Government take action to have Argentina suspended from the United Nations Organization, and that Canada suspend diplomatic relations with Argentina,

"Therefore we call upon all other student bodies in Canada to address themselves to these problems, and to take similar action.

"Students' Executive Council, McGill University, Montreal."

Great Hall Cooks Have To Worry To Feed The Students In A Hurry

When the average student queues his way through the Hart House Great Hall, he little realizes the efficient organization working for his nutritional benefits.

One hundred and thirty five people work daily to give the male students of this University their meals as quickly and with as little inconvenience as possible. An average of ten men a minute are put through the Hall at lunch time.

At fifteen-minute periods through the lunch hour for a whole week the length of the line-up was noted and from these statistics it was found that the shortest line is between 12.30 and 1.00. The comptroller's office has a regular system of getting facts like these, and just as good a system of putting them to use for the students' advantage.

Approximately 350 men are served at breakfast, 1240 at lunch and 500 at dinner. One of the chief problems of the Dining Hall staff is to get enough food to feed all these people. At times

Ex-Service Students Advised By D.V.A.

It is of the utmost importance that ex-service personnel attending the University or taking post-graduate studies be counselled by the Department of Veterans' Affairs for approval of course and payments of benefits and fees, J. J. Ranney secretary of the Rehabilitation Board, "D" District, announced today.

This order applies only to ex-service personnel who have not been counselled and received a letter of approval from the department. DVA declines to accept responsibility for payment of fees or benefits unless the student appears in person at the Rehabilitation Branch, 55 York Street, Toronto.

Glee Club Plans Xmas Broadcast

Its enrolment complete with a total of 128 students and faculty members, the Hart House Glee Club is now carrying on as in pre-war days with plans for a Christmas Eve broadcast over the CBC national network.

Under the direction of Dr. Charles Peaker, F.R.C.O., the Glee Club also plans to give one of the Sunday Evening Concerts in Hart House during the month of February.

"The Club is now rehearsing regularly, and its audition for the Christmas broadcast is tentatively set for the middle of November, Mr. W.B. Burwell, secretary of Hart House told The Varsity.

Since its last public appearance on Armistice Day, 1943, the Club has been inactive because of a lack of suitable singers and also because of war activities which curtailed the members' free time.

The group of singers is once again in full operation, with members ranging from freshmen to faculty members, topped off by Dr. W. H. Grent, an 80-year old retired missionary.

Engineering Parliament Favours Removal of Secrecy Ban on Atom

At the first meeting of the Engineering Parliament, yesterday afternoon, the resolution, "Resolved that atomic power should be made available to all mankind" was upheld by the affirmative. Speaker Cyril Fry presided, and the Prime Minister was Murray Lount, supported by Al Rosenberg. The opposition was led by Harold Wardell, assisted by Garth Weedon.

"Are we going to play politics with the most dangerous powers yet created?" asked Murray Lount, as he introduced the topic under discussion.

He based his argument on the fact that even if the secret of atomic power were withheld, all nations in the world could soon develop it themselves. All that the Allied Nations derive from keeping it secret is the distrust of other nations. He went on to say that unless we surrender the secret, and at the same time instituted proper international control, we would lose the secret and all control of it.

"Fundamentally," he asserted, "atomic energy is a force of good, as it supplies cheap power and revolutionizes industry. However the process is now retarded because the secret is locked in labs. The time has come to stop playing power politics. The cost at the most is surrendering three years, a small price to pay for mutual understanding amongst nations."

Varsity Students Form L.P.P. Club

At an organizational meeting held on Wednesday night a campus Labor Progressive Club was formed. According to Kenneth Forbes, the newly elected chairman of the interim executive the purpose of the club is "to interest students in the aims of the Labor Progressive Party."

"There are a lot of people," he continued, "who misunderstand the aims of the Labor Progressive Party due largely to misrepresentation in the Tory Press the world over."

There is to be a membership meeting on Thursday Oct. 25 at a place to be announced later. The first public meeting will be held on Tuesday Oct. 31 at 8 p.m., at Wymilwood. It will be addressed by Stanley Ryerson, Educational Director of the Labor Progressive Party.

The interim executive elected on Wednesday evening consists of Kenneth Forbes, chairman Phyllis Cohen, vice-chairman; Marguerite Jersak, secretary; Steve Endicott, treasurer, Henry Rosenthal, educational secretary.

Harold Wardell, leader of the opposition, denied that atomic energy was a cheap source of power. He claimed that the problem was a moral issue, idealism against realism. "The Germans are planning a third war," he declared, "and we must see that they are not allowed to use it." He went on to say, "We should not develop atomic energy, as we cannot waste all the money on something scientific."

In support of the affirmative side, Al Rosenberg stated that it was impossible to turn back the clock, and that now atomic power is here, it is here to stay. Canada, Great Britain, and the United States, already know the secret, but the United States is the only country with the facilities for developing it. He claimed that we must be masters of our destinies, and not allow any country, even the United States, to have supreme control of such a great power.

"A new age has opened up with the development of atomic power," he asserted, "but its development is not possible if the secret is kept locked."

Editorial

If You Have Eyes

There was once a painter who stood ten feet from his canvas and threw brushfuls of paint at it. That is, there is a story about such a painter. We doubt if he ever existed, though a great many people believe that he did.

At any rate, the story goes that this painter, by the ten-foot splash method, produced countless pictures—no, not pictures but colored somethings—which set the aesthetic world on its ear. They were hung in all the galleries of Europe (he was a Spaniard), and a great deal of wall space was left around each one, the better to set off the precious blob. The aesthetic world raved, and wrote lengthy articles (which were lamentable, because literature is not a painter's job) to explain their planes, their values, their emancipation from the vulgar world where grass is green and cows look like cows. The aesthetic world, in short, was all excited. The plain man, who tells this story, and probably believes it, was not excited at all. He said the paintings of the Spanish genius left him cold.

The Incredible Gulf

We will not vouch for the textual authenticity of this legend in all its details, but it is a fair example of the incredible gulf between the artist and the men he is trying to reach. All art is communication, and one answer to the question, "Why have we no artists today?" would be, "Because no one will bother his head about what they produce, except other artists." It is like asking why there is no music in a country of the deaf.

There are plenty of reasons for the contemporary blindness to art, deafness to music, and indifference to prose. One reason is that the would-be connoisseur starts under a disadvantage. He has to overcome, at a heavy cost, the deplorable standards of taste bequeathed by his grandparents. Another reason is that artists have been extremely and even perversely busy of late discovering untried means of communication; as if your dinner partner should break suddenly into a torrent of Sanskrit. Until you had hastily mastered the rudiments of Sanskrit, communication would halt.

The Fault is the Onlookers

But the big defect is the defect of the will. The man in the street will not be bothered. He finds it easy to dismiss every picture but a pin-up as highbrow, and every verse but "Thirty Days Hath September" as unintelligent. And having refused to be bothered by his first few brushes with advanced or even non-objective art, he points out habitually that comprehending such stuff is, after all, no affair of his. Art is the work of genius, and the province of aesthetics. Joe Smith is happy with the Petty-girl.

Joe Smith is missing a great deal, and if he is a university student the university can do a lot for him. The process, like every learning process, requires effort. It is not automatic. But it is as nearly painless on the campus as it can be. There is plenty of painting, music, and literature on the campus to which the would-be connoisseur can expose himself, and there are plenty of people who can chat and answer questions.

There's Lots to See

There should be no brain-wracking required. The trouble with art, especially non-objective art, is not that it means nothing, but that it means any number of things. "The cat sat on the mat" is a perfectly lucid sentence, but a man who had nothing to read for several weeks would in time become conscious of a certain poverty of implication. On the contrary, the abstract paintings now on the walls of the Hart House Gallery release whole torrents of association and implication. The longer one looks at them, the more they say; provided one does not begin looking with a verdict firmly in mind that they are going to say nothing.

There is much to be said for the closed mind, particularly when it is closed on something solid. But the University has a job to do for the art-starved student who has his mind fast shut in refusal of aesthetic food and is trying to persuade himself that he isn't hungry.

Canadian Campus

More Men
So Co-eds Coo

For five sad years we've been hearing about the lonely Canadian co-ed and many and tragic have been the tales of the manpower shortage. But... WAS there a shortage? The trans-Canada response to the return of the campus Ed have set us to wondering.

University of New Brunswick Reports

The manpower shortage is something strange to us. The New Brunswick campus has never suffered from one. Even during the war the men have outnumbered the women four to one, so, the influx of veterans doesn't mean the expected new lease on life for wall-flowers. Actually it aggravates an already serious co-ed power shortage.

The typical co-eds are saying:

"Everywhere we go we lead a parade of desperate men."

"It really is an awful strain."

"We never get time to work."

St. Francis Xavier University Reports

"Once there was a fella who wore a pork-pie and stuffed yellow socks into a pair of ancient moccasins. He'd come from high school back home just as we had. We had fun with that fellow... he was ambitious, too. He went away for a while and now that he's back he doesn't wear a pork-pie any more. He's a man now... he's here to work, to learn of all the good there can be in the civilization he's fought so hard to preserve. He seems glad to see us, and we... well, we think he's tops!"

University of Alberta Reports

The reaction of the Alberta co-eds to the end of the manpower shortage is generally, "We are not particularly thrilled. There are lots of men around, but they are not overly co-operative."

Contrary to popular expectations, many of the girls are not having heavy dates, and at some of the campus dances stag lines of girls have been in evidence. The girls feel that the returned men at Varsity keep to themselves for the most part and they are not especially interested in dating the campus belle. In fact, one co-ed when questioned on the subject, asked with surprise, "Oh, has there been an end to the manpower shortage yet?"

NEWS LECTURE TODAY

Second in a series of lectures on the technique of newspaper writing is to be delivered this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in Room 37, University College. Following an introductory lecture in which newspaper methods at large were discussed, today's session will deal in greater detail with the structure of the news story. All members of The Varsity's news staff are urged to attend and to participate in the discussion period.

Art, Music and Drama

Tourel In Toronto Debut

The songs created by the foremost masters of the modern chanson are free from the slightest tinge of the false dramatic in contrast with those of the nineteenth century. They must be sung with great simplicity so that the phrasing and nuance will come out of themselves as if read. These necessities were realized in Jenny Tourel's presentation at Eaton Auditorium last night. She overcame the difficulties of interpretation in Trois Chansons de Bilitis by Debussy, giving them much subtle nuance and the delicacy of feeling required in his use of so small a range of notes. She brought out with quiet passion the harmony and elaborate vocal line of Faure's Tousjours.

I was afraid that her voice would not be big enough to put over the spirited Hopac by Moussorgsky but it was done with much more vigor and feeling than given elsewhere.

As the best wine was kept until the end of the feast so were her pieces of greatest expression. Generally, throughout the concert, the pieces, though technically perfect, were completely devoid of real feeling. Encores were merely a gesture of politeness. But I Hate Music (Five Kid Songs) by Leonard Bernstein had moments of great charm. Beside the handling of the difficult intervals of melody there was a warmth and humor which was communicated to the audience.

DAPHNE BYERS

Promenade Concert

Whether a musical program conceived from the point of view of unity is preferable to one in which contrasts are the prevailing features, is without doubt a debatable question. Certainly, last night's Prom was an example of the latter conception. Whatever our preference may be, it must in all fairness be said that the final concert of the season achieved a certain amount of glamour not only from the point of view of execution, but also from that of composition.

Fritz Mahler, though a competent conductor is by no means inspiring and in more cases than one the sad spectacle of an orchestra getting out of hand was painfully obvious. This was particularly true of the "1812 Overture" where a lone clarinetist apparently tried to improve Tchaikovsky's score. The Sorcerer's Apprentice was selected last night to be enlivened by the habitual coke-bottle throwing. Otherwise the performance was remarkable for the irreproachable conduct of the audience.

In conclusion, it is certainly not too much to say that the musical value of the Prom concerts has appreciably improved during the last few weeks. Last night's effort was perhaps still a long way from being perfect but nevertheless it bore decisive promise of a more successful season next year.

GOSH!

Oh My!

Fur flew far and wide at the Hart House Art Classes last night with the sudden discovery that the gears, bolts, springs, and doohickies being painted by the students in still-life groups were actually the mortal remains of an automobile belonging to W. B. Barrel, Secretary of the House.

The uproar arose midway through the sketching session, when Mr. Barrel, who had been laboriously sketching a battered headlamp, suddenly rent the air with screams.

"It's her!" he shrieked, "it's my Cleo! I'd know that mournful look anywhere."

Investigation revealed that the mournful look alluded to had been imparted to the headlamp by a collision with an eastbound TTC car at the corner of Bloor and University in the spring of 1944.

Post-mortem analysis by Dr. I. M. Hasty revealed that Cleo had died of an infected fuel-pump about 6:20 last evening. The brakes were in a state of spasm and rigor mortis had been setting in the front seat. Considerable for-

Blues Play To-morrow

Sometime this afternoon, a group of twenty football players led by Warren Stevens will wend its way to Union Station. The Varsity Blues will be on their way to Kingston for their Saturday afternoon football encounter with the Tricolor. It will be the first intercollegiate appearance of a University of Toronto football team in Kingston since 1939.

Pre-game comments emanating from that city favor the Tricolor to emerge as winners. Most of these started after the convincing victory posted last week-end over Vimy Signals.

Varsity banner will be picked from the following: Jacobs, McRenolds, S. Scott, Lawrence, Bark, Mel Lawson, Cranham, Daniel, Bob Henry, Hall McComiskey, Farmer, Gord Lawson, Campbell, Carson, W. Henry, Guppy, Kilpatrick, Smith, A. Scott, Grass and Armstrong. Reports from Queen's state that Coach Bob Elliott has a good all-round club under him. The backs are fast and tricky while the line, although small, is hard charging and blocks and tackles well.

The backfield, headed by Jack Parry and Jack Milliken, is also comprised of Hammond, Hood and Fardell while King, Minnes, Stevens, Woods, McDonald, Delahaye and Burgess figure in the front-wall defence.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Mickey Michasiw

Excerpts From Around and About—

Within the space of a day plus a few odd hours, the first post-war intercollegiate Football League schedule will be drummed in at Montreal and Kingston. With due regard for history, there has probably been no other day in intercollegiate football that has been awaited by so many for so long. Tomorrow's the day for Queen's and McGill, while Western and this campus must bide their time for yet another week. . . . In a story in yesterday's Globe and Mail, Hal Walker pointed out that, as yet, no one has picked Varsity to draw the Yates Cup away from the defending Western Mustangs. McGill's chances are better than average according to the same Montreal sportswriters that referred to the Montreal Canadiens as "the best hockey team in twenty years," who claimed the Stanley Cup for their greats early in January and who picked the Montreal Royals to win the International League playoffs. . . . Michael Rodden has probably completed arrangements to welcome the Tricolor home as intercollegiate champs judging from his "off the deep end" comments. The London Free Press is also claiming a championship for the Mustangs. The Toronto papers are strangely silent. . . . The same Mr. Walker quotes Mr. Stevens as bemoaning the fact that no one has picked his "fine mannered young boys" to cop the honors. . . . Stevens has a good all-round club under him. He has the ability to round them into a winning combination even though the time be short. He used to be known as "Silent Steve" and he still is, so far as we are concerned. Just why Mr. Stevens should pick the shoulders of the downtown press to cry on is a mystery to us unless it is that Mr. Walker has appealing shoulders! . . . And so, on the eve of the opener, we shall break the precedent set by our immediate intercollegiate predecessors. We will refrain from picking a winner of the Yates Cup. . . . However, after peering into the swami's crystal, it is only too apparent that tomorrow Varsity will edge out Queen's and that Western will win over McGill. Now go win yourself a bundle. . . . To the team a fitting send-off would be one of Knute Rockne's immortal pep talks, but with the abundance of ability present the sincerest wishes of the student body are enough. . . . The eyes of the University of Toronto will be on you, Blues. . . . Over!

Tugged by gravity the other way, we scuttled around the campus enjoying what is rarer than a day in June, a sunny afternoon of October in Toronto. Evidently the rain clouds had taken a holiday, and we wanted to, too. Other students found time to loiter about the grass and contemplate the beautiful architecture of Hart House, but not us. Nor did Margaret Fletcher, and her right hand members of the Baseball Club.

They profited by the mistakes of last year's club, in allowing the matches to drag along until the finals between Vic and U.C. had to be postponed due to snow. This year the matches will commence on Oct. 22, according to the schedule drawn up yesterday afternoon.

The fields to be used are usually reserved for men's rugby. When the women suggested that wooden bases be installed, a howl of protest arose. Now the female players will have to slide for sand sack.

Without further comment, we direct your attention to the baseball schedule:

Parties, Sports, Etc.

By Ross McLean

"What this place needs," the ex-officer cited to our reporter, "is a Date Bureau."

A Date Bureau, he had repeated while our reporter jotted down a pertinent jot to that effect. The Varsity, he felt, should organize it, start interest in it and get it set up.

Lacking such a Bureau, he already inserted a small classified advertisement in the October 15 edition of The Varsity. The adv. had announced hopefully that "two ex-R.C.A.F. officers would like to meet two co-eds interested in fraternity parties, sports, etc. Please enclose name, address, photo and general interests to Box D, The Varsity. Not applicable to freshmen except ex-service women."

Now, that wasn't much to ask. Just two co-eds who are interested in fraternity parties, who enjoy sports, if it doesn't interfere with their courses.

That certainly wasn't much to ask. But the response thus far has been discouraging. Despite their past successes in turning up lost-black-and-white-pens-with-the-owner's-name-on-the-clip and in recovering red-wallets containing identification cards-between-Whitney-Hall-and-the-Economics-Building, the classified columns of this paper have failed this advertiser.

Response to the pathetic request has been one letter.

Contained in the letter were two snapshots one of which showed a group of girls standing on a beach. One of these, whose back is to the camera, has been circled on the photograph. The second snap is a bedroom scene and shows a sleeping head protruding from underneath blankets. Identification is almost impossible. And the sender offered no last names. The ex-officer is where he was three days ago.

"That," he said, is just what I expected. "You know," he pointed out, "there're lots of men and women in the same position as we are. Many have been in the service for more than four years. When they get back they are completely out of touch with everyone at home. All the people of their own age have already gone through University and the ex-serviceman has to start all over again."

"For the people from the West—as we are—or farther, it's all the harder." And he made his suggestions about the Date Bureau.

Our reporter, who was by this time admittedly "burning with the Date-Bureau ardor" (excitable lad!), hurried down to the Advisory Board for Veterans' Affairs for the University (diligent lad!).

There he presented his adopted case for the Date Bureau and recited some of the ex-officer's story. Their comment, he reported, was brief. "They did not say that they would not set up a Date Bureau. In fact they did not say very much. They did, however, comment succinctly: 'Do you really think that an ex-service man, who has been overseas, and who is attending mixed lectures every day, needs a Date Bureau?'"

"We," our reporter concludes, "got the point."

Meanwhile Box D awaits.

Jeep Tour Talk For Classics Club

Touring Italy in a jeep was the subject of Prof. H. A. Thompson's address to the first meeting of the U.C.—Trinity Classic Club, held last night in Cartwright Hall. He spoke of his ramblings through Apulia, a topographically varied region in Southern Italy, when connected with Naval Intelligence in the Mediterranean area. "Apulia forms a bridgehead between southeastern Europe, and Italy proper. Its inhabitants, due to Albania, Greece, and Jugoslavia settlements are remarkably varied."

The danger of malaria necessitated considerable vigilance to protect our armies in the Taranto region. "There is a curious historical parallel between contemporary and classic times," Prof. Thompson pointed out. Apulia served as a springboard in the Italian peninsula for movements eastward, both in the times of Hannibal and the Crusades, and in the recent Albania, Greece, and Jugoslavia campaigns.

Professor Thompson enumerated the historical connections pertaining to three major Apulian harbour cities, Bari, Taranto and Bengasi. The government is striving to overcome the agricultural problems occasioned by a despotic land tenure system, and recent Fascist "improvements".

Spanish Students See Cruise Movie

The initial meeting of the University Spanish Club held last night in the Women's Union was addressed by Dr. Willinsky, who has travelled extensively through North and South America on behalf of the National Film Board of Canada.

Dr. Willinsky showed a technicolor film, "Away to Argentina," a pictorial record of a cruise which he took six years ago on the S.S. Brazil. The film gave an indication of the importance of the various ports and cities of Argentina, Rio de Janeiro, Santos, and Buenos Aires being explained in detail.

Santos' scientifically-operated snake farms were shown and the night-life of Rio de Janeiro was seen briefly. Dr. Willinsky said that the numerous beaches and parks of Buenos Aires made it one of the loveliest of cities. Buenos Aires also boasts of the highest pure concrete building in the world.

AA informal get-together and dance for the members followed screening of the film.

out there on the cold pavement—but to be dismembered, scarcely cold, and used for Art Class models—it's cruel!" Mr. Barrel sobbed between sips at his portable tea-cup. "I shall insist that she be given a decent burial in the quadrangle."

Ignorance of the evil thing he was doing was the excuse proffered by Mr. John Tall, Art Instructor. "I found that pile of junk out on the pavement in front of the House, and carted it inside. It was wonderful stuff to sketch. The texture of clinging grease was delightful."

Rugby-Starved Fans Dust Off Yells, Bells

HAIL RETURN OF KING FOOTBALL

Six years of pent energy became kinetic Saturday at Kingston's Richardson Stadium as college football fans saw their first inter-collegiate league game since 1939.

Roaring into the autumn-tanged afternoon air Toronto's resurrected 'rippy-rappy-ree's' and Queen's bewildering 'cha Gheils' met in choral conflict.

From Varsity had come an estimated 300 supporters—by chartered bus, train and thumb. Rooter's equipment included brand-new cow-bells bearing "75 cents-Bevin-Kentucky-Pattern-75 cents" labels. These recently manufactured articles were offset by ancient autos held together only by many layers of paint, either tricolored or Toronto's favorite Blue and White.

Anxiety in anticipation of the game was illustrated by two Torontonians who, all else failing, went to Kingston on their thumb-appl to passing motorists. Yet some met with frustration on arrival as in the case of Mardie Sixt, who travelled 163 miles to lose her ticket and be refused admission. This obstacle was foxily overcome by another co-ed who waited until The King brought the ushers to a respectful attention and then eased past the patriotic persons. Hugh McKee met pre-game difficulty in looking for the non-existent address of a friend.

College colors smeared over all garments caused the audience to resemble a surrealist's impression of an explosion in a paint factory. Founded by the Scottish Presbyterian Church, Queen's University traditionally favors its functions with Scottish mannerisms. While bag-pipes whined, tam-wearing freshmen mimicked the Highland Fling.

Rivalry's roar was not confined to the playing-field but was in view throughout the town as snake-dances collected opposing colors on their twisty trail. Armed to the teeth, literally, to defend her blue and white ribbons, Peg Wallace bit into the hand of a Queen's man and said "He tasted dirty!"

Shut-Out Guelph, Soccer Squad Leads

The Varsity soccer team ran their season's record to two wins and two shut-outs in two starts, with their 6-0 victory over the Guelph Aggies on Saturday afternoon. Bob Bell-Irving of Meds at right fullback and Art Riguero of S.P.S. at centre forward made their first appearance of the year, in this game.

Starting off the first half strongly, the Guelph men soon weakened, and at no time through the game did they even threaten Varsity's lead, despite several close goals. Art Riguero opened things up early in the first half by neatly netting the ball after a pass from Shinobu in a goal-mouth scramble. Riguero also figured in the Blues' second goal, crossing the ball to Willie Clarkson on a short boot, who popped it in behind goalie Arscott. Winding up in the scoring action of the first half, the ball bounced into the Guelph net off an Aggie player, which goal was credited to Mayne.

Early in the second half, Boyd made a spectacular goal on a corner-shot. Kicking in from the left-hand corner, Boyd placed the ball on the goal-line. Arscott got his hands on it, but was unable to hold on, and the ball fell behind him for the score. The next counter of the half came when Max Clarkson, playing in the far right, crossed the ball over to his brother Willie in the centre for the score. The last goal came when Spooner booted a high one into the goal zone from the far right, to Riguero, who netted the ball on a header.

Form League Of Canadian Students; Co-Ops Plan Idea Pool, Exchange

A meeting of student co-operative representatives from across Canada, saw the formation of the Canadian student Co-operative League. The campus co-op of the University of Toronto organized the meeting.

The purpose of the C.S.C.L. as defined by this meeting is in general an expression of the voice of students co-ops as a whole. The pooling and exchange of ideas among students co-ops, publicity and possible developments of a Campus Co-op department in the Co-operative Union of Canada are among specific purposes.

In 1938, the idea for an organization of this kind was conceived. The matter was left in abeyance due to war conditions, though the initial committee was formed at that time.

In 1936, the original membership of the Campus Co-op here was 12 but development has increased membership to 86. Founders of similar co-ops have been able to benefit from this practical experience in the growth of campus co-ops.

Ajax Explosions Miss U. Buildings

Recent demolition of several explosive-laden buildings at Ajax had nothing to do with the University's part of the property, Col. W. H. Bonus, Assistant Superintendent, told The Varsity Friday. "It is true that we shall have to destroy several buildings unsuited for classroom use, but that won't be for a month yet," he said.

Reconstruction of the 100-odd buildings leased by the University is "continuing at the greatest possible speed", Col. Bonus said. Of the total, 25 or 30 of the largest are being equipped as labs or lecture-rooms; the rest will be used for residences and recreation. He was confident that the work re-conversion would be finished before classes open in January.

Atomic Research Blamed On War

"Perhaps if men had learned to quarrel without fighting, there would have been no development of atomic energy," said Professor H. J. C. Ireton in a lecture on the subject of Isotopes and atomic energy, Friday night. He pointed out, however, that scientists do their research to satisfy their intellectual curiosity and that the breaking up of the atom would have been discovered eventually.

He told the history of research into the subject of isotopes, elements which have the same position in the Periodic Table, but different atomic weights. Their existence was first proved by J. J. Thompson in 1911 and research on other isotopes was carried out by Aston in 1919. Work on the smashing of the atom was done by Lawrence and Van de Graf.

The next lecture of the series on Uranium will be given Friday evening by Professor Elizabeth Allin at 8 p.m. in Room 43 of the Physics Building.

Jap-Canuck Exodus Vetoed By Trinity

A motion that the Japanese Canadians should be deported was defeated by a better than two-to-one majority at the meeting of the Trinity College Literary Institute last Friday night.

The government speakers, J. Gwynne-Timothy and David Russell, pictured the Japanese as a race inherently different, and not readily assimilated in this country. Possessing an ingrained concept of racial superiority, they are not completely civilized, and have by their economic aggressiveness and low standards of living made themselves unwelcome to the majority of people.

Consequently, the government maintained, Canada should follow the example set by Europe in the forcible repatriation of millions of Germans, and deport the Japanese-Canadians within her borders, many of whom are already anxious to return to their homeland. World War Two, concluded Russell, was caused by hesitation, a sin into which we must never again fall.

The opposition spokesman, E. Evans and D. Herington, maintained that the object of our national life is to create a united Canada, undisturbed by racial hatred. The Japanese-Canadians were represented as a mistreated minority charged with the vices of their nationalistic cousins in the homeland, who are deprived of their legal rights, taxed without representation, and generally made a scapegoat upon whom our national rage may be vented.

The opposition defended the Japanese-Canadians against what it regarded as the jealous economic and racial accusations which are levelled at them. They concluded that although we won the war, if the Japanese-Canadians are deported then Hitler in introducing racial prejudice will have won the final victory.

Offensive In Second Half Trips Up Varsity Team

PARRY & MILLIKEN SPARK KINGSTON CREW

By Mickey Michasiv

Kingston, October 22. (Special)—Before a roaring home crowd of 7,500 the Queen's fighting football team chalked up its first victory of the season by stunning the Varsity Blues with a determined second half offensive and then coasting to a 19-15 triumph in the game played at Richardson Stadium on Saturday.

The encounter marked the opening of the initial post-war inter-collegiate season and the football-hungry fans of Kingston made the most of the tussle, the first since the autumn of 1939. Cheer leaders, waving pennants, screaming co-eds and acrobatic males added greatly to make the game as colorful a spectacle as any pre-war game.

McGill To Sponsor Prominent Artists

Montreal—(CUP)—The University of McGill is to be the scene of a series of four concerts in which prominent artists of the musical world are to appear. These concerts are to be arranged by the students through the joint co-operation of the Students Executive Council and the Women's Union.

The opening concert is on the evening of Nov. 9th, when Regina Resnik, one of the leading young sopranos of the Metropolitan Opera Company will appear as the guest artist. Isaac Stern, pianist, who is to appear at Carnegie Hall in December in a solo concert, is the guest of McGill on Dec. 3rd. The McGill String Quartet, composed of three violinists and a cellist, all performers of "Les Concerts Symphoniques" are to appear on Jan. 11th. This quartet has been favorably acclaimed by Montreal critics for the enthusiasm which is shown in their chamber music. The final program at McGill is on the 22nd of February with the appearance of Ellen Ballon. Miss Ballon learned to play the piano at the age of 3, and since that time has played throughout Europe and America with the leading Philharmonic and Symphonic Orchestras.

Terms Emily Carr Authentic Genius

Describing Emily Carr, west coast artist and author who died in March of this year, as "a great Canadian and an authentic genius", Mr. Ira Dilworth sketched briefly the highlights of her career, in an address at Victoria College last Friday.

Literary executor and lifetime friend of Miss Carr, Mr. Dilworth is in Toronto in connection with an exhibition of her work which is currently being shown at the Toronto Art Galleries.

Considered eccentric, almost mad, by those who saw her passing along the streets with her pet monkey 'Woo' in a baby buggy, and surrounded by a c-cort of shaggy sheep dogs, she received little or no artistic recognition in her home city of Victoria.

The only instrument strong enough to break what she called her 'self shell' was her art which allowed her to attain an objective viewpoint. In 1941, although in her 70th year and suffering from thrombosis, she achieved the amazing feat of doing 15 large oil-on-paper sketches in a period of 8 days.

Feeling that she must have an exhibition of her work in the spring of this year she worked to within three days of her death to complete the mounting and framing of 37 of her pieces. Many of these may be seen in the present exhibition.

"Her style though relaxed, had always a definite pattern to it and was, as she would have put it herself, 'as sharp as the snap of a newly mended garter,'" Mr. Dilworth concluded.

the rate of one a minute, and the examination must be completed in a week's time. It is therefore necessary that appointments be made at once.

Coach Bob Elliott held the two "Jacks" that counted when the chips were down. Jack Parry and Jack Milliken proved to be the margin of victory over the Blues as the former accounted for three touchdowns while the latter kicked the Tricolor to victory with long unexpected kicks. Milliken also was credited with four singles.

The play of Parry was sensational. He broke loose for two touchdowns runs, the first a forty yard romp while the second was for 92 yards. His plunging was a feature as he tore off yardage with the greatest ease. Parry also proved that he could pass as well as run by tossing three completed passes, one to Weed Wood for a major score.

The Blues were hardly seated when the fans began to move downfield after Gord Lawson had blocked a Queen's kick in Queen's territory. A Mel Lawson-Bark pass took the fall to the 24. Another pass this time to Lawrence placed the ball on the 13 and Mel followed this with a third straight strike as Lawrence was stopped on the three. Lawson ploughed for the major score and Scott converted.

Lawson heaved another completed pass seconds later while standing on his own 40 and watched Stu Scott finally brought down on his opponents' 12. After a futile pass and a similar plunge, Scott kicked the placement. This gave Varsity a 9-0 lead with the game only six minutes old.

A quick, second down kick by Milliken caught the Varsity backs napping but roughing and off-side penalties nullified the damage. The Gaels continued to use this weapon to good advantage. Early in the second quarter Milliken booted the ball sixty-five yards and before Lawrence could run out, he was trapped by Delahaye and Burgess, for a single.

Then Parry took over. At the Varsity 40, he picked up a flea-flicker from Wood who has completed a short pass from Fuller. He evaded two would-be tacklers and scampered across for the touch which Milliken converted.

At halftime, the scoreboard read: Varsity 9, Queen's 7.

After a number of plunges by both teams, the Tricolor squad was driven deep into its own end when Parry broke loose to gallop 92 yards for the major after shaking off a desperate Stu Scott. Milliken again converted. Toronto players claimed that Parry had been pushed out of touch on the 25 but the officials refused to listen.

Frankly, we are appalled. A freshe wailed past in the hall of one of the arts colleges just the other day—"But there's nothing to do down here!" It transpired that the lass in question had recently plunged into a course with a fairly light time-table, which in comparison with her high-school class schedule seemed easy-going. Adrift in a mob of strange faces, she felt lost. When she went to the library to study, all the books she wanted had been taken out. Life was bitter.

We admire her zeal for work, but deplore her despairing attitude, particularly in the midst of a campus where there are things to be done almost every moment of the day. The gaps in her time-table are there for a purpose. The average arts course is accompanied by a lengthy list of required reading and essay topics which will, with the lectures, give a fully-rounded course.

Hi Neighbor!

It is not expected that every hour not spent in the lecture-room should be buried in the library. That would be gruesome. Some of that extra time could be used in hob-nobbing with other students, and making part of that mob of strange faces seem less alien. A milkshake in the local sweetery or a stroll across a sunny campus would accomplish much. Fellow-students shouldn't be regarded as strangers—we all go to the same school. Admittedly, it is a pretty big "school", but all are students together.

This crowded year, it is probably easier to feel confused and lost than ever before, and equally likely that there are twice as many people who feel that way. The girl or boy sitting next to you in lectures could be feeling at sea too. Turn around and say hello some day—but not while the professor is giving his lecture!

The best remedy for that feeling of being at a loose end is to get oneself something to do. Don't wait around for someone to come along and give you a job. With nine thousand students in the University, no one is going to mark you out especially—you're just as much a part of that mob of faces to other people as they are to you.

What To Do

Surely you're interested in something! There is an answer to fit every taste on the campus. There are clubs which cover every topic imaginable. Join one, and then start to take an active part in it. If you are not a club-joiner, you can drift around and drop in on any of them which may interest you. Several, such as the Record Club, exact no membership fee, and are comprised of a group of students drawn together by bonds of mutual interest. Clubs such as these will both give you a chance to meet other students, and something to do.

What Makes it Tick

Another important step is to know your own campus—not only the geography of it, but the officials (who are human), what goes on inside the buildings, what makes the bells ring in the Hart House tower, and why that big rock is sitting on the southeast corner of the centre campus. Knowing little details such as these will help make the campus belong to you, and you less a stranger to it.

One way of acquiring such knowledge is to wander about the grounds and into buildings, talking to the inhabitants. Better ways are joining the staff of your college publication, or The Varsity (plug) and be sent out to get material on the happenings all over the campus.

Interviewing various officials, speaking to them, will take them down from the pedestal on which you have placed them, and give you an idea of the part they play in the functions of the University. The University with all its grounds and buildings doesn't just exist, you will find, but lives and breathes. You will find a dynamic force existing from one corner of the campus to the other. Of course, you will not be as aware of it fully until you become part of it. With a little initiative coupled with genuine interest, this won't be difficult.

Cheer up, settle down, and get busy. There's a lot to be done, and the year is slipping past.

Music

In The Best Tradition

In accordance with a longstanding tradition, the Hart House String Quartet gave the first in the series of Sunday Evening Concerts last night. A departure from tradition however was the choice of program, including three contemporary works. The one of greatest interest was the Elegy by Folkertsma. This interest was derived mostly from the background of the composition and its dedication to three Canadian airmen who were killed over Holland near the home of the composer. Musically it springs from the impressionistic school.

We note with gratification the inclusion of a Canadian work, Two French Canadian Sketches by Sir Ernest MacMillan. These pieces are, by this time, familiar to Toronto audiences, and we would welcome further examples of Sir Ernest's work.

A definite improvement in the group's playing was apparent. They were more coordinated than they have been in the past and they achieved better balance. Mr. Levey's restraint was admirable and welcome. And as usual, the delight that Mr. Hambourg takes in performing Mozart was communicated to the audience.

Also in the best Hart House tradition, Boccherini's Minuet was played as an encore.

Mazeppa In Ukrainian

Tchaikovsky's fame as an opera-writer in Russia is not duplicated in England or America, despite the phenomenal appeal of his other works. Mazeppa, presented by the Ukrainian Opera Company at Massey Hall, has little reputation and popularity even in Russia. Despite occasional lovely or imaginative passages, inevitable in a mature work of Tchaikovsky's both libretto and music lack sustained interest, a failing which was not improved by the interminable intermissions on Friday night.

I will pass lightly over the inevitable shortcomings, like the chorus, which never got together either with itself or with the conductor, and the orchestra, whose lack of familiarity with the score was painfully obvious. Among the principals Anna Trociancevsky as Motyla had a fresh dramatic voice, and her scene with Mary Nepp, who played Lubov, was an impressive piece of melodrama. These two made up for the adequate but not very interesting voices of the male principals. The atmosphere of amateur spontaneity had some compensations, and the peasant costumes were delightful.

MILTON WILSON

Incest, drunken brawls, homosexuality; but it is much more than a simple chronicle of degeneracy. Fitzgerald had a deep feeling and sympathy for a world that had its illusions. His writing should mean something to our generation which, more than losing illusion, has lost almost all hope of ever again being able to allow itself illusions.

Tender Is The Night shows some of the influences of writers of his time, but Fitzgerald is a writer, not an imitator. His characters are blocked-in, developed in relation to their surroundings and past lives, not casually imposed with a few broad and insufficient strokes. The exception is Rosemary, the young Hollywood actress, who is never really linked with the others; but this is her logical fate, for she is living and growing and the rest are wandering, lost and dying. There are no false notes in the dialogue, which is the talk of people of generally superior intelligence; is sometimes amusing, often wise although scarcely intellectual, and frequently very sad. Fitzgerald's descriptive powers are loosed on the dingiest bars and the most magnificent blues of the Mediterranean.

Another novel, The Great Gatsby, and a number of short stories are included in this volume. It is all worth reading. For, as John O'Hara says in the introduction, "The stuff is very much here, and it's mellow."

Of course Queen Anne's (popularly known as Anne's) is well known on this campus for its poets, its balletomanes and the fact that a great many scenes for that par excellence boarding school saga, Judy's Prefect Year, were shot at Anne's last summer. Founded in the days of Queen Anne, this college sports in its dining hall, the flag that rested on Anne's coffin. Other relics of the lamented monarch are one of the Queen's early samplers which bears on it a motto from Arbuthnot, Life is but a passing dream which has since been incorporated into that charming rural lyric Row, row, row your boat.

Last Friday night, Anne's held its annual Sob and by all accounts, this year's Sob seems to have scored a resounding success. Historical note: The Sob was instituted as an outlet for the crocodile tears of the sophomores over the freshmen's fate whose initiation consisted of copying out and constructing twenty-four times, Prof. Nautilus' Rules for the transplanting of Labban's famous Sight Unseens. This year's Sob consisted of a three act presentation of the Life of John Wesley.

On the whole, we think the subject was extremely well chosen. Over-acting was practically non-existent which put this reviewer in a quandary as to what to say, but I believe readers of The Varsity might be persuaded that Jean Bohemy's portrayal of the Anglican bishop showed the hand of Dali up the sleeve of Alma Sadema. His aria sung to the tune of I dreamt that I dwell in marble halls showed erudite knowledge in the use of his Adam's Apple. His costume was a triumph of the couturier's art: black velvet milled with a touch of (thread no. 40) Cantonese Lace at his throat. As Mrs. Wesley, Aspasia Brunhild turned in a performance wherein we feel sure she reached the height of her immense talents. In a word, she rivalled the talents of Siddons and Kean put together.

The scene where she threw the book of Nehemiah into the fire was superbly touching. As the Devil, Don Crane gave brilliant mime. His suit (Continued on page 4)

McGill Meet Next Friday

Blues back and Fardell plunged 13 yards to the 29. A Barry-Wood pass brought it to the 21. A second pass was completed off a Varsity player. With the ball on the 10, Parry faded back and threw a strike to Dave Wood who was over the line. Milken converted to make the score 19-9.

The Blues fought desperately but it wasn't until near the end of the game that their attack was given any attention. Jack McReynolds, playing with a bandaged hand teamed up with Mel Lawson and their combined passing brought the ball to the four yard line from where Bill Lawrence went over. Scott converted to end the scoring.

Parry stood head and shoulders above anyone else on the field. However, he was given able support by Milken, Dave (Weed) Wood and Roy Fardell in the backfield. Bob Stevens, Don Delahaye and Pete King starred on the line, which tightened up after the opening quarter. The only weakness of the victors was their lack of a pass defence as Varsity completed 12 of 21 attempted.

Mel Lawson and Stu Scott spearheaded the Varsity attack but Bill Lawrence and Don Bark, rendered valuable assistance throughout. The line showed much improved form from that displayed at the McMaster game. Gord Lawson played a good game at end, but the work of Johnny Farmer and Ruddy Grass also caught the eye. Al Scott, subbing at centre for the injured Gus Campbell showed up well

By Mickey Michasiw

Through the courtesy of remote control, frequency modulation, television telegraphy and the grapevine, we are privileged to report the proceedings at the meeting at which the Tricolor vanquished the Blues.

Life in Kingston

Life isn't that proverbial bed of roses; That, we discovered on arriving in the home city of the Tricolor. Equipped with sharpened pencils, copy paper, letters of introduction, out-dated press cards and a smile of confidence, we attained our objective some fifty-five minutes before game time. . . . Amid mutterings of "Cha gheil, cha gheil," we were fouled from crashing the gate amidst the student parade. . . . Twenty-five minutes to game time. . . . After an intent search, Mr. Hicks, Athletic Director of Queen's, was discovered in a bitter mood. In future, all visiting reporters must be on parade for inspection at least 12 hours before game time. . . . Finally a kind hearted usher helped out. . . . Twenty minutes to game time (sigh). . . . Gaining admittance to the press box was another battle, but after sitting down, matters went from bad to worse. . . . We discovered that Richardson Stadium contained the only tavern found on an athletic field in Canada—we hope. . . . A be-moustached reporter physically insisted that Will Henry had plunged for the first Varsity touch. A Tarzan yell emanated from his vicinity when we meekly suggested that Mel Lawson was the man. . . . Then Parry broke loose for his first major. . . . Various citizens began wandering into the box, capturing seats as a reporter would stand up to see a play at the far end of the field. . . . Parry broke loose again. . . . And again! . . . We swore that Parry's foot was out of touch on his 92 yard romp but the officials said it weren't so. . . . Sadly we watched the victory snake dance tying up Kingston traffic, but there was one bright light. That was ex-airman Al Argue who insists on throwing a party some Saturday night at a certain downtown hotel. . . . Everybody welcome, said Argue. . . . We reiterate the feelings prevalent in the gloomy Varsity dressing room after the game: "Next Saturday is another game."

More Intercollegiates

With the defeat of McGill at the hands of the Western Mustangs, the football picture clears to show the Mustangs as the team to beat. . . . The Varsity soccerites continued on their winning ways and have yet to be scored on this season. . . . The intermediate tennis victory at Hamilton was not wholly unexpected and today their elder brethren swing out in McGill. . . . Hec Phillips, track coach, complains that athletes who have cinched places on the Varsity team are cutting training. Hec warns that if this continues, they will be cut from the squad.

Routine

Monday is the day this column starts all over again.

Monday is the day when just as you are beginning to feel peaceful you have to get up, and get ready to learn about Sophocles and Aeschylus and Euripides again.

It is the day when life becomes mundane again, because it is the day when you have to face lectures again.

It is a day with no nonsense about it, because it is the first in the file of the sorrowful days that must be "Up and at it!"

You can sing an Saturday or Sunday without one eye on all your responsibility, forgetting that the saw "Nothing ventured, nothing gained" will add to your capability.

But you know that you wouldn't have every day be a Saturday or a Sunday even if you had it within your ability. Would you?

Medicals

With the new week, comes an old memo to all basketball players. Those with intercollegiate ambitions will remember the rule in the little brown bible concerning athletics. It's to the effect that any student playing on a team must have a medical before she will be allowed to participate in any games. The authorities agree that it is impossible to expect students to have completed the medical routine before practice begin but they figuratively put both feet down when the real competitions begin.

T. A. REED

A RECORD of Fifty Years of Athletic Endeavour at the University of Toronto by T. A. Reed, B.D., Mus. Bac., Secretary to the Athletic Association, 319 pages and 92 illustrations. Written to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the founding of the Association in 1893, this recent publication by the University Press goes further back to Sir William Mulock's student days and tells the story of the development of athletics down to the present time. Incidentally it contains a good deal of University history as well for the author, for nearly forty years on the University Staff, has an intimate knowledge of academic affairs and Toronto lore.

Separate chapters are devoted to each sport or athletic activity. The history of football is dealt with and its development from the crude pastime of our forefathers down to the present-day form of English Rugby, Association Football, and our Canadian Rugby game. Similarly the origin of Hockey and other games is included. The illustrations include pictures of the successive Gymnasiums, one of Moss Hall, which has only recently come to light, athletic teams in every branch of sport and portraits of past presidents since 1892, and many former members of the Athletic Directorate.

At the end of each chapter are listed the winners of the various Intercollegiate and Inter-faculty Championships, and the donors of the many cups and trophies which have been presented from time to time. A complete index covers some 1200 names of men who have brought fame to the University.

Forever Slander

Bob came back the other night. Bob Beare.

If the 73 rd annual Vic Bob, traditional initiation climax, failed to "rack the initiates with a sense of sin and other more tangible instruments of regeneration," it wasn't Bob's fault. Friday night he stepped from his coffin to take a personal hand in the initiation proceedings he founded, as janitor of the Old Vic at Cobourg, 73 years ago.

Sceptics say it wasn't Bob at all. Sceptics say he was impersonated, 'red flannels, cobwebs, and all, by one Don Harron. Sceptics will swallow anything.

Bob found Eaton Auditorium jammed with screaming students sophomore singing too loudly about the froth to hear the nasty things the froth were singing about them. There was something or other going on, on the stage too.

By the time the babel had died down to an occasional "Dirty Sophi," two sailors and a caricatured professorial staff were bandying jokes about "Carter Little Lover Pills" in a three-scene seizure called A Case of Dire Rehabilitation. ("Lack of Furniture", the program explained suavely," by Toronto General Trust and Mortgage Corps.") and all, rent specified freshmen asunder in verses one to eight, and left the usual delicious horror in its wake.

The Men from Down Under the College (This year's Best Cellar) mixed suspense, mystery, and terror with roulette wheels, plumbers, and football fiends, courtesy of a pair of delicious script-writers.

Here the first wave of disappointment struck the audience. The program had modestly but distinctly promised Orson Welles in the role of the plumber. And without a word of explanation for the substitution, someone called Doug Jay walked across the stage in his place.

There was much to be said, Victorians thought, for keeping Bob cultured. So they regaled his weary ghost with Le Mariage si Vigoro or Try and Rigo- letto That, featuring stars of the Metropolitan Lunch, corner Danforth and Pape. An overture based on the austere classical Three Blind Mice and developed in true Rachmaninoff and Hampton style, prefaced the appearance of such Metropolitan stars as Thurston Flagstaff (who doubled, the program said, as basso and shortstop), and a climatic duet between the Spirit of Vic and the Brunhilde-like Class of 4T9.

Somehow, too, there got mixed up in these proceedings a stray ballet troupe who performed Pas de Trois (translated, "Three no trump, I pass). A lot of other things got mixed up too, including the scripts. And meanwhile, into this madhouse, the freshman class were formally made welcome.

The freshman enjoyed it, if hand-clapping is a criterion. So did the caloused sophs, and even a stray Schoolman. Best of all, ghostly Bob had the time of his life. He will be button-holing vagrants in the Beyond for several aeons.

Split Decision At Moot Court

After a lengthy discussion of the Dominion's right to encroach upon Provincial fields of legislation, a split decision was returned on Friday by the judges of the University of Toronto Moot Court.

The first session of the first division of the court was presided over by chief Justice Ram Pershad, assisted by Justice Miss E. Charles. Council for the appellant ("The Attorney General of Canada") Miss B. Flint, held that the British North America Act empowers the Dominion to treat and to legislate in matters affecting the common economic good of Canada, even where these encroach upon fields normally reserved for provincial legislation. (another triumph of the couturier's art) of flashing scarlet struck the exact note of devilish insouciance needed in the drama. Undoubtedly the best scene was that wherein he stole all the gold stars with which John Wesley was accustomed to reward his Sunday School pupils.

The musical score on the famous Haydn theme (later used by Sgambetti) Three Blind Mice was a kaleidoscope of merit. The scenery especially the device known as the Virtuous Swan was splendid.

How the Ancient Seas BROUGHT OIL TO CANADA

IMAGINE the province of Alberta—and large areas of Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes—covered by great shallow seas! That is just what happened 300,000,000 years ago, when over half of Canada's land area was submerged beneath ancient "epi-continental" seas. The geologist's map above shows you how our continent looked at that pre-historic time.

Through long ages, vast quantities of silt and the remains of marine plant and animal life settled on the old sea floors. As time rolled on and on, a miracle happened. The silt turned to rocky layers of shale, limestone and sandstone... the fatty parts of the dead sea plants and animals turned into the substance we now call crude oil! Then still another miracle took place. The earth beneath the seas began to heave and rise.

Pushing back the waters, it threw up the old seabeds, with their layers of rock and oil, to form hills and plains and mountains—and mould our continent to the shape it has today.

If you look again at the map, you will see how this ancient invasion of the seas left us underground stores of oil. The famous Turner Valley, the Mackenzie River basin, the oil sands of Alberta—all once formed the beds of ancient seas. So, too, did the still-producing oil lands around Petrolia in Ontario. Today, wherever oil is found in Canada, Imperial Oil drillers lead the way in bringing it above ground where it can serve the nation's needs. And year after year, Imperial Oil scientists devote their full-time efforts to exploring the sites of the ancient seas for new oil to meet new needs—and add new treasure to Canada's national wealth.

This message is the second of a series; the next advertisement will tell how geologists search ancient seabeds for the oil we use today.

Three Staff Appointments Made In Social Work

President Sidney Smith has announced three appointments to the School of Social Work of the University of Toronto. Miss Eda Houwink and Miss Elizabeth Gowan have been appointed Assistant Professors of Social Work and Miss Elizabeth Wallace has been appointed Lecturer in Social Work.

Miss Eda Houwink is a graduate of Washington University, St. Louis and holds the degree of Master of Science from that University. Miss Houwink has held positions as case worker, student supervisor, and teacher of social work. She has resigned from a position as teacher of case work with the American Red Cross of St. Louis to come to the University of Toronto. She is the author of articles to social work magazines including "The Family," "The Survey," "The Social Service Review" and "Public Welfare."

Miss Gowan was born in Scotland and is a graduate of the University of Toronto and spent two years in Oxford, graduating from the School of Philosophy, Politics and Economics with honors. The Diploma in Social Work was obtained in 1935, and in the same year she took her M.A. degree in Public Welfare Administration in Toronto.

Her first social work position was with the Provincial Relief Department, followed by Childrens Aid Work and work in the Infant's Homes in Toronto. In 1939 Miss Gowan was appointed teacher of case work by the Board of Social Study, Sydney, Australia. In 1942, when the University of Sydney established its Department of Social Work, she was appointed Acting Director.

Miss Wallace is a graduate of the University of Toronto, having taken the work for her B.A. degree through University College. After receiving the Diploma from the School of Social Work she spent two years in Oxford where she took the M.A. degree. Her practical experience was obtained in the Protestant Children's Homes, Children's Aid Society, the Creche, and the Infants' Homes of Toronto. In 1942 Miss Wallace appointed Secretary of the Canadian Association of Social Workers, a position which she resigned in order to do graduate work in Columbia University.

New Science Club Gets Under Way

The Students' Section of the Canadian Association of Scientific Workers held its first meeting at the Women's Union last Friday night. This is a new science club which will welcome all students who are interested in the progress of scientific methods for the welfare of society.

Dave Waddell, president of the Section, stressed that this organization will in no way interfere with other scientific clubs on the campus. An informal discussion of aspects of poetry. Medical dissection and Argentine's treatment of students was voiced. Three educational films were shown, "Monkeys into Man," "Valley of the Tennessee," and "Eskimo Summer."

Post-Grad Hospital Course Offered To Meds Veterans

Medical officers from the armed services who are graduates of the University of Toronto will be given the opportunity for special training at Christie St. and Sunnybrook hospitals, announced veterans' minister MacKenzie at Ottawa last week.

All over the country returned medical men will receive similar training in military hospitals, where they are situated near university camps. At the Universities of Manitoba and Alberta, undergraduates will be included while in Toronto the plan will be limited to postgraduates only.

The qualifications for this course are: scholastic standing, the candidate must be a graduate of a medical school, with at least one year's junior internship, and must have been a member of the armed forces. DVA hospitals will become teaching schools for the medical profession, and at the same time will help relieve the shortage of medical care.

Tea Held To-day For "Undergrad"

The organizational meeting of the University College Undergraduate magazine will be held at 4:30 this afternoon in the Women's Union.

According to co-editors Bob Weaver and Peggy Bates, there are openings in the staff for artists, photographers, cartoonists, and writers.

"This year," said Bob Weaver, "the entire format is being changed. Special emphasis will be placed in the literary quality of the work. Short stories, poems, essays, and general articles will be accepted."

At the meeting, year representatives will be chosen. Deadline for contribution has been set at Dec. 7. Prizes will be offered for the best efforts.

All interested in working for the Undergraduates are invited. Refreshments will be served.

Co-Ed Gives Kiss "To Aid Science"

Oklahoma City—(Exchange)—Ray Hartley, laboratory assistant, took a kiss lying down Monday in an experiment testing his slow brain waves on a machine called an electroencephalograph in his psychology laboratory.

"It was purely in the interest of science," said Margery Stubbs, the donor, blushing, while Prof. R. H. Wheeler, Cree Warden, assistant instructor, and Lloyd Hendrix, college junior, stood by.

The experiment showed that the brain is affected only slightly during a kiss, most of the reactions being muscular. When the kiss was implanted on the victim, the needle of the machine went haywire in a zigzag course, due to the flutter of eyelids, etc., etc.

Six electrodes were attached to Hartley's forehead, ear lobes, and the back of his head with electrode paste and liquid adhesive, giving him the appearance of a man from Mars. While he relaxed in a reclining position, a needle recorded on a tape the normal fluctuations in brain potential. Then Prof. Wheeler instructed him to add some figures.

This concentration made the needle's path more even, with smaller fluctuations.

Senior appointments in these hospitals will continue to be men outstanding in the medical profession and masters of the latest treatment. "The large-scale expansion and reorganization of treatment on the most advanced lines has been effected so that Canada's heavy post-war program of medical aid to service men and women may be fulfilled in its entirety," Mr. MacKenzie said.

The whole system of administration in vets hospitals throughout Canada has been streamlined and modernized to handle the heavy postwar flow of patients. Announcing a further innovation, Mr. MacKenzie said that veterans who lived in communities without vets hospitals will be able to choose their own physicians, except for certain special forms of treatment. The vet's physician chosen will be compensated for his services by the Department.

"BEAT QUEEN'S" IS CAMPUS SLOGAN

"Keep Japanese-Canadians" Is Result Of Campus Poll

Two-Thirds Majority

Almost two-thirds of Varsity undergraduates are opposed to the deportation of the Japanese-Canadians now interned in British Columbia according to a scientifically weighted poll conducted by The Varsity last week. Seventy percent of the students interviewed felt that they knew enough about the question to offer a judgment.

More than 150 students, distributed according to their relative enrolments of the various faculties and colleges, were asked the following questions by a corps of interviewers:

1. Are you in favor of deporting the West-coast Japanese-Canadians?

2. Do you feel that you are fully conversant with the facts of the situation? Approximate percentage replies on the first question were:

In favor of deportation	28.7%
Opposed	64.1%
Undecided	7.2%

Replies to the second question were more emphatic:

Know the facts	69.9%
Uninformed	30.1%

Heavily qualified answers such as "Don't deport them, but don't bring them to Ontario" were put down as "undecided."

Typical of the arguments brought against the proposed deportation was that of Pete Morgan (II Pass): "It is undemocratic. We fought against racial intolerance. I think that in a country

"The most decorated unit in American military history was composed entirely of Japanese-Americans," Chairman Don Franco told the university branch of the Co-Operative Committee on Japanese-Canadians yesterday. "In fighting throughout France and Italy the 42nd Regimental Combat team won 1002 decorations and 4000 Purple Hearts. In Canada, the government did its utmost to prevent people of this type from enlisting."

The committee's plans for informing the students of the facts concerning the Japanese-Canadians are progressing favourably the chairman said. Literature is now available for distribution at the S.C.M. offices.

Petition forms are also available both for student organizations and individuals.

This size it should be possible to find adequate areas where they can settle harmoniously."

M. Fagenbaum (II Law) maintained: "They should not be deported if the principles of democracy are to be carried through. Otherwise, we shall be following the same method as Germany."

"Why not send the Irishmen home?" countered E. H. Goodings (I S.P.S.). "If you do it to one group, do it to all." Those favoring deportation contended that the Japanese-Canadians can never be assimilated, and that they tend to lower the standard of living.

Tim Turner (II Pass) said: "They should go back. If we were in Japan they would either deport us or put us in labor gangs."

"Deport them," said Al Panter (Bus. Cert. Course). "They're cluttering up the west coast. The resources utilized by the Japs could better be given to returning veterans."

Pat Campbell (I Fine Art) thought that the Japanese-Canadians should be encouraged, not forced to settle in regions of Canada other than B.C. "Those previously engaged in occupations dangerous to the welfare of Canada should be watched and checked till they are above suspicion," she said.

U. C. Parliament Debates Balkans

The first meeting of the U.C. Parliament is to be held this Friday, Oct. 26, at 4 p.m. in the newly renovated Junior Common Room. The motion before the House will be "That this House condemn Russia's policy in the Balkans."

His Excellency Gov.-Gen. Malcolm Wallace will summon the Parliament into session. Speakers for the affirmative will be Telford Georges and Joy Sanderson, and for the negative, Sheila MacQueen and Ted Sawyer.

Ton Of Clothing Yielded In Drive

Over a ton of clothing was collected from students during the recent Campus Clothing Collection, it was announced by the committee last night. Most of the clothing comprised durable winter garments in good condition.

Last Friday saw the official closing of the campus drive, but since then several calls have been received by members of the committee from organizations which still had bundles to contribute.

Monster Pre-Game Rally Planned For This Friday

BANDS BOOST BLUES

Charges that Varsity is completely lacking in school spirit were refuted to-day as machinery was set in motion to revive intercollegiate enthusiasm which has lain dormant for six years.

Al Klassen, recently appointed head cheerleader by the Student's Administrative Council, to-day requested that all faculties send a delegate to the Women's Union at 4 o'clock this afternoon to complete plans for a mass pep rally Friday.

"Those of us who were at Queen's last week were amazed by the spirit shown there," he said, "We must overcome the sectionalism on this campus and remind students that they are primarily members of the University rather than members of a faculty or college."

Tentative arrangements have the rally slated for 4 o'clock Friday afternoon on the campus. In case of rain the rally will move into Convocation Hall. Cheers will be rehearsed and a general effort made to provide adequate vocal support for the Blues when they take the field Saturday.

Arrangements have been made with Mr. T. A. Reed, secretary of the Athletic Association, to reserve Section "Q" of the stadium for Varsity rooters. Those planning on attending the rally, should get tickets for Section "Q" before noon on Friday from the Athletic Office in Hart House.

The University of Toronto Band, directed by Mr. William Dudley, will be on hand for both the rally and the game. This will be the first appearance of the band since 1940. Financed by the S.A.C., the band will be attired in the blue and white uniforms which saw only one season's service before they were put in storage during the war years.

On Saturday afternoon the band will parade from the C.O.T.C. Drill Hall to the back campus and then to the stadium. Demonstrations of precision marching will be given at half time.

Antigonish, N.S. (CUP) -Nova Scotians who are unable to attend university now have lectures come to them via radio. University of the Air, a series of educational radio broadcasts, was inaugurated by St. Francis Xavier University here early this month. Sponsored by various departments of the University, the broadcasts will be given each week over local station CFX.

The English department has prepared a series of Monday-night broadcasts covering aspects of poetry. Medical discussions will be given on Tuesday evenings. Home management and clothing are the subjects of Wednesday night lectures. On Thursday science will be discussed. Political and social problems will be the topics of Friday evening lectures which are prepared by the Extension Department of the University.

First Debate Since War Considers Peace Plans

With the formation of an "ad hoc" Bennett, G. Howard Ferguson, and George Drew. The rules of procedure are based on those in force in the House of Commons at Ottawa and the debating unions of Oxford and Cambridge. The Speaker presides and there are two main debaters on either side of the resolution. The resolution selected is generally one of national or international importance, and it is within the power of anyone in the House to rise and speak for five minutes. To ensure being able to speak, members are urged to leave their names in the Warden's office previous to the debate, stating upon which side of the resolution they propose to speak. Arrangements can then be made whereby the members will be introduced to the speaker when he rises to speak.

The first debate scheduled for this session will take place on Wednesday, (Continued on page 4)

4 DAYS TO BEAT QUEENS

Editorial

This Spirit Business

It is untrue to say that there are two sides to every story. There are five hundred.

There is no simple answer to the charge that Toronto students, compared with those at other, smaller universities, are a sadly apathetic lot. One cannot even offer simple agreement.

Since our wide-eyed contingent of emissaries came back from a memorable week-end at Queen's, bursting with tales of the snake-dance, the rooting section, the burnt effigy, the round of parties, the proffered hospitality, all the life of an intense, perhaps provincial college town into which, for a few hours, they were plunged; ever since they came back, nasty things have been said about the staid old home campus.

Is Varsity Dead?

The commonest charge is that Varsity is dead. Less common, but more penetrating, is the comparison of Varsity to the seven-headed giant, whose heads spent so much breath shouting and roaring and bawling at one another that they never thought to shout and roar and bawl in a common cause.

"You go to an interfaculty rugby game," moaned one moaner, "and what do you hear? Artsmen and Schoolmen splitting one another's eardrums. You go to an intercollegiate game, and what do you hear? Nothing. Practically nothing. No 'Beat Queen's!' No 'Yea, Varsity!' Maybe a School yell being drowned out by a Meds yell. Nobody thinks of drowning out a Queen's yell."

The crudest answer is that our moaner hasn't been to the Queen's-Varsity game yet, because it hasn't been played. He may be surprised on Saturday. But he may not. He may be right. He may have no University spirit left.

Not If They Can Help It

It will not be the fault of the S.A.C. Sporting Activities Committee. The band is in rehearsal, snappily turned out in blue and white. Cheerleaders are rehearsing with the precision of Rockettes and the zest of (we mean no disrespect) monkeys on a hot stove. The people in charge of Friday's Monster Pep Rally are running their legs off attending to details. The question is whether students will respond.

We are growing rather tired of saying that the University is bigger than ever, which constitutes a challenge. Unfortunately, we must say it again. This problem of spirit is but another head on that die-hard Hydra. Even though we have 9,000 throats to cheer instead of a third of that number, it is much harder to work up brazen enthusiasm at Varsity than at Queen's.

But Its A Tough Job

For one thing, the University is so big that it is relatively hard for freshman Joe to feel part of it. It is easier to be a Canadian than a world-citizen. It is easier to be a Torontoian than a Canadian. It is easier to be a Medsman than a staunch supporter of the U. of T. So Freshman Joe (like his elder brothers and sisters) goes out and cheers for Meds, or Schol, or Vic. Not for Varsity.

For another thing, it is incomparably harder to organize things on a big scale than a smaller one. Three times as many students are ten times as hard to stir up. And once stirred up, they are ten times as hard to control. The idea of our entire student population winding in jubilant snake-dance down the Bloor St. carline is enough to give the stanchest Chief Constable the D.T.'s.

Finally, it is almost impossible for a large organization to think or act with undivided energy. Social timetables for a dozen colleges have forced the holdings of the All-Varsity next Friday night; the fact that the Queen's game comes the next day is just one factor among a dozen. At Queen's it might be the only factor to consider. And it is the incidence of the All-Varsity more than any other single factor that prevents a Hart House rugby dance Saturday night.

It's Up To Us

So once again, the challenge is uniquely personal and individual. The organizers aren't being apathetic. There is no lack of pride and spirit at Varsity. There is no one here but wants to beat Queen's, and entertain the What's Wrong With Varsity?

Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir,

What's wrong with Varsity? Many of us have just returned from the football week-end at Queen's. Without exception, we are loud in our praises of the hospitality, spirit, and good sportsmanship exhibited by our hosts. Living accommodation and dates were found for us. Friday night, a monster pyjamas snake dance was held through the town to the Stadium, where the effigy of the Toronto Beaver was burned impressively and decisively. And after several dances took place on the campus while 150 men stayed behind to guard the Stadium for the night. But did Varsity show up?—No!

Saturday brought the big game, after which Queen's had another large snake dance through the town, and again Varsity was conspicuous by its absence. Then, in the evening, we were royally entertained at the Football Dance in Grant Hall.

The purpose of this preamble is to lead up to the question—What has Varsity planned to reciprocate when the tables are reversed this coming week-end and we are hosts? The All-Varsity is being held Friday in Hart House, but already the tickets are sold. There is not much chance for the visitors there. Saturday night, we understand, the Queen's Alumni Association is entertaining its undergraduates at a dance in the Royal York. Doesn't it seem rather strange that Varsity has arranged nothing? Queen's are coming up here for a good time but it looks very much as if they must make their own fun.

What's wrong with Varsity? Friday night, Western paid us a visit en route to McGill. A week ago Saturday a small college like McMaster had a cheering section of nearly 200 for the football game. Surely we cannot excuse ourselves by saying our student body is too large and too scattered to show any group spirit. Here is all the more reason why we should outdo the smaller colleges in hospitality and enthusiasm. Let's get rid of this apathy. Let's make this year, the year that has seen memorable one.

Maid Marion

I dropped into a local hostelry for women the other day, to judge from the sounds of dining-room clatter, just as the evening meal was drawing to a gustatory close, when I happened to overhear a few advisory remarks dropped by the heroine of today's story, Maid Marion.

Now, Maid Marion, for those of you who do not know her personally, is the commissar of femininity at one of the well-known arts colleges.

She is best known for her book of famous sayings which has recently been banned in Boston.

But to get back to the subject, Marion was chattering along in her customary advisory manner to her appreciative sheltered charges when the subject of bath tubs arose. Marion has a very diverse field of knowledge at her disposal.

"Now, girls," she said, as she set up her collapsible rubber bath tub at the head of the table, "I'm going to show you how to clean out a tub when you take a bath." It seemed that some of the seminarists had been neglecting to erase the traditional ring when they stepped from their ablutions.

"Watch carefully," she chided as the water rose about her ankles. "You remove the plug," she said, removing the plug. "Then you remain seated in the tub," she said as she remained seated in the tub, "swishing the water about in the environs of the precipitate, more crudely referred to as a ring," as she swished the water about in the environs of the precipitate.

The water retreated with a joyful noise as Maid Marion plunged her arm down the drain to retrieve the bar of Sunlight, and as the water level fell she massaged the sides of the tub with her flannellette face cloth.

"When the tub is empty," she continued from behind a large sheet of Turkish towelling, "you sprinkle pumice stone on the face cloth and continue to scrub the ringed deposit."

At this point, however, the water which had drained from the tub flowed into the reception room and I was forced to paddle my way out of the residence on the night leave book.

occasional counterpoint. This effect is supported by the complete tonal unity of George Jenkin's sets, which in themselves would make the play worth seeing. I have never had the pleasure of watching complicated set-machinery handled so well at the Alec. If the stage setting could not knit together the dramatic action it did succeed in establishing and maintaining a consistent mood. This counter-balanced to no small degree the disunity of the episodic form.

The tale is the sad business of a negro girl and a white man. The girl is pregnant and the man unhappy. He gets shot by the girl's brother. The wrong man gets burned for the murder. That will give you a vague idea. Actually it is well tied together as a sequence of events.

Of the actors two stand out in my mind. The unfortunate negro lass, played by Jane White, a newcomer to the professional stage, who has one of the most beautiful stage voices I have ever heard. And Juano Hernandez, who played the part of a negro-doctor-pacifist, willing to take almost all the white man's dirt.

How this play will fare in the States is going to be an interesting social as well as dramatic problem. Moderate success is likely which, I suppose, will be something after Helen Scott's treatment.

All those interested in racial prejudice, the tyranny of organized virtue, and all that sort of thing, should go.

A RECORD of Fifty Years of Athletic Endeavour at the University of Toronto by T. A. Reed, E.D., Mus. Bac., Secretary to the Athletic Association, 319 pages and 92 illustrations. Written to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the founding of the Association in 1893, this recent publication by the University Press goes further back to Sir William Mulock's student days and tells the story of the development of athletics down to the present time. Incidentally it contains a good deal of University history as well, for the author, for nearly forty years on the University Staff, has an intimate knowledge of academic affairs and Toronto lore.

Separate chapters are devoted to each sport or athletic activity. The history of football is dealt with and its development from the crude pastime of our forefathers down to the present-day form of English Rugby, Association Football, and our Canadian Rugby game. Similarly the origin of Hockey and other games is included. The illustrations include pictures of the successive Gymnasiums, one of Moss Hall, which has only recently come to light, athletic teams in every branch of sport and portraits of past presidents since 1892, and many former members of the Athletic Directorate.

At the end of each chapter are listed the winners of the various intercollegiate and inter-faculty Champions, and the donors of the many cups and trophies which have been presented from time to time. A complete index covers some 1200 names of men who have brought fame to the University.

Stage-Struck? Beware!

In a recent editorial, the Canadian High News, Toronto, offered to those who have chosen the theatre as a career a bit of very sound advice. Feeling the advice commendable and applicable to those in university too, we hereby publish an excerpt.

"Stop before you start, and do a bit of solid thinking. No, there isn't a thing wrong with a career in 'show business' . . . not if it's going to be successful. However, far too many hearts are broken and young lives wrecked every year, for if you jump off the deep end into such a career without first making a few reservations.

"A young person entering industry or a profession such as Law or Medicine, considers mainly the type of work he likes, the salary and the opportunities, personal qualifications required and his service to his country, a point which is much too often selfishly ignored. In the affiliations of 'show business,' including drama, music, radio writing, art, etc., there is an added attraction to young people not common in other vocations, namely, glamorized fame.

"Entertainment offers a tremendous opportunity and, in fact, a challenge to young Canada, to fulfill the needs of a pleasure-seeking public of the future. 'Show Business,' however, frequently incites young people to gamble . . . yes, gamble with their whole lives for the coveted prize of fame.

"You can enter any of the fields associated with 'show business' but ensure your future success and happiness first. Take 'show business' as a spare-time hobby while you train for some other vocation you like fairly well. This done, then set out on your road to fame by hard work in your evenings. You will establish yourself a grand life-time hobby which even on the amateur stage may earn a few extra dollars, and you will have security and happiness in case you're one of the nine out of ten who would normally gamble all and 'miss the boat.'"

Drama

Strange Fruit Palatable

The main trouble with Lillian Smith's effort, now playing at the Royal Alexandra, is that it is a dramatization rather than a drama. In other words Strange Fruit consists of a series of episodes, interconnected in mood and as parts of a story, but betraying little or no dramatic continuity.

The only way that such an episodic and loose dramatic structure could possibly sustain itself would be by great intellectual fertility—which just is not there.

As the play lasts a good three hours, the absence of dramatic relationship between the scenes, and the lack of the Shavian substitute of intellectual vitality, leaves the show flavoring of monotony. It is repetitious and needlessly prolonged.

It seems the author's immense sincerity concerning the Negro problem became almost a handicap to her when she endeavored to mould a play on the subject. She must do justice to all points of view and to all aspects of the situation, (as she did I am told in the novel), even at the cost of losing dramatic pace. Possibly more of Jose Ferrer, the producer, and less of Lillian Smith, the dramatizer, would have done the trick. However the thorough intelligence with which the whole show is produced indicates that no one is more aware that the producer, and the author, of the shortcomings of the play. Even so, it is by far the best serious play that Toronto has seen this year.

The over-all impression is of one very long minor chord, receiving very Forced to finish under floodlights, U. of T. were declared Intermediate Tennis Champions Saturday in the first meet held since 1939, as they decisively swept aside all opposition from McMaster, Western, and O.A.C.

The winning team consisted of Manager Johnnie Pawling SPS, Clare Baker Meds, Dave Bernhardt Trinity, Ian Morrison Grad's Studies, and Bob White St. Mikes.

Clare Baker was declared Intermediate Singles Champion, while Baker and Pawling were declared Intermediate Doubles Champions as they went through the meet undefeated.

One of the best comebacks of the two day meet was that of ex-fighter pilot Dave Bernhardt in his match against Baker of McMaster. Bernhardt lost the first set 6-4 to the steady McMaster player and was trailing 5-0 in the second set when, in a sudden reversal of form he came back to win 4-6, 7-5, 6-1. Less than an hour later Ian Morrison went out and repeated the same performance when he turned back Eve of OAC by a score of 4-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Baker, Pawling, Bernhardt and Morrison were undefeated in the meet as they completely cleaned up in the first day's singles play.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Mickey Michasiw

Where's That Spirit

In yesterday's column we mentioned the unco-operative spirit preferred by certain individuals at Queen's. This gruff attitude, however, came only from officials of the university and the employees. The students that we came in contact with were of the finest specimen. Their organizational ability was nothing short of sensational.

All Friday night they stood guard in and around Richardson Stadium, fearing that some uncouth character from Toronto would attempt to paint a blue "Varsity" on the wall, tint the goal posts or tear the posts from their foundations. They were slightly disappointed when no uncouth Toronto characters appeared on the scene.

The dance held during the evening was another miracle of organization. Here, meanwhile, everyone slept. Purple "Western" was plastered on the Bloor Street wall of Varsity Stadium. Local officials have done exactly nothing towards returning the courtesy rendered by Queen's. Little wonder that Toronto is commonly referred to as "Hogtown."

Up until late last night, nothing has been accomplished toward the entertainment of the visiting students . . . no dance, no lodgings, no nothing. Some half dozen students had vainly spent the afternoon beating their heads against a stone wall. All officials approached were delighted with the ideas presented but had little to offer constructively.

Come Saturday morning and, more than likely, the walls of the Stadium will be coated with red, blue and gold, and this will be no reflection on the city or University police. Students could be conscripted for guard duty as easily as they were at Kingston.

Why the House Committee of Harf House did not have the insight to hold the All-Varsity on the night of the game is a question. Why different factions of the University of Toronto cannot learn to co-operate is a further question. We are not individuals in School, in Meds or in Vic, but, rather, are individuals in the University of Toronto. Perhaps, in an institution the size of Varsity, spirit is hard to weld together, but an attempt at a unification will be made.

This will take place at a pep rally to be held Friday at 4 p.m. in the vicinity of Convocation Hall. The band will be present, as will the cheer leaders. If there is an intercollegiate spirit here it will be partly unearthed Friday. The rest must be done at the game on Saturday.

Come On, Varsity, Wake Up!

The Sportswoman

By Polly Mutz

Ill Wind

The women's intercollegiate situation has begun very poorly. Readers of this column will recall that a tennis match was scheduled to be held in Montreal some time in the near future. Dorothy Sanders received a letter from the McGill tennis club cancelling all arrangements. The reason? Toronto is willing and able, but the other colleges concerned, namely, Queen's and Western, are not able to find the time to indulge in the tennis meet. If we were the last bit superstitious, we would advise Varsity sports organizers to stick strictly to intramurals. As it is, we will throw some salt over our left shoulder, carry a rabbit's foot in our pocket, and continue to root for the home team in its prospective travels.

Team Spirit

Rugged individualism may be all right in its place, but we advocate that it be kept there. Eye-witness accounts of the game at Queen's suggest good examples of this. The first, and most glaring, example of a lack of unity among Varsity students is the exhibition of the cheerleaders. This small unit, representing Varsity in the eyes of another college, showed a tendency to grandstand, rather than perform as a team. They would run out onto the field, lead a yell, then scatter to chatter with friends among the spectators. Again, during other yells, the girls would focus their attention on the football field instead of concentrating on the matter of persuading Varsity fans to cheer wildly for the Varsity team.

A second symbol of school spirit evident in Kingston, but sadly missing in Toronto, is the popular habit of plastering school colors and insignias on all outward apparel. Socks, ties, sweaters and even hats were glaring red, blue and gold. The frosh sported Scottish tams of the same hue. At Varsity, the occasional student may blossom forth with a blue and white blazer, with a modest crest tacked on to the pockets, but this conservative display of Toronto colors seems doomed to be swamped by the visitors' ardent use of their own pigments.

The last comparison concerns the ability of Queen's women to mix with the crowd as they belonged, rather than shyly slinking off into the nearest dark corner as if to escape observation. They were a part of the crowd cheering the "boys" on to victory, a part of a unified whole rather than a passive part of the background.

So, gals of Varsity, since it is the part of the men to fight on the field, do your part as a student and fight for your team in the grandstand with hearty cheers. Let the team know you are there, wear the college colors you have chosen as your own, and, most important, BE THERE.

Hec Happy As Tracksters Train To Take McGill In Thursdays Meet

By Jerry Ewins

The wind was whistling through the stadium, scattering autumn leaves around and about. It was a typical fall day, and it was decidedly chilly. There were sprinters, mile men, discus, javelin, shot put, hurdlers—in short a complete track and field team, displaying their wares before the experienced eye of coach Hec Phillips.

Hec had to admit he was happy. At last he had his nineteen men lined up for the Intercollegiate Meet in McGill on Friday. He expected to have them in first class condition when they entrain at the Union Station Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

It looks like the onus of responsibility rests with seven key men. There's Joe Taylor in the 1 and 2 miles, Amodeo Antoni in the 220 and 440, Jack Goering in the javelin event, Art Jackes in the high jump, Jimmy O'Brien in the sprints, and Frank Fordyce and Mouse Fielding in the half mile. That's a formidable array of talent—no wonder Hec feels so good these days.

From Montreal comes word that coach Van Wagner trotted out his track team as soon as the Mustang-Redmen feud was over Saturday afternoon and proceeded to put them through their paces. Some of the McGill times turned in at their Senior Interfaculty meet were pretty fair too, so competition should definitely measure up to pre-war standards at the Intercollegiate shindig on Friday.

To take a long range-view of things, there's also the intermediate meet coming along soon at McMaster. Hec promises to publish his choices for the squad tomorrow, but he would still like to see a little more of Noble, Baker, Todd, Irwin, Freer, Grierson, James and Cross before making a final decision.

U. C. Meds, Tie Tourney

University College and Meds were declared co-holders of the Victoria Tennis Cup yesterday after the final results of the intramural tennis tourney were tabulated. They were tied with 25 points each. University College racquetquers held the trophy solely last year.

Singles champion Lou McFarland led the artsmen in their quest for the coveted honors along with Mort Grass and Jack Fine. They garnered 20 points in the singles event and added a further 5 in the doubles.

Joe Feyerer was the figurehead in the Med attempt as he, together with R. Bell-Irving, won the doubles champion-

He peered into the Unknown

Galileo, (1564-1642) invented an improved telescope, carried on research in magnetism and gravitation, discovered the principle of the pendulum. Contrary to previous teaching, he maintained that bodies of different weights fall with the same velocity. When challenged to prove this theory, he dropped a ten-pound shot and a one-pound shot from the top of the Leaning Tower of Pisa. To the amazement of the University students and faculty gathered to see the experiment, both weights reached the ground at the same time.

IN our own day, as in Galileo's time, research has opened the door to discoveries which have had far-reaching results.

In 1921, sales of Canadian Nickel were discouraging. Then the Nickel industry intensified its research endeavours. Year after year new ways were sought in which industry could use Nickel to make better products.

Sales of Canadian Nickel began to increase. They doubled . . . and trebled. Mines were enlarged. New plants were built. More men were employed. Great benefits came to Canada.

In the years after the war, Nickel research laboratories will push on their search for new uses for Nickel.

The information collected by International Nickel through years of metal research is available at all times to Canadian engineers, designers and metallurgists who need better materials for better products.

Thus will science and industry, working together, build a wider use of Canadian Nickel so that still more benefits will come to Canada.

Sound Truck, Snake Dance To Herald Pep Rally Friday

CHEERING SECTION REHEARSAL

Touched off by a patrolling sound truck scattering a broadcast rally reminder up and down the campus, the monster pep meeting planned for Friday will explode into high-pitched gaiety and enthusiasm at 3.45 in the afternoon when the Varsity band begins to play on the front campus.

Announcement of these further plans for the pre-Queen's-visit came today from Al Klassen, head cheerleader.

Sound truck fanfare and commentary will begin at noon, first rally activity to follow at 3.45 on the front campus where the band will step off at the lead of a writhing, rioting snake dance to the arena with the sound car in the rear of the procession.

At the arena, cheers, yells and songs will be dusted off and re-surrected preparatory to the staging of the first Intercollegiate rugby game in Varsity Stadium in six years. Supporters-identifying blue and white ribbons will be on sale at the rally for use throughout the football season.

Section "Q" is being set aside as a special rooting section for Saturday's encounter. Tickets should be obtained before the rally from the Athletic Office in Hart House. Tickets will be stamped at the rally to enable the rehearsed rooters to enter Section "Q".

University Women Offered Awards

Fellowships to enable six Canadian women to undertake graduate studies in some foreign country were recently announced by Dr. Cecilia Krieger, convenor of the Canadian Federation of University Women's Scholarship Committee. Detailed information is available at the office of the University Registrar.

First of the six is a Travelling Scholarship of $1,250, offered by the C.F.U.W. and open to any woman holding a degree from a Canadian university who evidences "character, intellectual achievement and promise." Preference will be given to candidates who have completed one or more years of graduate work and have planned a definite program of research or study.

The other five fellowships are offered through the C.F.U.W. by its world-wide counterpart, the International Federation of University Women. Available are three fellowships of $1,500, one of $500, and one of $250. No restrictions are placed on subjects to be studied.

These latter five fellowships are of two kinds, Senior and Junior. Senior fellowships are for candidates between 28 and 35, who, within the last five years, have advanced the knowledge of their field by published work. Junior fellowships are for candidates under 28 who have been engaged in research work for at least one year and show promise of ability to carry out independent work. Applications are to be submitted before Jan. 15.

McGill To Direct Social Workers

Montreal, Oct. 23—(CUP)—McGill has announced that it will take the Montreal School of Social Work under its wing for an experimental period of five years. During this time the University will have complete administrative control and will award to graduating students "a suitable diploma or degree," depending on academic requirements for the course, which have not yet been decided.

The School of Social Work, which is a graduate school and a member of the American Association of Schools of Social Work, was founded in 1918, and from that time until 1932 was under the auspices of McGill. From 1933, however, it has been operated by a Board of Trustees and is at present under the directorship of Miss Dorothy King, M.A.

Jap-Canadians, Argentine Students Supported By Scientific Workers

Another voice was added to the campus outcry against the proposed deportation of 10,000 Japanese Canadians when a resolution was passed by the Students Branch of the Canadian Association of Scientific Workers.

Simultaneously, announcement was made that a resolution had been framed recommending that the Students' Administrative Council take action to record this University's sentiments on the treatment of students and staff at Argentine universities.

Text of the two resolutions follow: "Whereas the recent decision of the Canadian government to deport to Japan 10,000 Canadians of Japanese origin is an entirely undemocratic move founded on racial intolerance and discrimination, contrary to the avowed aims of the United Nations and the principles for which the war was fought. Therefore this meeting resolves to make known its protest by sending a telegram to the Canadian government urging it to reverse its deplorable policy in his regard."

"Whereas the McGill Student Council has informed the University of Toronto Students' Administrative Council that they have lodged their protests with the Canadian government and the Argentine government about the treatment of students and staff at Argentine universities, and that they have asked the Canadian government to sever relations with the Argentine government for its attacks on the democratic rights of the Argentine people, and whereas we recognize the behaviour of the Argentine government as being that of a fascist regime, a danger to the future security of the United Nations, therefore be it resolved that this meeting urge the Students' Administrative Council to take immediate action similar to that of the McGill Students' Council."

Future Is Uncertain For Varsity C.O.T.C. Lt.-Col. Wilson Tells Undergraduates

"The Canadian Officers Training Corps trained over a thousand men, as officers in the Canadian Army before this war," said Lt. Col. W. S. Wilson, officer commanding the U. of T. contingent, addressing a meeting of students in Convocation Hall yesterday. He explained that now that the war is over, the C.O.T.C. will return to its peacetime role of training officers for the active army and that membership is completely voluntary.

Although the Toronto Contingent Headquarters has not received authority to discharge those who joined the unit as a part of the requirements of belonging to the University, such men as are enrolled, but do not wish to remain in the unit, will not be required to attend parades. The time of returning uniforms for those who are not volunteering this year but who were in the C.O.T.C. last year, will be announced in The Varsity as will the organization parade which will take place sometime next week.

Before the war the C.O.T.C. in Toronto prepared men for the British Army examinations, which were written by Officer Training Corps all over the Empire. At present it is not known whether this system will be continued or not. The syllabus for the year includes training men as soldiers and preparing men who have received soldier training, for examinations for the rank of second lieutenant in the Canadian Army Reserve. To receive officer training a man must have received two years' training in the unit and have attended at least one camp. Special consideration will be given to men who have received equivalent training in some other unit.

Men who have already received their commission will be able to receive a higher rank as a result of their training with this unit. The branches for which these men will be trained will include the Artillery and Engineers as well as the Infantry. It is hoped that arrangements can be made for these men to receive training with some outside unit which given instruction in these branches. There will also be room in the unit for officers who are competent to act as instructors. This training as officers in the Reserve Army will also be of use to men who plan to be teachers and who have cadet instruction as a part of their duties.

It has also been stated that ex-servicemen who are desirous of acting as a Color Party in the Remembrance Day Services are to get in touch with the Contingent Headquarters at 119 St. George Street. Men from all branches of the services are to take part.

Rosenthal Heads S.P.S. Toike Oike

The Engineering Society has announced the appointment of Gord Rosenthal, IV Aeronautical, as Editor-in-Chief of Toike Oike, the official publication of the engineering student body. Other staff members include Peter Neurath, assistant editor, Bud Brown, feature editor and Fred Kahn, literary editor.

An attempt will be made this year to provide a stimulus for literary expression and opinion the editor told The Varsity. "I think that students are now beginning to realize that the practice of writing, whether it be fiction, poetry, or descriptive, is one which is strictly necessary to the achievement of a truly liberal education or to the development of a capable individual," he said.

The Toike Oike Literary Annual Magazine has been scheduled for publication next February. As in previous years, prizes are being offered for the best contribution in technical writing, fiction, humour, philosophy, poetry and art.

HARD TIMES PARTY

The current clothing shortage will be reflected in the theme of the Physical Health and Education dance which is to be a Hard Times Party. The dance is being organized by the second year executive and is open to men of all faculties.

Blue jeans, sloppy sweaters and bright plaid shirts seem to be in order at the dance which is to take place at 8.30 tonight in Margaret Eaton Hall.

MAY BECOME REGULAR FEATURE

Football fans will let down their hair Saturday night and celebrate the return of intercollegiate football to Toronto. Both the Student's Administrative Council and Queen's Alumni Association are sponsoring dances at the Royal York Hotel following the Queen's-Varsity game.

The football dance, an innovation in Varsity's social calendar, has been organized since last week's game to repay Queen's for the hospitality extended to Varsity students at Kingston. In addition it is expected to solidify local football enthusiasm. The Student's Administrative Council hope to make the dance a regular feature of future football week-ends.

Civil Liberties Believed In Peril

"Japanese-Canadian deportation is a grave attack on the civil liberties of the citizens of Canada" stated Dr. G. Tatham of the Department of Geography in an address to the Humanist Club yesterday afternoon.

Dr. Tatham went on to say that the government has acted in an unjust and illegal fashion in this matter since 75% of the deportees are Canadian citizens, and their deportation is a result of the prejudice of a certain group in British Columbia. This action, he continued, can set a precedent by which other minority groups may be similarly attacked.

"The government has broken its promise to these people" the speaker asserted, because although Mr. King declared that there was to be no concentration on the West coast and the disloyal ones would be returned to Japan, the loyal Japanese-Canadians were to be assisted to move to other sections of the country. It has been difficult for loyal Japanese-Canadians to move East because the other provinces would only accept them temporarily and certain municipal restrictions were formulated against them.

Dr. Tatham explained that last year the R.C.M.P. made a tour of relocation centres asking Japanese-Canadians whether or not they were willing to return to Japan and 57% of them registered as willing to return.

Dr. Tatham said that there have never been any instances of sabotage committed by Japanese-Canadians.

"Whitey" Belshaw (IV S.P.S.), chairman of the dance committee, has announced that members of both teams will be invited to the dance. A wire has been sent to Queen's informing them of the dance preparations and a block of tickets will be held for visiting students from Kingston.

Music will be supplied by The Modernaires, and the ballroom will be decorated in the Blue and White of Varsity and the Tricolor of Queen's. Tickets go on sale at noon tomorrow in Room 82, University College and the Engineering Society office in the Engineering Building. Tickets will be allotted by ratio to the various faculties and colleges. Schoolmen should buy their tickets at the Engineering Society; other faculties can purchase tickets at U.C.

The Queen's Alumni dance, also to be held at the Royal York on Saturday, is a regular feature of Queen's out-of-town games.

Jewish Students On Jap-Canadians

The Jewish Student Fellowship went on record at its opening meeting last night as protesting the action of the Canadian government in deporting Japanese Canadians. The protest received unanimous approval following an address by Mr. MacRanson, Student Christian Movement representative to the Co-operative Committee on Japanese Canadians.

President Murray Sachs spoke on the object of the Fellowship, stressing that it is intended to contribute to an appreciation to Jewish culture and in no way to segregate Jewish activities on the campus. He said it is hoped to bring about a clearer realization that Jews, aside from difficulties peculiar to their minority group, have also to meet the ordinary obstacles which confront every human being. It is appropriate that the Fellowship should lend its support to other minority groups, he said.

An estimated 300 students attended last night's meeting in the theatre of the Women's Union. Next meeting is scheduled for the same place, Thursday, Nov. 22, at 8 p.m. Jewish music is to be discussed then.

The first meeting of the year will be held at 7.30 tonight in the Debates Room in Hart House. Professor W. J. K. Harkness of the Department of Zoology will present an illustrated address on "Game and Fish in Forest Management."

QUEENS WILL BE HERE IN THREE DAYS

Editorial

The Dance Is On!

Today's announcement that the week-end football festivities will wind up with a dance at the Royal York should be an effective quietus to those who accused the University of doing nothing whatever to welcome intercollegiate sport to the calendar and Queensmen to the campus.

We pointed out yesterday how difficult it was, in an over-big, complex university, to accomplish any last-minute large-scale organizing at all. It is an especial tribute to the organizers of the week-end program that they have done it. We pointed out further that individuals would have to act; they were acting, and they have acted. With the active assistance of the S.A.C. officials, a group of enthusiasts have gotten everything for which a demand was expressed.

So there will be a band; there will be a pep rally, an organized cheering section, ribbons for sale, and all the rah-rah trimmings. To climax the doings, there will be a dance. Students have been demanding all this most loudly, most insistently, most vociferously. Now that they have gotten the promise of the monster week-end they were demanding, it is up to them to support it.

A minuscule attendance at the pep rally, a handful of stragglers turning up for the dance, will support the all-too-virulent contention that Varsity spirit is dead; or, if not dead, soundly sleeping.

The challenge is more personal and individual than ever before. You, and you, every one of our readers, get out there and support the team!

The Forgotten Woman

In our correspondence columns today there appears a letter—and that reminds us . . .

Before we go any further, we must digress to issue an editorial reproof. Lately we have been snowstormed with letters, many of them excellent letters. Naturally, we reserve the right to print or not to print, as we choose. But there are a number of letters, and some of the best, that are doomed from the start. They are unsigned.

The Varsity cannot consider anonymous letters for publication. If a letter-writer is ashamed to sign his name, why should he expect us to take the risk that presumably deters him? And if modesty inhibits the appearance of his signature, what topsy-turvy boldness dictated the letter itself? If it's worth writing, it's worth signing. Women with a Grievance

As we were saying. In our correspondence columns today there appears a letter from two girls who wonder why they cannot take the Art Classes offered by Hart House. The answer, of course, is simply that the classes in question are offered by the Art Committee of Hart House, for the benefit of the men who have paid Hart House fees and are entitled to Hart House privileges.

The organizers of the classes have no thought of discrimination, though they are harassed by an enrolment of nearly 70 in a class where half that number is unwieldy. The organizers of the Art Classes are simply serving the men who elected them, and channelling the facilities of the institution which the men help to finance. No one objects that the Library facilities at the University are available only to graduates and registered students. They would protest intolerably if the Library were cluttered up with anyone else.

Aside from that, the girls have a justified grievance, with which we hope to deal more fully in a later editorial. It is understandable that Hart House should be for men only. It is indefensible that there should be no comparable organization for women only. It was at one time understood that Holwood House, residence of the late Sir Joseph Flavelle, was earmarked for post-war conversion into a Women's Hart House. Following some highly mystifying ducks-and-drakes, it has lately popped up as a U.C. residence. We understand that its use in this capacity is temporary, that plans for a full-scale U.C. Men's Residence have not been altogether abandoned, and that the women of the University will possess Holwood Hall at last.

We understand all this; but we have not seen it plainly stated. Until further information is available, we ask our correspondents to be patient.

Two Letters Of Protest

Editor, The Varsity
Dear Sir:

Since the Hart House Art Course began last winter, there has been considerable discussion in The Varsity on the subject of objective and non-objective art, as well as of art appreciation and the general lack of it. Yet this course, which might be the means of arousing at least a campus-wide interest in art, has so far been exclusive to the male on the campus.

Is there any specific reason for excluding female would-be artists, or are women unworthy of being exposed to instruction in that field?

I for one have always been interested in "doodling" in the margins of my notebooks and texts, and though I hate to "fess up" inexcusable waste, I have, at times, used whole sheets of notepaper in following this pastime. The results may not be worth the effort, but then I'd be willing to learn if I hadn't had the ill-fortune of being born of the sex tabooed in Hart House. But I'm not speaking for myself alone. There are a number of girls on the campus who would jump at the chance of taking art instruction. Some have found it inconvenient to get to night classes at the Ontario College of Art, or to take courses elsewhere.

Any chance for use?

Editor, The Varsity
Dear Sir:

Could you drop a few well-chosen words in the direction of the individual who must do his book-buying in Hart House coat room during the noon hour.

My friend lost two books while I lost three; total cost breaking into two figures.

We were of the opinion that University students had grown above this, but apparently all haven't.

R. J. NICHOLLS,
I S.P.S.

(With apologies to Edgar Allen Poe).
Once upon an evening dreary . . .
there came a sobbing.

As of some one gently weeping. . . .
"Please fellows won't you join up", moaned Colonel Bilgeson. "This year we're all going to be officers."

"Quoth the students 'Nevermore.'"
"But fellows, think of the good times we used to have a Camp. Just think of all those lovely parades with me right up at the front and all of you right behind me. Think of the Orderly Officers and how nice they were. Think of tents. How cozy they were when it rained."

"Much I marvelled this unhoppy man to hear discourse so plainly."

"Think of the lovely lunches the cooks used to make us for the boat coming back. And think of the fun we had coming back to the University when Camp was all over. And don't you remember how we used to go across to the States and the fun we used to have over there. We were so proud as we marched through the streets of Niagara Falls. Remember the Ranges and the fun we used to have shooting at the targets."

"Quoth the students 'Nevermore.'"
Louder and louder he sobbed.
"Please," he begged, "won't you come with us this year? It'll be so nice with Major Pain to teach us how to be smart soldiers. And think of how we used to enjoy those Saturday afternoons. We were so happy together. We didn't waste our time with games. We had such important things to do. Think of the fun we had training with the Skule Cannon. Didn't it roar when we fired
it. Aw come on fellows, we can still be happy."

"Quoth the students 'Nevermore.'"
His voice rose and he began to scream.
"$(&18)", he roared, "You shall not escape me. I have you in my grasp.
I won't let you go," he sobbed.
"You signed up for the Duration", he screamed, a crafty look coming into his eyes. "The duration isn't over. Nobody says it's over. It'll never be over.

You can't escape me; you are mine, all mine," he blubbered and then. . . .

Back from my dreams returning, all of my soul within me burning,
I awoke. 'Twas but a dream.

That Woman Could Paint

M. Emily Carr, interpreter of West Coast Indians and foremost in book and by brush, died March second of this year. A well and lucidly organized retrospective exhibition of her graphic brush died March second of this lery of Toronto. Toronto students will not likely soon again have the chance of seeing a show as impressive as this; the effect of roomful of Emily Carr's painting is simply stunning in its power of line and color.

For students, there happens to be, too, a rather interesting comparison afforded between the work of Emily Carr and Lawren Harris. A gallery auxiliary to the Emily Carr show is devoted to pictures by the Group of Seven, which had great influence on her when she was East in 1927, and among them are excellent examples of Harris' early-period humanistic landscapes and houses which eventually evolved into the abstract and non-objective work at the culmination of Harris' evolution, currently hanging in Hart House, as mentioned in this column last week. Here is perceivable a similar trend in Emily Carr's work.

She begins to paint Indian life in an almost archaeological spirit, with a view to preserving the fresh primitive beauty of the forms of Indian craftsmanship, especially the totem poles, but right at learnt in France, bringing her into dis- the outset we notice her loose brushwork, favor with the British Columbians, who wish her to continue in the tight de- scriptive manner of painting she learned in San Francisco and England. As we walk further on among the pictures— their subject matter so admirably correlated with passages from "Klee Wyck" and "The House of Small"—we see that Emily Carr's love of Indian life, and feeling for the beauty of Indian creations was never lost, but we observe how the forest background becomes itself the subject matter of some of Emily Carr's grandest paintings, to the complete exclusion of its original raison d'être.

Surrounded by these waving, yet massive forms, with their pulsing rhythms, it would be a dull spectator indeed who could not echo in some measure the spontaneous remark of one obviously un-aesthetic character I overheard: "You know, that woman could paint . . ."

The concentration on sheer form in Emily Carr's middle period gave way in her late work to a preoccupation with the vitality and sweeping effect of growth which she felt in the British Columbia forests. The Gothic style of architecture was once thought to have been invented through the northern peoples' association with aisles of tall forest trees; although this notion has long been dismissed as romantic fantasy, I was struck, in the midst of Emily Carr's late work, with its great feeling of upward movement light, and vital force with its surprisingly Gothic characteristics in short. Also, I thought this was Great Art.

U.C. Takes It On Chin From Senior School, 4-0

A fighting Senior S.P.S. team outplayed their chief rivals, U.C., on the back campus last night to gain a 410 verdict and their first win of the Fall campaign. It was School's ball game all the way, they bottled up every form of red and white attack and exhibited a fair offensive of their own. U.C.'s highly rated passing plays were singularly ineffective in the face of an alert S.P.S. defence.

The game was a rather disorganized affair, with both teams pulling frequent boners. Bad snaps could have spelt disaster for either one, but the breaks seemed to go just about even. The renowned Art Staley of U.C. was more than matched in the punting department by the efforts of Keith Hendricks, whose long kicks were real ground gainers for the Engineers.

U.C. worked themselves into a scoring position early in the first quarter, but their drive bogged down and Staley's placement attempt was blocked and recovered by School. Warren Clayton of U.S. came up with several good gains along the ground during the stanza till a jarring by a pair of Schoolmen slowed him up considerably.

A steady offensive topped off successfully when Hendricks booted a single point to the deadline to break the scoring ice. A few minutes later Art Staley came up with the play of the game. The ball was snapped away out of his reach on a third down kick formation, and he chased back after the bobbling pigskin amid a swarm of School tacklers. He got his hands on the ball, pivoted sharply to his left, shook off two or three School men, and got away a long spiral which went over the head of the safety

Speaking OF SPORT

By Jerry Ewins

Just to Prove We Get Around

It seems that several people have beefed about the way intramural rugby has been sidetracked on the sports page this year. Well, the big noise is Intercollegiate, and those same people should remember this. There's too much of that wartime interfaculty spirit still hanging around—so much that the undergraduate body of the University of Toronto cannot attend an Intercollegiate game of a Saturday afternoon without emitting those back campus yells. It's really sabotage the way you people leave the Blue and White cheerleaders in the lurch when they trot out there to lead a Toronto yell. Just let some Skuleman get up and give out a Toike Oike, and what happens? And a "dirty School" at the end, too. Phooey!!! Maybe we can show off a bit when Queen's get here this Saturday!

Vic has not, as several characters over that way think, escaped all notice by our department. They have so far shown a really fine rugby team—well-coached and well-conditioned. Their victory over Junior Meds was impressive to say the least, and would have been even more so if the doctors had fielded a team that could call each other by their first names, instead of just names. Without Johnny Mora it might have been much worse—heaven forbid! Red Whitton and Marsh Morris stand out along the line, smothering the opposition's offensive before it gets rolling time after time. From the sidelines, the backfield looks very strong, with Freddy Burford and Ron Cooke carrying the mail. Their plays are good, and the team is well quarterbacked, with a potent weapon always handy in that reverse. In short, here is a Mulock Cup contender with a vengeance.

Did you see Art Staley pull off that Joe Krol steal yesterday? Probably just grandstanding.

And With the Track Team

Hec Phillips got a severe jolt today when he received word that Bob Dales, his star pole vaulter, would be ineligible for Intercollegiate competition. Being naturally fast on his feet, however, he regained his equilibrium and sprinted down to the "little red schoolhouse" to sign up an Engineer to fill the gap. This last-minute replacement is Tom Barry, a Grad Studies man who is taking his master's degree in Chemical Engineering, and Hec has lured him away from his work for the McGill meet. Toronto's hope now rests with Tom and partner McAdam in the pole vaulting event.

Intermediate Don Phalen has suffered a setback with an injury to his knee, a cartilage ailment. He was counted on for the sprints, the 100 and 220, and may now have to be replaced. And Hec worries on with only six days left to train a man for the Toronto meet next Wednesday.

By Way of the Grapevine

Queen's have threatened to send fifteen hundred men down here to literally paint the University. All frats are requested to organize their pledges, and each faculty and residence should line up their frosh to guard the Stadium Friday night. Faculty representatives are also asked to ensure a complete turnout at the rugby rally Friday afternoon.

"HOLLAND is calling! —Are you ready, CANADA? —Go ahead, please!"

Thrilling words for Betty Mustard (née Robinson, U.C. '37) for "Holland" meant husband Bob (Lt.-Col. Robert A. Mustard, M.B.E., Meds '38)—and "go ahead" meant the first post-war telephone conversation between Toronto and Holland.

Bob was rather excited on the phone, Betty reports, and although not complaining about life in AMERIS-FOORT, feels it would be wonderful to be home soon.

The Sportswoman

By Polly Mutz

Letter to the Editor:

Dear Madam:

In your article on the lack of school spirit of Varsity evidenced at the rugby game at Queen's on Saturday, you stated that the cheerleaders displayed disunity. I beg to differ. Certainly Varsity showed little of the fighting spirit of Queen's, but why should the cheerleaders be blamed? They went to Queen's without an invitation, and paid all their own expenses. On the field, surrounded by Queensmen, they did their best to rouse to cheers the 300-odd Varsity students. They did more than anyone else to bring out school spirit. Next Saturday, Queen's is playing against Varsity at Toronto. 1,000 Queensmen hope to come. If Toronto wants to compete with this, I suggest that when we play at Western more than 300 of 8,000 students turn out. I agree that more energetic school yells and more apparent colors would show our pride in our college.

Tennis Doubles

As we quietly slip back into the subject of intramural tennis, comes the news of a women's tennis doubles tournament to be held if a sufficient number of students voice their desire to participate. All faculties and colleges are eligible. Potential participants will be given the privilege of choosing their own partners this year, who need not necessarily be from the same college as the other half of the team. Dorothy Jane Sanders would like all those interested to call her in the evenings of Wednesday and Thursday (HU. 6339).

Dorothy will make the draw on Friday and will then post it on the bulletin board of St. Hilda's tennis court. The draw will also be printed on Monday in The Varsity, providing space allows it.

than never, comes a despatch from the swimming instructor, Miss Baxter. Due to circumstances beyond our control, the announcement arrived a week after the mailing date of the beginning of ornamental swimming classes. Classes will begin this Thursday evening if enough students signify their interest by registering with Miss Baxter at the Household Science Pool today. There will be three classes, the first starting at 7.30 for inexperienced ornamental swimmers. The second class begins at 8.10 for group work. The third class commences at 8.50 for those with some experience and those interested in working towards intramural and intercollegiate teams.

Students in all years will be able to take advantage of this opportunity, and no fee is exempted from first year physical training and students in P.H.E. To all other students, the sum of $3.00 will open the doors of the swimming pool from 5.15 to 5.45 every afternoon from Tuesday to Friday, and every other time a class is held in this department in which there is room, and other classes do not conflict on the student's time-table.

We regret that this information was so long in coming to print, and we hope that the hour is not too late for those interested to register in this excellent undertaking.

iversity is considered to be one of the most important of community institutions. Its activities are widely publicized, its problems receive earnest attention, and its professors are regarded as ready reference sources for newspaper and magazine reporters.

"Meanwhile, in Winnipeg, few people know where the University is or what goes on in it. The public rarely makes use of the many highly-trained scholars on our educational staff, and when the University is mentioned in the Legislature there are blank stares and bewildered mutterings.

New and Entrenous

Railways And Mr. Sharp

William Tout Shap thought that it might be an aesthetic pleasure but he didn't know for sure. "I'm not a philosopher," he said.

Nevertheless, the fact is obvious that he does enjoy his hobby. "I've been interested in railroading as far as I can look back," he said.

Mr. Sharp is in M. & P. III, on the Hart House Committee, and serves as acting secretary of the Upper Canada Railway Society.

This Society, we see by our week-old notes, is one of about 50 clubs of this type on the North American continent. It is the only one in this part of Canada and at its meetings every three weeks, members gather to discuss matters of mutual interest which concern, you may be sure, trains.

The Society's membership comprises — Mr. Sharp consulted his files to obtain the accurate figure—65 men. Their professions range from manager of a United Cigar Store, through lieutenant in the C.O.T.C., to investment broker. Membership today is, of course scattered. "All the way from California to England and from Alaska to—" Mr. Sharp began, but we didn't then manage to discover how far south the membership scattered.

The Society publishes a very valuable bulletin periodically. This bulletin used to appear monthly but during the war it became less regular. "We've done our best," Mr. Sharp apologized.

In December 1943 the bulletin gave the all-time car rosters of the Toronto Transportation Commission which the Society had painstakingly compiled. It sold a hundred copies at twenty-five cents. We were shown a copy of this edition and saw listed with admirable exhaustiveness the number of single-truck cars owned by the T.T.C. in 1920 and quite a bit of other interesting information.

This bulletin attracts outside subscribers and members. Copies of it are sent regularly to the libraries of the University of Western Ontario in London, home of Strike-Rite Book Matches, and of the University of Minnesota in Minnesota, home of Max Shulman. "We sometimes have things of historical value," Mr. Sharp explained.

There is an attempt to keep the bulletins scholarly. "We try to be scholarly," Mr. Sharp said. Bulletin 17, for instance, "It was more in the journalistic style. We're not very proud of it." Bulletin 17 to us, seemed chatty and enlightening but not, we don't suppose, what you would call scholarly.

The Society is interested in the railways of Canada. Or, as it was expounded on a green mimeographed sheet handed to us by Mr. Sharp, "the purpose of this society is to promote the study of, and encourage interest in, the railways of Canada. It seeks to study the past, understand the present, and further the future. It is interested in the railway in all its branches—construction, operating, and mechanical and in all means of propulsion—steam, diesel and electric whether common-carrier, urban or industrial."

In order to better study the past, understand the present and further the future, the Society from time plans excursions over famous rail lines to obtain first-hand data. The eighth excursion since the Society's inception in 1934 was over the Niagara-St. Catharines-Toronto (or N.-St. C.-T., as we suppose it's known around the freight yards and in traincircle) line. The excursion was not an ambitious one and this Mr. Sharp said was because of the war. But a few years ago they travelled to London and to St. Thomas and rode along the decrepit L. & P.S. trunk line on one excursion and that, we gathered, was more like it.

Mr. Sharp deplors the present street-car scrapping fad that has seized a number of Canadian cities. "We oppose this policy," he declared. "It is followed just to keep up with fashions. There is too much of a tendency to compare the bus of today with the street-car of 50 years ago."

That didn't seem fair, we thought. No, Mr. Sharp agreed. But the trolley bus! That is the thing. Mr. Sharp says it combines the advantages of bus and trolley.

While not letting his hobby and acting secretarial duties tip his timetable ("After all," Mr. Sharp said, "academic work first!") he does carry always a small notebook in which to jot down observations on the behaviour of any train or street cars he may happen upon. Take T.T.C. trolley 4289, for instance. Mr. Sharp just happened to be aboard it one morning last fall at about 1.02 when it covered the distance on Yonge between St. Clair and Bloor Streets in 98 seconds. Mr. Sharp doesn't understand this. All T.T.C. cars are supposed certain speeds. But he timed it at posed to be governed and not to extend the beginning and at the end and it was, sure enough, just 98 seconds. Wouldn't believe it, would you?

To illustrate the scattered-ness of members, Mr. Sharp though in conclusion to mention the soldier stationed in the Yukon who wrote to request information about Yukon rail lines.

"He asked a lot of questions," Mr. Sharp reported. "But honestly we didn't know any more about Yukon railways than he did. It shows, though, how scattered our membership is—all the way from San Francisco to Germany and from Alaska to—" man to pull U.C. out of what looked like a bad hole. After the next exchange Nick Volpe ran back a School kick for a twenty yard gain, but U.C.'s attack was held in check by the hard-charging Engineers and the half ended with School in possession on their six-yard line.

The S.P.S. squad seemed to take command of the play right at the beginning of the second half, and they applied a steady pressure for the first five minutes, hitting pay dirt when George Evans dropped a wobbly placement beyond the crossbar to make it 4-0. U.C. began to roll soon afterward when Sid Bossin broke through to throw Evans for a considerable loss, and a few plays later he had to a long Staley pass ruled completed on a mysterious interference count. Lorne Farquar intercepted a U.C. forward to put the stopper in the bathtub, and end the red and white threat for the day. As the game drew to a close School were showing considerable drive, and definitely outplaying a shakey and fast-tiring outfit.

For the Engineers, George Evans and Keith Hendricks were the main offensive weapons, with Spike Hennessy giving out with some solid support. Ken Sharpe held a determined front wall together throughout the game. The Staley brothers (and there are two—Ed plays end) turned in good games for U.C., as did Nels Kuhn, Phil Rosen, Nick Volpe and Warren Clayton.

Elect New Board Member Prominent In Music Field

MANAGER OF METROPOLITAN

Mr. Johnson, C.B.E., LL.D., General Manager of the Metropolitan Opera of New York, has been appointed to the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto, President Sidney Smith announced yesterday.

President Smith stated that the appointment of Mr. Johnson will meet a need long recognized, a man with experience and knowledge in the field of music. With the addition of the new member to the Board, it is expected that the University will play an even greater role in musical education that it has played in past years, continued Dr. Smith.

This need for musical education applies all through Canada, to allow an opportunity for the development of the musical talents of youth and the raising of the general standards of music appreciation.

In spite of his heavy duties as General Manager of the Metropolitan Opera, which is now in its busiest season, Mr. Johnson finds time to visit his home in Guelph frequently. Thus he will be able to attend Board meetings to survey policies of the University in relation to music, and to make proposals for the consideration of the administrative and academic bodies of the institution.

The University is indeed fortunate in securing Mr. Johnson as a member of its Board, said Dr. Smith. His advice will be of the utmost value because of his varied experience and the great international reputation he has established in Europe, the United States and Canada, President Smith concluded.

Art Enthusiasts Urge Two Classes

Two art classes weekly will be held in the Hart House Gallery this year because of the unprecedented turnout at the organization meeting last Thursday, John A. Hall, director of the classes, told The Varsity.

Over 70 students attended the first class, and half of them had to be sent home to give the other half room to work, Mr. Hall said. An additional class Monday nights has been organized to absorb the overflow. "Even 35 is a bit too many, but we can't possibly have classes three evenings a week," he stated.

Seashell, coiled springs, tin cans, gears, wheels, and miscellaneous junk are being sketched for the first few classes in place of the more conventional still life subjects. "These subjects have the advantage of enabling the beginner to have fun while allowing the advanced students to go as far as he likes," said Mr. Hall. "Before very long I hope all the students will have grasped the idea that they are creating designs rather than doing clumsily what a camera can do much better."

Attention!

After November 1 note-books and text-books found in the examination rooms will be disposed of. Students may claim their books before this date at the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall.

York Banquet Room with Trump Davidson and his orchestra supplying the music. Prizes of record albums were given to the winners of the novelty dance numbers which included students taking over the orchestra. Ex-servicemen students were formally welcomed to the body of students as a part of the ceremonies.

Critic Reviews Movie; Finds French Films Finest

English film producers cannot match the variety of the American companies but they do an excellent job with their specialty—the easy-going thriller, Prof. N. Frye of Victoria College said in an interview yesterday.

Mr. Frye commented on the extraordinary smoothness in production such as "Hatter's Castle" and "The Thirty-Nine Steps".

"The dialogue in English films is much more intelligent," he continued, "they have no Hays office to interfere, and consequently they are free of nauseating prudery found in the dialogue of American films. I'm looking forward to seeing what the censors here do to a picture now being brought over called "Love on the Dole." There are several bits in there that the Hays office would never allow in American films."

"I prefer American humor and comedy to the English brand," said Mr. Frye. "English humor tends toward social snobbery. There have been a couple of excellent English comedies, though, particularly "Jeanie," and "Laburnum Tower".

"English companies have produced some extraordinary good war pictures—one documentary film in particular done by Eric Ambler, called "The Way Ahead." In American documentary films, greasy sentimentalism and bleating commentators exaggerate ad nauseam. The English films which tend toward understatement are much more effective.

Producing Classics

"Concerning historical films, I understand the English company is now getting out an extremely good Henry V, which I am very anxious to see, and also Shaw's Caesar and Cleopatra." I hope the picture production of the latter isn't as dull as the play.

"The British go in for legitimate theatre much more than either Canada or the States. The Royal Alex. is really the only one we have here. Of course there is also the old English music hall tradition, corresponding to American vaudeville, from which stars such as Harry Lauder, Charlie Chaplin and Marie Tempest have developed.

"The Americans have no traditional aristocracy as the English have, so they fashion their own aristocracy from the movie idols as the English are interested in the private lives of the Royal Family."

"I think that the French films are consistently the best," said Mr. Frye. "They have a more serious approach to a film than either the British or the Americans. But I will say that it is to the credit of the British that they turn out good pictures on very limited budgets while American producers spend a great deal more and often turn out a much less effective picture."

Seaway Issue New Debate In Toronto

In reply to questioning yesterday professors in the department of Geography, Sociology, and Political Economy agree that Toronto would benefit from the opening of the St. Lawrence River to ocean traffic. The issue has come up for debate since the revival of discussion in the U.S. Senate on the possibility of joint committee control of the River traffic.

Prof. Griffith Taylor of the Geography Department suggested that the increase in commerce will probably benefit Toronto at the expense of Montreal. By deepening the St. Lawrence for sea-going vessels below Kingston, Montreal would be robbed of its position as "break of bulk". While Toronto would not be in such a position, it is a large consuming centre, hub of manufacturing district, and storehouse for most of Ontario. These reasons would make Toronto a port of call equal in importance to Hamilton, centre of the steel industry.

Professor H. A. Innis of the Political Economy department felt that Toronto would particularly benefit through the Georgian Bay traffic even if the opening of the Welland Canal has somewhat cut down the importance of its ports. The most disturbing factor in the issue to most Canadians is in their fear that the expense will fall on the Canadian taxpayer rather than on the shippers.

The sociological effects of the opening of the seaway was discussed by Prof. with the eastern sea-board would make C.W.M. Hart. The closer connection Toronto more aware of world events, and lead it away from the traditional conservatism with which mid-western influence has filled it.

U.C. Mixed Glee Club Strikes New Choral Note

This year University College is launching its first mixed Glee Club, under the direction of Mr. Brock McElheran, a graduate of U. of T. who is now lecturing in Geography, having recently returned from service in the Navy.

The Glee Club is planning an active season, chiefly as principals in the traditional singing of carols at the Dean's Christmas party for U.C. women. It hopes also to take part in the U.C. Musicales, as well as providing training in choral work for its members.

Glee Club practices will be held Thursday afternoons from 4.00 to 6.00 in the Women's Union, beginning Nov. 1. All those interested are urged to attend.

Bikes, Bridge, Blue-Jeans Feature Smith College Life

By Ross McLean

Having heard from the Smith girls at Varsity, it seemed fairly obvious that sooner or later we would also hear from the Varsity girls at Smith just to retain the symmetry of such things or whatever we mean.

This has now happened. Miss Mary McIntosh reports from Northampton, Massachusetts, on Smith.

"How do we Varsityites like Smith College?" Miss McIntosh inquires rhetorically. "Well," she replies quickly, it is relatively early in the year to be making a decision or even commenting upon the various phases of life in these United States, but she assures us, it is more than making new friends, getting accustomed to different methods of instruction, accepting a completely female environment and learning not to sing "God Save the King" when "America" is played.

Miss McIntosh, we presume, has made new friends, gotten accustomed to different methods of instruction, accepted a completely female environment and has learned the lyrics to "America." But it is more than that.

At Smith, Miss McIntosh has learned to wear blue jeans, her father's old shirt, loafers and pig-tails ("an average ensemble," she claims). She has apparently appeared in high heels for the writes with the tang of experience that "if you appear in high heels to lectures, the question from all sides is 'Where are you going—New York?'" Of course, Miss McIntosh was going not to New York but to a lecture and in the accepted U. of T. garb. By now, we suppose, she knows better. Informal attire is so much more comfortable, she is pleased to report.

And, she adds, they do have scrumptious shops on Green Street with all the latest fashions. She then goes on to say that these may reach Toronto about 1948, but it's hardly fair to print that sort of silly charge.

Naughty, naughty Miss McIntosh! Mustn't snipe.

Miss McIntosh hesitates to say it before examination results come out but right now (and she pauses to reconsider it again) they are finding the courses less difficult. The students split responsibility with professors, she says, and the by-word there is home-work in contrast to the by-word here which is of course, essays.

The exchanges, Miss McIntosh reports, find the students less mature scholastically; that there is a definite distinction between freshmen and upper-classmen; that there is a manpower shortage (there is, as you might have noticed in Life if you had a haircut last week, only one male registrant) and that its sole solution is to import men from Yale or Harvard.

"The greatest asset in one's life," she states, "is to know a Harvard or a Yale man who'll whip down for the weekend."

Action Seen By Padre Affects Peace Opinions

Perhaps you've seen him walking across the campus or maybe you've spoken to him at High Table in Hart House. And you've probably wondered who he was, this young padre in khaki with paratrooper insignia on his sleeve.

Then come with us and we'll introduce you to him. We stop at a door marked "Chaplain," rap, and walk in.

"Captain Douglas Candy, this is Joe College." Captain Candy is the University chaplain this year, attached to the S.C.M.

Mr. Candy looks at your service button. "Returned man, eh?" he says in his slightly English accent.

From then on you're swapping war experiences. After the padre has drawn out your story he will tell you of how he was at Grace Church-on-the-Hill in Toronto for three years after his ordination, until he joined the Canadian Chaplaincy in August, '43.

"I went overseas in May '44 with the 22nd Canadian General Hospital. They were a great bunch. I spent two and a half months with them, but only the last ten days were in action." He pulls out his pipe and, unrolling his black tobacco pouch, starts to pack the bowl.

"Then I was with the Canadian Central Ordinance Depot in Surrey, for a couple of months, until I heard that they needed a padre badly in the paratroopers' division. George Harris of Winnipeg had been their chaplain but after the Normandy jump he was missing—we found his grave later.

"I applied and was sent off in August. I met the boys returning from action at the Seine and we came back to England, where I took an abbreviated jumping course.

Servicemen's Cheques Out Next Week

Ending confusion and anxiety among ex-servicemen attending this University, announcement came today from the Department of Veteran's Affairs that the first educational gratuity for the current term is to be mailed on November 1 to the Bursar's office in Simcoe Hall.

Ex-servicemen may pick up these cheques, it was learned, at that office after that date, by stating name and faculty and signing for them.

The amounts of the various cheques will vary according to the ex-serviceman's marital status—whether he is single or married, with or without dependants, and with or without pension. The first cheque will be dated from the day he commenced his course.

Should the ex-serviceman not find his cheque at the Bursar's Office he is advised to get in touch with the D.V.A. at 55 York Street as soon as possible.

There have been rumours circulating that single man's monthly cheque would be raised to $80 and that the married man's cheque would be increased proportionally. These rumours are to date unfounded. If there is any point the Veteran with cleared up, they are advised to the D.V.A. on York St.

Group Fortunate To Hear

Miss Lillian Smith, the authoress of "Strange Fruit" will give a talk on "The Negro Problem," at a meeting of the Sociology Club on Saturday, Oct. 27, at 2.30 p.m. at St. Hilda's.

Miss Smith is in Toronto supervising the downtown dramatic presentation of her novel. The meeting, though under the auspices of the Sociology Club, is open to all students in all courses.

The first regular meeting of the club will take place this evening at 8.15 in St. Hilda's when the topic will be "What can I do with Sociology?"

had been hidden, and he had left his 'chute as a souvenir."

He grinned. "There is a custom over there for the women to kiss all the men three times, on the New Year. Those poor women were kept pretty busy because there were 10 of us in that house!"

"After two months, one of which was spent in Holland, we went back to England, prepared to jump when we returned to the front."

In Rhine Drive

He goes on to tell you about the big jump across the Rhine, the sensations, and the great success of the manoeuvre.

"I'll never forget that day—March 24th, at 10 a.m. We took our objective by 12 and had two operating tables going by 4 p.m."

You lean over and say, "How far did you go in the push, sir?"

"Right up to the Baltic Sea, and then we sat and waited for V-E Day." He describes the sight of all the westward-bound German soldiers, fully equipped but passive, trudging past the incoming lorries of the Canadians.

"Well,—then we were whisked back to England, and now here I am."

"Yes, sir, here I am, and ready to go." Actually he has been "going" pretty heavily already, visiting the residences, getting in touch with ex-service men, writing to bereaved homes, hearing the troubles of "the boys," conducting Chapel services, and taking part in discussion groups.

"There's just one observation I'd like to make," he says. "After the last war there was a surplus of optimism. This time the boys are coming back with the knowledge that there can be another war. We aren't putting all our faith in a League of Nations or any similarly organized legislation this time. We know now that it is up to each individual to make the world fit for peace."

QUEENS WILL BE HERE IN TWO DAYS

Editorial

Hoodlums At Large

About 1.30 this morning a report reached The Varsity that a gang of unidentified hoodlums had begun their rugby rowdism two days early. Some time after midnight they had painted a huge dripping yellow "Queen's" on the Bloor Street Stadium wall.

There is not at the gayest of times the smallest shadow of excuse for vandalism of this kind. With the manpower situation as tight as it is these days, the piling of extra labor upon the harassed Superintendent's Staff becomes downright criminal.

Some years ago, a group of Queen's supporters wielded an equally irresponsible brush on the smooth stone walls of the Hart House main doorway. Sandblasting obliterated the letters to a point where they were scarcely obvious, though still detectable; and the operation cost the Queen's Alma Mater Society an estimated $300. There is no doubt that if last night's culprits can be found, their purses will be comparably deflated.

There should be no thought in anyone's mind of retaliation. Our shaming answer to those who display such deplorable sportsmanship is to flourish our spirit in every legitimate fashion, but leave the fighting to the team.

Mature Behaviour

The business of stadium-painting, alluded to above, is only part of a much larger problem which should be more to the forefront of student attention than it is. That problem is the problem of a basis for social conduct.

There are roughly two forms of human government possible: government from without, and government from within; the latter sometimes erroneously called democracy (why erroneously, we shall discuss some other time).

It is much easier, whatever orators may tell us, to be governed from without. It is much easier to chafe under an edict than to frame a code of one's own; because the edict bypasses the most fatiguing labour known to men—the labour of thinking. No one—no one—no one wants to think. A man may feel that he ought to think, but the act of the will required to set him thinking is frequently formidable. So he slumps and lets himself be led.

University students are dangerously prone to this tendency; especially in matters of social behaviour. Passive before some mischievous tendency, or pushed hither and thither by agitating spirits, students will paint up stadiums walls, carve names on desks, drop water-bombs on passers-by, deprive roommates of sleep, and in other ways become socially obnoxious. It is not that students have no consideration for those whom they keep awake, or spatter with mud, or put to the labour of restoring damaged property. It is simply that the effort of thought required to act by that consideration is too fatiguing. It is easier to drift with the gang, or yield to Satan.

When the will is relaxed, there is trouble; and that trouble invariably brings grief and labor to others. The only remedy is for officialdom to act. The only remedy is for the student who is allowing himself to drift in one direction, to be led firmly in another. The only remedy is the heavy hand of authority.

No one wants authority to awaken and pounce least of all the authorities. It is bad psychology because it teaches students to follow rather than lead; and it costs a great deal of effort on the part of the legislators. But the alternative onus rests on each student—the onus of governing himself.

It is ultimately easier, we repeat, to obey legislation than to determine one's course as an individual. But to have so acted as to invite legislation deals an irreparable blow to human self-respect.

For George
An Oscar

Mr. Oscar Halina (he informs us that there is no need to enclose "Oscar" in quotation marks since the name is his legal property) has once again contacted this department. Mr. Halina it is, you may recall, who last week in another column of this journal reproached Tin Pan Alley for all disrespect shown to a defenceless Frederick Chopin. Mr. Halina's peeve of that instance was something currently responding to nickels in campus jokes as "Till The End of Time."

Mr. Halina has been to Shea's. There he has seen "Rhapsody In Blue," and Mr. Halina would discuss George Gershwin about whom, we inform the unenlightened, the picture is.

"It would be hard," he feels, "even for an inherent bungler (of which Hollywood has its quota) to make a bad story of relating such a life as that of George Gershwin."

Gershwin is great! "Into the relatively long list of his compositions Gershwin wrote the splintered purpose, the smashed and smashing might of America, her superficial insouciance and buried heart break," he writes.

He hears in Gershwin's music echoes of the "compound tumult of America." Gershwin's America, he believes, is "something virile, frank, bounding, splintered (Splintered, again Mr. Halina?), confused, plaintive, wistfully blue, a rhapsody."

Our Mr. Halina liked the picture. And he prays to the gods of such things that some loose moraled lyricist does not besmirch Gershwin's "Rhapsody In Blue" with a rhyme "love" that will rhyme with a rhyme "above". You can mention our name in your prayer, Halina old man!

Admitting that "the average English comedy is incomprehensible to anyone not familiar with English humor and customs", G. E. Bettson reports on the current attraction at the Hollywood that "whilst English is cast, situation and patter, this picture will appeal to all who appreciate bedroom farce and slick drawing room comedy." He refers to "Room For Two". Basil Radford, Francis Day, Vic Oliver and Grete Gunt, in our arithmetic, amount to four which suggests that the title is not apt—but perhaps suggestive.

Picobac
THE PICK OF TOBACCO

Found on the corpse of an unidentified Gael following last night's fence-painting fracas were papers leading to the supposition that the campus is being subtly infiltrated by Queen's propagandists and saboteurs.

As decoded by Dr. Aloysius P.Q.R. McGeech, Terror of the Underworld and chief of The Varsity's Secret Branch, the following document proved part of a cunning campaign to undermine Varsity morale.

"It was undoubtedly their purpose," said Dr. McGeech, "to sneak this piece into the columns of The Varsity, to destroy the faith of students in their own officials. We congratulate ourselves on queering this quiesling."

Text of the document follows:

Capt. Juan E. A. MacPerron, gauleiter of the S.A.C. (Students' Autocratic Congress) was present at the execution of three undergraduates who defied an edict of the S.A.C. (Students' Autocratic Congress) forbidding gathering of more than two students without a permit. Alexie Alexievitch Kazmerczak was indicted on the same charge but acquitted. "Alexie's a frat brother of mine," said MacPerron.

The circumstances leading to the present campus mutterings mobs were a tentative date for football team supporters to execute a quadrille Saturday night with off-tackle smashes in intermission. Rivalry brewed over a period commencing with an earlier game had acted on a dormant campus like an alarm clock. In classes throughout the University students were rubbing their sleepy eyes, tucking their pillows under their arms and walking out to meet their fellows in spirited organizations.

Pep rallies, organization meetings, and amateur hours were being held on all sides, underside excepted. Printed sheets of cheers were being circulated in place of the usual rounds of notes and cribs. All proceedings led to the dance, a quiet informal affair scheduled to take place in any padded confine available. Plans led the assemblage directly from the dance to the game.

Concerning Things To Come

Space limitations have so far restricted this column to straight reviewing, and we have been unable to run any previews as we promised we would at the beginning of the year. However, today we have several for you.

A National Film Board short of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra will open at the Imperial Theatre on Thursday. If you have seen moving pictures of a symphony orchestra, you know pretty well what it is like. It's my contention that the feeling of personal contact with the artists is lost in the strangely two-dimensional atmosphere of the screen. However, by virtue of the better photography and shorter duration this one is more interesting. The recorded sound is quite good except in the loud passages and parts of the bass. The material program is contemporary and hence daring. Two Canadian works are included; this must be regarded as a healthy sign, regardless of the merit, or lack of it, of the works chosen.

Aside from its moving-picture career, The Toronto Symphony Orchestra is planning an ambitious program this year. The first in a series of "Pop" concerts will be given this Friday. These concerts, according to Jack Elton, manager of the T.S.O., will be in addition to the Secondary School and regular subscription concerts. The music will be of the "melodious type." Readers of this column will be aware of the fact that there is a certain danger in a series such as this; namely danger of contributing to musical stagnation by fostering that familiarity that breeds contempt. It is to be hoped that the program makers for the series will strive to avoid such a situation and provide for the multitudes of initiates to good music sufficient stimulation to encourage them to further their acquaintance with music.

There has already been some mention in this column of the coming series of concerts to be sponsored by the Friends of Great Music. Victor Mann, manager of the group, has since informed us that the purpose of the organization is to stimulate the work done in New York by the New Friend of Music. That is, they hope to foster a further appreciation of the best in chamber music. To this end, they are bringing world renowned artists to Eaton Auditorium. The first concert is to be held in mid-November.

There are several other coming events in which students will be interested. Next Tuesday, Toronto will hear its first jazz concert in Eaton Auditorium. Ballet comes to town on Nov. 5, at the Royal Alex. The promised program of "excerpts from popular ballets" indicates that the fallacy of playing down to an audience that is yearning to hear the best in unabridged form has unfortunately extended to the ballet.

Trinity and Dents Tussle In Hard Fought Game

There was plenty of enthusiasm evinced at the Trinity-Dents football game yesterday and Trinity even had cheer leaders but even this group couldn't influence the score. They came within five points of it, however, with the final score Dents 11, Trinity 7.

Trinity took an early lead in the first quarter after recovering a fumble from the kick-off. Within four minutes Meredith ran the ball over the opposing line for a major score. A few minutes later the Trinity men again grabbed the ball in a scramble and moved it steadily into the Dent's defensive area. The attempts to pick up another five points were foiled, and the Trinity fans had to be satisfied with a single point.

Meanwhile, Dents, seemed to remember suddenly that the team acquiring the most points won the game so Woolidge recovered a fumble (what again) and ran the ball 60 yards for a touchdown. A few minutes after, Moore and Woolidge decided to play catch with the ball and before they stopped they got their team another five points. Milne converted this to leave the half time score Dents 11, Trinity 6.

Trinity came back in the third quarter to catch the Dental gentleman behind their own line for a single point. Shortly after Trinity again marched to the opposing ten yard line but their passing play was intercepted by Young who ran the ball to mid-field before Trinity recovered from the shock sufficiently to tackle him.

At this point the Trinity cheerleaders pepped their team with a series of frenzied 'Nimium cervisi's and the boys obliged with a concerted attack on the Dents line. The tooth-pullers recovered, however and were reversing the advance at the final whistle.

The two teams seemed to be evenly matched as they both fumbled the ball approximately an equal number of times. Each team apparently needs a little more practice at closing up holes on the lines. Trinity was quite successful in their playing in the air, often going for a first down in such a play.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Mickey Michasiw

Those Big Doin's Are Near

Tomorrow's the day! At high noon, the drums for a unified University of Toronto spirit will sound out when a patrolling sound truck will scatter good news and music far and wide across the campus. At 3.45 the front campus will see a gathering of the students that are to form a yelling, twisting snake dance to the Arena where the gargantuan pep rally is to take place.

These events are a personal challenge to each and every student at this university. The fellows on the team have given and still are giving out with the best of their ability. They devote three hours every night for the cause of Varsity. How about you giving an hour to-morrow afternoon?

Settings On A Frayed Cuff

Through this week as well as next, the Toronto and District Sports Forum is being held nightly at the Central Y.M.C.A. This Forum is a sports education carried on for the benefit of players as well as coach and spectator. A complete analysis of various sports is made under the chairmanship of authorities who are more than competent in this line. On Monday last, we had the pleasure of sitting in a hockey meeting presided over by Lloyd Percival of the Sports College of the Air. On his panel were such personalities as Wes McKnight, Bobby Hewitson, Corbett Dennenay and a number of others whose names escape us. Interpretations of the rules were discussed and motion pictures were shown. To night's topic of discussion is wrestling and judo while swimming came to the fore to-morrow. Next week's program lists gym volleyball, boxing, track and basketball. Varsity's Hec Phillips will act as chairman for the track and field meeting next Thursday along with a galaxy of former track and field greats. The time is 8 p.m. and there is no admission charge.

The mixed doubles tournament will be held this afternoon on the St. Hilda courts. All players are asked to appear at the courts before 2 p.m. as the draw will be posted then. In case of rain, the tourney will be held Friday.

Varsity's intermediate golfers added another laurel to the credit of their alma mater yesterday as they emerged victors in the tournament held at Guelph. The six stroke margin was attained by the foursome of Horkins, Waylett, McKay and Bain. Western placed second in the event that posted scores from 83 to 120.

PopCorn and Crackerjacks:

Everyone has indulged in the outdoor sport of watching a softball game. It is a part of every citizen's education. One learns to consume gigantic quantities of buttery popcorn, shout out the opposing cheerleaders, and spot a crackerjack pitcher in the first five minutes of play.

Varsity women offer students an opportunity to carry on postgraduate studies in this field. Once you have graduated from the every-day variety of baseball, you become proficient in teaching the players on a University women's team the fundamentals of the game in which they are participating. We guarantee that you will enjoy yourselves.

Or so the spectators of the first women's softball game reported. Meds vs St. Hilda's was the focus of much attention on Trinity field yesterday afternoon for a little over an hour, through the course of four innings. The twenty girls also had themselves a time, making as much noise as the boisterous onlookers. The "ump" proved cooperative, coaching the batters on the proper stance, and casting helpful hints to the pitchers, not to mention declaring the ball high or low.

A squad of unidentified football players forsook their practice in the stadium to cheer the girls onward, and to proffer bit of advice on the merits of stealing bases. The players accepted this with gratitude, because the majority, frankly, had never played the game before. No doubt both sides profited by the experience as thoroughly as they enjoyed themselves. If they take to heart the wealth of wisdom that was offered to them, we are certain that the quality of their games will rise rapidly.

Oh yes, the score; the game ended with the Saints having a majority of three runs over the Meds. They prefer to keep the actual total a deep, dark secret.

Another Cancellation

But of less consequence than the McGill tennis tournament, is the basketball practice tonight. Scheduled to take place at O.C.E. Sue Gray, basketball club president, announces that the team due to practise tonight may spend their evenings in some other useful manner.

REMEMBER?

DISTINGUISHED IS THE WORD . . . clothes by Joan Rigby where you will find as superlative a collection of town and country clothes as is assembled anywhere in Canada. There is a thorough-bred look to every individual garment in the place. In case you have been under the impression that Joan Rigby carries only tweeds and casuals, it is this column's pleasure to inform you that they can show many very inspirational date dresses for the girl who knows how much her partner of the evening appreciates that suave look. And a note for out-of-towners . . . when you have a mother or sister visiting Toronto in search of something very special, remember, Joan Rigby is, conveniently, on Bloor Street near Bay.

EX-SERVICE MEN are all in favor of the Embassy for various reasons, not the least of these being the superb performance of Ferde Mowrey's orchestra and the vocalising of Paul Ross and Helen White, plus of course the long-apparent fact that the Embassy boasts one of the best floors in the country, plus a sophisticated background which can compare very favorably with the better night clubs abroad. And here's a feature they haven't overlooked, namely, that the Embassy is so close to the campus that your date practically expects to be walked instead of taxed to the spot, which is definitely a point these days of temperamental taxi conditions.

ESPECIALLY LOVELY for a fine sensitive skin, Du Barry Contour Cream has a two-fold function: first use a little for cleansing, then use more generously as a tissue cream. Try it for the afternoon "rest facial" in preparation for a special evening occasion. After thoroughly cleansing face and neck with the Du Barry Contour Cream and Skin Freshener add a few drops of Du Barry Muscle Oil to a sufficient quantity of the Cream, blend, smooth the mixture over the face and neck and allow to remain half an hour. Lie down and relax, if possible. This is a de luxe facial which leaves the skin delightfully refreshed.

IT'S A MILDRED WRIGHT . . . that suit you saw at the game on Saturday which caught your eye as being something out of the ordinary was quite likely made from a Mildred Wright tweed, and came from no farther away than 100 Bloor Street West. She has those coveted Munro tweeds with wool to match from which to knit yourself a sweater to go with the tweed in perfect compatibility. And here's some extra special news . . . Mildred Wright has some fluffy, all-wool blankets which are rare to find these days, and which are as treasured as gifts as sterling, and attractive hand-loomed scarves in beautiful solid colors, to set off your fur coat for the next go at the Stadium.

WELCOME, WARMTH and delicious home-cooked meals are yours at the Hearthstone, under the efficient management of Pickwick Kitchen Ltd. It is their intention to give you good food plus the surroundings in which to enjoy it. When you feel brain-weary, cold, and in the mood for the comfort of a home-cooked meal, remember the Hearthstone is never far away, and ready with a welcome. If you want a lunch for two or have the responsibility of a class banquet on your hands, just telephone KI. 6973 for advice and suggestions. The Hearthstone specializes in tables with gleaming linen, fresh flowers and the little things that count. Whether it's a table of bridge, dinner for eight or a class banquet, you'll be entertaining in the right setting at 80 Bloor Street West, where the new coat of paint is brightening the landscape along the street.

NORTHWAY'S HAVE DONE IT AGAIN! A comfy coat for campus wear, and this time designed by an ex-R.C.A.F. officer who knows his elements! Picture yourself on a blustery November morning in this perfect slip-on shortie made in a heavy blanket material which comes in gorgeous colors. The belt is set in so you can clutch it tightly round your waist and keep out drafts. The sleeves are wing affairs, easily slipped over the new wide sleeves. Buttons are big plastic jobs to make your comfy coat complete. Especially interesting at the moment are their coats, fur coats, cloth coats, and "Shortie Joes." Fur coats from three-quarter length cross fox for evening wear to warm brown moutin for your football date.

FOR EASING THE DISCOMFORT of a simple head cold, pour one teaspoon of Sloan's Liniment in a cup of boiling water and hold the nose over the cup. Breathe in the steam. This relieves the stuffiness of nasal passages by action on the delicate surfaces . . . only one of the many worthwhile uses to which Sloan's can be put in addition to the well tried and classic one of relieving aches and pains from overstrain on football field, track or gym. It's smart to keep a bottle of Sloan's handy, it's the stronger, faster working liniment.

IF ANYONE HAS THE IDEA that Mary Mac makes only to order, lend an ear. Mary Mac has a good assortment of Ready-to-Wear dresses, chosen in her own inimitable style for the career and university girl who knows the wisdom of getting well out ahead of the crowd when it comes to classic tailoring. Good English tweeds, exquisite soft woollens, flawless tailoring and originality of design are the trade-mark of a Mary Mac designed outfit. Dresses, coats, and ensembles to order, of course. And a word to the wise . . . it is not too early to order your Mary Mac suit imagine spending week-ends at men's colleges?"

"Well, frankly, no, if you were asking us," we began to reply but Miss McIntosh had hurried along to her next sentence. She types so fast.

"It's a most accepted and desirable custom here and we're dying to try it out!"

Despite that unique prospect, Marg Whitsey, III History, admitted ("laughingly," Miss McIntosh, who was there, describes) that she preferred co-ed colleges herself.

At Smith, residence life is what residence life is here, it seems. Except: no smoking in bedrooms and late leaves only on week-end nights. "We're finding for Spring now, because we predict that with returning personnel there is going to be one mad rush on tailoring, from now on until late Spring 1946.

WHAT MAKES AN AUTUMN outfit? Accessories of course. And where to look for those accessories? The Evangeline Shops, where there is at the moment a most tempting array of bags and gloves. . . . Some of the bags come in corded fabrics designed to give an added touch of about-town-ness to your suit, they're new and have plenty of zip. Others in calf, corde, etc. Do you want a contrast to that dark winter coat? What about a pair of bright red angora gloves? And for that sophisticated dark dress, a pair of good black suedes, of course. And, oh yes, we liked those smart pig-tex gloves to twin up with your tweeds.

ourselves less anaemic looking and much more pleasant at breakfast," she adds in brackets, but failing to explain whether this is due to the elimination of cigarettes in bedrooms or late leaves on week-end nights. We can't imagine which.

Rules, she says, are more strict. The girls even wrote an exam in them last week, which shows you, doesn't it? They're also turning domestic and doing the dishes and helping to clean the residence. This, she explains, is due to the shortage of help which you keep seeing movies about these days.

Alison Kemp, III Government, remarks on the friendly enthusiasm of everyone and observes that we could do with a bit more of it at Varsity. (Has Miss Kemp not heard of our rugby dance?). Ruth McDougald, III History, exclaimed "bikes, bridge and blue jeans" when asked for her impressions by our remote-control correspondent, Miss McIntosh. Miss McDougald is handy with her alliterative exclamations, it seems.

It's all very enriching, Miss McIntosh concludes. It is not like Varsity, she reiterates. They are leading quite different lives and benefiting from it, and she hopes that the exchange will be continued in the future.

"Hail and farewell," says Miss McIntosh. "Vive les Etats-Unis!"

RIPPETY REE RALLY TODAY

This afternoon at 4:00 all the traditional pre-war trimmings will usher in Varsity's first football week-end in six years.

Combining a band concert, snake dance, sale of ribbons, cheer practice, cartwheels, and introduction of the Blue team to the students, a monster pep rally will range across the University grounds from the back campus to the stadium.

The appearance of the University of Toronto band on the back campus will herald the gathering of the clans. With the band in the vanguard, the assembly will move to the stadium in the age-old ceremonial fashion of football fans—a snake dance. Stragglers will be herded on by a sound truck at the rear of the procession.

At the stadium Head Cheerleader Al Klassen and his comely, cartwheeling cohorts will lead the crowd through the entire repertoire of "ripartty, rapperty, ree". All the Blue and White songs, cheers, and yells will be removed from the mothballs and given a thorough airing in preparation for Saturday's premiere. In addition, new yells have been prepared and will be introduced.

To climax the afternoon, each member of the Blue team will be paraded before his supporters. During the introduction co-eds will circulate through the stands selling Blue and White ribbons which can be used throughout the season.

For Saturday's game, Section "Q" of the stadium will be set aside as a special rooting section in order to provide a nucleus of well rehearsed supporters for Saturday's game. Everyone attending the rally should first obtain their tickets for the game from the Athletic Office in Hart House. The tickets will be stamped at the rally to enable the rehearsed rooters to enter Section "Q". By special arrangement with Mr. T. A. Reed, Secretary of the Athletic Association, only those with the specially stamped tickets will be permitted in this section.

On Saturday, everyone in the special rooter's section should be in their seats by 2:00 o'clock to be ready for the kick-off and a few pre-game cheers.

The coaches have stressed the fact that even the best team needs vocal support from the sidelines. For this reason, everyone should get out to both the rally and the game and help the Blues to BEAT QUEEN'S!

Due to the limited space, we regret that pictures of several prominent team members can not be run today. The remaining pictures will be published early next week.

Soccerites Play Western In Saturday Encounter

On Saturday afternoon, the Varsity soccer team will attempt to protect its undefeated record as well as its unscathed honor against a team from the University of Western Ontario.

A win will place the Blues in an excellent position to retain the intercollegiate championship which the team has held since 1938.

To date, the Blues have played two hours of shutout soccer. The season was started with a 4-0 win over McMaster and last week saw the team from O.A.C. lose out by a 6-0 count.

The Western team ranks as a potential contender on the basis of its slim 4-3 victory over the O.A.C. Aggies in its opener.

Tricolor Players Blues Aim To Stop

Tomorrow afternoon the Tricolor will be in evidence at Varsity Stadium and among the players who will undoubtedly be in the limelight are the following:

Jack Miliken—Regina boy in his final year at Queen's. He is a brilliant broken field runner, a placement kicker, and will do all the kicking tomorrow.

Roy Fordell—A 216-pound half who carried his weight last Saturday. Calls Kingston his home town.

Bob Fuller—Windsor lad who tosses most of the Tricolor passes. Fills in the starting quarterback position.

Dave Wood—Hails from Ottawa and holds down the blocking half spot. Wood is also on the completing half of quite a number of Fuller and Pary passes.

Jack Parry—Windsor boy who formerly starred for R.C.A.F. Hurricanes of '42. His display of last Saturday has critics comparing him to Fritz Hanson. Can do almost anything. Parry is the fellow who must be stopped.

Jim Crothers—Another homebrew who is a quiet and dependable quarterback, a good kicker and a better-than-average ball carrier.

Ken MacDonald—Inside wing from Ottawa. Is also a good kicker but has been troubled this season with a bad knee.

Don Delahaye—Another inside wing who is one of the best blockers and tacklers on the team. Calls the Limestone city his home.

Pete King—Brantford's pride and joy in his last year. Was the star pass receiver on last year's team and carried on last Saturday.

Archie Campbell—A potent tackler who performs around the right middle position. Kingston boy.

Bill Randall—Moved from middle to snap position. Arts freshman.

Bruce Conk—Final year medical student and a veteran Queen's outside. Is exceptionally fast and tackles hard around the ankle.

Varsity Blues Meet Tricolor In Tomorrow's Grid Opener

PEACE---IT'S WONDERFUL!

The Parry-laden red, blue and gold football team will rumble into Varsity Stadium tomorrow afternoon in an effort to prove that their victory of last Saturday over Varsity was no stroke of luck. The Tricolors will be out to extend their win streak to two straight. Queen's supporters are to be on hand to cheer their heroes on to what, they hope, will be a victory.

The Gaels will also be around in full force to tear down the Varsity posts, win, lose or draw.

To meet this threatened onslaught from the limestone city will be the entire University of Toronto athletically unified for the first time in six years. To meet the Tricolor on the gridiron will be the charges of Warren Stevens who have practised hard and long all week to discount the defeat of last week. The Blue supporters will be on hand to cheer them on to victory and to preserve the goal posts.

Throughout the week, Warren Stevens has faithfully drilled the team with the results that tomorrow will find the Blues a hard charging and deadly tackling squad. The lapse that proved disastrous a week ago will not be there for the optimistic invaders.

Steve has been spending his spare time tutoring a number of the backfielders on a few finer points of the game. Stu Scott, in particular, has been spending most of his noon hours on the back campus along with his boots and a rugby ball.

The team shows a number of injuries, some serious enough to keep the men out of the game. Ted Toogood who was on the sidelines for the past two weeks may see action although he was missing from last night's practice. Mark Guppy, a dependable middle was under a doctor's observation late last night as the result of the workout. Lineman Bob Armstrong is also under medical care with a leg injury. Whether Guppy and Armstrong would see action tomorrow was debatable last night. Gus Campbell, who missed the opener will again watch the game from the sidelines as his leg has not responded to treatment as well as had been expected.

The rest of the team is in ship-shape condition and raring to go. A quiet but determined confidence was prevalent throughout the entire team and as one member said, "We'll be out there for one purpose only—to win".

News from Queen's states that Parry's injury is not serious as first expected and that his "broken ankle" is but a bad bruise. Undoubtedly Parry will be in action. The rest of the team is free of injuries.

Coach Bob Elliott plans a stopover in Oshawa tonight and the team will arrive in Toronto early Saturday morning. From that time on, team members will be marked men. With the prospects of 15,000 people viewing the game, the Blues will be on every man on every play.

Last minute news states that Don Loukes, first year Dental student would be starting at centre on Saturday. The only information available lists Loukes at 180 pounds and 6'2".

Blue Trackmen at M'Gill For Intercollegiate Meet

Shortly after 12 o'clock today Hec Phillips will lead his group of track and field stars onto the cinder paths of Molson Stadium at McGill. The event will be the first intercollegiate senior track meet to be held since the disastrous year of 1939.

Varsity hopes rest on the shoulders of nineteen men and the hopes of a victorious homecoming are not too dim if these men perform up to their standards.

The Sportswoman

By Polly Mutz

Tomorrow comes the first test. Tomorrow, students of Varsity will show their patriotism, or lack of it. Rumour has it that most, if not all Queen's students will invade our campus fracas. With this great mob of enthusiastic visitors to shout down, voices will have to be in top shape, backed by a goodly amount of exuberance.

A poll conducted among the local vendors of blue and white ribbons reveal that very few students have invested in this worthy cause. On the sunny side of the campus, pedestrians strolling along Devonshire Place tell of hearing off-repeated school yells and songs issuing from Varsity Arena where the cheer leaders are practising routines, (maybe cartwheels and somersaults. . .) The ardent eavesdropper can hear spirited groups discussing how many minutes of concentrated study it takes to memorize all the verses of the Varsity school song. While there is yet time, get crackin' and prepare for the great day, armed to the socks with cheers and Varsity colors. The team is counting on you. The University is counting on your support . . . so help the boys to BEAT QUEEN'S!

A Friendly Church Where A Warm Welcome Awaits You

Canadian CampusCoast To Coast In Sport

Canadian Campus needs no introduction from us this week. In face of overwhelming evidence, who are we to tell you that INTERCOLLEGIATE SPORT IS BACK!

Dalhousie University

Halifax, N.S.—Of the three Dalhousie teams entered in the Maritime English rugby-football only one, the senior team in the city league, has so far met with any degree of success.

However, Dalhousie's tennis team, organized last week, swamped Mount Allison in its initial engagement.

Mount Allison University

Sackville, N.B.—The intercollegiate football series is well under way and now that Mount Allison is no longer in competition for the title, maybe our views might be interesting to outsiders.

The University of New Brunswick, as the New Brunswick intercollegiate champs, now have to meet St. Dunstons in a home and home series. The Hill-men should win as St. Dunstons has not the team she had.

In the Nova Scotia loop it is hard to predict who will come out on top. St. Francis Xavier were upset by Acadia's Axemen and enter the second game with a one point deficit.

McGill University

Montreal, Que.—Most outstanding result of the revival of intercollegiate sports on the McGill campus has been the great enthusiasm shown by all students of all years and faculties.

A start has been made in intercollegiate football, track and tennis; with it a definite uplift in the spirit and morale of the players.

University of Ottawa

Ottawa, Ont.—The University of Ottawa has long awaited the end of the war and the return of intercollegiate sport. Reverend Father Paul Côté, O.M.I., director of athletics, has already made plans for a great sports future with teams ready to compete in hockey and basketball this year and football next fall.

Queen's University

Kingston, Ont.—Queen's plan to enter teams in most intercollegiate competitions. Rugby is already in full swing and we are sending a strong track team to Montreal on November 2. Hockey, basketball, swimming, boxing and wrestling teams sporting the Tricolor will enter the intercollegiate lists.

University of Western Ontario

London, Ont.—The return of intercollegiate sport is welcomed at Western, where the Mustangs are all set to repeat their 1939 victory on the rugby field. The Mustang band has made its first appearance since the war, and again cheers on the Western team. Three busloads of students went down to McGill for the McGill-Western game. This adds an entire new spirit to rugby games. Accommodation for the girls going to Montreal was looked after by the Montreal Alumnae of Western.

University of Manitoba

Winnipeg, Man.—The University of Manitoba won last week-end's intercollegiate tennis tournament at Saskatoon.

Both boys' and girls' basketball squads from the Universities of Saskatchewan and Alberta will play at a two-day meet here in January. Teams from the same two universities will return in February for the Swimming Gala.

University of Saskatchewan

Saskatoon, Sask.—The sports situation shows great increase in inter-Varsity competition. The University of Saskatchewan was host to the Manitoba and Alberta tennis squads on Oct. 20 and 21, with Manitoba taking the championship. Also on the 20th was the first game of Western inter-Varsity football play-offs, when the Alberta team bested the Huskies 14-5.

University of Alberta

Edmonton, Alta.—Intercollegiate sport is in full swing again at the University of Alberta as plans are being completed with the Universities of Saskatchewan and British Columbia for intercollegiate football.

CORDIAL WELCOME TO ALL UNIVER-SITY STUDENTS

What Is UNITARIAN?

Unitarians see men not as helpless victims of original sin, but as persons possessing within themselves unmeasured possibilities for growth in wisdom, character and happiness. We respect the divinity in man's soul.

If, with a faith rooted in unshakable ideals of truth, goodness and service, you are striving before the altar of your own conscience for the betterment of character and for the advancement of all mankind, this church believes that you are a truly religious person.

Unitarianism assists your religious development in this respect by drawing spiritual vitality from the deepest wisdom of all the religious, intellectual and cultural movements of mankind.

We invite you to hear the Rev. Wm. F. Jenkins discuss "Erasmus, Man of Reason" on Sunday, Oct. 28th, at 11 a.m. The First Unitarian Church is at 216 Jarvis St., just above Dundas St. Write for (free) Unitarian literature. This is our 100th year in Toronto.

SPECIAL INVITATION TO STUDENTS

Varsity Outclasses Rivals At Montreal Track Meet

MUD AND MUDHOLES

The University of Toronto track team ran off with the senior intercollegiate track championships held at Molson Stadium, Montreal, on Friday afternoon. The 84½ points piled up by the charges of Hec Phillips left McGill far in the rear with their 58½. Western placed third with 17 points although they had entered but five men. Queen's could but garner four markers.

The meet was held under the most trying of circumstances as the rain poured down steadily all day. The track was in very poor condition due to the downpour and the jumping was done out of mudholes. The pole vaulters and the field event men also found the going very bad.

Freshman Joe Taylor proved to be the outstanding distance man in the meet by easily winning the mile and the three mile events.

Art Jackes and Bill Kerr also ran off with their event, the high jump, as they paced the other entrants and finished one, two with Jackes dragging down the first place honors.

R. McFarlane of Western proved to be the wonder man of the meet. On the Saturday preceding the meet he had led the Mustangs to a win over the McGill Redmen. On Friday, he took first place in the 220 yard event, won a heat in the 100 yard event and placed second in the 100 yard final.

Bill (Mouse) Fielding also had a busy day. He took first money in the 440 and was nosed out for the honors in the 880. He also ran in the relay in which Varsity took down second place.

Versatile Jimmy O'Brien came through in the 100 yard dash with a sparkling performance. In the heat he was timed at 10.1, just a tenth of a second off the intercollegiate record. He won the final with 10.2. He came second in the 220.

Amodeo Antoni, while he did not win any first places, won the respect of his fellow runners with his game display. He was ill through the meet but carried through as if nothing were wrong. Even under this physical strain, Antoni placed third in the 220 and the 440 and was on the relay team.

Johnny Watts of Queen's and formerly of Varsity placed third in the mile but also ran under difficulties. His conditioning has been none too good due to physical ailments and the mile was an ordeal to Watts who refused to withdraw from the event.

Track Coach Hec Phillips was extremely jubilant over the victory. Although the victory was not wholly unexpected, the margin by which his men won had Phillips in fits of joy. No sooner had he arrived back in Toronto than Hec began making preparations for the harrier to be held this Saturday and for the intermediate championships to be held at Varsity Stadium on October 31.

Full events at Montreal were as follows:

100 yards: (1) O'Brien, Toronto; (2) McFarlane, Western; (3) Garber, Queen's; (4) Knecht, McGill. Time 10.2 seconds.

Rev. James Finlay Discusses Petitions

Rev. J. Finlay will discuss the presentation of a petition "We object to the fact that Japanese-Canadians are being deported", at a meeting of representatives of all the clubs on the campus. The meeting will be held in Cartwright Hall, St. Hilda's, at 4.45 p.m., today.

These representatives will decide on the action to be taken on the campus; two petitions have been drawn up, one by clubs and one by individuals. All clubs have been asked to conduct open meetings and to go on record as objecting to the action of the government with regard to the Japanese-Canadian question.

Jap Deportation Discussed By Meds

"It seems to me that Lillian Smith, who wrote 'Strange Fruit', has hit the problem of racial relations better than anyone I know of," stated Eric Best, chairman of the Medical Arts and Letters Club, at the meeting held at Wymulwood Thursday evening. The topic under discussion was the Japanese Repatriation Plan.

Wesley Fujiwara, the first speaker, outlined arguments in favor of deporting the Japanese-Canadians. He said that the Japanese in Canada cannot be assimilated and that they have a low standard of living. In discussing the living conditions of the Japanese in Vancouver Mr. Fujiwara declared that there is the same sort of community organization of the Japanese all over British Columbia.

Martin Rosen, who spent the last 16 months on the West Coast, stated that one very seldom gets a direct and sensible answer to the question of why people want the Japanese-Canadians to be deported. In 1933, he continues, the number of fishing licenses issued to Japanese in B.C. was only 50 per cent of the number issued in 1922. This, he said, answers the statement that the Japanese-Canadians are monopolizing the fishing industry. Before 1941, he stated, the Japanese-Canadians held only 14 per cent of the fishing licenses in B.C. In answering the statement that the Japanese wage scale is lower than the white man's, the speaker declared that this was so because the minimum wage law does not include any Orientals.

Mr. Rosen refuted the argument that the Japanese-Canadians would some day be as numerous as the rest of the Canadians saying that the average number of children in the family was four, which was about the same as that for the rest of the Canadian population.

The Japanese-Canadians, he continued, are among the most law abiding in Canada. In 1931 only one tenth of 1 per cent of the inmates of penal institutions were of Japanese origin, whereas 54 per cent were of British origin.

The next speaker, Gordon Russon gave a brief historical summary of the Japanese in Canada. In 1928, he said the number of Japanese permitted to come to Canada was 150. In 1945 there were 24,000 Japanese in Canada, with fewer than 1,000 of them outside British Columbia.

A number of restrictions, he continued, were placed on the Japanese in B.C. In 1942 all of them were ordered to give up their cameras. In the same year a curfew was established.

RUGBY AND TRACK TEAMS TRIUMPH

Russian Policy In Balkans Upheld By U. C. Parliament

The government of the U.C. Parliament was defeated at its first session Friday afternoon at the Junior Common Room by 34-28 in a debate on the statement: "Resolved, that this house condemns Russia's policy in the Balkans."

Telford Georges, speaking for the government, interpreted the Russian Balkan policy as seeking security through establishing a sympathetic Europe. "But," he objected, "in this age of V-bombs and atom bombs, the policy of protective lands is outmoded." Instead of dominating the Balkans through unfair use of her prestige, Russia should aim to cordial Allied relations maintained through full publicity and understanding of her policy.

Sheila McQueen, leader of the opposition, suggested that the Slavic Balkan nations would probably benefit through Russia's policy of grouping the smaller nations around the large ones which would result in their security—"thus whetting down the powder keg of Europe."

The government facts on the situation were produced by Joy Sanderson, who blamed the joint Russo-Roumania economic commission in Roumania on her inability to repay Russia. According to Miss Sander-son, Hungary also is controlled by a joint economic commission, in which the Russian interests are monopolizing the trade of the country.

Wes Knowlton of her opposition said that the Soviet supporting political parties which had arisen in the Balkan states did so without Russian coercion. Russia, he said, has established itself as something the Balkans need.

A motion was carried in which the house voted that U.C. should back the S.C.M. position on the Jap question—not to export the Japanese-Canadians.

The former prime minister of the parliament, Ed. Saffarian, announced the speaker of this year's house, Gordon Stauber. The new prime minister is Telford Georges; the leader of the opposition is Sheila McQueen.

Because of the McGill game, the next debate will be held on Thursday, Nov. 8.

Gridiron Blues Victorious, Blast Queen's Crew 25-6

TWO MAJORS FOR BOB HENRY

By Mickey Michasiw

After a gloomy afternoon in foreign climes, the Varsity Blues assumed their winning ways at Varsity Stadium Saturday afternoon, with a decisive 25-6 victory over the Parryless Tricolor from Queen's. From beginning to end they convinced the "show-us" crowd of 18,000 that they had enough power, speed and ability to down their opponents, and likewise proved that they are a force to be reckoned with ere the season is over.

Warren Stevens showed the crowd that his words of wisdom at the Friday pep rally were no idle boast. On that occasion he promised the followers of the team that they would find a fighting team on the

"Skin Disease" Is Our Problem

By Ernst R. Deutsch

The first impression of Miss Smith who won fame by her novel "Strange Fruit", is that of a small, smartly-dressed lady, her gentle face topped by a crown of splendid white hair.

"There's no such thing as the Negro problem", Lillian Smith declared in an interview with The Varsity yesterday. "Since nothing is really wrong with the Negroes there is only a 'White Problem', a sickness of our own." She calls it our "Skin Disease".

Lillian Smith, who is able to condemn crying injustices effectively with the softest Southern accent in the world and who anaesthetizes a touch of sarcasm by a blue-eyed smile of apparent innocence, was born forty-eight years ago in Florida. Presently living in Georgia, where she is editing the magazine South Today, she has been active in many parts of America writing for such papers as 'PM' and others. It was only recently that she has done much to remove racial bars in New York hotels.

We asked her about last February's famous "Flat Hat" incident when the student journal of the Southern college was banned for advocating social equality for the Negroes. "I agreed with that editorial wholeheartedly", she replied. "It came at the right time, too. And wasn't it thrilling to watch a young girl of twenty-two throw some of those old, dry governors into utter confusion!"

What can we do at a University such as ours to solve the problem? "Analyse yourselves first", is her advice; "you will probably find that inside of you, deep under the layer of reason, there are traces of the disease, a suppressed feeling that we are somehow superior because of our skin."

Miss Smith believes that though the war has only crystallized the problems of the South, increasing pressure by forward-looking groups may very soon give such democratic rights as equal pay and the vote to the Negroes.

Past Jewish Crises Topic Of Zionist

"Crises in Jewish life" will be the topic of Rabbi Drazin at the first meeting of the Zionist group on the campus. The meeting will be at 8.00 o'clock tonight in the Women's Union.

Rabbi Drazin will speak on past crises in Jewish history, drawing analogies to the present situation and searching for possible solutions. "He is particularly qualified," Max Day of the "Avukah" commented, "since he officiates in McCaul Street Synagogue and is the president of the Alumni Association of the Yizvak El-Chaman Yeshiva in New York."

Smith Condemns Vandalism Advocates Sportsmanship

The resumption of the intercollegiate rugby union on Saturday was an occasion for pride in the splendid Varsity team. Both the Queen's and Varsity teams played hard, and they played the game. For them, sportsmanship comes first and winning second.

The friendly rivalry between the two universities was impaired, on Friday night, by acts of vandalism. The defacing of buildings by paint that cannot be entirely removed is unpardonable. Such deliberate damage cannot be excused on the ground that the perpetrators are university students. In fact, the offence is greater on that account.

It should be mentioned that a building at McMaster University was similarly scarred after the rugby game played in Toronto two weeks ago between that institution and the University of Toronto.

It is with confidence that I express the expectation that students of this University will demonstrate that they are not impelled to despoil the property of any neighbouring university in order to develop that college spirit which, in itself, is a highly laudable objective.

That demonstration will be more pointed if there is no yielding to any temptation to retaliate.

It has been decided to x-ray all medical students every year. The appointments must be made at once as the time allotted is Oct. 31 to Nov. 7.

CORRECTION

The Avukah meeting will be held at 8:15 in the Women's Union tonight, and not Friday as erroneously advertised in a recent issue.

Complain No More It Can Be Worse

Of interest to Toronto students who complain of crowded camps are statistics on over 1,250 American and Canadian colleges and universities listed in the 1943 Year Book of the Encyclopaedia Americana.

According to these figures, this year's 9,000-odd enrolment at the University of Toronto was outstripped fourfold by New York University four years ago. In 1941-42, New York had 35,273 students enrolled, slightly over a third of them women.

Largest teaching staff listed was that of Columbia University, 3,096. Columbia also had the largest income, with over $159,275,000. Honors for the largest library went to Yale University, which boasts over three million volumes in its stacks.

Five of Our Fighters

on the injured list for the past two weeks along with Woodyatt, the latter recovered in time for Saturday's game but was knocked out for the season with a knee injury only minutes after he had entered the game.

New Campus Club Makes Resolutions

First action of the newly-formed U. of T. Labor-Progressive Club was the drafting of two resolutions, one protesting the deportation of Japanese-Canadians, the other stressing kinship with the students of Argentina.

At the first meeting of the club last Friday it was decided to commend the Student Society of McGill University "for its expression of solidarity with the students of Argentina in their struggle for democracy", and to urge the S.A.C. and other student bodies of this campus to take similar action. Texts of the resolution will be sent to McGill, as well as to the S.A.C., campus organizations and to the Argentine Consul in Toronto. A similar decision regarding Japanese-Canadians was adopted.

After the interim executive under chairman Kenneth Morrison had been confirmed, a motion was carried, which joined the L.P.P. Club to the newly-formed National Federation of Labor Youth. The latter, it was pointed out by Marguerite Jersak, secretary, is an affiliation of progressive anti-fascist clubs and organizations, which take part in social activities as well as in political action, such as the support recently rendered to the Ford strikers in Windsor.

It was also decided to hold ten lectures on "The Science of History", among study groups within the club. The first open meeting will be addressed by Stanley Ryerson, Educational Director of the L.P.P., on Tuesday, October 30th, at 8.00 p.m., at the Women's Union.

"Members of all faculties who take an interest in progress and The Labor Movement are invited to attend", Henry Rosenthal, educational secretary said.

Editorial

The Summing-Up

We are not sure what drives people to paint stone buildings, but we used to be told that there are many ways of leaving one's mark upon the world, and that men may be measured by the means they choose.

By this test, the Queensmen who splashed red "Q's" on the porous sandstone pillars of Convocation Hall Friday night have forfeited all right to be treated as students at a seat of higher learning. By fulfilling and even overdoing the legendary pattern of Joe College, they have done the name of every Canadian university irreparable harm. The scars they have left in the reputation which all of us must share are deeper and more damaging than any blemishes on any building.

There is nothing more to say that we have not already said, or that President Smith has not reiterated in his message on today's front page.

The place of higher education in the public esteem is not so secure that it can withstand senseless shocks of this kind.

THE GREAT WEEK-END

All in all, though it was for Toronto students the kind of weekend that is never quite forgotten, or worth forgetting.

There was no failing in Varsity spirit, throughout those all-but-sleepless 36 hours. From the whooping, howling Pep Rally, where an estimated 4,000 students braved icy rain to meet the team and rehearse their cheers, to the last vociferous "Ripperty Ree" of the Rugby Dance, the rugby weekend spirit was alive and buoyant.

It is not unfair to single out for special bouquets Head Cheer-Leader Al Klassen, whose cartwheeling squad caught everyone's fancy; Whitey Belshaw, tireless powerhouse behind the precedent-breaking Rugby Dance; and the members of the much-maligned S.A.C. executive, whose work in organizing the pep rally, outfitting the band, and arranging for the dance, made the whole week-end possible.

SOMETHING WAS BORN

There is no reason to doubt that the week-end's wonderful spirit will persist, for it was something subtly more than it seemed to be. Though the rallying-cry was "Beat Queen's!", the cohesive principle was "Yea Varsity!" Next week-end's "Beat Western!" will fan that spirit anew, but it will not in itself account for that spirit. And when the playing fields are piled with snow, and there are no longer Queen's and Western and McGill to beat, the spirit which was kindled this week-end will burn on. A new university pride has entered the campus; something that wartime isolation almost banished, but that cannot altogether die. Last week-end its lusty youth was renewed.

Nor will it die, for anyone who has experienced it. Because of this football week-end, The Blue and White will ring with peculiar poignancy in the ears of those of us who are still singing fifty years from now. Because of this week-end, we shall feel a thrill in the name of Toronto University which is denied to graduates of the last few years. This week-end made us suddenly University-conscious once more; and whether we understood it or not, we were this week-end participating in a creative experience.

Books

All This Difference

Perhaps someone else should have reviewed All This Difference (Progress Books, $3.25). For it is one of those social novels in which weakness in writing technique must be balanced against purpose and content and achievement. The literary pursuit and the dogmatic political partisan both know exactly how to deal with such novels; I am not always so certain, in spite of my own interest in the social functions of literature.

Presumably Dorothy Dumbrille is a new author; I do not recall anything else of hers, either book length or otherwise, and no other works are listed in front of this book. Most of the faults found in All This Difference are those of a young writer; clashes between what the reader senses was aspired to and actual achievement; passages of exposition which frequently seem like excerpts from a sociology tract and which often elaborate what has been established by other means; and dialogue which is sometimes weak, hurried, uncertain and much less full of meaning and dramatic feeling than it should have been. And, as in most social novels, characters tend to become types rather than living people.

The plot is built around the social and religious implications of a love affair between Wendie MacMillan and Raoul Faubert. Although the Scottish inhabitants of Glenagarry County still own most of the land their ancestors settled, they are struggling against poverty and foreclosure. The newer French-Canadian settlers are struggling against poverty and assimilation and for the cause of security which even debt-ridden land can give.

Near the end of the book Raoul dies. Miss Dumbrille makes no effort to detail a certain solution to the novel's central problem, even on the personal level where such a problem is frequently resolved. This seems to me to be an intelligent stand to take; for the division is much too complex and bitter to be glossed over with the simplicity of a personal solution, and an equally simplified solution based on the acceptance of a single political or economic theory would be particularly dangerous. What is required of our social novelists is the necessary prelude to some eventual conclusion—clarification, full understanding and a re-thinking of the basic difficulties in all their manifold aspects.

"Somehow Wendie and Raoul were symbolic of a greater tragedy than their own . . . victims of the present social economic and political system, sacrifices on the altar of intolerance and prejudice." This should be pointed out to bigots in this province and Quebec. And it would not hurt any of us to read All This Difference. For it is not filled with the filthy disdain of tolerance but with a finer sympathy based on intelligence and understanding.

ROBERT WEAVER

McGeech Is Back

"Q" had struck again.

Dripping with insult from every post and pillar was his gory trademark. For Dr. Aloysius P.Q.R. McGeech, Terror of the Underworld, there could be no respite. The arch-fiend was on the loose once more.

Fresh from a year of lying low, the fiend had been satanically active. But his activity, for all the flamboyance of his painted trademark, was on an incomprehensibly tiny scale. There were but two casualties. The third toe was missing from the crumbling, brown, left foot of Rachel, the Museum's most popular mummy. And from the Tuck Shop's underground research lab, buried in the bowels of Hart House next to the subterranean offices of the Knitting Committee, there had vanished one Atomic Hamburger.

It was a case for McGeech.

McGeech was summoned. Steinmug summoned him, Steinmug of Amsterdam, Steinmug whose researches into the Theory of Doolebugs had brought him international acclaim.

It was Steinmug's peculiarity that he shunned the laboratories, preferring to work in a tent pitched atop the Hart House tower. To that tent he summoned McGeech.

"Gad!" Said McGeech.

"It is worse than you think," muttered Steinmug.

"Not that . . .?"

"Yes. He who holds the secret of the Atomic Hamburger holds the key to the Schoolman's stomach. He who holds that, holds the world."

"Say no more, Dr. Steinmug," said McGeech, drawing himself up to full height and gesturing violently with his fountain pen through the top of the tent, "it will go no further. It must be—will be—stopped."

Then McGeech paused, rapt in thought. As he unwrapped himself, he asked, "But what of the mummy's toe?" "That," said Dr. Steinmug stiffly, "is none of my affair. As Director of the Department of Internal Research, I am responsible only for the Atomic Hamburger. For the rest, I refer you to the Department of Mummyology."

McGeech seethed inwardly. Departmental rivalry again.

He would swear that there was some connection. Somewhere, deep in the tortuous brain of "Q", there existed a pattern into which fitted the mummy's toe and the Atomic Hamburger as essential and mutually dependent links. What that pattern of crime might be he could only guess.

But it was too much to suppose that the Atomic Hamburger and Rachel's toe could have disappeared the same night independently. Such things do not happen by chance. Throughout, McGeech detected darkly the hand of "Q".

He detected something else. As he stood there, thinking, in Steinmug's tower-top tent, he detected a distant humming.

McGeech recalled that humming. Once, in the jungles of the Lower Limpopo, he had heard an identical drone from the wings of the Tch-Tch flies, deadly foes of interloping man. One Tch-tch fly could demolish a pair of pants; twenty, a tent. They were under aerial attack!

With a lunge he pulled the startled Steinmug to the floor. An instant later, amid a prodigious humming, the scalpel-like teeth of Tch-Tch flies began to rend the tent to tatters.

There are no Tch-Tch flies in Toronto. They could only be creatures of "Q".

Barely had McGeech drawn this deduction, when a Tch-Tch fly attacked his right-hand trouser leg. An instant later, he was pantless on the tower-top by night. And—inexplicable, this—Steinmug had vanished. McGeech looked about him in dismay.

Horrors! What is this? Don't miss next week's thrilling instalment!

Adaskins At Wymilwood

The first of the fortnightly Wymilwood Sunday evening musicales took place last evening, at which the artists were two local musicians of wide repute, Harry Adaskin, violinist, and Frances Marr, pianist-accompanist. Until this concert, we had known Harry Adaskin only through his unanimously excellent reputation, which was fully borne out at our first acquaintance with him last night as an executive artist.

The chief offering in this programme of stimulating variety was the very beautiful Poème, by Chausson, which also was accorded the best performance of all.

The Poème was preceded by an early Beethoven Sonata for violin and piano, in F-major, groundlessly and illegitimately called Springtime.

Mr. Adaskin brought the recital to a close by a group of three shorter selections: a violin transcription of Lenski's aria from Eugen Onegin by Tchaikowski, Debussy's Girl with the Flaxen Hair, and a Prælude by Bach.

Frances Marr collaborated to perfection, and was, technically, the more proficient of the two. It would appear that Mr. Adaskin's technique does not always allow him to realize what his artistic conscience dictates, but this criticism is based, we repeat, on our first, and rather short, acquaintance with him.

The pleasant atmosphere and instructive value of the evening was greatly enhanced by Mr. Adaskin's own illuminating comments, with which he preceded each work he performed.

MODERN MINSTRELS

It was a fortunate discovery for American audiences when Richard Dyer-Bennet found that folk-songs and ballads make good concert material. This is especially the case when they are coupled with the artistic presentations in which Mr. Dyer-Bennet specializes.

An audience at Eaton Auditorium last Thursday was enthusiastic about a typical selection of these songs. The enthusiasm stemmed from three sources, namely, the artist's pleasant fluent singing, his dramatic ability, and the subject matter of the songs themselves.

One of the most interesting aspects of the songs is that they give the lie to the contention that the chief traditions of American music come from Indian and Negro sources. They show that there is a more varied and more natural source of inspiration for an American School.

—PHILIP FREEDMAN.

'POPS' CONCERT

The Victory Program of the 'Pops' concert on Friday night brought to fruition the pertinent remark that "music is the only true democracy." The first half of the program was dedicated to the music of the United Nations and, in all, 13 countries were represented. Smetana of Czechoslovakia, Grieg of Norway, Sullivan of England, Rimsky-Korsakov of Russia, Farnon of Canada and Sousa of the United States—the inspirations of all these masters bespoke the spirit of their homelands.

The outstanding feature of the evening was Chopin's Nocturne in E Flat and this was due to the masterful touch of the first violinist of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, Elie Spivak, in the solo part of the number.

The contribution of France were two selections from Opera, Micaela's aria from Bizet's Carmen, and the ever-popular Waltz Song from the Gounod Romeo and Juliet. These were sung by the brilliant young soprano, Claire Gagnier. Miss Gagnier with her lovely lilting tones captivated her audience.

Appropriately enough, Beethoven's famed victory Symphony No. 5 in C Minor occupied the latter half of the program and was well performed. Thus the first of the winter series of 'Pops' concerts opened on a triumphant note and it is eagerly anticipated that the remaining performances will be as successful.

Power, Speed, Fighting Spirit Give Blues Decisive Victory

The Gaels looked like just another team without the field leadership of Jack Parry whose injury will keep him out of the game for at least another two weeks. While Jack Milliken carried a portion of the play, it was Roy Fuller that carried the play against the Blues. Fuller's passing was spectacular but he picked the wrong day to uncover it as Mel Lawson's display far overshadowed his best efforts. Pete King was another standout with his pass receiving and his deadly downfield tackling. Other Gaels who proved thorns in the sides of the Blues were Andy Kniesswasser, Don Delchay and Bob Stevens before he was injured.

The first thrill of the game came part way through the opening quarter as Grass blocked a Queen's kick and dribbled it down the field before Milliken recovered it on his own six. On the next play, Grass again blocked the kick, caught the ball as it came down and carried it over the line. Scott converted.

For the rest of the first half play ranged back and forth until three straight first downs placed Queen's in Varsity territory. Milliken's attempted placement from the 43 was far too short and low. Halftime score was Varsity 6, Queen's 0.

After the boisterous halftime crowd had been cleared away, Mel Lawson unbound two passes, one to brother Gord and the second to Lawrence over the line. Scott again converted. A steady downfield march paved the way for a short placement attempt by Stu Scott which he made good. With the score 15-0 against them, Queen's took over the attack with Fuller heaving the passes. A twenty yard forward to Kniesswasser gave them their only major which Milliken converted.

A Lawson-Henry pass went 40 yards through the air and Henry took it the rest of the way. The convert was not good. In the closing minutes of the game, Queen's tried passing from deep in their own zone and Bob Henry intercepted on the 32 and ran over for the unconverted major.

Another Win For Soccer Men

Sparked by Willie Clarkson's "hat-trick", the Varsity soccer squad said it with goals on Saturday afternoon on the front campus as a fairly strong Western outfit went down to a 6-1 defeat. The Blues victory was the third in as many starts, and puts them solidly in first place.

After 20 minutes of evenly distributed play Roy Shinobu took a header from the toe of Doug Eaton and found the upper right hand corner of the net to put Varsity one up. For the remainder of the first half Varsity carried the play to Western but some solid defensive work by Mustang backs Eaton and Down kept the Toronto forwards in check. A momentary defensive lapse a minute before half time however allowed Willie Clarkson to register his first goal of three with a scorching drive on a pass taken from Dave Boyd at outside left.

Varsity opened the second half pressing even harder and at the 15 minute mark hit pay-dirt again with two quick tallies.

The last three minutes saw three snappy goals as play ranged up and down the field very quickly. Roy Shinobu collected his second of the day while Willie Clarkson drove through a maze of players in the Western goal-mouth for his third counter and the team's sixth.

The teams: Western—McPherson, Eaton, Down, Speidel, Szabo, Bousfield, Cox, Graham, Smith, Jackson, Tomlinson, Hall and Zargour.

Varsity—Elliott, Bell-Irving, Fyfe, Clarkson M, Hassonali, Thompson, Eaton, Clarkson W, Riguero, Shinobu, Boyd, Mayne and Spooner.

This Atomic Age

The charges that the University of Toronto has never had a unified college spirit was disproved Saturday afternoon when that spirit, suppressed through six wartime, football-less years, exploded in the faces of the Queen's Tricolor supporters.

After a lethargic beginning, the cheer leaders and the crowd warmed up until, at half-time, the detonator exploded. As one stadium veteran stated, "It was the best half-time football game I've witnessed in twenty years." The impromptu tackles, tug-o-wars, fisticuffs and catch-as-catch-can added the long forgotten color to the game.

At any other time, in polite circles, such tactics would be considered as an evidence of bad breeding or poor taste, but not so Saturday! Rather, they served as a detonating cap which resulted in yells of "Yea Varsity" and "Yea Toronto" instead of the customary college or faculty scrambles. And rightly so!

Now that Varsity spirit has been rediscovered, the next problem is to keep it on the same level pitch or to improve it if there is room for improvement. Next Saturday, the Blues take on the mansize job of making the Western Mustangs say "uncle". They will need every bit of moral assistance that the accompanying students can give them. A BEAT WESTERN RALLY prior to Saturday's game would help the cause no little.

Victory Weekend

There was good cause for all the joyous celebrating that shook forth after the game. Hee Phillip's track and field men stole all the honors at McGill in the senior intercollegiate meet. Then came the football victory coupled with the soccer triumph. . . . The city police must be congratulated on the way they handled the snake dance in the downtown area. Physical force came second to psychology which was the shining point as the spark was there for a Buenos Aires reaction. . . . Jack Parry's absence had the Blues in almost as bad a mood as the Tricolor. The common feeling before the game was that the Tricolor would be trampled whether Parry was in the game or not and the Blue and White indicated that this feeling was well founded. . . . Middle Bob Stevens may be out of action come the Queen's-McGill game Saturday. The Gaels took a terrific physical beating from the charging Varsity line. . . . Joe Woodyatt, back from injuries, is on the shelf again with his leg injury.

The Sportswoman

By Polly Mutz

You Had It Coming Queen's!

Yes sirree, Varsity rugby has started to percolate. The premature boasting of our students about the greatness of their rugby team was not in vain. The women of Varsity fulfilled their part of the bargain as well, a great majority turning up in section "Q", and gladly suffering laryngitis to yell "Hold that line!" The girls of one University residence organized a parade up to the game, carrying a large blue banner. The cheerleaders deserve much praise for spirited routine, and even cartwheels. . . . the appreciation of which was evidenced by the cries on all sides for "More-More." Our attentive ear did not catch a single faculty yell to sever the unity of the "all out" effort to drown persistent "Oil Thighs". If this is what men's intercollegiate sports do to Varsity, maybe Women's intercollegiate activities will help to unify Varsity still more.

Our Chance

To share the glory comes when the swimming meet takes place in Toronto. There will be two swimming meets, the first to occur in January at the opening Athletic Night, and is to be strictly intramural. The second affair will be the drawing card of the last Athletic Night. Since the women proved to be such staunch supporters of the intercollegiate games, we hope the men will reciprocate, and show an equal amount of interest in the swimming "do".

To qualify for a swimming team, a student must appear at five practices. The individual college meets are scheduled to be completed by the second week in December. The swift shallow dives of the competitors will be executed in the U.T.S. pool.

Chase To The Base

Vic I and P.H.E. went to bat Friday afternoon in Trinity Field, which seems doomed to be burnt up by the number and swiftness of the runs executed on its surface. The score was 12-8 in favor of the Physical Ed. girls. P.H.E. registered ten runs in the first inning, until the Vic team got organized. Vic seems to have player, Doodle Brown, under contract. Doodle has the responsible job of guarding the Vic, first base. Critics whistle long and lowly when asked to describe her hitting technique. Baseball fans . . . here is a candidate for a women's all-star team.

College Spirit on the Loose During One Wild Week-End

University of Toronto spirit, dormant for six years, exploded on the campus over the weekend!

The detonating cap was affixed at the pre-game pep rally held at the Stadium on Friday as some 1,200 students braved the drizzling rain to practise the yells and songs. Warren Stevens took time out from scrimmage to introduce the team members to the assembly.

Friday night brought out the shock troops to guard the stadium as over-enthusiastic students from Queen's attacked with paint. The hot rivals pitched in with fists, paint, white wash and even hair clippers. Three would-be-heroes from the Limestone city returned there minus hair in the form of a "T".

The detonator exploded at the game! The Tricolor supporters marched in behind their traditional pipe band and had no sooner reached their seats when a flour "Q" appeared on the centre field stripe.

Their ire roused, Varsity supporters went all out to swamp their rivals. Under the well-precisioned cheerleaders, the rooters gave out with lusty yells. The Blue and White band led the students in songs while Queen's followers looked enviously on.

An ardent group of Varsityites formed a snake line in the stadium and slipped out onto Bloor before the watchful police could interfere. The line gathered re-enforcement as it went east along Bloor Street.

Down Yonge Street went this boisterous mob, much to the grievance of the city police. Attempts to stop the line failed at Gerrard and again at Dundas but three supposed "ring leaders" were picked up by prowling squad cars. The line led into a downtown theatre where it wound through the aisles, across the stage and through the lobbies amidst yell of "We beat Queen's" and "We'll beat Western."

The football dance proved to be the most orderly event of the day as the doors separating the Queen's merry-makers were thrown open. Colors were exchanged and college differences were forgotten.

With Their 'Paint' Down

By Ross McLean

Three sons of Queen's returned to alma mater as heroes today.

They were those who succeeded shortly after 6 a.m. Saturday in penetrating a watch-weary cordon of volunteer Varsity guards who had been on all-night vigil to prevent desecration within the stadium. Hopping a south fence, the three entered the stadium and had splashed several vivid Q's about the interior before being apprehended in the act.

The trio of artistic martyrs were carried bodily to a nearby residence to face impromptu trial and punishment. Climax to Queen's elaborate "paint-plot" which saw yellow and crimson "Q's" adorning Convocation Hall, the Royal Museum, downtown banks and news stands, the Victoria Infirmary and numerous other University buildings, the actual deed had been preceded by an eventful eight hours of preparation.

In their correct chronology, events of Friday evening and Saturday morning are recorded below:

10.35: First tip received of Queen's intentions to invade the stadium armed with paint and brushes. Hour is 5 a.m.

10.36: Nucleus of defenders forms. Word spreads to fraternities, residences; small group plans to stand duty-watch at stadium.

11.40: Quintet of Paul Reveres proceed to Hart House to seek reinforcements from among males at All-Varsity dance. Response at first apathetic. A few officials at length aroused to gravity of situation, promise assistance.

12.05: Quintet of Paul Reveres have four grilled cheese sandwiches, one banana shortcake. Organizational work completed, retire from scene of action temporarily.

1.20: Vigil begins with handful of sentries posted at stadium. Two members of police force on duty. Plain clothes men patrolling in police cruiser. Second police car also ranging within the stadium environs.

2.12: Guard at Bloor Street end of stadium whispers to relief man: "Whatsa matter, can't you sleep?"

3.05: Numbers of volunteer watchers increase. Confusion in proportion. No one certain who are Varsity people. Small bands of Varsity-ites circle about buildings swapping suspicious stares with other small bands of Varsity-ites.

3.31: Scout arrives, breathless, with word that Queen's ammunition vehicle has been sighted on Bay and Bloor, loaded with paint. Small disorganized party sets off to see.

3.45: Red sedan draws to stop at north-west corner of stadium, flickers head lights three times, significantly. Pulls away.

3.54: Party returns from Bay-Bloor excursion to describe Royal Bank building and news stand. "All smeared with Queen's," they say.

4.00: Restlessness increasing as H-Hour approaches. Confusion still prevalent. Who is who? Small groups of defenders climbing in and out of stadium. Two kindly Trinity men pause in their climb over the north-west wall to assist unidentified man on ground below to scale the wall. Suspicious guard interrupts, asks unidentified man for registration card. Unidentified man replies brazenly: "Sure, I'm Queen's!" Trinity men blush.

4.05: Red sedan draws to stop at north-west corner of stadium, flickers head lights three times, significantly. Pulls away.

4.51: Warning comes from south end of stadium that enemy approaches. Car races up Devonshire Place, turns right onto Bloor proceeds twenty feet when it is bathed in white wash and barraged by clumps of sod as Varsity strikes back. Car continues along Bloor in ghostly attire.

5.00: H-Hour

5.01: H-Hour plus one.

5.02: H-Hour plus two.

5.03: H-Hour plus three. Red sedan draws to stop at north-west corner of stadium, flickers head lights three times, significantly. Pulls away.

5.04: H-Hour plus four. Queen's "paint-party" fails to appear.

6.02: Shout from south of stadium declares that enemy has struck, is striking. Hordes race to south end of stadium as defenders appear over south gate with trio of culprits in tow. Stadium almost forgotten, crowds follow procession to nearby residence for trial.

6.17: Trial begins. Charge: Inferior decoration of Varsity stadium.

6.18: Witness give evidence: Paint their face. Cut their hair! Get hessissors! Hey (to squirming captive) why don't you be sociable? Give me a shave, too! (This from squirming captive, obviously attempting to be sociable).

6.25: Red sedan draws to stop at north-west corner of stadium, flickers head lights three times, significantly. Man emerges, speaks: "Anybody here call a cab?"

INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT OIL

Searching Ancient Seabeds

FOR THE OIL YOU USE TODAY

The old-time "wildcatter" who pretended to find oil with his divining rod has long since given way to highly trained oil scientists. Today, for example, working in teams, Imperial Oil scientists use many delicate and ingenious instruments to locate the ancient seabeds underlying more than one-half of Canada's land area. For oil, geologists know, was first formed from plant and marine life that flourished millions of years ago on pre-historic ocean floors.

How the team works

First comes the geologist, to examine soil and rock outcroppings. Then the aerial photographer maps a bird's-eye picture of the territory. The geophysicist investigates the structure of the earth beneath the surface. The mathematician interprets the data recorded by the physicist. The chemist analyzes the water in the district and the sand, clay and rocks brought up by exploring drills.

But with all his modern knowledge and instruments, the scientist cannot yet say to the driller with certainty, "Drill here and you will find oil". Many times, the drills miss the underground oil deposits by a few hundred feet. Often, too, a well drilled at great cost turns out to be a failure.

A two-fold purpose

Yet year in and year out, Imperial Oil scientists continue their search for Canadian oil with a two-fold purpose . . . to provide Canadians with more than 500 useful petroleum products . . . and to help Canada achieve ever greater oil independence by development of her own petroleum resources.

IMPERIAL'S CANADIAN DRILLING RECORD IN FOUR TYPICAL YEARS

Imperial's search for Canadian oil has gone forward consistently since 1919. In the ten-year period, 1935-1944, the total footage of exploratory and producing wells drilled in Canada by Imperial Oil was 1,258,876 feet . . . 238 underground miles!

This message is the third of a series the next advertisement will describe "How an Oil Well Works."

"Varsity" In Blue

Varsity representative, Martha Schober, paints Varsity "V" on the convoy balloon being used to promote the present Victory Loan.

Varsity Colors Ride High As Balloon Aids 9th Loan

A peculiarly personal appeal to all readers of The Varsity to support the Ninth Victory Loan is the Queen's Park convoy balloon, recently christened after the Undergraduate Newspaper. Herewith is a stroke-by-stroke account of the Saturday morning ceremony in which Balloon No. S2646362 became The Varsity.—Ed.

By Martha Schober

Have you seen the Varsity? Over the the Parliament Buildings, the Varsity flies in full view of campus crawlers night and day. The Varsity proudly flies the Blue and White, and has triumphed over the Tricolor. Because the Varsity had a run-in with wild-eyed Queensmen too, and came out a little battered. When a crowd gathered last Saturday morning to watch the christening ceremony, traces of red, blue and gold were apparent on the lacings.

"The Queen's people got here before you" apologized Private John Lowe. "We really tried to rub it all off. Don't blame us—we only come on duty at nine. The night guards fell down, I guess."

The aluminium paint, he went on, should show off our colours nicely. It is a special mixture, to keep changing temperatures from over-expanding the balloon.

We picked up our brush and the can of Royal Blue paint. We made sweeping motions, and we talked too. Sapper Charlie Mayes told us pertinent facts as our arm became more and more tired. "These purity tests, for instance, he said are to find out the percentage of oxygen that has crept into the hydrogen. Right now there is three percent air in the balloon and there shouldn't be any. At full expansion the indicator stands at fifteen and the rubber cords are taut."

We took a deep breath and stood back. V was complete, about eight feet high and a foot wide. "Can we put ARSITY after the V?" we inquired wistfully. "We've lots more paint."

"Sure said Signalman Ted Hooper, "as long as you take us to the game. We want to see you beat those Queen's boys who messed up our baby. We'll even guard it after the game for you."

We started the A. "We all had extensive training in aerobatics before they let us even touch a blimp," said Sergeant Ellis, the blimp's second in command, taking our brush and trimming up our A. We started the R.

"We can't smoke when the Varsity is on the ground," said Craftsman R. J. Minto, "so hurry up." We started the S. "But we work hard," he continued. "It's a full-time job whistling at all your nice looking college girls. Most of us have been in England so we aren't too interested. But mind you, if we don't get them over here soon we will look for other ones."

We started the Y. Everyone cheered and we finished the Y. Sergeant Ellis released the cable brakes, the boys unfurled the Varsity fins and, nose first, Varsity shot towards the stratosphere, nearly taking Signalman E. G. Drury with it.

"Let it out a bit higher," he said, "if she's low the cross currents from the buildings to whip her around too much."

We approved as it looked nicer at the greater height.

"She's got to go gently or she'll rip her lead lines," said Private Eddie Wur who stood around checking the wires, struts and fins.

Colonel Lindsey, the C.O. of the balloon, told us some technical facts. Varsity is not a barrage balloon. It is not a blimp. Varsity is a full fledged, battle christened convoy-balloon and played a major part on D-Day, keeping off low-flying strafing planes.

U.B.C. Med School Gets Large Grant

Vancouver Oct. 28 (CUP)—Pat Fowler, Secretary of the Munro Pre-Med Society told a meeting of over 250 prospective medical students, that of the five million dollar government grant, the University of British Columbia has appropriated almost two million dollars for the establishment of a School of Medicine.

It was intimated that the school should be open for the 1947 session. It will accommodate fifty students and be comparable to that of the University of Manitoba.

McGill is the only university at present which will accept students who have graduated from the Pre-Med course at the University of British Columbia and only 35% of students who graduated last year were admitted to Canadian schools.

President, Minister of Health Attend Optometry Opening

An official ceremony, attended by Dr. Sidney Smith and Dr. Vivian, Minister of Health for Ontario, marked the opening of the new building for the College of Optometry at 140 St. George St. last night.

Dean and Mrs. J. C. Thompson and Dr. and Mrs. W. J. Dunlop received the guests for the ceremony.

Dean Thompson spoke, expressing the hope that Dr. Smith would soon be able to arrange for formal affiliation of the College with the University. Dr.

Dunlop stressed the function of the Optometric profession in Toronto.

There was a short address by Dr. Vivian, under whose jurisdiction the Health Service of Optometry is administered, following which Dr. Smith was given the floor.

Dr. Smith wished the college the best of luck in its new premises and said later in an interview with The Varsity, "The College is to be congratulated on the number of ex-servicemen enrolled."

Following the ceremony, the new building was thrown open to the guests for inspection. It was stated that the equipment and courses here at U. of T. are equal to the best on the continent.

Speaking of the Health Service of Optometry, Dr. Dunlop said, "No person in the vicinity of Toronto need go without visual care due to lack of funds since our college and its co-operative associations are prepared to meet their needs."

Welcome Issued By German Club

"We are trying to make this year into the most varied and successful one in the history of the German Club," Otto Butz president, told The Varsity last week. "Our welcome is extended especially to first year students and to ex-servicemen of all years, many of whom will be able to contribute a great deal to the club, from their personal contact with recent conditions in Germany and Austria," he added.

The U. of T. German Club once again is planning an entertainment program on a wide scale. In addition to such general features as music, dancing and refreshments, the club offers plays, movies, topical talks and special attractions, such as the annual Christmas party. This year, each meeting is scheduled also to include a more serious discussion on questions of interest, preceded by a short outline, which some club member will present.

"Students of Engineering, Forestry, Medicine, Music as well as other faculties, and arts students not in language courses are no less invited to our program as are students of German", Sylvia Brown, secretary, commented. Science and other students will find plenty of pleasantly contrasting entertainment there."

Highlight of the first meeting, to be held tonight, will be a one-act comedy "Farewell Supper", by Arthur Schnitzler. The theme of the short topical discussion will be "Should German be taught in Schools?"

Sunday Concert

Leslie Holmes, baritone, will give the Sunday Evening Concert in the Great Hall of Hart House at 9 p.m. on Sunday next, 4th November. Weldon Kilburn will be at the piano. The program will be as follows:

Dangerous Clause In Bill Criticized By J. M. Finlay

CONCERNS JAP-CANADIANS

By Janice Murray

Inclusion of a clause in a bill before the House of Commons which would permit any Canadian citizen to be deported at the will of the government in Council, was described as "very-dangerous" by J. M. Finlay of the central Japanese-Canadian Committee, before the Co-operative Committee on Japanese-Canadians.

"New facts which have come to light since the last meeting of the committee include certain clause in Bill 15, The National Emergency Powers Act, Section III, Clause g, said Mr. Finlay. It is necessary to continue certain governmental controls, and this bill is very important, but while all other clauses of the Bill are harmless, clause g must be interpreted as potentially dangerous to all Canadian citizens, continued Mr. Finlay.

Smith Exchanges Exchange Views

Hallowe'en party will be sponsored this year by the International Students' Club which will be held at 8 p.m. Wed., Oct. 31, in the Women's Union. The highlight of the evening will be informal talks given by the exchange students from Smith College. They will discuss and compare their views on "Life in the United States." Later, the meeting will take the form of an International Hallowe'en Party, with some of the students dressed in their nation's costumes.

Games such as bobbing for apples and stuffing oatmeal will be introduced to students. Dancing and refreshments will follow.

Last week a welcome was extended to the body by Noel Chapman, one of the executive, who explained that international understanding is urgently needed in order to build a secure peace.

"The club has representatives from British Guiana, Austria, Trinidad, England, Dominican Republic, U.S.A. and India; the opportunity of meeting and speaking to these students and learning of their respective cultures is indeed of endless value to university students," said Mr. Chapman.

Help McGill Vets Increase Incomes

Montreal, Oct. 28 (CUP)—UniVet Enterprises, an organization whose aim is to help the University's 1,400 student-veterans help themselves, is being established at McGill. The organization has been endorsed by Principal James and was approved by the Students' Executive Council.

The Students' Veteran Society has backed the enterprise and is granting it the office it will occupy. Under the training provisions of the War Services Grants Act, student-veterans are allowed up to forty dollars a month to supplement their government living allowance. UniVet Enterprises has been designed to help veterans earn this amount by finding opportunities for part-time employment.

Chest A Reminder The Annual X-Rays

Chest X-ray examination for first and final year students are being held this week only, in the East Block of the Parliament Buildings. Students are reminded that they must keep their appointments for these examinations. Any first or final year student who has not yet made an appointment should contact the Health Services immediately.

Students are also reminded that they must keep appointments for medical examinations. Any student who is unable to keep his appointment should give the Health Service at least 24 hours notice.

"The clause in question states that the Governor-in-Council or the Cabinet, shall have power to regulate and revoke citizenship, and power to deport. Until this time the Government has not had the legal power to revoke citizenship and deport citizens of Canada, this is far too great a power," said Mr. Finlay.

Stressing the fact that clause g is tucked well within the body of Bill 15, where it may be well overlooked, Mr. Finlay suggested that the Co-operative Committee send a night letter to the government asking that clause g be deleted.

"The Bill comes up for a Second reading before the House this week, probably on Wednesday," continued Mr. Finlay. "There has been discussion by the press of all clauses contained in the Bill except clause g Section III. This clause has obviously been kept from the public, the General Committee on Japanese-Canadians has sent a letter to all members of the House to bring clause g into the open, before the Bill goes into committee for separate discussion of each clause," said Mr. Finlay.

When questioned as to the implications of clause g to the ordinary citizen Mr. Finlay said that it could mean a weapon for the removal of anyone of whom the Government disapproves. He admitted that some labor elements who knew of the existence of the clause were already worried.

Mr. Finlay moved that a letter of commendation should be sent to Mr. Paul Martin, M.P., the author of the Paul Martin Citizenship Bill which would provide full citizenship rights for all Canadians and naturalized citizens as soon as it became law. He suggested that the Bill should be studied carefully, and said that despite the fact that no Bill of Rights defining "full rights" of Canadians existed the Martin Bill was a "step in the right direction."

Concerning the actual questions of the deportation of the Japanese Canadians Mr. Finlay asserted that above all the question must not become a political football. "Nothing will be accomplished if this is made a party issue" concluded Mr. Finlay.

Don Franco, chairman of the meeting outlined the position of the Co-operative Committee, and stated that action could not be undertaken by the committee until after the S.A.C. meeting on Wednesday.

In closing all member representatives of the organizations of the campus committee were asked to pick up petition forms at the S.C.M. office, which will probably be distributed at the end of Hart House. Individual petition forms of this week.

Remembrance Service

The Alumni Federation of the University of Toronto will hold a Remembrance Day Service at the Soldiers' Tower on SATURDAY, Nov. 10, 1945, and has requested that a Guard of Honor composed of ex-service personnel from the three services be provided.

Eat Sans Spoon; Croon Off-Tune

By E. R. M.

In silence the procession of Queen's men filled into a Harbord Street eatery and meeterly about 30 minutes before Sunday. To the end of the store they marched, the leader stopping and squatting cross-legged on the floor. The rest of the column mimicked him. For two minutes they sat. Rising, they moved to the counter and ordered eight chocolate sundaes. Receiving their orders, they again left the counter and returned to their position on the floor and began to eat their sundaes without benefit of formal cutlery. As they lifted ice cream from dish to mouth by fingers, they commented audibly: "Isn't it fun to come to the big city?"

Finishing their sundaes, they again rose, deposited a nickel in the juke, sang in not-too-noticeably-close harmony "I'm Gonna See My Baby" and left.

A girl whose wrist we noticed in a psychology lab the other day has a male friend whose face seems to qualify as a literal clock-stopper.

Around her wrist, she wore a silver chain bracelet and watch case. But, where the Bulova people had installed time-telling apparatus, the co-ed had replaced such unromantic machinery and doo-dads with a miniature portrait of an air force officer.

Editorial

Japanese-Canadians

From journalistic Frank Rasky, last year's Assistant News Editor of The Varsity and currently feature writer for the Vancouver Sun, comes his enlightening report on East Coast attitude to the Japanese.

In view of the enormous importance of his subject, we make no apology for turning over to Mr. Rasky the greater part of this page. We commend his letter to the attention of every reader.

Editor, The Varsity,
Dear Sir:

Since the day I arrived here in Vancouver three weeks ago I have been puzzled by the fiercely blazing anti-Japanese intolerance. As the editorial you quote from The Manitoban says, a strange tribe of people doth dwell on the far side of the Rocky Mountains.

In all other things but this, the people are amazingly progressive: certainly in no other province have I seen the Negroes, Jews and other racial minorities so frankly accepted. Yet this resentment against the Japanese is everywhere prevalent, and it is an attitude that makes me as an Easterner boil up with anger, an attitude which in my short stay I have tried to deduce.

We usually accept intolerance as a state of mind lodged in the ignorant and uneducated, but that does not hold here. The intellectuals, with a nice logic that I cannot comprehend, have drawn up an imposing list of sins against the Orientals, and this has been eagerly snapped up by those seemingly less learned. The newspapers are banded together in an editorial crusade against the Japanese; this regardless of their political stripe. I have spoken to trade unionists, journalists, artists hand laborers and businessmen, and no matter how divorced they are economically, they stubbornly uphold one opinion in common: kick out the Japs.

It is useless to argue with them. When I point out that a religious group in Toronto, the Student Christian Movement, submit, and rightly, that to discriminate against any people because of race, creed or color is to copy Hitler's policies, the conventional retaliation is that the Easterners are luckily free of those grinning and hissing Nips; that the Easterners have no conceptions of "what is going on"; and that it is, in any case, none of their business.

Mention of such high-principled terms as "civil liberties" and "humanity" are equally brushed aside as having nothing to do with the matter, and, moreover, in this particular case, rather naive. In short, the people of B.C. pose mentally as daring little Dutchmen, who until now have kept their thumb plugged in the hole and so stemmed a tide of uncouth Japanese—for which gesture the rest of Canada should be forever grateful.

As it was correctly submitted by several professors in the campus survey The Varsity ran recently, the problem is deeply rooted in the pocket book. According to back files of the newspapers I have glanced through, the business element protested the Japanese inroads into their trade as early as 1937. Headlines tell how the Vancouver city council, obviously prodded by the industrial element, tried to pass resolutions which would limit trade licenses to all Orientals.

A bit of crossfire dialogue from one clipping illustrates the rather incensed sensibilities of two city fathers:

"I demand that no more licenses be handed out to this Oriental scum . . . these immigrants," said one Counsellor.

"If you do that, you'll have to include Greeks and Italians," replied another.

"Don't you dare include those law-abiding citizens . . ." went on the first Counsellor.

As a prelude to ousting the Japanese from British Columbia—whether they are foreign or domestically born—the charges against these unfortunate people ran roughly like this:

1—In all B.C. communities with an Oriental population, it was found that the cost of maintaining public services was borne by the white inhabitants to an extent all out of proportion.

2—Only a small contribution was made in any sort of taxes by the Oriental. The causes for this is allegedly based on the practice of Japanese families to crowd into cheap residences, several families to a dwelling, where taxes are low.

3—Japanese fisherman were depleting the cod in B.C. waters.

4—Cheap Japanese labor in fruit and vegetable farms throughout the Fraser and Okanagan Valleys resulted in those industries falling completely into their hands.

5—By working as family combines, the Orientals made the minimum wage and factories act of no effect.

6—Also that old bogey (familiar to all ranters against the French-Canadians) has been exhumed, to the effect that the Japanese would soon swamp the whites by their birth rate. The viewers-with-alarm pointed at the 1937 birth figures which showed that, while the general increase in population was 4.75 per 1,000, Japanese registered 20.18 per 1,000.

On the surface this might seem to be an imposing schedule of misdemeanors, but it ought not to be glibly flaunted at its face value.

Certainly it is true that the Japanese used to live as a floating population in cheap tinkerbox cubicles, several families to a hovel. I visited the Powell Street area of Vancouver, known as "Jap Town" before its residents were bodily evicted, and the "For Rent" signs over crumbling shacks and locked-up huts would undoubtedly not receive a stamp of approval from even Toronto's Board of Health. But no wonder, the Japanese were compelled to shoe-horn into this poverty-stricken area. Newspaper clippings tell me that the Nipponese were restricted here; in a manner not entirely unlike what the Hitler crowd used to call "ghettos".

It is also true that the Japanese were ready to take smaller wages and were prepared to work longer hours, but I hardly see why they are to be blamed. It's hardly probable that the Orientals maliciously tried to deprive the white worker of a job; immigrants are hardly that openly aggressive. Rather the employer, the white man, is to blame—as he is in the Southern States, Rhodesia, Argentine and a hundred other places—for the reason that he has tried to secure cheap labor with the knowledge that the Orientals of the first generation are more used to maintaining themselves on less than the whites.

Given the opportunity, the Orientals certainly would have demanded wages similar to the whites. So we can assume that the low wages paid to the Orientals were chiefly to blame for the Orientals lowering the standard of living for all. It is unlikely that the Orientals, who have families in Japan would improve their standards of living even if receiving higher wages. This would also be true of single Japanese intending to save and return to their own country.

In other words, the white man himself has contributed largely to the low Oriental living standards which was a menace to his own economic condition. He paid the Oriental low wages, then, by a curious double entendre, complains that the Oriental wages are too low.

It seems to me that the white population in B.C. would, further, not accept an obvious fact upon which any graduate in U. of T. Psychology 1a could have provided enlightenment: namely, that they did not give the second or third generation Japanese residents a chance to grow up and assimilate. Given time, they would have passed over the phase of conflict between two cultures—their parents' and the western one—and would soon have adjusted; not necessarily by intermarriage, but through a gradual adoption of social mores.

Meanwhile, there are 24,000 Japanese scattered throughout east Canada, all awaiting shipment out of the Dominion, all pondering man's inhumanity to man.

—FRANK RASKY.

Each year at this time the first year engineers may be seen swarming over the campus, measuring the ground with tapes and driving little pegs into the greensward. Many frosh have wondered what this is all about. Old-timers too, have seldom heard the real explanation of this frantic activity on the part of the schoolmen.

The fact is that they are looking for a buried treasure.

About 350 years ago, the students of University College stole the urn containing the ashes of the sacred goat of S.P.S., and buried them somewhere on the campus. This was done as a reprisal for the 18th Brumaire raid on U.C. by the schoolmen, who drew mustaches on the faces of all portraits that used to hang in the West Hall.

Rivalry was keen at the time, and the dead and wounded used to litter the playing fields after one of these intramural clashes. As the years went by the use of arms was prohibited, and the relations between the two factions became less violent.

In the year 1903 however, a schoolman named O'Flarity who got into the main library by mistake, found an old map among the archives of the college and decided that it contained directions for the location of the urn. Since that day S.P.S. has been working on this theory and has been over the ground with a fine-toothed comb trying to discover from the instruction and the measurements on the map, where the goat is.

BUT, what nobody knows except the registrar of U.C. and a few initiates, is that every year on Midsummer's eve, a volunteer from the Lit. enters the engineering building and changes the measurements on the map. This accounts for the renewed activity each year on the part of the frosh schoolmen who point out to the surprised sophomores that they interpreted the map in the wrong way, and that a new start will have to be made in the search for the missing urn.

When the schoolmen finally discover that they are being hoaxed they will probably take their revenge by setting loose the large black bull who lives in the tower of the Junior Common Room, and whose job it is once a year to ring the cracked bell which denotes the end of the Michaelmas term.

SIMPLY SUPERLATIVE

One of the remarkable aspects of the current musical stage is the vitality retained by the light operas of Gilbert and Sullivan. Well presented, these classics invariably arouse most pleasant reactions in their audience.

Thus it is a pleasure to report that the week of Gilbert and Sullivan ushered in last night at the Royal Alexandra promises to be a source of delight for Toronto audiences. The incomparable H.M.S. Pinafore lost none of its appeal in a performance of interpretative excellence and spontaneity of approach. The bloom on the sprightly story of the British tar and his captain's daughter seems never to fade; no facet of its enjoyment was overlooked in last night's spirited presentation. The leads were, without exception, eminently satisfactory; the Sir Joseph Porter of Ralph Riggs was especially entertaining.

The lesser-known but equally enjoyable Trial By Jury was also done. This is an earlier effort of the effervescent Englishmen, in which dialogue is omitted. The resulting brevity is much to the advantage of the whole work. The histrionics in this and Pinafore are strictly in the D'Oyly Carte tradition, featuring the extravagant flourish and the tattered emotion, but beautifully blended with a subtle finesse that made the humor more artful.

Scenery appeared remarkably lavish and lighting effective, although one could wish for a less elusive spotlight. The orchestra sounded well-disciplined and performed its supporting role with fine élan; its director did a splendid job of accompaniment.

The Gilbert and Sullivan Opera Company may be justifiably proud of its accomplishment.

Correspondence

He Was Misquoted

Editor, The Varsity:
Dear Sir:

In yesterday's issue of this paper the discussion on the Japanese question undertaken by the Medical Arts and Letters Club was reported. Unfortunately, due to the insufficient time, the discussion was incomplete and the reporter left with the impression that I was in favour of deportation of the Japanese Canadians and he had me quoted as saying that the Japanese cannot be assimilated and that they had a low standard of living.

I have never been and never shall be in favor of the deportation of Canadians of Japanese origin; neither am I in favor of deporting any alien friendly or enemy unless he be guilty of an act endangering the national safety of Canada. Further the overall statement that the Japanese in Canada cannot be assimilated or that they have a low standard of living is erroneous.

The misunderstanding or misquotation arose from the fact that, being the only one in the discussion group familiar with the Japanese question prior to their evacuation from the coastal areas, I endeavoured to explain the pre-war situation on the Pacific coast by first outlining the many points which have frequently been raised in the agitation against the Japanese in British Columbia. Such points included the claims that:

- (1) they cannot be assimilated
- (2) they have a low standard of living
- (3) those born in Canada have a dual nationality
- (4) they work for cheap wages
- (5) they are monopolizing the fishing industry
- (6) etc., etc.

It would be foolish for me in the short space of this letter to attempt to explain the situation existing on the B.C. coast in relation to these claims, for these claims are neither entirely true nor are they entirely false, (except for point (5) which is entirely false). Time being short, I went no further than to outline the above claims, making no attempt to present my point of view, intending to leave that for the discussion period. But unfortunately there was no time left for a discussion period.

The question of what to do with the Japanese in Canada is not a simple one to solve. In an era when all the races of mankind are struggling in open or silent warfare, each trying to exert their superiority or demanding equality, we must attempt a solution where races of people live together peaceably. Such a solution can only be arrived at when we all realize that nothing can be gained and all may be lost by the perpetuation of inter-racial strife.

Sincerely yours,

M. WESLEY FUJIMURA, Meds VI

Second Quarter Touch by Booth Gives School 6-0 Win Over Meds

In a closely fought game on the back campus last night, Sr. School eked out a 6-0 victory over Sr. Meds.

The game was marred by numerous fumbles by both teams. The turning point in the game was when a pass attempt by Meds. went astray, Bus Booth of School scooped up the loose ball and ran 50 yards for a major. The convert was good, giving school their lead which they held for the rest of the game.

The plunging of Keith Hendrick, and George Evans, and broken field running of Bert Hamm, who also starred at quarter, stood out for school. The all round play of Bill Cochrane, plunging of Bud Finn, and the hard tackling of Jim Smith featured Meds attack.

The first quarter featured fumbles on both sides causing the play to see-saw between the 30 yard lines. Bill Cochrane of Meds intercepted a School forward and took it to centre getting Meds out of danger. The quarter ended with Cochrane plunging the ball for a first down.

At the start of the second quarter, the School line broke up a Meds forward, Bus Booth scooped up the loose ball and outstripped the field to score standing up. The extra point was good. After an exchange of kicks, a bad snap gave Meds the ball on School 30. Meds made nothing on 2 plays. A kick over the line was brought out to the five. Meds blocked a School kick and were given the ball on the 7 yard line. An end run fizzled and the half ended.

After the kick-off by School, Finn plunged for a first down in 2 attempts. Smith stopped a 25 yard School run. Meds intercepted a pass on their own 30. After a long plunge by Finn and run by Cochrane, Meds had the ball on the School 47 at the end of the quarter.

Meds started a desperate struggle to gain at least a tie but pass after pass failed and again more fumbles nullified their efforts. School started to roll at the end of the quarter and after 3 first downs the final whistle left them deep inside the Meds. zone.

Jottings on a Frayed Cuff . . .

Mutterings emanating from Montreal, Kingston and London concur upon one point—that the C.I.A.U. ruling that enforces the player limit of senior football squads at twenty is outmoded. Judging from the lineup juggling around the camp of the Blues, similar feelings are felt in these parts. . . To go one further, however, this same body enforces a rule that limits the number of players which any team can use in an Intercollegiate game to eighteen. . . Twenty men are allowed to dress but regardless of injuries, only eighteen are allowed to enter the actual play. . . Come now, this is a modern age. Why allow a team to dress two men that it cannot use? An average college football team can hardly be expected to attain perfect conditioning in the short space allotted and it certainly cannot expect exhausted players to give their best. Fewer substitutes causes a slower game, and in this day and age, crowd-pleasing games must be on the intercollegiate program as well as that of commercial leagues. . . It is high time that the rules commission snapped out of its apparent trance. If eighteen men are enough to play sixty minutes of football, why bother dressing the extra two men? If eighteen aren't enough, well, give others a chance to display their wares in actual competition.

Hec Phillips' exuberance on winning the Tait MacKenzie Trophy at McGill on Friday has suddenly died down as the intermediate meet strikes him in the face. . . With the top track men on the senior squad, the intermediate entry has suffered. Hec claims that Varsity's only chance to win Wednesday's meet at Varsity Stadium is "if every man turns out and does as he is asked." Seems as if the intermediates are slightly falling down on the job. . . More of Phillips' worries are founded in the fact that Western sent but five men to the senior event and held the others for Wednesday's program. . . Sports Jack Lush of the Queen's Journal reveals that in an interview with Jack McReynolds and Colin Cranham a week ago in Kingston, they gushed in unison, "What a university! This is where I will hang my shingle next year." . . Please, Mr. Lush, you must know University of Toronto officials better than that. If you don't, we'll let you in on the secret. Varsity officials are afraid that the Tricolor will be unable to keep completing arrangements to send a part of this year's team to bolster your pace with the other entrants in the Intercollegiate Big Four and are, therefore, failing Gae! . . . Tickets for Saturday's game at London went on sale yesterday and with breathtaking results as some three hundred tickets were sold. A hurried call for more was sent to Western and hopes have arisen that at least 800 supporters will accompany the team to see the Mustangs taken into camp. . . Now, how's about that BEAT WESTERN rally?

Heads? . . . or Tails?

Here is where the game of tennis turns into a game of chance. The semi-finals have been polished off, leaving the two crack tennis shots to match their skill. Last week Natalie Faver eliminated Rosemary Cunningham from the tennis tournament. It was a close game, as the score testifies. . . (7-5), (1-6), (6-4). Yesterday the other half of the final team was picked. Jan Rutherford defeated Sally Fox in a two set game with a score of (6-3), (9-7). It took the first set for the competitors to get warmed up. It was literally a hit and miss proposition. The second set was played in true tournament style. . . Sally excelling in accurate serves, and Jan displaying powerful shots and a tricky back hand drive. That leaves Natalie Faver and Jan Rutherford to toss for the tennis champ title.

There is Still the Hope . . .

That the Varsity basketball team will have the opportunity to carry off the honors at the intercollegiate meet, now that tennis is out of the question. The basketball games begin Nov. 5, and will be played at O.C.E. Sue Gray cautions all teams that punctuality must be regarded seriously, for the penalty of lateness is loss of the game by default. A ceiling has been placed on the number of players a team is allowed to dress for a single game. A maximum of ten players may appear at one game, but teams are not restricted in the number they train. Rotating players between games is not discouraged.

The Mixed Variety . . .

More tennis finals are in the offing, but this time they are doubles, and what is more, mixed. This event was to be cleaned off yesterday along with the Monday washing. But Toronto housekeepers do not find it necessary to consult timetables of others to arrange laundry hours. Unfortunately, the four students concerned must agree on time free lectures. When the hour can be fixed, the team of Cunningham-McIntyre will play the Morton-McIsaac combination. Meanwhile, the leaves on the trees continue to fall, and the birds have fled before the approach of frost. In short, times-a-wasting.

Doffs Khaki For Blue & White Turner Takes Managerial Reins

Warren Stevens standing on the grid-iron of Varsity Stadium crooked a finger in the direction of the covered stands and called in a loud crisp voice, "Peck, come here."

In response to the summons, a huge formidable shape emerged from the darkness of the stands. The towering man ambled along looking like some magnificent gladiator entering the coliseum for combat. Standing well over six feet, he seemed to dwarf even the biggest player in the group.

"This," said Stevens, "is our manager Peck Turner. You'll see a lot of him before the season is over."

Peck is a big man with dark hair setting off a tanned, friendly face that is wreathed continually with an amiable smile. Hailing from Victoria, British Columbia, he managed the Varsity intermediate team of 1939. With this experience behind him, Peck is no stranger to the football fields.

Recently, Peck was discharged from the Army Engineers with whom he served on the West Coast for some time. The only comment that could be drawn from Turner on his army life was a word or two about his long service decoration—the Chiliwack Smear, a smudge of lipstick on a khaki back-ground.

Now, in civvies once again, he is doing a grand job as manager of the Varsity Blues football team. Arrangements such as securing railway accommodation, living quarters and meals while away from Toronto come under his department. Also comes the important job of supervising ticket sales as well as finances. Then comes the training-table which also falls under his jurisdiction.

Troubles are a common every day occurrence to Peck. It is hard enough to find a place to eat, let alone see that the proper food is served. When last seen, Peck was scratching his head and wondering where he could get enough chewing gum to last the team for this Saturday's game with Western.

A manager, Peck Turner is filling a difficult role. It is a role that to most fans is unseen, unrecognized and almost unheard of. When the Blues travel along the grid Peck has the satisfaction of knowing that he was partially responsible for putting them there. He helps the players get into shape, gets them to the game safely and then feeds them. As for the fans, he is responsible for getting them safely packed into the stadium.

Campus Commands Co-ed Cartwheels Competent Cheerleaders Comply

This business of cheerleading is either very infuriating or very invigorating. So say the six cheer-men and cheer-ladies of the University of Toronto who really ought to know.

Infuriating, say they, when they are charged with "grandstanding" which is really misinterpreted effervescence.

But invigorating when they can assist in the unification of a mass of Varsity rooters by the simple process of enthusiastic leading combined with cartwheels.

Chosen among 21 candidates who responded to a Varsity plea were the four girl members of the team. Tallest of the quartet is Bunny Joyce, for three years the head cheerleader at St. Mike's.

Bea Thorleson III, U.C. from Regina has been leading U.C.'s "gazillikas" for two years.

Maralyn Duff, of Chatham, was a U.C. cheerleader last year. Although from Baltimore, Maryland, Mary Rose Rityak has the Varsity spirit and performs cartwheels with Bea Thorleson.

Head leader is vocal dynamo Al Klassen, IV S.P.S. Bernie Warren, II S.P.S., provoked the feminine audience's response.

I thought all admit some degree of nervousness before the grandstand, they explain that it vanishes as they swing into their renowned ripperty-rapperty routine.

LET'S HAVE CHARM girls! Pasquale D'Angelo is offering a course of "success" training in diction, posture, make-up, clothes sense, in relation to color, line and effect. It is a generally accepted fact that voices which are hesitating and ineffective can be improved by intelligent breath control, figures which are sloppy can be streamlined by correct posture and exercise, faces which are dull and uninteresting can be glamorized by means of expert make-up and hair-dos. Pasquale D'Angelo, whose reputation as a photographer of glamor is Canada-wide, is interested in finding new photogenic faces, because he is constantly supplying models for commercial photography and fashion work. Four instructors, five departments, twenty lessons, at 51 Avenue Rd. RA. 8961-2.

GOOD STARTER for a clear complexion... Du Barry Cleansing Cream literally drags out dust and grime particles from the delicate texture of the skin, leaving it exquisitely soft and fragrant. Use a touch of the Cleansing Cream on elbows, you bad girl, to keep them from developing callouses from desk-leaning. Use it too on absorbent cotton over orange-slick for running under nails to keep your manicure fresh and make it last longer.

BRUISES CAN BE painful and troublesome although they do not break the skin but start with a red spot under the skin surface which turns black and blue. The black and blue mark is caused by a congestion of blood in the area. This is immediately relieved by an application of Sloan's Liniment, making Sloan's the logical first-aid around the locker room. There is more Sloan's manufactured in Canada than any other liniment, a fact to be noted when in search of a good all around liniment.

"I've Got The Brains"

By Ross McLean

Miss Smith entered and patted, embarrassedly, the shoulder of the girl sitting nearest to the door and said: "Oh, my!" She looked at the maroon easy chair in the centre of the room and observed: "I feel much more comfortable sitting on the floor."

Nervous hush ensued as the chair was lifted across the room.

"As you see," the president of the Sociology Club began, "Miss Smith, the famous author of Strange Fruit has finally arrived. I'm afraid I'm responsible for the hold-up."

Within the next several moments we had learned that Miss Smith had been born in a small town in Georgia. "That's wrong," a young man, beside whom we were sitting, assured us. "It was Florida." It turned out to be Georgia, however.

"She taught western music to Chinese students in Hu Chow..."

"First became aware of social forces..."

"Disclaims any title to the title 'social scientist'..."

Eight latecomers were ushered in and when we returned to the chairman he was describing the book Strange Fruit. "We are," he said at length, "especially privileged to have Miss Smith come to speak to a campus group. So—without fiction. There's a coat for every occasion in Fashionland at Northway's, cloth coats with swaggar lines, fur-trimmed or plain, campus casuals in offhand styles to be worn through over the shoulders or tied warmly around the waist, and if it's a fashion-conscious fur coat you're looking for, you'll appreciate the collection of moutons in soft warm browns, Hudson and Electric Seal and American Broadtail, all with that certain "whistle girl" look.

stretching this out any more—Miss Lillian Smith."

This, then, was magnetic, pompadoured Lillian (Strange Fruit) Smith about whom we had read on page 31 of this week's Time.

"I suppose," she supposed, as she slowly rose "it would really be easier if I would stand. If you don't mind I may just sit back a bit on the arm of the chair from time to time. I'm a hard-working woman these days. This putting on a play! It involves physical labor as well as emotional and intellectual." Miss Smith stood for six minutes and then sat back on the arm of the chair and didn't stand again until she had finished speaking.

When young, Miss Smith had lived in a small town in Georgia. She had lived on College Street where the big lawns were. And on the rim of her town lived the town's Negroes. Those were the colored quarters. "And the shacks," said Miss Smith, "were always unpainted." And she drew a line in the air with her right hand to conjure up unpainted shacks.

Her father had been a mill owner. He had built in her home town "a white church for white people to worship a white God, and a colored church for colored people to worship—"

Miss Smith paused three effective seconds and continued, quizzically:

"A colored God?" She didn't know, she said. She had never decided. Neither had her father. At any rate, the Negro church arranged to meet God early on Sunday in order that her father—who had attended services at both churches—might not miss God at the white church. Her father, Miss Smith said, was a devout man. He gave God a 10 per cent tithe of his earnings. Until the government increased taxes.

"My father prayed with great sincerity," she continued. "You see, I'm making a great point of that." Miss Smith adjusted her hat.

"I noticed over at a colored church they talked about Heaven—all the time Heaven—but at our church we only discussed Hell, because, I guess, we knew we all deserved to go there."

Miss Smith began public school still not challenging her right to arrogance and a sense of superiority. Still not aware of the first symptoms of what prevails in the south and what she called later "the white man's skin disease." She learned the four-letter word on the first day of public school.

2. POLICY OF TRAINING—1945-46.

The following extracts from NDHQ correspondence are published for infm:-

1. The policy of trg as indicated below will be followed by all COTC Contingents.

2. Trg will be carried out in two phases:

(a) Basic trg.

(i) First and second year students will do such basic training as is necessary to bring them to the standard reached by a basically trained soldier of the Active Army. A two year syllabus is being prepared covering annual trg. of 60 hours at LHQ (80 periods of ¾ hrs) 14 days at Camp.

(ii) The underlying principles so far as basic trg is concerned will be that proficiency is the essential

Miss Smith went to China when she was 23 to lose her arrogance and find a mission in life. After a few weeks at the Methodist mission she became lonely and asked two young Chinese girls to play tennis.

"When we walked on the court, there was a silence and, oh, I felt it; I had done something wrong. I didn't know what; but I knew I'd find out, and don't you think I didn't? One of the older women explained, 'My dear, these courts are for white people when we want to relax.' Well, my heavens, we had a meeting, and there was such a rift in our small community that the doctors and their wives built another tennis court and they played together in their white grandeur."

When Miss Smith was a small child she was a pest if ever there was one. We have that on good authority. It was Miss Smith herself who reported that "as a small child I was a pest if there ever was one."

"Nyaa, nyaa!" she would address her young and more favored sister. "You may be the pretty one. But, sister, I've got the brains."

We all try to compensate in that way, Miss Smith feels. "When have you tried to give yourself a little extra importance? It was only when you felt insecure about something and unimportant, I mean really."

"We should stop studying the Negro and start studying the white man, I mean really. There is no Negro problem, you know."

"It's something for you social scientists to study in the next twenty years!" The room looked important.

requirement, not that a given number of hrs must be spent on indicated lessons.

(iii) Trg during the first two years may be directed into more advanced phases if proficiency in basic subject so warrants.

(b) Offr Trg.

(i) Third and fourth year students who are considered POM will take offr trg to lead to their qualifying for commissions as P-2/Lts. It will be permissible to qualify as P-2/Lts during the third year of trg in the case of outstanding candidates.

(ii) Students with Canadian Army (AF) service who can meet the required standard of basic training may proceed with offr. trg if they are considered to be potential offr material.

(iii) Students will be classified by a selection board set up by the Dist concerned before being granted commissions as P-2/Lts

(iv) The trg syllabus for offr trg will be a combination of the essential parts of the present Common-to-all Arms trg at OTC, the Coy Comd Course and the pre-war Militia Staff Course (msc). This will require annual trg at local Hq of 60 hrs plus 14 days at Camp. The trg will be divided into two parts, i.e. instr. according to the syllabus and instr by the candidates to those students taking basic trg.

(v) It is intended that on leaving University an offr with the rank of P-2/Lt would then complete the qualifications for the rank of Lieutenant, in the Corps of his choice, in accordance with the regs then in force for the Res Army (e.g. qualify within two years on being posted to Res Unit). If he does not qualify within the specified time, his commission will be cancelled.

Intercollegiate Hockey Returns To U.S. & Canada

CANADA—U.S. COMPETITION

It was announced yesterday that the Canadian Intercollegiate Hockey League will renew operations this winter under the old four team set-up. Varsity, Queen's and McGill have already signified their willingness to enter teams, while the University of Montreal has not sent out any definite word on the subject as yet, but is expected to communicate with the league soon. The schedule will give each team six games, a home-and-home series with each of the other three teams.

The rumored Senior OHA entry was considered yesterday by the Athletic Directorate, but was not games were necessary in addition to intercollegiate requirements. Varsity will play several games with United States college teams as well but these will be in the nature of exhibition only.

The pre-war International Intercollegiate Ice-Hockey League, or Three "I" League as it was called, will not begin functions again until 1946 or 47. This league was formerly made up of the Canadian Intercollegiate League plus Dartmouth, Harvard, Yale and Princeton. Harvard and Yale are still operating under their accelerated wartime program, and will not ice a team again until the fall of '46. Interannual hockey holds the spotlight at both of these universities, with all games of the informal variety seen at Toronto during the last five seasons. Princeton suffered the loss of their arena through fire, and do not expect to have a hockey team until 1947.

Varsity has already lined up a tentative schedule with teams throughout the States, with approximately 12 games hoped for in all. The team will fill in any gaps in their timetable with city exhibition within the ranks of the OHA.

On January 12 the Blues are invited to play Dartmouth College the only U.S. member of the Three "I" League to have a team this year, in Hanover, New Hampshire. Plans have also been arranged for a four game series with the University of Michigan, with the two teams playing Jan. 25 and 26 in Toronto at Varsity Arena and Feb. 8 in Ann Arbor and at Detroit Olympia Feb. 9. Another game is tentatively scheduled with West Point Military Academy Feb. 16 at West Point.

Playland, in Rye, New York, has signified its willingness to hold the old holiday series again this year at this beautiful modern arena, and McGill as well as Toronto have shown themselves ready to make the trip. Several other teams will also participate at the meet, which is usually between Christmas and New Year's.

Clarkson College at Potsdam, New York and Colorado College at Colorado Springs, Colo. have both extended invitations to entertain a varsity team during this winter. The University of Minnesota has thus far remained silent. St. Patrick's College at Ottawa have also requested a home and home series with the Toronto Blues.

No one seems to know just who is around the University this year with outstanding hockey ability, but if the rugby turnout can be taken as an example, enthusiasm in this field should run high also. It has been definitely settled that the popular Jackie MacLean will be ineligible, due to his sojourn in the NHL, but Wally Holder, the leading scorer for Tip Tops several years back, is one player who has returned to Varsity after a stay in

From Accounting To X-Ray In Just Eighteen Easy Evenings

A little-known facet of University life is revealed in the Department of University Extension. This department, almost a little university in itself, gives approximately fifty evening courses, of which several are for returned men only.

These courses are given without entrance requirements or examinations and cover subjects from Accounting, at the top of the list, to the World of Plant Life, at the last. Chinese, French, German, Spanish and Russian are among the languages taught. There is also a special course in Italian for musicians.

Seven separate English courses cover almost every phase of the language and literature, and include instruction in Voice, Speech and Diction, and a course of training for private secretaries. Also prominent is Vocational Guidance, under the care of Mr. M. Parmenter, of the Ontario College of Education. Miss K. H. Cebourn of Victoria College has charge of English Prose and Creative Writing.

Many of the courses have been so crowded that they necessitated division into several classes. The five hundred pupils in psychology have been divided into three groups. These groups have their classes on different evenings. There is evident a great interest in Public Speaking also, for there are four classes, covering four evenings a week.

Of special interest now, with increased production of civilian necessities, is Plastics, a course which has been given for the last three years. The history, production, and materials of Plastics are discussed.

Courses in Advertising and Salesmanship are designed solely for returned men. In the first, there are over two hundred pupils; in the second, over four hundred. The newest courses are in Electronics, Soil Mechanism and Accident Prevention. Nutrition, Natural History, and Theory of Music are also new. A course in the Arts is given in the Art Gallery, and Theory of Music is taught in the Conservatory.

These courses are attended by a good percentage of the returned men, a number approximately a thousand.

Hebrew History Traced Monday

Rabbi William Drazen was the guest speaker at the first meeting of Avukah, which was held in the theatre of the Women's Union Monday night.

Rabbi Drazen traced the history of crises which the Jewish race had had to face from 70 A.D. with the destruction of the Temple of Jerusalem, until their expulsion from Spain in 1492.

Following, Rabbi Drazen's address, elections were held for the coming year. Max Day was elected president, A. Rotsky vice-president, Molly Gurbitch secretary, and A. Rappaport treasurer.

It was announced that the second meeting will be held on Thursday, Nov. 15, at which Heinz Warshawer will speak on "Experiences in Palestine."

U.C. Lit. Smoker Will Hear Innes

Dr. H. A. Innes of the Department of Political Science and Economics will be the guest speaker at the first smoker of University College Literary and Athletic Society to be held on Thursday evening in the Junior Common Room at 7:45.

Dr. Innes, who recently returned from Russia, will give his impression of the Soviet system. He was invited by the Soviet government to attend a scientific Congress held recently in Moscow.

At this meeting current "Lit" business will be discussed and members will have an opportunity of asking questions of the executive. The U.C. Alumni Association will join the meeting later in the evening to hear Dr. Innes speak. The executive have planned a program of musical entertainment. The meeting is open free of charge to all men of the college.

Varsity Said Intolerant

ELAS Arrested Professor But Mistake Soon Rectified

"The whole thing has been greatly exaggerated," smiled the former head of Royal Naval Intelligence in the Adriatic when he was asked about his capture by ELAS forces in Athens last December, at the outbreak of civil war in Greece.

Dr. H. A. Thompson, associate professor of classical archaeology and assistant director of the Royal Ontario Museum of Archaeology, worked in the 30's with the American School of Classical Studies. This school is supported by North American universities including the University of Toronto. The group had almost completed excavation of the civic centre in Athens when the war broke out.

"At the end of November last year, I ran over to Athens for a week's leave to visit some friends there," Dr. Thompson told The Varsity. "Civil war broke out and there was fighting everywhere in the city. I was picked up by a band of ELASites, the armed forces of the E.A.M., as I made my way across the city."

The archaeologist grinned reflectively. "I speak Greek easily enough, but I didn't let on that I did. All their questions at H.Q. were framed in Greek and had to be translated, giving me time to choose my answer."

"They were fed up with their heavy losses, and one officer suggested they shoot me immediately. Only one other officer backed up this idea, so they dropped it."

When Dr. Thompson explained that he was a Canadian rather than an English officer he was accorded better treatment. His captors seemed grateful for Canadian aid to Greece, and it weighed a good deal in their final decision to let him return to the government lines at his own risk.

"I listened to the firing," he admitted, "and decided to accept their offer of a room in a friendly house. The Greeks are the most hospitable people in the world. A foreigner is a person of privilege—even while British planes are strafing them. After three days I was E.A.M. messenger."

I sent across No Man's Land with an asked about the role of Greek universities. Dr. Thompson said that even in time of peace it was frequently necessary to have police and fire departments called out to quell student political demonstrations. The Germans closed and re-opened the University of Athens many times but it held together, unlike some European universities. Dr. Thompson believes the Greeks will insist on putting the university back on its feet.

"A large proportion of leading figures in E.A.M. were university professors," he said, "and there were many students and some people of property in the ranks."

Gaelic And Weaving Are Courses At "Log Cabin University," N. S.

Hoof Mon! You can tak' the high road to learning at St. Ann's! I'll be in Scotland afore ye, too, for St. Ann's, Nova Scotia, is the only college in North America where students are clansmen. "Hi there!" is "Cia mark kha khlu" and "Comin' thru the Rye" makes "Two o'clock Jump" a wee bit slow.

"The Log Cabin University" was founded six years ago by 40 fishermen and farmers, steeped in the proud history of bonnie Scotland.

In keeping with their rugged tradition, the six buildings of the little college are nestled in 400 acres of roving wildwood.

Celtic sons and daughters of the district attend classes to learn Gaelic, the ancient language of Scotland, the Highland songs and dances, the blowing of the melodic bagpipes, the typically Scottish crafts, such as weaving and the appreciation of their colorful Scottish heritage.

Rev. Angus MacKenzie, director, hopes for 150 students a year, but it is understood that courses must be staggered since the fishing season and harvest time have a necessary priority. Financial support, except for the government's contribution to weaving, is drawn from public subscription. Students pay three dollars to register, and 30 dollars a month thereafter for room and board.

The main buildings, comprised of a museum, a classroom, and long rows of looms, the museum containing Scotch relics, even to the wardrobe of a Cape Breton "giant".

Mr. MacKenzie hopes that someday the 35,000 citizens of Cape Breton who speak Gaelic fluently will also be able to read and write it. However the preservation of radical characteristics solely for self-aggrandizement of the Scot is the last thing which the college wishes to do.

These who describe Gaelic as a "gurgling and a spit" may hold fast to this estimation if they wish, but the "clansmen" of St. Ann's are rather partial to it as well as to their charming Alma Mater.

S.C.M. Hears Koo

The Student Christian Movement Conference, which is open to all students of the University, will be held on Nov. 3 at Trinity College from 2.30 to 10 p.m. The two theme addresses will be given by Dr. T. Z. Koo, who served as advisor to the Chinese delegation at the San Francisco conference.

Dr. Koo was a member of the Y.M.C.A. in China following his graduation from St. Johns University in Shanghai and, later, secretary of the World's Student Christian Federation.

The University service will be held on Sunday, Nov. 4, at Convocation Hall. Faculty members and the general public, as well as students, are invited to attend this service.

Stewart Accuses Toronto Race Prejudice Revealed

WILL REVEAL PROOF LATER

A more fully documented case supporting his charge that "wretched racialism" exists at the University of Toronto is being prepared by Alistair Stewart, C.C.F. member for Winnipeg North in the House of Commons. The Varsity learned late yesterday from Ottawa. Mr. Stewart was queried by wire following publication of his address to a C.C.F. gathering at Woodsworth Hall, Toronto, last Saturday night.

"The remarks which I made about the racial discrimination which exists at the University of Toronto were incidental to my speech, but true," Mr. Stewart told The Varsity. "I made the charge that 'wretched racialism' exists, not only at your university but also at McGill."

In a speech, delivered before the House of Commons last Sept. 13, Mr. Stewart referred to an investigation into charges of racial discrimination in the Faculty of Medicine at the University of Manitoba. He went on to say this:

"Let the members of this house think that this shame rests only upon Manitoba, I would say something to members who come from Montreal and Toronto, because in these two institutions of learning, McGill University and the University of Toronto, they will find that this discrimination exists against people of race, which is a scandal in a democratic country. . . .

"In McGill University, I am informed, Jewish students have to have an appreciably higher percentage of marks than other students before they can expect to pass. Here is one of the examples of anti-semitism in high places in this country."

Mr. Stewart outlined last year's Manitoba investigation which followed the allegation that the Board of Governors of the University permitted "racial discrimination of the vilest type" in the Faculty of Medicine. He said evidence showed that applicants for admission to the medical college were placed on one of four lists—a preferred list, the Anglo-Saxon, French and Icelandic; a Central European list; a list for Jewish people; and a separate list for women. The C.C.F. member said there is as much discrimination against women in this country, in many ways, as there is against men because of ethnic origin or religious belief.

"I made no specific charges," Mr. Stewart said when asked by The Varsity to cite instances of racial discrimination at Toronto, "but I have sufficient information at my disposal to justify my remarks and in a few weeks time, I

Music's Power In Record Hour

Professor Savan has announced that this year's record hour programs are scheduled to start on Thursday afternoon at 4 p.m.

These programs, which are open to students in all faculties and colleges, are presented five days each week from 4 to 5.30 in the Women's Common Room in University College; the programs are announced daily in The Varsity.

The opening program is to include Beethoven's Academic Festival Overture, Mozart's Symphony in E Minor, and the Beethoven Symphony Number 7 in A Major.

Any students who would like to help with the presentation of these programs are asked to contact Professor Savan at Room 46-A University College or at MI 2700.

Annul X-Rays Must Be Taken

Chest X-ray examinations for first and final year students are being held this week only, in the East Block of the Parliament Buildings. Students are reminded that they must keep their appointments for these examinations. Any first or final year student who has not yet made an appointment should contact the Health Services immediately.

Students are also reminded that they must keep appointments for medical examinations. Any student who is unable to keep his appointment should give the Health Service at least 24 hours notice.

Don't Let Proofs Scare You But Be Prepared Beforehand

"The boys are valier about their appearance than the girls," said one photographer now working on graduation pictures.

"Before they walk in you can usually tell by the fumes of Brylcreem or Wildroot that precedes them, and they generally give the impression that their outfits would make Esquire turn green with envy."

He went on to say that the girls, on the other hand, express their vanity in a different form of conceit. They tear in with curls flying after a rip-roaring game of basketball and are shocked when the proofs, instead of showing them to be a fresh sophisticated type, make them look as though they've been through a bout with King Kong. Ah youth!

Photographers find that a sure sign of a poor proof is the possibility of recognizing the subject of the picture. "I've made three enemies today," grinned one student, by telling them that their proofs were good likenesses."

But then the life of a senior is a busy one—so we are told—with the draining of the last drops of University life, and as one member of that much-to-be revered group said, "Our magnetic personality and natural genius shines through such minor details as a head of hair standing out like a miniature haystack."

Another co-ed, sounded out on the subject, announced that she had been saving up bobby pins for two years to ensure that her hair would be in exactly the desired state of curl on that momentous day. "Yes!" she said, "I'm even going to shave off my moustache. After all, a graduation picture, and especially the rabbit's fur part of it, is something to exhibit with pride to one's grandchildren."

"I'm not proud," moaned a comely co-ed, "I just reach for the proof that most resembles Hedy Lamarr—then ask the photographer to black out everything except the eyebrows."

Most classes have made all the necessary arrangements, but for those that haven't, photographers are advising that classes arrange to have pictures done at the same studio that did them last year. It seems that there is a shortage of photography materials bought on a quota basis. What's the difference? As long as you don't look like you, your graduation photograph is a success.

The Witness Stand

We Are On Trial

We predicted on Monday that last week-end's exhibition of vandalism and tomfoolery would awaken criticism beyond the University. It has.

In our correspondence columns to-day there appear two letters from citizens who deplore certain of the rugby week-end's activities. One, which comes from a graduate of many year's standing, was addressed to us. The other was circulated yesterday to the province-wide reading public of The Globe and Mail.

Of the two writers, Mr. Mills is a judge, and Mr. Smith a poet. Mr. Mills has judged severely, and rightly so, a particular incident which unfortunately is not an isolated example. Beret-stealing, like pillar-painting and nose-punching, is a criminal offence at which police somewhat unaccountably wink because the perpetrators are university students, probably also because the numbers involved are somewhat large for easy handling.

A Black Eye

It is just as well that police action does not lead to Varsity receiving the unfortunate publicity recently accorded the High School at Perth Amboy, N.J. There, according to a recent Daily Star report, "A football game battle between students and police" led to "a girl being arrested by a policeman for allegedly trying to hit him with a bottle. . . . The game, marked by bitter feeling, led to the arrest of three Perth Amboy students. A boy allegedly was slapped and handcuffed by a police officer."

Toronto police would be justified in treating Queen's and Varsity hoodlums in this way, just as they would treat similar hoodlums anywhere except on a university campus. We are glad, we repeat, that they do not; if only because of the black eye the University would receive. But there is a chance that London authorities next week-end may be less lenient.

Meanwhile, we trust that the tam-snatcher alluded to Mr. Mills will apologetically return his booty to the suggested destination. As long as he keeps it, he is a thief, and deserves to be treated as one.

Public Disgust

The letter reprinted from The Globe and Mail is, as we said, a portent. It is at once less searching, and more significant. It typifies that public impatience and even disgust which campus rabble-rousing always awakens, and which is generally projected without evidence beyond the immediate offence. When University students misbehave, the public will always condemn the University.

It would be easy to point out inadequate and irrelevancies in the letter in question. Mr. Mills condemned thieving, and was right; Mr. Smith in condemning "college yells, etc., for use at football games" goes, as we think, a good deal too far.

Mr. Smith further asks for 'evidence that the university is a centre of advanced learning. . . . able to give leadership to the people of Toronto by means of public debates, lectures, demonstrations, etc.' Well, there is no lack of evidence, or such leadership. To wholulate the university's public services would require an issue of The Varsity to itself.

But the fact that the letter in question admits of so easy and adequate an answer does not alter our main point. Our main point is that the University is always being judged by the behaviour of every one of its students. From the parent who complains to his daughter that he sends her to Varsity to get an education, and not to rush around to fraternity parties, to the correspondent who cries that the University should offer public leadership instead of organized football, the public, every one of the public, places the University perpetually on trial.

The fact that the evidence is frequently irrelevant does not alter the severity of the verdict. Students may complain that they are judged as a class by isolated acts; it may be wrong that they should be so judged; the point is that they are so judged.

We wish we could say we were confident that there will be no vandalism at Western next week-end. We can only reiterate the obvious fact that vandalism is inexcusable, and hope that any perpetrators will be more severely dealt with than were last week's Queensmen.

Magazines

All About "Acts"

Of course, we can't pretend to either that detached boredom or the interested horror that reviewers often reserve for a college literary magazine. Here, in the season's Acta Victoriana, are new poems, short stories and other literary works. They are the season's first-born lambs, and with straw and hurdles, the reviewer rushes to their side, to find some alive and others quite still-born.

Percy Jane's child, a threnody on Thomas Wolfe, is one of the former variety. He is a poet, writes with a fine brontean melancholy, and has sensitively discerned the Promethean quality in the story of Thomas Wolfe. In Miss Bloom's poem, "The Eagle," we fly to the land where emotions are exceedingly well handkerchiefed. She restrains her romantic subject matter with classical style and metaphor and attains an effect both peculiar and admirable.

Her poem should be set to music and fortunately she shows no sign of turning into that 19th century parlor apparition—the debauchée of dew. We regret to say that Alan Brown's satire as exhibited in his poem "All Out" and a short story entitled "The Circle" is neither like Swift's nor Anatole France's. This might very well leave the reviewer in an absolute impasse. Even in that case, we will surely agree that his story requires a sensitive re-reading. Mr. Brown's symbolism is elusive and only to a careful reader will his mention of the circle in the sand, the foetus and the equator on a school-globe throw out any suggestive halo of meaning. His laughter is acid, and he has the power to trace stains left on the mind by the most ancient moods.

At one glance surely it is obvious that the authors of the poem "Sky-Lines" and the short story "The Little German and his Soldiers," are trained not natural singers. As to the poem, we won't be so romantic as to demand that the author guard the poetic flame but he might at least realize that genuine feeling and the actual possession of something to say are very necessary to any poet.

We found no fresh glimpses of the composer in Jack McAllister's essay on Wagner. The ideas recorded in his essay can be found in any standard musical history written before the First Great War. These ideas have, by now, certainly been too well advertised to warrant repetition. A new view of Debussy's "old poisoner" would not have been too difficult to search out if the musical development of post-Wagnerian music had been considered.

We refuse to believe that Percival, the Perseverant Private is underwritten and can therefore escape all criticism. If "I want publicity!" screamed The Skelton. "I want a wave of suicides to sweep Skule when the Engineers discover they can't see the U.C. Follies."

The Varsity stuck its head out from underneath the carpet and bravely snapped: "I never had the pleasure of meeting you before, and I'm looking forward to never having the pleasure again, but who are you?"

Four teeth were ground out of The Skelton's jaws as he snarled, "I've been worn to a mere shadow of my former self by the strain of producing the U.C. Follies. When I was a human being—there's a vicious rumor that I slipped that stage—my name was Kilt Badsby." Kilt shook his skull, sadly.

"I'm not myself," said Badsby. "Whoever you are," smirked The Varsity, "you're getting a dirty deal." Rattling his femur in irritation, Badsby countered, "I'll have you know that my parents are in the 400."

"Certainly," conceded The Varsity. "I understand they're the two zeros. But tell me, what do you want to publicize about the U.C. Follies?"

"Are you kidding? Why the Follies choruses even have hermaphrodites drooling over them." The Skelton mused: "Of course, now and again I have to give them a little individual instruction—I wonder if that cute little trick would like to come up and see my X-rays?"

With a withering look of righteous

this harrowing tale does not produce hearty laughter it should have at least been sufficiently sophisticated to draw forth a quivering smile. Despite the fact that Mr. Knight knows the latest volcano in Mexico, he seems to have forgotten the author of his review's subject, a book called "Wings Over Europe".

In Miss Rowland's essay, Dr. Pratt seems to have had a "Captains Courageous" time on the high seas. Vernon Chapman's essay on Canadian Drama is refreshingly practical and the damp exposed odor of the lines describing theatrical "charlatans" leave us speculatively curious.

Acta Victoriana might be compared to a moderately fashionable house. Some of the inmates show most inconsiderable zeal in writing bad poems and stories, but some, who doubtless read Pierre Louys in bed, make Acta Victoriana a house well worth visiting.

Things Are Getting Better

The Toronto Symphony Orchestra is a much improved group this year. In its first concert last night the playing was better than it was at any time last year. But it was a first concert, and there are several aspects of the orchestra's playing which stand in need of improvement.

The orchestra's outstanding fault is still its tendency to drown out the soloist. The volume seem to get out of Sir Ernest's control when he is working from score. The consequence of this were noticeable in the Dvorak Piano Concerto, which was played with Rudolph Kirsksny as soloist.

Mr. Kirsksny may be classed with the top flight pianists of our day. How he produced such beautiful sounds with such peculiar arm positions and motions is a source of amazement to me. The Dvorak concerto does not provide enough scope for a full assessment of the artist's ability. It is an artificial and uninteresting work. Dvorak goes through the motions of creation without creating; he builds a large superstructure but fills it with insignificant material. But in spite of the limitations of the music, Kirsksny's artistry was always apparent.

The same objection which were levelled at the Dvorak concerto have also been directed at many of Brahms' work, but the magnificent Fourth Symphony is always quoted as an exception. The performance of this symphony last night was vigorous and satisfactory. But the conductor took unwarranted liberties with the time in the fourth movement (erroneously called a passacaglia in the program; it is actually a chaconne).

In the suite Light Music by Arthur Benjamin, as well as in the symphony, the trumpets proved to be the weak spot of the orchestra. They made blaring and unmusical sounds.

So although the orchestra shows signs of being better than ever before, there is still room for improvement. This column will give you a running account of its improvement or deterioration during the course of the season.

Organ Recitals

The regular series of Tuesday afternoon recitals was begun yesterday when Dr. Healey William gave a varied and interesting program. The audience was a very small one, possibly because the series has received practically no publicity. For this reason I shall forego discussing Dr. Willan's excellent performance in order to inform readers about the concerts.

The programs are given fortnightly on Tuesday afternoon at 5 p.m. in Convocation Hall. The performers are the most accomplished in the city and in the past their interpretations have made the recitals rewarding.

A notice will appear in The Varsity before the next recital which will be given by Dr. Willan on Nov. 13.

Thievery And Foolery

Editor, The Varsity,
Dear Sir:

I saw something at the stadium on Saturday which I think should be publicized in your columns.

At the half-time interval, I saw a young man run out into the crowd and steal from a young Queen's lady undergraduate, her Balmoral cap, which undoubtedly cost her, or her parents, three or four dollars, maybe more. The lad then made off with it into the crowd and disappeared before I could catch him.

It seems to me that this boy, had he wanted a souvenir of that type, might have been bold enough to tackle one of the male undergraduates and if he has the instincts of a gentleman, which his act did not indicate, I suggest that he send the tam back by post, addressed to the care of Mr. H. J. Hamilton, in the office of the Queen's General Alumni, in Kingston. I know that Mr. Hamilton will be able to find the young lady whose hat was stolen.

As a graduate of long standing of the School of Science, I could not help but be thoroughly disgusted with this type of act on the part of a man wearing the blue and white colors and I hope you will do what is possible to encourage him to make restitution.

G. G. MILLS

The following letter appeared to-day in the correspondence columns of the Globe and Mail:

"I see by the papers that the students at the University of Toronto are being trained in college yells, etc., for use at the football games. Sometimes I wonder when the University of Toronto will make a real contribution to the culture of the city instead of the silly spectacle of college students in silly costumes and childish tricks.

"When shall we see some evidence that the University of a centre of advanced learning (or should be), and able to give leadership to the people of Toronto by means of public debates, lectures demonstrations, etc., in addition to (or instead of) the importance given to organized football. Surely the need for such leadership is very evident."

Victorious College Vs. Scoreless School

Last night on the back campus, the powerful Victoria College Rugby Team scored a clean cut 16-0 victory over Junior School. Vic oozed power in all departments. Their heavy line crushed everything thrown against it and gave protection to the back-field.

Freddy Burford, Walt London, and Ron Cook were outstanding for Vic. Burford scored one major and generally sparked the whole team from quarter. London scored two majors and was a consistent ground-gainer through the whole game. Ron Cook, although he did not score, put the ball in position for the others by making many long plunges and broken field jaunts. Jacobs, Nord, and McCann played well for School; Jacobs in particular making several fine runs.

In the first quarter Vic threatened to break into the scoring column after a forward caught beautifully by London who took play to the School 13-yard line, but two forward passes were missed and an end run went for no gain. The quarter ended with no score on either side.

In the second quarter, there were many fumbles. Then a quarter sneak by Burford and a plunge by London took the play to the School 5-yard line. London then plunged over for his first touch down. The extra point was missed.

Vic marched right down the field in the third quarter but lost the ball on the School 2. Vic started to march again on plunging by Burford and Cook, and London took the ball over for his second major. A pass over the line gave the extra point.

The last quarter was played in semi-darkness. After an exchange of kicks, School fumbled behind their line and Burford fell on the loose ball for the last Vic score. School then tried passing but Vic intercepted or knocked down their attempts. The game ended with Vic in possession on the School 40.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Jerry Ewins

And Then There's Intramural Rugby

This Vic team is burning up their group with the torrid pace it's setting. School were neither Sharpe nor sharp on the basis of that performance yesterday, and the thumping of the hopeful Schoolmen left Vic in the clear, still unscathed upon by any rival—something few teams have been able to boast around the back campus in a goodly number of years. Morris, Whitten, Burford and Cook had appeared to carry the mail exclusively in the first couple of Vic games, but now the whole team begins to percolate as one coffee pot. Where did Walt London acquire that knack of snaffling passes on the dead run in outstretched fingertips, or generally pick up all that football knowhow since the last game? Here is a boy who can keep those legs driving with or without a few men hanging on—a feature which ticks on the valuable "extra yards" on plunges in a loose-tackling Intramural League. Incidentally, he's another one of those Riverdale C.I. grads who have already proven so plentiful on the big Blue and White team this year. Maybe they play some rugby at that little east-end college. Another man to watch is that card Black at snapback. His antics seem to keep his teammates in the necessary spirits (how can his sense of humor persist on a rugby field) and the ball goes into the right man's hands too frequently for an accident. And if Johnny McNeil learns to hit a trifle lower on those tackles—the Mulock Cup was mentioned before.

When Senior School got Bert Hamm back from the Blues their play visibly improved. Hamm is the type of individual who radiates confidence to his teammates whenever he's on the field, winning or losing. He is a smooth ball-handler and a good wide secondary man, especially on end run defence, with his hard, accurate tackling. Hamm, a quarter by trade, can call as good a game as anyone around this University, including the grandstand quarterbacks (like ourselves). Keith Hendricks is a triple threat man who can also do School a lot of good if he can toss aside his bad fumbling habit. Bus Booth at end is playing heads up ball this year, as is the whole line. Neither U.C. nor Meds could make a thing through that fighting front wall. School have only played two games, but, though they haven't shown a good offensive, they have not been scored upon either. If they can shift that last quarter, last minute drive up a bit earlier in the game it would help, as would also some competent handling from the bench. To go out on a limb, here's the other Mulock Cup contender.

Bill Cochrane keeps right on playing terrific rugby for Senior Meds. If Meds can get some polish to their plays when they reach pay-off territory they might show something yet. . . . U.C. is still a team of individual stars. . . . What about that Group III? Trinity took St. Mike's; St. Mike's trounced Dents; Dents outfigured Trinity (and those are the appropriate terms). All of which shows St. Mike's improving with age. . . . Frank Rocchi has gone the way of all good ends with a knee injury. His pep will remain behind him with the team (Clause 7 of the Rocchi Will). The acquisition of Moe Egan from the Blues dwindling roster should give the Irish a big boost, especially in the pass-receiving department.

Comes the Week-end

People and more people seem to be readying themselves for a week-end trip to London. It is the aim of several individuals to co-ordinate the thus-far motley throng into the kind of thing that cheered the Blue and White on Saturday, instead of another possible Kingston episode. A central spot has been chosen, the Junior Common Room at U.C., and the time is 1.45 p.m. Thursday afternoon. Each frat, faculty, or group of individuals who are making the trek should make sure they have a representative at this meeting, if possible appearing in person in toto (the Roman garment is toga, i.e. dress is optional). Vic is also cordially invited to attend. Such things as playful pranks, rooting sections, dance dates and et ceteras will be thoroughly treated at this organization rally to get the ball rolling, and REMEMBER, it's no small matter when you say

Correction

A newspaper office is a very busy place. There the traffic has a pulse only equalled by a downtown intersection at noon hour. Typewriters are propelled at a great rate along their carriage by swiftly moving fingers. Linotype machines simulate the sound of many street cars converging on one spot. Reporters burst through the office causing bits of paper collected around the tables to circle dizzily in their wake, then descend to the floor, to lose themselves in crumpled mounds of copy paper. Conscientious cleaner-uppers then proceed to yield brooms with vigor around the feet of masthead engravers in an argument over the spelling of some word.

Thus it was that an important paper with the names of the tennis mixed doubles competitors was done away with. Our memory did not rise to the occasion when all telephone wires signalled "busy," as we were informed after yesterday's issue had gone to press. . . . so we now present a corrected version of the tennis teams. Cunningham and McIsaacs are to play versus Morton and White. The date when they burn up the St. Hilda's courts is still a matter of conjecture.

More Baseball

The baseball teams so far have managed to achieve scores of astronomical heights. Yesterday the final tally testified to more evenly matched teams, and perhaps better playing. Vic and U.C. met on Trinity field, and Vic were able to proceed homeward with that inward glow common to victors. In short, they won the game. Our reporter did not see fit to divulge any more information such as which Vic or U.C. team competed. So we can only advise those bent on ferreting out such items to consult the baseball schedule printed in this column some weeks ago.

For it was never shouted in a better cause than on Saturday. For somehow this time "TEAM" seemed to mean every Varsity man and maid on the field and in the stand.

Team looked pretty good all week, too. Victory was definitely in the air. There was no real planning behind the campaign—a determined ring to the cheerleaders—and an enthusiasm on Friday that was not to be denied. Everybody (except O'Brien) was at that week down to the T.C. at Yonge and Front—and that's not balloon pointing!

Hart House debates will return to the campus to-night, after an absence of five years when the resolution "Resolved that in the opinion of this house the 'power for peace' of the United Nations Organization has been fatally compromised by events subsequent to the San Francisco Conference."

Taking part in the debate are Professor E. W. McInnis, of the Department of History, as speaker; S. Stykolt and A. E. Safarian, both in Political Science and Economics, defending the resolution; and C. M. Awde of Medicine and W. D. Lyon of Law, opposing the resolution.

Before the war the Hart House Debates were regarded in Parliamentary circles as a proving ground for potential parliamentarians and every Prime Minister made a point of attending at least one of these debates during his term of office.

The debate will take place in the Debates Room at 8:00.

Jazz Comes Of Age

By Ross McLean

Jazz had its coming-out party in Toronto last night.

On the reception line in Eaton Auditorium was Prof. Ray Birdwhistell. The anthropology lecturer had greeted jazz in a program note: "Out of a slavery never accepted, out of a freedom never forgotten, has come a new music. Born in folk beat and matured by city's throb has come a new music . . . a People's music . . . They called it black-man's music . . . But music, like freedom, knows no color . . . It is a People's music."

And last night the People approved. We approve.

"Men," the dark M.C. announced to his audience, "loosen your collars, take off your coats, undo your shoes. Ladies, —do your best."

"Because," he continued, "what Paul Whiteman did for jazz in Aeolian Hall in New York, we intend to do for jazz in Toronto tonight."

"Jazz," he declared triumphantly, "is coming of age!"

And like a proud parent Wilbur appeared. Wilbur de Paris, grinning, his trombone slung over his shoulder, to say in the best Deems-Taylor fashion that he and the boys hoped to make it a "notable evening." He introduced the artists.

Danny Alvin shuffled in, nodding, and took his place behind the drums. Danny, sole white member of the sextet.

Al Hall appeared, stepping gingerly, looking carefully ahead over the string bass he clutched lovingly in his arms. Al tied up with jazz first in 1933, has since been with Goodman, Teddy Wilson and La Bailey.

On strode Willie Smith. "The Lion," they call him. A star on the "88" at 15 and more a star today at 48. Budd Johnson bowed on, tenor sax in hand. Through Kirk, Basie, Armstrong, Hines and New York's 52nd Street to his present fame.

Then Sydney de Paris, holding trumpet ahead of him, and the sextet had formed.

The music began. Toronto's first jazz concert.

As Wilbur picked up a program in the wings to discover what was listed for the recital, brother Sydney had taken off on a growl trumpet passage of "Honey-suckle Rose" by the only Fats Waller. "Right here," read Wilbur from the program, "it says 'Confessin'. We're gonna play 'Indiana'." The confessional was delayed.

Introduced by an impertinent honky-tonk flourish from The Lion, "Indiana" began. De Paris' inflamed trumpet again took the spotlight. At Willie Smith's loose-jointed improvisation—his gentle jazz—his cohorts chorused: "Oh, man! Thass what I like! Thass what I like!" A passage of tasteful plucking by Al Hall.

"We'll take a little time out to make an arrangement," Wilbur explained as the jazz greats conferred briefly on the postponed "Confessin'."

"I hope nobody came here expecting to hear tunes on the hit parade."

From Sydney then came a breathless trumpet solo on Satchmo's own song—"I'm Confessin'." The horn arrangement resembled not so much Louis Armstrong's trumpet treatment of the standard as if did his vocal version. From the crew next came "Lady Be Good." She was.

"If any here tonight are unhep," Wilbur clarified, "jazz is not rehearsed. We do what we have to do right here. There's nothing planned. If it seems a little rough, well, that's jazz—in the rough!"

"Out of the sacred groves of Ibo-Land and Dahomey, where chanted priests, spelling dreams and cajoling gods, twist-minds and bodies until they fit the demanding beat of percussion pattern . . . Out of the holds of black hulks, where swung the chains that braced the voices of a people, enslaved but defiant . . . Out of the cottonfield, the river's bank, and the overseer's whip . . . Out of the bloodhound's bay and the revival's ecstasy . . ."

Out of that, traced Prof. Birdwhistell, emerged jazz.

Witness: The Lion's deft keyboard caress on James P. Johnson's free-wheeling "Caprice Rag." His ad lib interpretation of the Polonaise. His captivatingly melancholy "St. Louis Blues." "I mean I feel that way, ladies and gentlemen," he explained. Al Hall's doghouse and Sydney's horn on the classic "After You've Gone." De Paris' treatment more subdued and better harnessed than the riotous Roy Eldridge ride. The hypnosis of the crew's blues. Sydney chanting. The audience providing auxiliary rhythm section as feet on floor, fingers on chair arms, hands on hands, seize the beat. "Jada," "Royal Garden Blues" and several other familiar echoes from the teething days in the cradle of jazz in a thrilling Dixieland medley. A Smith original: "The Boy and his Boat." Halfway through he attached an outboard motor. Budd Johnson's laugh-laced but moving tenor sax solo on the sax showpiece "Body and Soul."

It is all a People's music.

Labor Party Aim Is Dem.-Socialism

The inevitability of government change from capitalism to marxist socialism was stressed last night by Stanley B. Ryerson, Educational Director of the Labor Progressive Party, at an open club meeting.

This change from monopolistic capitalism, to socialistic democracy was defined as the chief aim of the party:

It was announced that the party had a long term program of improvement, attempting to heal the rifts in Canada caused by depression and war, and further to ensure world security, both through control of the working classes.

The prediction was voiced that a state of unified socialism will either arrive overnight, thus giving social security, or it will arrive slowly, having passed through a fascist inferno, said Mr. Ryerson.

TODAY FROM 1 to 2 P.M. IN VICTORIA COLLEGE CHAPEL

UNO Peace Policy Upheld After Hart House Debate

MOTION DEFEATED BY 38-37

An official decision of 38 to 37 opposing the motion "that in the opinion of this House the 'power for peace' of the United Nations Organization has been fatally compromised by events subsequent to the San Francisco Conference" was recorded at the first Hart House Debate since 1939 held in the Debates Room last night. A confusion in balloting left some members in doubt as to the validity of the decision.

Stephen Stykolt of Victoria College, in moving the resolution sought to bring out how "the sinister significance of the events of which followed the signing of the San Francisco Charter become clear when the words of the charter are contrasted with the deeds of its authors". He cited the retention of the atomic bomb secret by the Anglo-American bloc as a tragic climax to a series of events which contradict the terms of the charter.

"President Truman" he concluded, "puts his trust in God, the atomic bomb, and a strong navy!"

In rebuttal, C. M. Aude of Medicine, said the secrecy of the atomic bomb was problematical and hence the importance of the Anglo-American monopoly is minimized.

Mr. Aude termed the Potsdam Conference an outstanding success and said it showed that nations can work together in the United Nations Organization to establish and maintain a lasting world peace.

"The world has again become a great big grab-bag and the Big Three are behaving like spoiled brats at a party," said A. E. Safarian of University College, second speaker for the motion.

He said that at the London Conference the foreign ministers gave a good idea of how they will co-operate when they meet in the future as important members of the Security Council—of 16 topics discussed they agreed on the 13 important ones and deadlocked on 13.

W. D. Lyon of St. Michael's maintained that the desire for peace is the personal end of each individual, and so is the natural end of the state. Thus the real "power for peace" in the United Nations Organization is the realization of the dignity of man.

"The mechanical working of the U.N.O. is in doubt," he concluded, "but as long as people have faith, the power for peace cannot fail."

Mr. M. S. Sundaram of the Indian High Commissioner's Office, Washington D.C., who is in Toronto arranging for the admission of 20 Indian graduate students to the university, participated in the discussion from the floor. Mr. Sundaram criticized those who took a pessimistic view of world affairs.

Eleven speakers participated in the hour-long discussion from the floor. H. J. Hodder of Victoria College cited the abrupt termination of lend-lease as an example of the breakdown of international co-operation.

A. D. Knox of University College admitted that the U.N.O. was meeting with difficulties but claimed that it is another phase in the evolution towards government.

Professor C. A. Ashley in opposing the resolution said: "It is foolish to think that we can immediately pluck the flower of peace from a countryside that has been trampled over by warriors for six years."

Girls Stand On Heads As Skulemen Seek City

By Bob Cooke

"What are they doing with the telescopes, looking at the girls?" So we asked one of the chaps who have been wandering around the campus with all sorts of weird equipment. "Sure we look at the girls," he replied. "We get a kick out of seeing them walk around upside down."

But that isn't all these scientific sight-seers do. In the basin of what was the Taddle, just north of the Library, the work being done will have far-reaching effects. Surveys for the basement of the new Embalming Building have been made at least a thousand times during the past twenty years.

And that's not all. As a result of much study it has been found that Knox College is at least two feet farther away from heaven than Whitney Hall.

Obviously their work is not to be taken lightly. It is essential that no mistakes be made in the readings, so, year after year, every piece of work is done by all the students. In this way some day in the distant future, the Engineers hope to find out where the University of Toronto really is.

The results of a wrong survey can

Engineers Hold Annual Dinner

On Friday, Nov. 2, the 56th Annual School Dinner will commemorate the 60th anniversary of the University of Toronto Engineering Society.

At this dinner, which is to be held in Hart House, Mr. W. A. Osbourne, president of the Engineering Society of 1923-24 will be the guest speaker. Mr. Osbourne, who is at present vice-president of the Babcock-Wilcox, Goldie-McCulloch Corporation of Galt, will speak on "Yesterday's Ideas, Today's Opportunities."

Dr. T. Kennard Thomson, now retired consulting engineer of New York City and founder of the Engineering Society will also address the members.

The Engineering Society represents the student body of the University in all extra curricular activity provides a connecting link between faculty and students and accepts responsibility for the discipline of the student body, and for representing Toronto in the Engineering Institute of Canada.

India Missionary Addresses V.C.F.

Students from all corners of the campus filled Victoria College Chapel yesterday in the first of the Varsity Christian Fellowship's week of special meetings on the theme "Christianity, a religion or a way of life?"

Mr. Russel Graham, a missionary in India since 1914, told the audience that men get their knowledge of God in a personal and practical way, not through dogmas and interpretations.

Mr. Graham, a graduate of Emmanuel college, will continue this theme on Thursday and Friday in Room 111 of the Anatomy Building.

DEMAND OTTAWA STOP DEPORTATIONS

Teen-Age Hoodlum Gang Beats Up Three Students

Three second year University College students were beaten up by 15 teen age hoodlums about 10 o'clock last night when they stopped the gang from lighting bonfires near Flavelle House, new U.C. men's residence at 78 Queen's Park. One of the students, Ed. Gruetner, II, Pol. Sci., was knocked unconscious and spent the night in hospital suffering a slight concussion. The other two, Robert Carley and Ed. Smith, were also taken to hospital and were released after examination and treatment.

Police report that the students interrupted a gang of 15 boys, ranging in age between 15 and 18 years, in the act of lighting bonfires near the residence. They put the fires out and had some words with the boys, the police said, and the gang left the premises. Shortly afterward the students were walking along Hoskin Avenue and were ambushed by the gang near the south-west corner of Trinity College.

Police told The Varsity they were unable to pick up the hoodlums in a search of the Queen's Park area; but investigation will be continued.

German Teaching Debated At Club

Should German be taught in the schools and universities? An informal discussion at the opening meeting of the University German Club Tuesday night brought forth conflicting views. Examples:

—Russian would be a more important language to teach, in view of the Soviet Union's cultural and political ascendancy.

—There would be danger in including in a German course such names as Nietzsche, who laid the path to fascism and might corrupt High School Students "who are not sufficiently mature to evaluate such influences."

—If a language is to be shunned because of its dangerous thinkers, we might as well stop studying English.

—For scientific students, German is a necessity. Many basic works, especially in chemistry, have not yet been translated into English.

—It would be more economical to teach one man to translate these books, than to teach the entire Faculty of Engineering to read them.

X-RAY EXAMINATIONS

Chest X-ray examinations for the first and final year students are being held this week and next week only, in the East Block of the Parliament Buildings. Students are reminded that they must keep their appointments for these examinations. Any first or final year student who has not yet made an appointment should contact the Health Services immediately.

Professor Edison Compares Thinkers

"One of Ward's phrases 'knowing so much that ain't so' describes Freud's theories," said Professor G. Edison at the meeting of the Philosophical Society last night.

In his paper Professor Edison compared the explanations of man's behaviour put forth by Plato, the rational philosopher, and Freud, the psychoanalyst. Both of these men realized that there are different parts to soul and both of them divided it into three parts, the rational, spiritual and impetuous, as Plato called them. Plato found that there are clashes between the different parts. Plato called them. Plato found that there are clashes between the different parts of the soul, but no conflicts within the individual parts. He found that there were no conflicts between the desires, for instance, but that desires have different strengths. The reasoning or moral part of man's being, according to Plato, integrates his lower desires into the whole. In this analysis he gives man the ability for rational thought which distinguishes him from a mere mechanical thing whose actions depend only on his drives, as Freud would put it.

Freud however treats man as a mere

S.A.C. Urges Democracy For Japanese-Canadians

PROTEST NATIONALITY CLAUSE

At a stormy session yesterday afternoon, the Students' Administrative Council voted support to four out of five resolutions submitted by the temporary student committee of Japanese-Canadians. Action on the remaining resolutions was deferred pending further investigation. The council

(1) Wired the Acting Prime Minister demanding deletion of bill 15, clause g, section, 3 of the National Emergencies Powers Act. The clause, empowering the government to revoke citizenship and arrange deportation of citizens, was protested as "contrary to the fundamental principles of democracy."

(2) Authorized a letter informing executives of other universities that it had taken this action.

(3) Voted to recognize the student committee on Japanese-Canadians, and set up an S.A.C. committee to take any actions warranted by reports of the student committee.

(4) Deferred pending more explicit evidence of widespread student support the Japanese-Canadian Committee's request that the Council "Formally protest to the Dominion Government as an executive Body about their present deportation scheme for 10,300 Japanese-Canadians."

Although individual council members were strongly in favour of making such a protest, the debate was carried by a group who held that members, speaking for themselves alone, could not commit the entire student body to a view on which it had been given no chance to express opinion.

Final decision was to await reports from the students committee on Japanese Canadians showing that representative student government organizations on the campus support the protest.

Empowered to file a protest as soon as student demand warrants it was an S.A.C. Committee consisting of the president, the two vice-presidents, the representatives of engineering and medicine, and the sub-committee secretaries.

Following is the text of the Council's wire to the acting Prime Minister of Canada:

"We, the Students' Administrative Council, representing the undergraduates of the University of Toronto, at a meeting held on Oct. 21, unanimously resolved to request the government of Canada to withdraw Clause g, section 3, bill 15, 'Revocation of nationality', as being contrary to the fundamental principles of democracy."

H. House Debaters Stress The Latest In Finesse

"The Speaker's chair shall be again be against the south wall directly facing the centre door with a gangway about twelve feet wide between the chair and the door. The table of the Clerk of the House and the Press Table shall be in this gangway. The seats shall be arranged on either side of this gangway facing the centre. An aisle shall be left in the centre of the room running east and west to make it easier for members to leave their seats. . . ."

So reads Section 1, Rules of Procedure, Hart House Debates, first printed in January 1924; and subsequently thrice revised, thrice reprinted.

The rules and all their subsections, however, do not make clear these points, brought out in the first Hart House Debate of six years in the history-making Debates Room last night.

1.—That the Speaker's chair shall be occupied by a gentleman in tuxedo, starch front, black tie, and scholar's cap and gown. A gentleman who removes his mortarboard whenever he is moved to stand to speak.

2.—That the Clerk of the House, attired in academic gown and expression of utter boredom, spends his evening measuring the hours into segments of five and 10 minutes.

3.—That the Press table is flanked by rows of downtown daily reporters who yawn and doodle and seem unaware of the existence of the speaker, the Clerk of the House, and of the debaters.

4.—That the gangway is an aisle of continual cross-traffic composed of members of the House swayed from "Ayes" to "Noes", or vice versa, by persuasive oratory.

5.—That the east-west aisle, "left to make it easier for members to leave their seats", is an immense aid to members interested in bowing their way out of the House for a cigaret pause.

6.—That the rules may be similar to, but the etiquette is quite different from, the parliamentary procedure practiced in the legislatures of Canada. Here the members neither sleep nor read newspapers—they actually participate in the debate themselves and follow the words of other members!

Before You Leap

Fraternities being what they are, an important though unofficial part of campus life, and a sometimes highly controversial part, they would seem to merit discussion in this space. First year students particularly might do well to consider the fraternity system in all its aspects before making up their minds whether or not the system deserves their personal support. Let them not join in haste and in ignorance.

When one of the Greek letter societies gives you the glad hand during the rushing and probationary or pledge period, the members of the fraternity are looking you over. They want to get acquainted with you, to learn if you will fit into their particular group. They are trying to discover whether or not you have anything to contribute to their organization, to see if your ideas are harmonious with theirs. You are placed on exhibition, and you will be judged, then accepted or rejected as a member.

The pledge should realize at this time that he is also in a position to pass judgment, judgment on the principles of the fraternity in question and on the individual members of the local chapter with whom he will be closely associated. The pledge should be every bit as circumspect about joining the fraternity as are the members about permitting him to do so. If he is not, he may discover when it is too late that the fraternity does not measure up to his own standards.

Ask to see the constitution of the fraternity. Read it twice. Find out, for one thing, what restrictions exist regarding membership. Unfortunately, some fraternities admit only those undergraduates in a certain racial group. If this is the case in the organization which is wooing you, ask yourself how you feel about such limitations. And remember always that your signature to the membership application automatically gives your sanction to the constitution.

If you are forbidden access to the constitution on grounds of secrecy be liberal in plying the fraternity executives with questions. Ask them about restrictions.

Even those fraternities which have no racial barriers in the official sense do tend to confine their membership to a narrow group, glossing over the prejudice question by raising minor and flimsy reasons for their limitations.

Remember that the fraternity's prime function is social. It is a close-knit organization of individuals concerned largely with itself and the welfare of its own members. As a group, the fraternity has little to offer non-members, takes no official part in university life on this campus.

There are things to be said for friendships fostered within the group, for members living in the house inevitably form stronger ties of friendship than do undergraduates living together even in a residence. There is opportunity for discussion with members from diverse faculties and colleges.

It can be argued that fraternities foster class distinctions, drawn along racial and monetary lines, that they are a breeding ground for snobbishness and an outmoded pseudo-aristocracy. All these are defensible allegations. But when the fraternity system is accepted by the initiate, he accepts it in its entirety and should realize this before his initiation leap. He can't leap back!

Japanese Facts

Tabulated below are essential facts on the Japanese-Canadian problem as it affects this campus.

Clause G

This is the clause in the National Emergency Powers Act, now receiving its second reading, which the Students' Administrative Council yesterday protested. The section opens:

"The Governor in Council may do and authorize such acts and things, and make from time to time such orders and regulations, as he may by reason of the existence of the national emergency resulting from the present war against Germany and Japan, deem necessary or advisable for the security, defence, peace, order, and welfare of Canada, and for the greater certainty, but not so as to restrict the generality of the foregoing terms.

"It is hereby declared that the powers of the Governor in Council shall extend to all matters coming under the classes of subjects hereafter enumerated. That is to say:

Among the items that follow this preamble is Clause G:

"Entry into Canada, exclusion, and deportation and revocation of nationality."

Simply stated, the clause gives the government arbitrary control over immigration, and permits it to revoke the nationality of citizens and deport them whenever it can justify such action by pleading the national interest. The S.A.C. has condemned this as fundamentally undemocratic.

Deportation

In February, 1945, all persons of Japanese ancestry were offered the choice of making "voluntary application to go to Japan after the war or sooner where this can be arranged," or re-establishing themselves east of the Rockies. "Failure to accept employment east of the Rockies may be regarded at a later date as lack of co-operation with the Government."

Faced with the alternative of settlement in a strange and hostile neighborhood on pain of being judged disloyal, 10,300 Japanese agreed to go to Japan. Shipping space causes the only delay.

Campus Action

Following is a compilation of action already taken on the campus protesting the impending deportation of 10,300 Japanese-Canadians:

Emmanuel College Student Society: Letters of protest, including one published yesterday in the Toronto Daily Star.

Victoria College Union: Letters to government, to member of parliament, and to Globe and Mail.

Student Christian Movement: Protest to Ottawa; letters to all S.C.M. groups on all camps across Canada.

Humanist Club: Letters of protest to the government and to all university newspapers.

Trinity College Literary Institute: Debated question, and contributed $10 to fund. Another $5 from St. Hilda's. No public protest.

L.P.P. Club: Letter to Prime Minister.

Victoria College Debating Parliament: Passed unanimous resolution, but have taken no definite action.

Association of Scientific Workers: Published a resolution of protest; telegram to government.

Campus Co-op Movement: Financial contribution.

ROBERT HALL

Hart House Hungry

At last it's happened!

As every one feared, the line-up for the Hart House Cafeteria has caught up with itself! The poor undergrad, finishing one meal, has to rush to the end of the line-up and wait for the next. All day he stands in the long queue, and all night he chews his weary cud in the breakfast line-up, taking drugs to keep awake, and praying for insomnia.

The line is growing so quickly that soon Great Hall patrons will get only one meal a day. At a recent interview concerning the length of the line-up, Dr. Kidney Myth remarked, "Some sort of elimination will certainly be necessary." Dr. Otto Psy, medical consultant, entirely agreed with Dr. Myth.

At present the House Officials are re-routing the lines to make use of all the facilities of the building. The tower carillon has consented to entertain the group with a perpetual performance of "O Come All Ye Faithfuls," and Dr. Potts, Lecturer on Chamber Music, can be heard in continuous recital in the Music Room, playing a familiar "Tomato and Fudge in Asia Minor." The Chess Room has become very popular, since one move in the game can be made per tour of the House, and ample time is afforded for meditation.

Since attendance at lectures has become impossible in the Struggle for Existence the department of Philosophy has been asked (in imitation of Aristotle) to give a series of Peripatetic lectures to the queue as it passes through the big gym. But the University Philosophers consider "eating" a very unworthy pleasure and have no sympathy with the Hungry Gang. (The divine oracle in the U.C. tower was consulted last night by the department Head, and is reported to have proclaimed in the heroic tradition,

"The Great Hall Queue can not survive Until the end of '45"

If for its life it must rely On food that Hart House can supply To my advice then, lend your ears— Keep fat by drinking forty beers."

Students of the Queue of T. who run out of money, can pay for their meals by engaging in intensive cultivation of the Hart House Quadrangle, where rare old peas will be grown for the Great Hall Soup. The Department of Physics is recommending a recently-developed atomic fertilizer which will make the pea-plants grow to tree size in two days. Then Forestry students will be allowed to carry out old work in the quadrangle. Men from St. Michael's will have the option of raising Friday fish in the Hart House pool.

Conditions are causing great concern among House officials, and the Warden was recently heard to remark, "In spite of all we can do, the situation remains extremely adequate."

Art, Music and Drama

BRUSHWORK AT EATON'S

In the twentieth century, culture became universal. In the field of Canadian painting a group of artists in Montreal are among the few who have been engulfed in this natural phenomenon, while the rest of Canada developed, for the most part, on the traditions of the Group of Seven. Some of these artists, six years ago, banded together for the purpose of presenting modern art to the public. Their work is now on display in the Fine Art Gallery of Eaton's College Street.

Some of the public's reactions to the show seems to be one, more of indignation than toleration. It is distressing to hear comments uttered by bewildered spectators, whose taste seems to be for third rate imitations of nature, bringing to mind the backwardness of art appreciation in Canada. What the individual artist feels and desires to express can be of some interest.

One ridiculous thought that continually occurs with regard to similar work is that the artist paints in this seemingly abandoned fashion because he cannot draw. All these artists are capable of turning out conventional drawings. This is not their purpose. Their purpose is being achieved through an approach which is a matter of thoughtful development and experience. Of those exhibiting, Borduas and Goodridge Roberts are probably the most developed.

Borduas' use of rich colors, bound in a unit by carefully directed movements surrounded by deep tones produce thoroughly moving expressionist abstractions.

Roberts' limited and controlled colors combined with his rich brushwork manages to produce a great deal of atmosphere in his landscapes. His boy and dog made up of flat areas of earthy colors results in a perfectly integrated pattern and is, I think, one of the most pleasant works in the show. Robert's influence is noticeable in de Tonnancour's canvases that are however darker and more mystic.

Vibratingly outstanding in his use of pure color and contrasting darks are Jasmin's compositions of dancing figures, since the spirit of the dance extends far beyond the limits of the frame. A well designed poster produces a similar personal contact.

It is most gratifying to see an exhibition that shows so much activity now

Varsity Tracksters Win Meet

Blue and Whites Slash O.A.C., Western

Yesterday afternoon, in typical football weather, the Blue and White track and field athletes showed fine form to win the Intermediate Intercollegiate Track Meet at Varsity Stadium. The Varsity men showed the benefit of consistent training and good coaching and placed in every event. On points, University of Toronto won with a total of 69, O.A.C. second with 49, followed by University of Western Ontario with 22 and McMaster with 19. The weather seemed to hamper the athletes and no new records were set. The two mile run was introduced in the Intermediate Intercollegiate for the first time and was won by Hass of O.A.C. By their win, Varsity brings home the Hugh Guthrie Cup.

SAINTS TRIM TRINITY

St. Mike's evened the score with Trinity last night with a 7-1 football victory. Trinity threatened early in the game but was forced to settle for Huycke's single.

Two passes by Niero brought about the Irish major in the second quarter as first Braithwaite and then Mackan completed the plays. Niero converted and late in the game added another single.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Mickey Michasiw

Down Western Way

The University of Western Ontario athletic publicist—whose name seems to have escaped the torture of printer's ink—is desperately afraid that his Western Mustangs will escape unnoticed among the huzzas of the higher bracketed eastern football clubs. This publicist—name still unknown—must have spent a liver's worth of sleepless nights until he came up with the brainwave that takes the form of an "Information Folder." This modest "folder" is nothing less than a nine-by-twelve booklet chock full of information about the Mustangs. They really do things in a big way down there!

Wallowing through the "folder," it seems that everyone is talked about save Johnny Metras, so perhaps this operose bundle of energy had a hand in its publication while taking the brief minute off from his duties as manager of athletes and coach of the Mustangs. True, on the back page it does mention that Metras has been at Western since 1939 and that he emphasizes a razzle-dazzle backfield plus a blocking line, but that is all about Metras.

From other sources it has been learned that Metras is American born, attended the University of Detroit, where he excelled in football, basketball and track and then moved to St. Mike's where, in 1933, he was chosen All-Canadian centre. From there he moved to London as assistant football coach. There, he introduced many American features into Canadian football. He has made the forward pass an outstanding part of the Western attack and has always advocated wide-open, crowd pleasing football. It has often been said that the Mustangs throw the ball around more than a basketball team.

Some of the methods employed by Johnny Metras are not looked upon with pleasure by seasoned college football observers. Perhaps he has gone out of his way to serenade potential football material. Perhaps he has stepped into the paths of other officials a bit too much. However, if the organization back of the Mustangs is his, Metras has earned our respect, if that means anything.

Back in Toronto

Closer to home, one finds that the main topic of conversation is the coming Varsity-Western clash. The Mustangs went to the post as favorites to retain the honors they have held since 1939 but after the display put on by the fast-improving Blues last Saturday, opinions are about equally divided. Pool room addicts are backing the Blue with the green stuff and claim that takers are hard to get! "At even money, too," they moan.

To back up these second guessers is the practice of last night. Coach Stevens had all and sundry removed from the Stadium ere his gridders took over. Could be that a secret weapon of some sort was revealed. If so, watch out, Western! If not, ours is not the only face that will be in hiding come Monday.

Hec Phillips was not all in smiles as one would have expected after winning the Intermediate Intercollegiate track championship. Two of his men failed to show up for the meet! "Baker and Jones were both on the team. They kept two others off. How can you expect me to smile?" Right you are, Hec. Like we always say, Dirty Meds!

P.H.E. versus P.H.E.

Two Physical Ed teams met on Trinity Field at 12:30 yesterday to decide which could boast of the mightier bat-wielders. The only spectators gathered around the baseball diamond were the vets. Rivalry between the teams was of the friendly sort, as befits wearers of the same sheepskin, so this lack of a cheering section did not perturb the players in the least.

P.H.E. II soundly trounced the first team with a score of (23-5). The manager of the victors, Ivy Baxter, placed most of the credit on the pitching of Mary Hamilton. Judging from the numerous crests adorning the back and front of her blazer, Mary must have been responsible for many other baseball conquests.

P.H.E. I are to be congratulated on excellent team work, and in possessing a first rate batter, Arva Stewart.

We Hail

the new winners of the mixed doubles tennis tournament . . . Bob White and Harriet Morton. Blossoms and laurel wreaths are out of season just now, so we are unable to place said ornaments on these worthy brows. It must suffice to say to Bob and Harriet . . . good going. To Rosemary Cunningham and Jim McIsaac, the defeated, go praises for an excellent showing. The game was close enough to keep the four contestants working hard up to the bitter end of the third set. The score . . . (2-6) (6-2) (6-3).

Though the more conservative of our readers are loathe to admit it, changes are of the stuff which makes life more interesting. There are changes of mind, indulged in more frequently by the weaker of the species (or so the men contend). Then there are changes of heart, changes of policy. But we are only concerned with changes of the basketball schedule at present. All teams practising basketball at O.C.E. Thursday and Friday evenings must transfer their activities to the gym of U.T.S.

REMEMBER?

IF IT'S SMARTNESS YOU'RE LOOKING FOR, may we suggest Lady Ellis. Lady Ellis Shops provide a complete shopping service for the girls with an eye to campus clothes. Smart jackets and skirts which may be combined or worn separately, lingerie, and of course blouses. Make a special point of seeing the Lady Ellis blouses, if you happen to have a last year's suit in need of revitalizing. They've as sophisticated a collection of long- or short-sleeve blouses as we've seen in town, just the type of blouse to add that important quality of fashion-wisdom to a weary ensemble. Your nearest Lady Ellis, just south of Bloor and Yonge, and in your neighborhood district.

SOPHISTICATION PLUS . . . are you looking for that super dress for the coming Fraternity parties? Sophistication, plus smooth lines designed to give plenty of credit to your own good figure, are at Julius Simon's, where clothes intended to brighten the eye of your masculine escort are in full array. Important item . . . Camel's hair coats, hand-stitched for very superior Campus wear. Team one of these with a smart checked suit from among the many in various smooth-fitting styles. Date dresses are in unusually seductive lines, many exciting numbers in all black to give a girl that easy-to-look-at silhouette as well as any number of other inspiring outfits of the distinctly good grooming category.

HAVE YOU SEEN FOSTER'S newest college toggery? These things are knock-outs, specifically designed to be worn at any sporting occasion. Want to have a look at 'em? Here's one. It's in the traditional "classic sporty" mood of plaid. Skirt in pleats and a good hem which is original nowadays. The jacket is of pure red wool, bound with the same plaid as the skirt. This smartie number can be worn with a red sweater, green or any other kind that matches the colors in the plaid . . . very similar to the creation in Vogue you admired not long ago. Many others to choose from. Foster's is between Bay and Yonge, at 45 Bloor Street West.

JOAN RIGBY'S CLOTHES always seem so singularly good. Everything is there, from skirts to wear around, to the most glamorous and colorful dress for a formal party; clothes with that pedigreed look, clothes which can do a little better than hold their own in any sophisticated company the world over. There's positive economy in choosing and purchasing clothes which grow more friendly with the years, clothes which do not look shabby and world-weary after a few short months. Joan Rigby's clothes are clothes with a future as well as a very, very pleasant present. When relatives come to town, looking for something special to take home, introduce them to Joan Rigby's things, 54 Bloor West.

OF COURSE YOU KNOW about Northway's Fashionland. Everything any college girl is looking for in the way of clothes, from dapper date dresses to little "beanie" hats, all in the same territory (no tripping up and down stairs to match hats with coats, etc.). Northway's coats, just now, with that familiar and respected Bromleigh label are in a wide variety, waiting for the chance to make still more of the campus crowd happy. Incidentally, have you looked at the colored Mouton coats? White, yellow, and a brilliant royal blue with great fluffy buttons. Did you see 'em being worn with singular éclat at the game on Saturday? Dandy with plaid accessories.

IF YOUR PARTICULAR WARRIOR comes limping in with a sad face to claim that Saturday evening date after a try-out in rugby or basketball or soccer, it's dollars to doughnuts he's forgotten to treat some slight injury with Sloan's. A gentle patting-on of Sloan's Liniment would have brought up counter irritation to the spot and eased the trouble. Sloan's has many uses, from a simple inhalator for colds to a quick relief for muscular aches. Being tops in quality, it has earned its place on the medicine cabinet of more Canadian homes than any other liniment.

MANY A GOOD LOOKING GAL would be still better looking if she had learned the elements of good grooming by avoiding those unattractive, sandy little black-heads which appear apparently from nowhere, following a long drive or much walking in the open. Keeping the face clean with Du Barry Cleansing Cream is simple common sense when it comes to avoiding black-heads. Du Barry efficiently "house-cleans" and refreshes the skin surface, makes a quick and gentle refresher after gym or swimming. Du Barry Cleansing Cream is exquisitely fragrant too.

WHAT'S NEWS THIS WEEK AT the Evangeline Shops? Have you seen the attractive housecoats in many different colors and materials and styles? Those easy-to-wash seersuckers are made up in varying designs from polka dots to a conservative one color. Then there are those luxurious quilted satin ones, designed for that cozy feeling which is just as comfortable as it looks. Housecoats may be had from $95 to $1395. And, by the way, here's a surprise . . . the Evangeline Shops now have slippers to make your dainty feet still more dainty when you wear one of these alluring housecoats.

New and Entrenous

Forgotten So Soon?

By Ross McLean

Listen Alexis, honey, you may have forgotten all about it and if you have well, shame, shame, shame; but here's a man who helped put you where you are today.

Far be it from him to remind you of it. You did forget so easily! But there you are today—Miss Alexis Smith of the cinema, being noble about George Gershwin in "Rhapsody In Blue" and being somehow involved with Wilson in "Wilson". Fame, fortune and a few other things like that are all yours. Long past is your hour of need. And where is your gratitude to those who gave you a helping hand when you were down and out and down? Hmmm?

And, now look at Milton Cadesby! Go ahead! Look at him, frittering away his time with the U.C. Follies (of which he is the producer, tickets on sale soon, meanwhile sign your name for tickets in the U.C. rotunda and hurry!). This may embarrass you. But you brought it on your self with your cruelly indifferent attitude to this boy's plight.

You owe him—yes, you owe him — A NICKEL!

Oh, I know! You meant to attend to it. You were going to do it; perhaps tomorrow. But it slipped your mind. It slipped your mind! Indeed! you were determined to forget it entirely.

You must remember those days back in 1939 at Hollywood High School. You were in an upper grade and had reached the eliminations in a declamation contest. You had your dramatic monologue down pat. But you didn't have train fare to where the contest was being staged.

And have the years erased all your empty gratefulness to those fellow pupils of yours at Hollywood High who took up a collection to send you to the contest? And didn't Milton, our Milton (producer of the follies, tickets on sale soon, meanwhile sign your name for tickets in the U.C. rotunda and hurry!), dig down deep and contribute a five-cent piece to the cause of your career and the declamation contest.

Of course you didn't win. But is that any reason to be callous about the decent and proper ritual of repayment of debt? Come now Alexis! 'Fess up, precious, don't you feel a wee bit low about the whole shabby business? How about it? Let's have that jitney! Cadesby needs it today more than ever. He's the producer of the U.C. Follies, you know, tickets on sale soon, and meanwhile sign your name for tickets in the U.C. rotunda and hurry, hurry!

We asked Milton Cadesby yesterday who he was that we should interview him and he replied: "I dunno." "Just a Joe," he added, after a reflective pause.

"Somebody once mentioned a continuous show for the Follies and foolishly, I thought it was a good idea. And it is mind you. This year the customers are going to get twice as much for half the price."

"You went to school in Hollywood, for awhile?" we prodded.

"That's right," he said.

"You went to school in Hollywood with important people, perhaps?"

"Well, there was Lon McAllister. He was in my class. He was doing radio work then. And there was Bob Oppen!"

"Ooooh, Bob Oppen?"

"Yes!"

"Who's he?"

"He used to be Pepper Young on 'Pepper Young's Family'. I don't think he even plays Pepper Young anymore."

"Have you taken your Camay Beauty bath today yet?"

"No."

Control Japan's Imports Is Dr. T. Z. Koo's Advice

OCCUPATION UNIMPORTANT

"Military occupation of Japan is not important," said Dr. T. Z. Koo in an interview with The Varsity. Dr. Koo was advisor to the Chinese Delegation at the San Francisco Conference and has just come to Canada from a tour of various international and student organizations in the United States.

"The really important thing is keeping Japan in order is to control her imports and productive abilities," he continued. "Japan's people cannot live without imports from abroad. It is our duty to see that they do live, but it is also our duty to see that they never dare to start another war. The only really effective way to do this is to control her imports. Occupation without this is virtually useless."

In regard to the recent San Francisco Conference, Dr. Koo said that it was really too early to give any opinion. On paper there is "sufficient to do a great deal but it depends on how the nations will operate it."

In Dr. Koo's opinion, "It will take China at least ten years to get back on her feet again. Not only do we have to make improvements, but we have to rebuild those made before 1937 and subsequently devastated by war." Dr. Koo considers that there has been much exaggeration about the Communist uprising in China. For one thing the amicable talks between the two leaders are still going on and only the other day it was announced by the Communist party that they would put their army under the control of the National Government. As for Russia, even though it is a powerful, enigmatic country, Dr. Koo comments "Stalin is getting on in years. Soon there will be the necessity for his secession. Then the question of a successor will come up. There can be no change of leadership in a totalitarian state without much internal unrest. Russia will be reluctant to commit herself till she knows how she stands."

Rifle Association To Hold Election

Election of officers and representation of awards will feature Monday afternoon's meeting of the University of Toronto Civilian Rifle Association. The meeting will be held at 5 p.m. at the Hart House Range.

The Utton Cup, presented annually to the best marksman of the year, will be awarded to D. W. Barlett, II Vic.

Dr. Kennard Thompson, Guest Of S.P.S. Engineering Society

By Fred Kahn

Perhaps the oldest living special correspondent of the Toronto Globe and one of the oldest graduates from S.P.S. is back on the campus for a visit.

With a firm handshake and a twinkle in his eye, the 82 year old Dr. Kennard of New York is a guest of the Engineering Society at this year's School Dinner. At a similar dinner, sixty years ago, Dr. Thomson founded the U. of T. Engineering Society out of a nucleus of five friends. To-day he has advice for students.

"Don't get a permanent job the day you graduate," he told us. "Move around for 10 years and see what you're fitted for." And marry a fine Toronto girl—marry young—Ididit."

Deaf since the age of three, Dr. Thomson graduated from S.P.S. in Civil Engineering in 1886, after a total of only nine years formal schooling. He headed his class for three years and still knows the names and dates of the first ten years of graduates.

It was as an undergraduate that he introduced the idea of an Engineering Society, in which he subsequently served as secretary and finally president.

Dr. Thomson firmly declares himself, "still a student of 82," and dislikes the term 'student' applied to undergrads only.

During his summer, Dr. Thomson handled all branches of construction for the C.P.R. in the Canadian Rockies where he also served as special correspondent for the Toronto Globe.

Queens Radio Club Broadcasts Again

Kingston, Oct 30—(CUP)—With the production of "Pigs is Pigs" Wednesday night by the Queen's Drama Guild Radio Workshop, Queen's own radio station, CFRC, went on the air for the first time in several winter sessions.

During the summer session, the Queen's Radio Institute sponsored a production from CFRC. The Radio Workshop last year produced a half-hour program over CKWS.

About two dozen men and women auditioned for "Pigs is Pigs" last Thursday at the CFRC studios. The lead role was played by Dr. William Angus, who adapted the story for radio production.

Announcing and performing are only two of the activities offered by the Radio Workshop; producers, turn-table operators, script-writers, continuity-writers, and sound-effects men all participate.

CORRECTION

The Varsity regrets a misunderstanding by which a misleading headline was put on the story in yesterday's paper concerning the protest which Ottawa by the Students' Administrative Council.

While the Council's action was correctly reported in the text of the story the headline gave the impression that the protest was directed specifically against the impending deportation of Japanese-Canadians.

Readers who read the story in its entirety will realize that the protest was directed against a much broader action of the government: its proposal to reserve the right of cancelling citizenship and deporting anyone at will Action on the narrower Japanese issue was deferred pending a more general expression of student opinion.

The Varsity regrets any confusion it may have occasioned its readers

After graduation, he had ten years experience on design and construction of iron bridges. He estimates that he was probably responsible for the building of 200 such structures. And in the following 10 years he put in the foundations for about fifty New York skyscrapers. It was during this latter period that Dr. Thomson found a cure for headaches that has never failed him—a coffee ice cream soda.

After leaving foundations, he put out his shingle as a consulting engineer. Two millionaires gave him his first job—to settle a bet on the height of a hill. Now a retired consulting engineer with fifty years of varied experience behind him, Dr. Thomson has settled no more millionaire bets.

Dr. Thomson has established some enviable records during his more than 60 years of engineering practice. In the last 36 years he has not lost a day's work through sickness. Four or five times in his life he has worked 86 consecutive hours without sleep. But he recommends sleep and regulated living as one of the requisites of success.

Speaking of his admiration and respect for the late Dean Galbraith of S.P.S., Dr. Thomson said, "I sometimes hear the presidents of universities brag about new ideas. There wasn't one thing Dean Galbraith didn't do in '77."

As he stood at the door saying good-night, his parting words were "I hope to do more in the next 20 years than I've done in the last 80."

BLUES TACKLE WESTERN TOMORROW

Cases, Cadavers, Forgotten As "Daffy-Dil Nite" Revived

During the last few weeks, the medical students of this University have been busy reviving an old and legendary institution, "Daffydil."

Away back in the dim dark past, the year 1895 to be exact, medical students at the University of Toronto, tiring of cadavers, microscopes, and heart murmurs, put their heads together to rig up some form of relaxation. "Daffydil," probably the first student production to hit this campus was the result. "Epistaxis," the program for the show was created at the same time.

As the years rolled by, "Daffydil" and "Epistaxis" grew up together, being joined by the other campus productions, "Dentistics" and the "U.C. Follies." However, in passing from an innocent childhood, through adolescence, into maturity, "Daffydil's" character became tainted—as characters will—until finally censorship was necessary. In the year 1939 the censors refused to allow, the show to be staged unless a certain scene was removed. Unfortunately, when the curtains rolled back that year, by some queer quirk of fate, the scene in question appeared. The confounded censors shook their heads approvingly, and proceeded to ban "Daffydil" and "Epistaxis" from the campus.

For the past six years, medical students have ceaselessly sought "Daffydil's" reinstatement. Their efforts were rewarded when Doctor Cody, as one of his last official acts before retiring, gave his consent to "Daffydil's" return. Following this, the heads of the Faculty of Medicine, early this fall, gave their approval.

Since getting his go-ahead, the medical student body has been working feverishly to have the returning "Daffydil" in tip-top shape for presentation on November 20. Despite the drawback of heavy censorship, the show is taking shape. Around and about the rehearsals everyone is confident that "Daffydil" will be an outstanding success. Bob Andrew, III Meds, in charge of publicity, states, "If early rehearsals are of any significance, 'Daffydil' will soon regain its pre-1939 status as the outstanding production on the University campus."

Meanwhile, this year's issue of the faculty's traditional publication Epistaxis is rapidly taking form. The editor, Art Chisholm, I Meds, sums up "haemorrhage from the nose," as "full of good, clean, subtle humor."

Vic To Sponsor Scarlet And Gold

This year's social activities at Victoria College will get under way Saturday night when the first Scarlet and Gold dance of the year will be held at Wymilwood.

Lorne Williamson and his orchestra will furnish the music for dancing which commences at 8:30. Refreshments will be served during intermission.

Don Meek, Social Director of the Victoria College Union, announced that although the ticket sales is limited, a few tickets are still available at the V.C.U. office.

Two more Scarlet and Golds will be held during the fall term.

Russell Graham Is V.C.F. Lecturer

In a V.C.F. lunch hour meeting yesterday Mr. Russell Graham continued his discussion series on the subject "Christianity, a religion or a way of life?"

Illustrating his point with stories of his work among the Bhils in India, he said that God is seeking the fellowship of men who are willing to worship Him "in spirit and in reality." He added, "I don't think God will ever become real to us until we're prepared to let Him deal with the sin in our lives."

Mr. Graham will conclude this special series of meetings to-day in Room 111 of the Anatomy Building.

VANDALISM

Tomorrow over 1,100 Toronto students will visit the University of Western Ontario for the third game of the Intercollegiate Rugby schedule. They will go as guests, to support a visiting team. They should not go determined to give Londoners, at all costs, a taste of the destruction which swept this campus last week.

As readers of our correspondence columns will know, last week's orgy of thieving and wanton destruction has strained the relations between the Universities involved, and brought students in general into serious disrepute with the general public. Rampant vandalism shows signs of going so far that only a renewal of the ban on intercollegiate sports will check it.

Students of the University of Toronto should realize that offences of this kind cannot go unpunished. Last week's display will cause its perpetrators a large sum of money, and an incalculable loss in reputation. It is unlikely that the Toronto Caput will tolerate a loss of either kind.

Our spirit will be on display in London tomorrow. It is up to us to show that we understand what spirit means; that it does not mean a flamboyant sequence of criminal acts.

Record Hour

The record programme held daily from 4-5:30 in the Women's Common Room of University College is open to men and women students from all colleges and faculties.

Today's programme includes: Back—Brandenburg Concerto Number 5. Brahms—Piano Concerto Number 2 in B Minor.

OFF TO WESTERN

Arrangements have been completed to send the University of Toronto Band to participate in the rugby week-end at Western University tomorrow, it was announced late yesterday by E. A. MacDonald, Secretary-Treasurer of the Students' Administrative Council.

Enthusiasm Hits New High As 1100 Tickets Sold Here

VARSITY DEFEATS ARGOS, 6-1

Watch out Western!

That seems to be the password of the football-crazed populace on this campus as the Varsity Blues leave for the Western Ontario metropolis.

Football fever seems to have hit an all-time high around these parts as Warren Stevens' Blues improve with time. Tickets for Saturday's game are at a premium and have been that for the past two days ever since the Athletic Office announced that it had disposed of 1100 tickets and that further efforts to procure more had been in vain.

Maheux' Topic French Canadians

"French Canadians want to stay French in their language and in their way of looking at things," said Capt. L'Abbe Arthur Maheux of Laval University, author of French Canada and Britain at Wymilwood last night.

Language ties, he believes, are even stronger than religious sentiments. However, Abbe Maheux denied the existence of any widespread reluctance among French Canadians to learn English. As a means of facilitating bilingualism and thereby promoting Canadian unity he advocated the frequent interchange of students between Quebec and Ontario.

Opposition to federal control of social services, emphasis on French civil law, anti-British feeling and advocacy of separatism are largely confined to the small minority of organized nationalists, he indicated. As a means of eliminating extreme sectionalism in the press, Abbe Maheux suggested a bilingual coast to coast digest of the press, an idea which he recommended particularly to students.

Discussing the place of education in the problem of Anglo-French relations, Abbe Maheux stressed the importance not only of uniformity in text books, but of the just interpretation of history in the classroom. He advocated the study of Canadian history in the light of the trend of world events.

Abbe Maheux declined to give a formal speech, devoting most of his time to questions and discussion. In his preliminary comments on method of education in Quebec, he spoke of the new importance which political science has assumed in the last twenty years. Before that time it was considered merely a sub-division of philosophy.

The high-riding University of Toronto spirit has spread to the members of the Varsity football team. Spirit on both the club and the campus was lacking at the McMaster game. In the league opener at Kingston, both showed a decided improvement. Last Saturday, the roof came off. If similar progress is made, the outcome of the Western encounter is hardly in doubt.

Warren Stevens, meanwhile, has been putting the team through strenuous training. An Argo-Varsity scrimmage held Wednesday resulted in a 6-1 victory for the double blue. Rumor has it that Stevens was more than satisfied with the work of his team. Rumor had to say it as the scrimmage was held behind locked and guarded doors.

With the exception of Joe Woodyatt, no serious injuries exist on the club. Bob Armstrong is still courting flu, but Gus Campbell who missed the first two games will be in the lineup. The balance of the club is raring to go. Mel Lawson's arm, Stu Scott's boot, Gord Lawson's receiving hands, Bob Henry's fleet feet, Bill Lawrence's plunges, and

X-Ray Appointments

Chest X-ray examinations for first and final year students are being held this and next week in the East Block of the Parliament Buildings. Students are reminded that they must keep their appointments for these examinations. Any first or final year student who has not yet made an appointment should contact the Health Services immediately.

Students are also reminded that they must keep their appointments for medical examinations. In spite of continued warnings many students are failing to keep their appointments for both medical and X-ray examinations. The Health Service has announced that fines will be instituted if this practice is continued.

From Shanghai To Hong Kong Dr. Koo Evaded Jap Bombing

By John McRae

"The most vivid thing to me," said Dr. T. Z. Koo, secretary of the World's tending the Student Christian Movement Conference here, "is the sudden change which has come into my life in the past year. For 3 years I had been living in occupied China evading the Japs. In the space of a few weeks I found myself out of China and acting as advisor to the Chinese Delegation at the San Francisco Conference. Don't you see? It was so sudden I still find it hard to believe."

Certainly there have been a lot of sudden changes in Dr. Koo's life in the past few years. On Dec. 7, 1941 he was waiting in Hong Kong for a clipper to take him to San Francisco; it was delayed one day and that was enough. On the next he was dodging Jap bombs and trying to find a safe hiding place. He was forced to remain in Hong Kong for two months under an assumed name. Fortunately he soon met an old acquaintance who was able to smuggle him into China. He had only been there a few days when he learned that his friend was a Chinese traitor, a Jap spy, who had slipped out of Shanghai just ahead of the Chinese police in 1939. This gives a small idea of the kind of man Dr. Koo is. Even a Japanese spy would risk his life to save him.

Dr. Koo was wearing a lightly-braided gray gown. A quiet man, a thoughtful man, a man arousing interest even before he begins to speak. His keen brown eyes are full life, missing nothing. He has a way of speaking, clearly, simply and yet so effectively that everything he says is easily understood.

Dr. Koo has only one hobby. He plays the flute. One of the first things we noticed when he entered the room was a long round object, rolled up in brown paper under his arm. "Yes" he said "that's my flute I never go anywhere without it. It was the one thing that even the Japs did not consider political and so they let me keep it." Dr. Koo has promised to play some traditional

The confidence that prevailed prior to the second Queen's match is not as noticeable among the team members but nevertheless, there is little doubt in their minds as to the final outcome. The lack of optimism is made up by a sure-fire display of fight and team play.

News from London reveals that Johnny Metras is not taking the coming meeting with the Blues too easily. Apparently the McGill games disclosed faults in the play of the backfield and Metras has concentrated his efforts on this phase.

Names that have prevailed upon the sport pages this fall and which call London home have among them Harry Szumlinski, Joe Krol's running mate on the championship team of '39, Herb Ballantyne, captain of this year's edition, Don McFarlane, leading Mustang scorer this year, Doug Cook, starry centre from Runnymede Collegiate, Fabien Curry, Jack Cole, Paul Walden, Joe Cichocki, Bob Krol—Joe's cousin, Dick Farley, a fine running and kicking half, George Curtis and Joe Koskie.

Add to these a half dozen others who have had enough experience up front to plug most of the holes and there is the brunt of the worries of Warren Stevens.

Saturday evening will bring a solution to the quandary of "Western or Varsity?"

Speaking OF SPORT

By Mickey Michasiw

Forward Hol

With Saturday's clash at Western rest the hopes of both teams concerned. The winner will undoubtedly come through as top team in the curtailed schedule. As far as we are concerned, there is little doubt but that a battle royal will ensue. As far as we are concerned, there is little doubt but that the Blues will emerge on the long end of the score, if they play the type of football they are capable of playing. Last Saturday, they played with machine-like precision and even though certain laurels may have fallen on the wrong men, they are still a team rather than eleven individuals built around one star. With this team complex drilled into them by Warren Stevens, the Blues are just the team that can make eastern football circles forget the Argo-Roughrider clash come Saturday evening. And so, on to Western!

From Here And There

To use an old cliché, "sour grapes" have emanated from Kingston. Apparently adding insult to injury, Queen's supporters found Toronto a bit too tough. They came in like lions—crashed their way into the All-Varsity, slung paint around with the abandon of Salvatore Dalis, invaded the police guarded Stadium in the dead of night, made out as if they owned all of the grid at half-time. They left like lambs—subdued, conquered and physically battered... Physically battered because they asked for it. The cheer leader in question who lost his sweater, challenged a former commando to a duel amidst the profanest of language. Perhaps tempers were aroused by the renewed spirit. This came from both sides. Perhaps Varsity students were a bit too robust in their play. Even so, why words like, "I didn't know they had lowered their entrance requirements at Varsity and allowed adolescents to swell their student body"?... We repeat, sour grapes... Wonder what championship Mike Rodden's typewriter has won for Queen's since that dissolution of last Saturday... And what happened to the organizers of yesterday's pep rally?

The Sportswoman

Pass Arts Pastime

There comes a time when all good sportswomen get tired. So Polly says, "Please write a Woman." So we say, "Okay!" So she says, "Write it on an indoor sport." So what do we know about Bridge? Anyhoo, we can make a stab at it...

Webster's New Handy Dictionary says, quote, Sport: pastime, game, mirth, derision, unquote. Leave us, as the profs would say (?), delve into the matter more fully.

Pastime: Bridge is a pastime. When one is looking for something to do, one can easily play Bridge—providing one can readily find three other mad characters. (Of course by the time those are found, it's time to go to one's next lecture.)

Game: Bridge is a game. People play Bridge—or try to.

Mirth: Bridge provides mirth, especially during bidding. Invariably, someone will out with a stink-bid, like we did the other day. Naturally, our partner will reply with a raise—"just 'cause it sounds good" she beams. "Yipe! Just two low trump!" Mirth? But yes!

Derision: Bridge is best for derision. Example: see above.

Canadian CampusShall We Deport The Japanese?

(This issue of Canadian Campus has been prepared at the request of The Ubysey, University of British Columbia, where the Japanese-Canadian problem is of immediate importance.—Ed.
 Note.)

The following reports reveal that a great many Canadian students are ignorant of the present Japanese-Canadian question, and that this ignorance does not apply solely to those on eastern camp.

Dalhousie University

Halifax, N.S., Nov. 1—C.U.P.'s questionnaire drew an almost blank at Dalhousie. With but one exception, comment was generally: "I don't know—
 I've never even seen a Jap."

A large percentage of those quizzed expressed keen distrust of the Japanese, but felt nevertheless that tolerance should be exercised. Many doubted the advisability of deporting the thousands of Japanese already established in British Columbia, on the grounds that such action would be undemocratic.

One person—a former B.C. resident—felt that Canada should rid itself of the Japs as completely and quickly as possible. But most Nova Scotians, sniffing the salt Atlantic air, seemed to have no opinion whatever, said it didn't matter, and wondered what all the fuss was about.

Mount Allison University

Sackville, N.B., Nov. 1—The Japanese-Canadian problem has provoked extensive comment on this campus. The following are a sample of the opinions which have been voiced.

"Students should do as much as possible to voice their disapproval to both provincial and federal governments in respect to their action in the repatriation of Japanese-Canadians."

"I think all Canadian-born Japanese who wish to return to Japan should be repatriated and all non-Canadian-born Japanese should be deported regardless of their wishes."

"It's more than just an issue between a group of Japanese-Canadians and the government. There is a question of racial discrimination, and if the Canadian people let present government plans for settlement go through, it will be a black mark in the eyes of the rest of the world."

"We haven't handled the question with a true Christian attitude; Canadians should not have closed areas to Canadian-Japanese. They should be on a par with average Canadian citizens."

McGill University

Montreal, Que., Nov. 1—The majority of the students questioned at McGill are not in favor of deportation for the Japanese-Canadians. Some believe that the Japanese should be scattered throughout the Dominion. Others modified their answer by saying that non-Canadian-born Japanese or those hostile to Canada should be deported. One felt that, since he did not live in British Columbia he was in no position to pass any judgment.

University of Ottawa

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 1—The results of a poll conducted last week by "La Rotonde" show that more than four-fifths of Ottawa University undergraduates are opposed to the deportation of Japanese-Canadians. One hundred and fifty students, distributed among the different faculties, were asked for their opinions on the problem, and of those interviewed
 9.3 per cent were in favor of deportation, 82.6 per cent were opposed, and 8.1 per cent were undecided.

Typical of the answers was that of a student in the Faculty of Philosophy:
 "The Japanese, who live in Canada, are here by birth or by choice, and if they live up to the standard of Canadian ideals, it would certainly be undemocratic to deport them."

Queen's University

Kingston, Ont., Nov. 1—The majority of the students on campus feel that they are insufficiently informed on the Japanese-Canadian problem to voice an opinion. Among those vitally interested the general attitude toward the Japanese is sympathetic. Suggestions have been made for a second vote on the deportation question.

Most students are unable to understand why any Japanese should wish to return to present-day Japan.

University of Western Ontario

London, Ont., Nov. 1—In a poll conducted among the Western students as to how to deal with the Japanese-Canadian problem in British Columbia, 65 per cent of those questioned were in favor of deportation. An additional 20 per cent did not know that any problem existed.

The remaining 15 per cent expressed the view that true democracy and brotherhood of men could only be achieved by eliminating race prejudice and by permitting the Japanese-Canadians to remain as useful citizens.

University of Manitoba

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 1—Opinions are divided on the Japanese deportation question. Third year students feel we are too far removed from the actual situation to understand it. Why should they send the Japanese east of the Rockies, merely shifting, not solving the problem? Others think Japanese deportation would create a precedent for further expulsion.

University of Saskatchewan

Saskatoon, Sas., Nov. 1—The response to last year's debate, "Should all Japanese be deported after the war?" showed that Saskatchewan students seemed to favor a policy of toleration toward the Japanese.

This year the Social Psychology class is conducting a poll on "deportation of Canadians of Japanese Descent." The results of this poll are not yet complete.

Maritain's Quest For Truth Thomist Lecturer's Topic

REFUTED FRANCO, COMMUNISTS

The spiritual and philosophic pilgrimage of Jacques Maritain, "a man for whom the supernatural is ordinary," was described by Father L. J. Bondy at the second meeting of the Thomistic Society in Brennan Hall yesterday afternoon.

Universally recognized as the principal modern figure in the Thomist movement, M. Maritain is a Professor of Philosophy in the St. Michael's Pontifical Institute of Mediaeval Studies. He is currently on leave of absence serving as French Ambassador to the Vatican.

Maritain was raised in the naturalistic atmosphere of fin-de-siecle Paris, when laboratory science was usurping the place of religion and philosophy, and morality was taught according to Kant, Father Bondy said. He specialized in Biology at the Sorbonne, but his metaphysical mind grew impatient with materialism.

For a time eager disciples of Bergson, who stressed an intuitive road leading beyond matter, Maritain and his future wife, a Russian Jewess were ultimately once more unsatisfied. Both were forestalled from suicide by reading Lean Bloy's La Femme Pauvre, where they found a clue to the meaning of this world; and one year later the couple were baptized.

Returning from two years at Heidelberg University, Jacques Maritain was introduced by Pere Clerissac to the Summa of St. Thomas Aquinas; and dedicated his life to re-shaping St. Thomas' teaching for the 20th century.

At this time he became interested in the royalist Action Francaise, which ended when Rome placed its daily paper on the Index. Maritain's The Things That are Not Caesar's was written as an answer to the theories of this movement.

In 1933 Jacques Maritain left Europe for the first time to lecture in the Americas. Five years later he became embroiled in the Spanish Civil War controversy. While he could not be reconciled to the Communists' aims, neither could he accept Franco as the "Holy Warrior," Father Bondy said.

After the outbreak of the war in Europe, the Maritains, listed as Germany's No. 1 public enemies, left their home in Merdon for North America.

In 1940, when Jacques came to St. Michael's College, the staff persuaded him to lecture in English instead of in his native French. Publication of articles written in English followed soon after.

Trains, Planes, Jalopies Converge On Western

By Ruthie Cohen

Trains, planes, cars—anything that moves—Varsity uses them!

The road to Kingston was figuratively paved with hitch hikers, cars speeding and breaking down, or travelling at an even 50, and last but not least, the resurrected ghost-models commonly seen in the late '20's.

Similarly, Londoners witnessed the entrance of blue-and-white vehicles, including a model A Ford and a '29 Packard, custom-built for the Prince of Wales. Four coeds, in extreme contrast to their squashing trip to Kingston, took the 6.49 flight to London, and arrived, only to find that they had no hotel reservations. However, it was just a matter of a good sob-story, and the four were accommodated.

The eve of the game, Western students arranged various precautionary methods to hold the fort against Toronto invaders. Surrounding the grounds is a narrow body of water, crossed by two bridges which were heavily barricaded by means of cables, barbed wire and heavy logs. Communication alarms concerning any "raiders" discovered by spotters stationed at various points were transmitted, via cruisers, to guards, provided with portable radios at the stadium itself. Approximately 300 students were on call throughout the city to take their turn for a two-hour "defense shift."

Meanwhile, co-eds were doing their bit. They supplied hot coffee and doughnuts for the men who took off-shift naps on mattresses conveniently placed in the stadium dressing rooms.

Despite warnings of Western's awareness, individually organized Varsity "raiders" set out to the attack. One group, in particular, succeeded in passing the enemy lines to paint the wall of the stadium with a blue "U. of T." Unfortunately, the alarm was given and the

Must Share Blame, Engineers Warned

Addressing the engineers at the School Dinner Friday evening, William A. Osbourne stressed the importance of the historical background for the proper functioning of modern engineering. Mr. Osbourne is vice-president and general manager of Babcock-Wilcox and Goldie-McCulloch Ltd., leading manufacturers of boiler equipment.

The Dinner celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of the founding of the Engineering Society, oldest such college society on the continent. Dr. Kinnear Thompson, founder of the Society, was the special guest of the executive. At Dr. Thompson's suggestion, Society Chairman Murray McCulloch stated that a movement will be begun to make every student of S.P.S. a life member of the Society.

In Mr. Osbourne's speech he emphasized the importance of the scientist's and engineer's responsibility to mankind for the consequences of his development. Referring to nuclear fission as an example of the results of unbridled development, he urged that in the future men must not disclaim the blame for something they have only developed.

Later in the evening Dean Young said that for the next three years, the first two years of most Engineering courses will be held at Ajax, and that the removal of these students from the main campus will not affect their education.

X-Ray Appointments

Chest X-ray examinations for first and final year students are being held this week only in the East Block of the Parliament Buildings. Students are reminded that they must keep their appointments for these examinations. Any first or final year student who has not yet made an appointment should contact the Health Services immediately.

Students are also reminded that they must keep their appointments for medical examinations. In spite of continued warnings many students are failing to keep their appointments for both medical and X-ray examinations. The Health Service has announced that fines will be instituted if this practice is continued.

METRAS MUSTANGS VANQUISH BLUES

Third Track Trophy In Week Garnered By Muddled Blues

Saturday afternoon at McMaster University, the Blue and White track men won the Intermediate Intercollegiate Harrier Meet. This was the third track championship to come to the University of Toronto in a space of eight days. The Senior, Intermediate and Harrier Meet trophies now all find their home at Toronto.

Under a cloudy sky and with none too favourable ground conditions, Hec Phillips' men outran the field for victory. The light rain in the morning made the five-mile course a veritable mud bath for the competitors but all starters finished.

Johnny Crerar, ex U.C.C. athlete, now at McMaster ran the course in record time of 36 min. 35.2 sec. to take first place. Ten yards behind him and running in fine style came Toronto's Phil Shackleton. Jack Smylie, O.A.C. speedster, who won the one mile run in the Intermediate Intercollegiate Meet in Toronto earlier in the week, placed third. The next three places belonged to Toronto as Jack Goering, Joe Taylor and Matt Dennis crossed the finish line in order. Bill Adams, the fifth Toronto man ran in sixth position.

Point totals for the meet with low score as winner were: University of Toronto, 17, Ontario Agricultural College, 28, McMaster University, 40, and Western University 59.

Western Passing Decisive As Blues Drop Early Lead

WARDLE STARS FOR VICTORS

By Mickey Michalski

London, November 3. (Special)—There was a smirk on the face of fate and a leer on the lips of Lady Luck out in J. W. Little Memorial Stadium last Saturday, as the University of Western Mustangs emerged with an 18-10 victory over the Varsity Blues.

A converted backfielder, Bill Wardle, playing end was the hero of the day. In the opening quarter, he blocked a Varsity kick and dribbled and ran the ball for a 40 yard touchdown. Early in the second half, he intercepted a lateral and romped 35 yards for his second major.

Alonside Wardle's stirring exhibition, the record crowd of 8,000 saw the Mustangs remain the only team in eastern football that remained undefeated in league play.

The Blues played like a well precisioned team and, in the first half were very impressive as they took a 10-6 lead on a single and a placement from the boot of Stu Scott and a major by Mel Lawson which Scott converted. Lawson was set up on the play by Bob Henry who intercepted a Western forward in the centre area and dashed to the 15 before he was downed. The Mustang counter came late in the first quarter as Wardle dribbled the ball over. Ballantyne's convert was good.

After the impromptu battles during halftime had subsided, the men of Johnny Metras took over. Two Szumlinski passes placed the ball deep in Varsity territory but a fumble stopped the threatened onslaught. Then Wardle intercepted the lateral and went over for the touch which Ballantyne again converted.

A sustained downfield drive terminated with Harry Szumlinski crossing the line from the one yard line. The convert was blocked but late in the game Stu Scott was rouged by Curry for the final scoring point.

The Varsity attack was centred around the passing of Mel Lawson although but two of 14 passes were completed. Stu Scott's kicking was another feature as he got away long spirals. His punts averaged 44 yards while those of the opposing kicker were 40.

Jack McReynolds, taking the place of the injured Colin Cranham in the starting line up, was the plunging star of the game for the Blues. He consistently broke away for valuable gains and was a continual thorn in the sides of the Mustangs throughout the game as his tackling was also above average.

Mel Lawson and Bill Lawrence were also on the standout list with steady gains. Along the line, Al Scott came up with another sterling performance while Wil Henry kept a very close pace.

The Mustangs attack was also centred around their passers who completed six of 15 tries. Harry Szumlinski, Herb Ballantyne, Dan Huyck and Dick Farley carried the burden for the winners while Doug Cook, Allen and Wardle shone along the line. Their pass defence was even more effective due to four interceptions.

They Even Tried Hurdling

Mel Lawson took to the air Saturday in all ways possible. Besides his regular pass heaving, he took up hurdling. Lying prone under his churning feet are linemen Gord Lawson and John Kilpatrick. Lawson's college try proved in vain as the Blues bowed 18-10 before the mighty Mustangs.

It started out to be an ordinary day for Nancy Neff.

She had been down to a nine o'clock lecture and had spent the afternoon at Shaw's Business College where she is learning typing etc. She began in September and is using five fingers already.

That evening she met Bud Gruetzner, her fiancé, for dinner. He was late A friend helped her be mad until he arrived. Together they discussed the coming weekend at Western. Friday was Bud's birthday and a crowd of friends were going to London to see the game and celebrate.

After dinner she left Bud and went to the Kappa Kappa Gamma house where she helped sew costumes for the U.C. Follics. She left the KKG house shortly after 9.30 and went down to Union Station to see off a friend of a girl friend's.

She had just gotten into bed at 11.30 when Ted Smith phoned. Her mother answered and Nancy heard her mother say: "Well, you'd better speak to Nancy."

Nancy went to the phone and Ted said: "This is Ted. There's been an accident." And Nancy said: "Who got hurt?" Ted said: "Bud!"

"Well, what's the matter with him?" "He's unconscious and he's in the hospital."

From there on Nancy's mind was almost a blank. She dressed, she remembered, and her father drove her to College Street hospital where Bud Gruetzner lay unconscious. At the hospital she got out of the car after her father and slammed the door. "Oh my gosh," she thought. "The keys are in the car." They were; but her father happened to have another set.

Nancy and her father had trouble seeing Bud. They wouldn't let people in. But Nancy knew the interne or rather his wife and he let them in. Nancy shook Bud's hand. He had just recovered consciousness.

He looked horrible, Nancy thought. It was something about the swaddling clothes they wear in hospitals and the blood all over the pillow that frightened her and she didn't sleep all that night. She thought he had something wrong with him that he wouldn't tell her.

She had asked about the blood. "Is that from you," she asked. And he said: "Yes." He might at least have let her think it belonged to somebody who had been in that bed before, she felt.

Bud Gruetzner, Bob Carley and Ted Smith, who may have read in the papers and perhaps even, in this one, were set upon Halloween evening by a gang of teenage hoodlums. It has all caused considerable comment and some not too (Continued on page 4)

Specific Thought Urged By Dr. Koo

Dr. T. Z. Koo, advisor to the Chinese delegation at San Francisco, and secretary of the World's Student Christian Federation, has spent the week-end at Toronto.

In an address on Saturday in Trinity Chapel on the World Charter, Dr. Koo said that in order that it be more than a "mobile piece of paper," such policies as self-determination must be expressed more clearly, to determine the attitude of each nation. Economic equalization and racial equality must also be more specific. The S.C.M., he said, is the basis for the new type of thinking necessary to make the Charter a success.

Speaking in Convocation Hall last night at the Evening Service of the S.C.M., Dr. Koo cited lessons he had learned under total war.

In prison, Dr. Koo learned to think of God as a man-uniting Love, without which he would have felt completely isolated from humanity. He proved the Bible lesson that man must seek the Kingdom of Heaven before material gain with the lesson taught by Japan, who took material gain and then lost it before it could enjoy it. Dr. Koo said that he would not have gotten out of China if he had not had an all-encompassing love in his heart. By bearing no hate himself, he so disarmed his enemies that they could hardly hold any hate for him. Through this idea of friendship practiced by all man, a peaceful world is possible, he said.

Committee Pages Organization Reps

The University of Toronto Committee on the Japanese-Canadians has been formally recognized by the Students' Administrative Council and is holding a meeting in Cartwright Hall at 5.00 p.m. Tues. Nov. 6. Each member of the committee will give a short report on their activities to date in contacting the various campus organizations.

The chairman, Don Franco, would like to see representatives from the following organizations added to the committee: Jewish Student Fellowship, V.C.F., Law Club, International Students Club, Pharmacy, Forestry, Occupational Therapy and Physiotherapy, Trinity, the Board of Stewards, St. Michael's, St. Josephs, and the S.A.C.

Admonition Futile, VCF Speaker Says

"Spiritual strength" was speaker Russell Graham's subject Friday night in the last of the Varsity Christian Fellowship's week of special meetings.

Home on furlough from his mission field in India, Mr. Graham spoke from his experience in that theatre. He pointed out that the Bible frankly states that the human mind cannot know the things of God, saying "Nothing is more futile than urging men to be good."

Two hundred students heard him advise "Get down on your knees in your room, and ask Him to keep His promise and make you a new creature in Christ . . . your whole life will change."

Editorial

Well Done -- Almost

Roaring into London nearly 1,400 strong Varsity students last week-end gave a chequered account of themselves. Rowdiness was not nearly as bad as it could have been; Though guards were posted with military regularity, the Western campus, its buildings scattered about a hillside, is difficult to guard with anything smaller than a battalion; and organized action on the part of the Varsity through might have left a sorry shambles.

We are, needless to say, glad that there was no such organized action; but what a handful of determined vandals succeeded in doing was bad enough. A telegram received from Western speaks of sand-blasting operations that will run into "several hundred dollars."

The Damage

As nearly as we could tabulate from the conflicting evidence available, the vandals' box score runs as follows:

- "U of T" painted on nose of Victory Loan blimp.
- "T" Painted on London City Hall.
- "T's" painted on several lamp-posts in front of the Hotel London.
- "U of T" painted on the wall of the Little Memorial Stadium.
- "T" painted on the Western Science Building. (These last two blemishes were discovered and removed while still wet).

Perhaps the painters felt they were leaving their mark on London: it was scarcely a mark to be proud of. Perhaps they felt they were re-dressing the balance after Western's hurried job of Stadium-painting here two weeks ago. An attack on the city Hall was a disproportionate form of revenge. Perhaps they were working off steam; which would seem to support the Telegram's recent editorial contention that "a number of good navies" are probably being spoiled by such white-collar occupations as going to University.

The Danger

There is a fourth possibility; which alarms us more than any of these. Perhaps the Varsity men raided Western because they felt they were expected to. Perhaps after all the publicity Western gave to its defense preparations, the Blues supporters hated to let them down; felt that they would be showing deplorable spirit if they didn't respond to an explicit and flaunted challenge. In short, we are wondering if the week-end happenings weren't partly Western's fault.

We mean that paint-throwing seems to be growing formalized into an exuberant game; the sort of game that it takes two to play. It is, understandably, glorious fun for the painters; but the London sally seems to have been just as much fun for the defenders.

The Preparations

"Varsity Invasion Coming," runs an organizational bulletin distributed to all Western students last week. "Read this bulletin carefully. Starting at 5 p.m. Friday and lasting until 9 a.m. Saturday, a constant guard must be maintained on the campus." There follow delightful details about the first shift, which "will need 75 men willing to stay and eat supper in the cafeteria. They will set up barricades at the bridge and at the Western road entrance"; And the second shift, "which will get cocoa and doughnuts in the cafeteria and take them to the boiler room in the stadium." Listed as required equipment were "Stink Bombs (donated by science students), eggs, tomatoes, hair clippers, paint, brushes, rope, fire-hose, axe-handles, pistols tear gas, 2-in. mortar, broken bottles."

This is more than taking football seriously. It is growing a little like playing soldier. Propaganda in the London Free Press suggests the momentum the entire episode was acquiring: "Toronto students," we are told, "1,000 in number, had a pep meeting to organize a raid on Western." A three-column story in the same paper plays up the whole impending debacle as a glorious lark.

We have not a word to say in extenuation of those who defaced the buildings at London. We have said in these columns many times that we regard such doings as criminal, and the perpetrators as criminals. We believe that college spirit can be expressed in many other ways; for examples whereof we point to Western students. Every act of rowdiness that came to our attention was started by Blues supporters.

But the high spirits that surrounded the painting of buildings; the high spirits that marked the conduct of both sides, leave us some anxious doubt whether such painting is growing crystallized into a kind of game; a game which all expect and in which all can share. If so, if every rugby game must be accompanied by a colorman's orgy, we tremble for the future of intercollegiate football.

Thematic Problems

"The dilemma is this: the American novelist cannot write seriously without alienating himself from the values of his society, and at the same time he cannot function apart from his audience."

This quotation is from an essay by Marjorie Brace, Thematic Problems of the American Novelist, which was printed in the autumn issue of Accent, a literary quarterly published in the United States. It is a challenging generalization; and can be applied equally well to Canadian literature.

The distinction between social and non-social literature, always an arbitrary and debatable one, has been almost completely destroyed by the series of crises through which the world has passed since 1914. In our time the novelist's search for an ivory tower has reflected his attitude to society as clearly as has another novelist's expressed political and economic theories. Attempts to be a-social have simply ended by becoming anti-social.

But Miss Brace has limited herself to a discussion of those novelists whose work has generally been labelled socially conscious. The most talented of these writers have brought new insight to the old problems of the individual and his relations with other individuals within society. Too many of the others have been content with a thinly-veiled fictionization of a political creed, complete with typed characters and the inevitable seduction scenes which, with the passing of time and social novels, have succeeded in achieving a really striking similarity.

Miss Brace contends that the major European novelists, "confronting a social and moral sterility... urge new values, re-form ancient ones" in a way that their American contemporaries have been unable to emulate. Among others, she mentions D. H. Lawrence, Silone, Mann, Mairaux and Koestler as examples. In one way or another most of the greatest contemporary European novelists have denied the standards of a society they consider bankrupt, and they have then gone on to develop alternative theories of existence. During the war a number of the younger British writers turned to Anarchism, thus breaking with society as completely as possible. With the exception of James Farrell, American writers have not displayed the same tendencies; and it is Farrell's Studs Lonigan trilogy that Miss Brace calls "perhaps the most

"Reuben, Reuben, I've been thinking, We have painted Varsity."

If like us, they're vengeful students, They will come and paint up we."

"Rachel, Rachel, you're a genius!

We must organize a guard, So that when they come to paint us, They will find it rather hard."

"Reuben, Reuben, I've been thinking, Since they're coming up with paint, There's a trick to circumvent them— Let them raid us where we ain't. Dis-assemble all our buildings, Scatter pieces far and wide. That is called 'Dispersal Tactics'; In the Army it's been tried."

So their buildings they demolished, Fragments scattered far and wide; Thus when came the hopeful painters, Not a building they espied.

Which is how it was done.

honest and consistent or our naturalist novels."

During the past few years there have been several important novels written by young Canadian authors about Canadian social problems. One of these, All This Difference was reviewed in last Monday's Varsity. Since a lengthy and difficult adjustment period seems inevitable, these few novels are likely to be followed by many more. Potential social novelists might read Miss Brace's essay; for if it does not suggest any detailed plan of action, it does emphasize the probable necessity of an eventual denial on their part of many of the basic assumptions of our present life. And this is a step which particularly on this continent where literary competition is keen, may be a very difficult one for the younger writer to take.

To those who feel the young artist should stay away from politics I recommend Enemies of Promise, a pre-war book by Cyril Connolly, the editor of the English literary magazine Horizon. Mr. Connolly does not particularly approve of the artist in politics, but he admits that "if human beings have any right, they have the right to know what they are dying for." And to knowledge of what we live for we have also the right.

Correspondence

Knock Off The Hyphen?

Editor, The Varsity
Dear Sir:

Under the profound title, "A Canadian is a Canadian," there appeared recently in a local paper an editorial generally acclaiming the installation of a category of people to be known exclusively as "Canadians citizen" and referred to as "Canadians."

The situation now is that residents of this country are no longer to be any one of "Canadian citizens," "Canadian nationals," or British subjects." Excellent!

There is still a number of tags floating around, however, which certainly have no legal status and yet, heresies to language and to law, persist and maintain headline popularity.

The example which immediately springs to my mind is "Japanese-Canadian." I know that any justification for such labels will cease when the Canadian Citizenship Bill becomes law; but I cannot see any reason for them even now, or why they ever appeared.

When, for example, people are being urged to leave a country without much opportunity of doing otherwise, it should help immensely to know, in exact terms, just who they are. In this respect, it has been rather relieving not to hear of Indian-Canadians, German-Canadians, and others.

Why do these labels ever appear? Doesn't "Japanese" by itself, take enough space in a headline on news-short days? Does "Canadian" without the rest of the tag leave no impression on the mind? They ought to. Even lawyers use them separately without ever having to combine them!

NOEL CHAPMAN,

Editor, The Varsity

Obviously, the time has come when the question of a World War I memorial should receive attention.

In order that the university authorities may be guided in their course of action by a consensus of student opinion, it is suggested that the "Varsity" encourage an open editorial forum on the subject.

The publication of interviews and letters to the editor would be stimulating and of general interest.

In due course, the "Varsity" could advise the President of the summary of its findings, and request appropriate action.

Ballads And The Butchered Bard

The English baritone Leslie Holmes gave a notable recital last night in the pleasant intimacy of Hart House's Great Hall, the one-hundred and eighty-sixth of this remarkable series. Presented in three sections, of approximately chronological order, the complete group was given to well-filled hall.

Leslie Holmes has not a voice of lyric beauty or ease, but his baritone is featured by power and agreeable tone. He was suffering from a slight cold, which manifested itself in a certain stridency of his lower range. Mr. Holmes, to his credit did a grand job nevertheless. An artist of almost classical purity, his enunciation is neatly precise and his command of language impressive.

Arne's aria from Alfred, which, as the soloist pointed out, is especially topical in our time, was robustly delivered. Of the Schubert, the beautiful Litanei was most affectingly sung. A Healey Willan arrangement of 'A la Claire Fontaine, familiar to students of Maria Chapdelaine, found ready sympathy in Mr. Holmes' approach. The encoored and thrice-familiar Garden Where the Praises Grow were very well received.

In his capacity as accompanist, Weldon Kilburn displayed amazing facility and unfailing musicianship; in fact, one could have wished for a solo from this artist.

That the student body of this university is privileged to hear such concerts is in itself a minor miracle, but when congenial material is presented by the cream of local talent, our advantages become triply enviable.

D. GORDON ROSS

The Merry Wives of Windsor is not a great play. The story of Falstaff in love is fluffy and inconsequential. But that does not excuse the ghastly mess the Shakespearean Society made of it last Friday night.

James Annand as Falstaff looked as obscene as the barrage balloon flying over Queen's Park and bore just as unchanging and vacuous an expression, while Slender played by Stanley O. Roe was in a prepueril flutter which for some reason caused him to gurgel so that no one understood a word he said; Mistress Ford and Page (Ruth Norris and Ellen E. Cubitt) spent their time in overprolonged tittles, while mine Host of the Garter Inn (Desmond Fitzgerald) gave the most un-bartender-like portrayal possible. Mistress Quickly (Jessie Firth) was just plain silly. The rest of the cast veered between incoherence and absurdity, and to make things worse this jolly band of Elizabethans did not know their lines.

Technically speaking the show was equally appalling. The sets were breathtakingly unstable. Chimes were indicated by what sounded like the beating of a frying-pan. The man in charge of the house lights was a rank individualist, and the fellow who operated the records during intermissions apparently shared our dismal view of the production because at one point he turned the music on full blast when the actors were on the stage.

It is an outrage to put a play before the public in such a condition. Especially by Shakespeare before a strongly high-school audience whose future ideas of the bard will be indelibly associated with unintelligibility and chaos. JEFF WAITE

Vic Has Five Of First Six In Jr. Interfaculty Harrier

Vic dominated the junior interfaculty harrier, run Saturday morning over a three-mile course around the campus. Red and gold runners placed 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 5th, and 6th. J. B. Black of P.H.E. was the only non-Vic man near the front.

D. Flack, I Arts, came in after 16 minutes and three seconds, trailed by D. Sloan, II Arts, about 50 yards behind. R. W. Gordon, II Arts, took third, P. Brenner, I Arts followed the P.H.E. man, and another Vic runner, Don Taylor, II Arts was sixth.

In cross country racing the first five placings for each team are totalled, those with the fewest number of points winning. Victoria's was 17, Trinity scored 67 to place its team second, and SPS took 81 points.

"Results make it look as if Vic will stand a good chance of taking the senior harrier event at High Park, Nov. 17," said Hec Phillips, University track coach. "It is to be hoped that they and all others who were out Saturday will train for the senior race."

Speaking OF SPORT

By Mickey Michasiw

In spite of the triple guard thrown around J. W. Little Memorial Stadium last Friday night, certain effervescent enthusiasts eluded the elaborate plan to retaliate for the painting of Varsity Stadium two weeks ago. This act resulted in a blue "U. or T." on the walls of the Western buildings, a damaged ornate bridge and further vandalism.

Varsity students were not wholly to blame for the damage inflicted as it was a Western crowd that stretched a cable across the bridge just before another Western bunch crossed signals and ploughed through, leaving a trail of damage.

The fact remains that the feeling of friendly rivalry became one of guarding and mauling. The onus for these deeds rests on Western as much as it does on Varsity. The painting of Varsity Stadium, the fiery pep talk by Johnny Metras prior to the guarding, and his inside information on how to stop Varsity attempts and 'give it to them' helped no little.

On the other hand, however Varsity students went to London armed to the gills even though it was agreed at the Thursday pep rally that no point was to be used.

A manifestation of school spirit, however, becomes vandalism when it costs several hundreds of dollars to obliterate the marks. Sand-blasting was used on the pillars of Convocation Hall and from Western comes word that the same method must be employed there.

The energies emerging from school spirit would be better diverted and confined within the bounds of snake dances, pep rallies, yelling and shouting. The epidemic has spread like a disease within the past three weeks and unless definite steps are taken soon, the conditions may get out of hand.

The Whistle Blows

A basketball game is a very exciting affair for all but the referee. The teams get their share of fame, the spectators' attention is for the stars performing on the floor. This leaves a most essential character out in the cold. The losing team is sure to heap abuses on the innocent head of referee, and the winners are all too ready to accept her decisions as their just deserts. Thus only the most stout-hearted of individuals dare to volunteer for this unenviable position.

Of late, many complaints have reached our ears of a referee lowering herself to favor one of two teams competing for the basketball title. This opinion seems to be unfair. As the referee is composed of the same frail materials as the players themselves, they will be aware that a referee is as prone to make mistakes as they themselves. No human is infallible, and in the fast-moving game of basketball, mistakes are even more numerous. But these mistakes are made in favor of both teams, rather than one, on the law of averages.

A referee may have a blind spot in her judgment, such as overguarding. The members of both teams have an opportunity to voice their complaints at quarter and at half time, when the referee herself comes around to hear said observations. So there is no excuse for loud and long screams of "We were robbed!" Let's see more teams using this prerogative.

Last year basketball players were put off by the frequent use of bad language by some of their members. There is nothing more disconcerting to one trying to play a sportsman-like game than this abuse of the English language (so they say). The energy wasted in this manner of speech could be put to use in a much more useful fashion if directed to co-operating with one's team mates. This year, the use of abusive language is sufficient grounds to disqualify a team.

Shorthanded Soccermen Tied; Clinching Counter Disputed

The Varsity Soccer Blues continued in their undefeated streak on Saturday afternoon, in battling with the O.A.C. Aggies, in Guelph, to a 2-2 draw. Playing at short-strength, with Stan Spooner and Erry Thompson on the injured list, Toronto was up against a strong soccer squad, on their home grounds.

Guelph took the offensive with the opening kick-off, and although play was quite even throughout, the Aggies held a slight edge. Early in the first half, Shinobu was in on goal for a clearshot, but was run-out by Guelph fullback Case. Midway through the half, Mayne took advantage of an open net, making the score 1-0 for Varsity, which held until half-time.

Early in the second half, Guelph evened it up. Lord scored an penalty kick, after an unintentional foul by Bell-Irving. Again Varsity took a one-goal lead, when Riguro, scrambling in a goal-mouth scramble, beat Guelph for the 2-1 counter. With about ten minutes of play to go, Lord again saved Guelph with his second goal. This came from an offside kick, and was disputed, but the umpire's decision is always final.

The decision of the game was in doubt until the end, and although Guelph could very easily have won on the play, Varsity should have won by virtue of a better decision on Guelph's last goal.

For Varsity, Roy Shinobu, Doug Eaton and Noor Hassanali played good ball, while Lord and Case were the pick of the O.A.C. men.

pleasant implications from one fact-ignoring newspaper that the hoodlums were in actuality other university students.

Bud, who was 21 on Friday despite it all, had an appointment at 10 that night with Carman Guild, at the corner of Harbord and St. George to get some papers. As the three students left Holwood Hall they noticed a group of boys lighting fires at the fence around the residence. They put the fires out and dispersed the gang and thought the incident closed. Walking on, they had reached Philosopher's Path on Hoskin when the gang re-appeared and surrounded them.

Bud was knocked unconscious when one of them stepped on the back of his head. The imprint is still there.

"What was the sensation on being knocked out?" we asked. "None," he explained. "How long were you unconscious?" we wondered. "I don't know," he said. He had never been unconscious before.

His mother became very excited and got Dr. Kenneth B. McKenzie, the brain specialist, to examine her son's head. But he found nothing wrong. His sister chatted with a fellow T.T.C. passenger while riding down to the hospital Thurs. morning. "Did you read about these university boys," the lady inquired. Bud's sister said yes. "Isn't that too bad?" sympathized the lady. "I'll watch the death columns."

President Smith wrote Bud, Bob and Ted each a letter. He described the attack variously as "cowardly", "terrible" and "dreadful." He said it was too bad it happened. Principal Taylor and Dean McAndrew visited the victim in hospital.

Bailey Snow, a friend of Bud's thought we might mention that he was the person who made sure the fire was out the next day. "I've been awarded the Victorian Order of Nurses for it," he reported.

Not the event but the circumstances surrounding are the most amusing thing that has ever happened to Bud, he says.

INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT OIL

HOW AN Oil Well Works

This is a picture of a typical Canadian oil well. It might be in Alberta's famous Turner Valley, where the average well is about 8,000 feet deep. In other fields, wells today are drilled down more than two miles! When the drill strikes into an oil-bearing formation, the underground pressure of millions of cubic feet of gas drives the oil up the drilled hole to the surface.

Two ways of drilling

There are two methods of drilling in use today. One of them, the cable-tool method, is a modification of the system used by the Chinese in drilling for salt 2,000 years ago. The drill "bit" is like a cold chisel and pounds its way through the rock.

The rotary drill, illustrated at the left, was perfected in fairly recent times and acts much like a mechanic's drill. Because it gives high speed cutting through the rock formations, it has largely replaced the cable tool drill in most Canadian oil fields.

The first steps

Before the drill can go into operation, a "cellar" about 20 feet deep and 10 feet square is dug. Then a derrick of wood or steel is erected. A large derrick would be about 140 feet high, with a 30-foot base. It may carry as much as 1,000,000 pounds of drilling equipment, as shown in the little sketch alongside.

The drilling tools are inserted in a "string" about 50 feet long. As the drill goes down, the "string" is lengthened by addition of extra drill pipe. Periodically, the "string" is removed and the sides of the well lined with a steel casing for support.

The hazards of drilling

Sometimes the drill tools break; far below the surface, and several days, even weeks, may be wasted in "fishing" for the lost tools. But the greatest hazard of all in drilling for oil is the risk of a "dry hole". All the science of the geologist has not yet perfected a way of making certain, before drilling starts, that oil will be found. Many and many a well proves a complete failure—dealing a discouraging blow, not only to the drillers, but to the company and the investors who have invested many thousands of dollars in the work.

Why the work must go on

Yet all producing oil companies must face this risk and go on undiscouraged. For oil wells sooner or later are exhausted and the oil industry must find new sources continuously. Unless it did, shortages of gasoline, lubricants and other petroleum products would eventually stop our cars, trucks, airplanes—even our factories.

In many parts of Canada, and in South America, Imperial Oil Limited, and its producing organizations have drilled more than 8,000,000 feet in search of oil . . . holes totalling more than 1,515 miles of drilling! Many of the wells were failures, many miles were drilled in vain. Yet, thanks to "keeping everlastingly at it," we are able to supply a large part of Canada's needs for oil products . . . and through the continuous exploration of Canada's oil lands our scientists and engineers are developing a valuable natural resource that adds to the wealth of the nation, and the well-being of every Canadian.

Student Opinions Diverge In Campus Memorial Poll

CENOTAPHS, LIBRARIES SUGGESTED

The erection of a war memorial is, at this time, a fitting tribute to the men and deeds it would commemorate. Public opinion, while unanimous on this subject, is divided as to the most fitting and relevant memorial to our dead.

A poll has been conducted to sound campus opinion on the type of war memorial which would best serve to honor the graduates and undergraduates on the University of Toronto honor roll. Students views varied widely. Some advocated a cenotaph similar to the memorial arch and tower erected after the last war; many others believed some addition of practical benefit to the University more fitting.

Jim Brett, I Soc. and Phill., gave the outlook of an ex-service man when he remarked, "The Hart House tower is a satisfactory memorial for those who fell in the last war, but for this generation emphasis should be on more practical things, such as a reading room, library, or laboratory. Another ex-service student, Howard Miller, II Pass, saw an addition to a library or other buildings as of more benefit to those for whom our servicemen fought than a stone monument. He went on to cite an article in "Time" concerning a great recreation centre for children, to be built in Washington as a war memorial.

One of the contradictory suggestions came from Bob Martyn, I Pass, who believed that the original purpose of remembrance would be too easily forgotten in the case of a library, and would submit something like Cleopatra's Needle, as more suitable.

Eleanor Catto, II English, proposed the founding of a department of art and sculpture in connection with the university, to be composed of a modern building with galleries for exhibition. Murals for the walls of the library were suggested by Marg. Dale, II Latin and English, as a beautiful and fitting monument.

Whatever form this memorial to the fallen of the Second World War assumes, the survey indicates that it will prove worthy of the high purpose and gallant performance of duty of these already made immortal in our minds, as they are soon to be immortal in the products of our craftsmen.

Turtle Was Emblem Of Atom Splitters

"Behold the lowly turtle, he makes no progress unless his neck is stuck out," was the motto of the Manhattan Project, as the atomic bomb race was called. This willingness to experiment made the production of the bomb possible, explained Professor A. D. Misener in his lecture, "The Manufacture of the Atomic Bomb" Friday night.

Professor Misener said that in 1940, scientists thought "it might be possible to smash the uranium atom and obtain huge amounts of energy in the process." In less than five years all the work that led up to the explosion of the bomb had been done. "It would be a similar achievement," he said, "if during the five years following the discovery of electromagnetism the Queenston power plant had been built." It was only by the co-operation of scientists on hitherto unknown scale that this was achieved.

The next lecture of the series on the development of the Electron Microscope will be given by Professor E. F. Burton at 8 o'clock next Friday evening in Room 43 of the Physics Building. Professor Burton's name is associated with the building of the first successful electron microscope in North America.

Celtic Canucks To Thrill To New Opera-Predicted

By Michael Hornyansky

"Dr. Willan," said Mr. Coulter, "is a modest man." John Coulter, broad-shouldered librettist of Canada's first full-length opera, also proved to be a modest man as he lounged before a fire at the Arts and Letters Club on Elm Street, and chatted about Deirdre of the Sorrows, the story, and the composer.

Dr. Healey Willan had said of his part in the opera-writing team: "The book is the most important part of the opera."

Said author Coulter: "If his words have weight, the composer gets from them light and heat. The music should be the melodic counterpart of the spoken word."

The story of Deirdre, a Celtic myth, has been told by Synge, Yeats, and Lady Gregory. In its new form it will be given its radio premiere early next year, Mr. Coulter told The Varsity. The words have been published separately "because of their great power and beauty, and because those who hear the opera will have their pleasure enhanced if they first read the book."

In choosing Deirdre's story, Mr. Coulter accomplished two ends. He made it possible for Dr. Willan not to be hemmed in by tradition and convention, but to use "pure music." And he himself could achieve his goal of expressing forcefully the strong, primal emotions.

Canadians regard this mythological heritage as their own? Mr. Coulter shrugged his shoulders: strictly speaking, the only truly Canadian myths are those of the Indians; and these can be told and understood by Indians alone. But modern Canada's myths are those of its component peoples. Why should Canadians of Celtic descent thrill to the operatic exploits of obscure Italian heroes, leaving unused the rich cycle of tales of their own race?

Will it be of little consequence to most Canadians that the premiere of the first full-length Canadian opera will soon be at hand? Mr. Coulter thought the choice of its subject, which elsewhere would be the torch for a bonfire of controversy, here is either reproached without even superficial investigation of the reasons for its choice, or is not questioned at all.

Tracing the modern revival of opera, Mr. Coulter spoke of Britten's Peter Grimes. Very successful in Britain, this opera has been recorded and brought to Canada by what Mr. Coulter calls "the greatest impresario of modern times," the British Consul. Here is an example of a new type of diplomacy; but what is more natural than that nations wishing to establish friendly relations should first find common ground in the arts.

In this diplomatic field, Canada is lagging behind. Mr. Coulter diagnosed the illness as a "persisting pioneer extrovert complex." This was commendable and highly necessary in Canada's physical birth, but is now out of date. Canadians do not realize that intellectual forests now await their abstract axes. As things are, said this Ulsterman, with a gleam in his blue eyes, anyone who maintains an intellectual approach after leaving college is regarded with suspicion and is accused of "not being a good businessman."

The sensible partnership of Composer Willan and Librettist Coulter has too few precedents in the operatic past. Unhappily, Mr. Coulter recalled examples of splendid music cursed with amateurish words. Further, the lyric song has been too often a mechanical interjection designed to show off the talents of a soloist. In Deirdre the song is a focus for audience attention, crystallizing the action and integrated with the whole.

Duncan C.C.F. Club Dinner Speaker

Mr. Lewis Duncan, K.C. will speak on the topic "Humbly or Sincerely on the International Front," at the next meeting of the University C.C.F. Club. This dinner meeting will be held at the Diet Kitchen, 72 Bloor St. W. at 6:00 P.M. Wednesday Nov. 7.

Mr. Duncan a U. of T. graduate, is regarded as one of the most dynamic figures to enter the local political scene. He served for several years as Controller on the City Council, and was C.C.F. candidate in High Park riding, opposing Premier Drew in the last provincial election.

On the same evening, the club will adjourn to the Women's Union at 8:30 to hold its business meeting. Some of the highlights of the business agenda: A discussion of the structure of the club and proposed improvements, discussion of the preliminary agenda for the provincial conference, and election of delegate and alternate; an outline of the entire proposed program, and the establishment of a weekly newspaper.

"The idea behind holding a dinner meeting," said Sylvia Easton, Social Director, "is to combine business with pleasure, by getting the groundings of a practical political education in a congenial atmosphere, without taking up too much of the valuable time of the students. It is an experiment which we hope the club will support."

All members and interested students are cordially invited to attend.

Innis To Address Commerce Club

Dr. H. A. Innis, delegate during the summer to the Russian Academy of Science, will discuss the Soviet at the first meeting of the newly organized Women's Commerce Club tomorrow night at Wymilwood at 8.

During the war, girls in Commerce and Finance were members of the Commerce Club, but with this year's influx of male C. & F. students, meetings are being held in Hart House. Therefore the club divided. The purpose of the club is to acquaint the girls in C. & F. with students in other years similarly interested. They will hear speakers on the role of women in Economics and Finance.

Jean Mann, president of the club announced the other officers: Norma Correll, secretary, Jean Morrison, treasurer, Dorothy Fetterly, third year representative, Jean Lang, second year representative, and Joan Hamilton and Jean Fraser, first year representatives. Refreshments will be served and students in all courses are welcome.

Record Hour

The record program, held daily from 4:00 to 5:30 in the Women's Common Room at U.C., is open to the men and women of every college and faculty. Today's program:

Chabrier—Espana
Ravel—Mother Goose Suite
Beethoven—Violin Concerto.

Tickets of admission may be obtained at the Student's Administrative Council Office, Hart House, and by members of the staff at the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall. Early application should be made as the accommodation at the Hall is limited.

WOMEN'S ART CLASSES

John Hall, eminent Canadian artist, will give drawing classes to women undergraduates this year. The classes are being arranged by Evelyn Swartz, President of the Fine Art Club, and will be held in the big lecture room in the C.O.T.C. Drill Hall.

An organization meeting of all those interested will be held this afternoon at 4:30 p.m., in the Women's Union.

Profits Of Concert For Welfare Centre

The proceeds of last night's concert given by Mrs. Evalene Kilby Dunlop and Mrs. Mary MacKinnon Shore in Hart House Theatre will be used to pay for the renovation of the University Settlement's new welfare centre.

The building, located on 15 Grange Road, was formerly the property of the Boulton family and was given to the Settlement to be used for the welfare of neighbourhood children. Considerable repairs were required before the house could be used, and as a result, the Settlement is $2,000 in debt. The concert proceeds will be applied on this deficit.

The building is now used as a War-time Day Nursery, partly for the Settlement's own teen-age activities and in the summer for the Settlement's Nursery School.

Speaker Tells Of British Housing

Interrupted in its work by the war need for immediate evacuation schemes, the English government can now proceed with its large-scale Public Housing projects, Miss Helen Alford of the British Ministry of Information stated at an informal talk to the School of Social Work, Monday afternoon.

A process of "filtering up" from the worst slum areas to existing older public housing areas and from it to the newer one is being followed, Miss Alford said.

One of the objectives of the housing projects is the creation of a neighborhood spirit among the new inmates, she continued in reply to questions. Hence, groups of 90-120 flats or 200 cottages are considered the ideal size. Community centres consisting of a canteen, dance hall, reading room and public-houses which, the speaker explained, are an essential feature of English life would be included. All income-groups will be comprised in the present scheme, she concluded contrary to the pre-war public housing policy which affected the slum-dwellers only.

Queen's Student Gov't. Try Paint-Slinging Students

TO AMEND SCHOOL SPIRIT

Kingston, Ont.—Those Queen's students who were responsible for the painting of Convocation Hall and Hart House of the University of Toronto will be brought before the supreme authority of the Alma Mater Society court, it was decided at the regular meeting of the AMS executive early last week.

The executive took a serious view of a letter written by Dr. Sidney Smith, President of the University of Toronto, to Dr. W. E. McNeill, vice-president of Queen's. This letter contained a list of damages allegedly inflicted by Queen's students on Toronto University buildings. It was decided to place this important matter in the hands of the student government of Queen's.

Chinese Students Lauded By Dr. Koo

The arrival of peace makes relief of Chinese students more important than ever, according to Dr. T. Z. Koo, Adviser to the Chinese delegate at San Francisco; Dr. Koo addressed the International Students Service last Friday at the Women's Union. He described the need for, and the use of monies sent by student groups throughout the world for this relief.

The speaker emphasized that the war's end has introduced many problems. Major on the list was the evacuation to the west of 80 of the 120 Chinese universities. This involved a trek on foot as far as two thousand miles. Books and equipment had to be left behind. Dr. Koo himself walked for 44 days to reach unoccupied China.

He elaborated on the tremendous difficulties overcome in refugee colleges, and explained that these universities would now have to return east, many to buildings destroyed during the nine years of war.

To Frolic To Foster At U.C. Dance

This afternoon the University College Literary and Athletic Society in conjunction with the Women's Undergraduate Association are sponsoring a tea dance in the Junior Common Room.

Phil Foster and his orchestra will play for the dancing from 4 to 6 p.m. This will be the first function since the Common Room has been re-decorated. The dance, which is open to all students of University College, is the first of its kind to be held on the campus.

Previous to the rugby games at Toronto, the painting of Varsity Stadium was anticipated, however, the executive was appalled by the extent of the damage allegedly done to the University buildings. The final decision of the executive was that the painters would be searched out and dealt with accordingly by the AMS court.

The executive also made plans for the improving the spirit of intercollegiate sports. A committee was appointed which will see that Western University receives a fitting welcome when it visits Queen's. Signs of welcome will be posted, a letter sent to the Western Gazette and an invitation to the football game will be extended to the entire student body of Western University.

Montreal, Toronto Debates Broadcast

Intercollegiate debating, in abeyance for the last six years due to wartime conditions, will be revived on Nov. 26 when teams from the Universities of Toronto and McGill will debate the resolutions: "Resolved that this house favors a policy of unrestricted European immigration in Canada for the next ten years." The resolution will be debated simultaneously both in Toronto and Montreal by four different teams.

In Toronto, the debate will be held in Convocation Hall and broadcast over Station C.J.B.C. The Varsity team, consisting of Alan Brown of Victoria and Flora Moffatt of St. Hilda's will uphold the resolution. The members of the visiting McGill team are as yet unannounced.

Telford Georges and Shiela McQueen, both of University College will travel to Montreal to oppose the resolution in the McGill version of the debate.

Inside View Of France Given Club Members

"A nationalization of key-sectors of French economy" will probably result from the swing to the left in France. This was the opinion of Harold I. Nelson, when he addressed a student-group at the first meeting of the International Affairs Society, held in the Women's Union last night. Mr. Nelson is the Public Information Secretary of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs.

Speaking on the French political situation, Mr. Nelson said that France has two basic desires, namely, to seek a voice in the peace settlements and to acquire a security far greater than her pre-war days. France wishes to become "a power which will not seek to crush, but to benefit all mankind."

The future of France lies mainly with her economic and social problems. A virtual economic paralysis has resulted from her part in the war. There are 20,000 fewer trucks today than in 1939. Seventy percent of her war tonnage has been lost. Two million French men and women laboured in the great industries of the Reich. Thus, there is a critical shortage of man-power, and France demands 1 1/2 million German war-prisoners to fill the gap. Unless she can get 3 million workers soon, she can do but little. Black market, transportation difficulties, and the increase of production—costs such also have hampered her struggle to set an economic balance, and to thwart off the threat of currency inflation.

Since France's colonies are stricken with internal discord, she must fall back upon her status in Europe. She feels that she and Britain should guide western Europe. She still maintains that the Rhineland and the Ruhr areas should be internationalized.

The results of the elections held on Oct. 21 are as follows:

Out of 522 seats:

Centre 152—Communists under Maurice Thorez.

or —151 Socialists under Leon Blum.

Lit —138—Popular Republicans under George Bidault.

Rt. —23—Radical Socialists.

—63—Moderates, Right Wing, and Independents.

Darkened Theatre

The most dispiriting object in all the arts is a darkened theatre. Theatres, like people, rest, but one which remains dark for more than a few weeks at a time is in poor health and in danger of going to its eternal dusty rest among the ghosts of its own dramatic past.

Hart House Theatre, dark from January 1943 to October 1944, is stirring to life now for the second time under an arrangement similar to that under which last year's student shows were presented. But life of one or two months out of the year can be no more satisfactory in a theatre than the life of a person who is awake for four hours a day.

Resurrection Impending

The conditions which made it necessary to close Hart House Theatre during the war should nearly all soon pass away, and there is a spirit abroad among a number of individuals and groups who would like to see it the scene of a summer theatre, a student experimental theatre and drama school, the home of drama festivals, or a showplace for non-commercial films.

Besides these, there are the usual student productions and the newly-formed Civic Theatre Association which would be glad of the use of the theatre for its production for two or three years, although they are frankly interested in building their own theatre eventually.

Another project, probably not immediately practicable, but certainly called for, would be the production of plays on the University curricula, free to students in the specified course and with ticket sales open to the public. Studied carefully, sometimes too carefully, these plays are seldom seen. Surely the study of the drama is not without its staging.

There is no reason why the staging of plays included in the Arts curricula should become the exclusive activity of an aesthetic few. Indeed, the principal advantage of a campus theatre is that it is, or should be, available to anyone who wants to try his hand at stagecraft. There arises the intriguing vista of drama courses emancipated from the lecture-room, students and staff exploring the play from the theatrical standpoint intended by the author, placing the actors and adjusting the climaxes for nobody's gratification but their own.

We can see no such emancipation from texts and footnotes for many, many years; and if it comes, the question whether a University should stress traditional scholarship or what some educators call "the learning experience" will have been decided in favor of the latter.

The Financial Hurdle

Although some of the interested people seem to be thinking in terms of exclusive use, there is no apparent reason why these projects could not all be accommodated in Hart House Theatre. The question (which the inquirer always seems to think is final) arises eventually—"Who is going to pay the deficit?" The Hon Vincent Massey, who built the theatre, has heretofore obligingly paid the annual deficit. Will he resume this practice? Is there any real reason why he should be asked to?

Booked closely (but not too solidly), the theatre managed to make both ends meet last fall under the arrangement worked out with the Board of Syndics by the Students' Administrative Council. Could it not be booked efficiently, become self-sustaining the year 'round?

LET'S GET TOGETHER

The answer to this question could be found in a conference of the Syndics, the University, and the backers of the project mentioned here. Theatrically-minded people were criticized in these columns two years ago for failing either to solve the problems which forced the closing of the theatre or to offer the Syndics an alternative to the old plan requiring a full-time manager. However, the successful deliberation of the Civic Theatre Association have shown that the theatrical are not necessarily a non-cooperating breed, and the conference of the S.A.C. Theatre Committee with the Syndics and Hart House administrators revealed that the latter were reasonable people and easy to deal with.

The theatre, a valuable member of the university and of the community, is ill. A consultation is called for. H. A. W.

Music

Terrific Trio

There comes a time in the life of every critic when he regrets ever having used superlatives; sooner or later he comes across a concert like the one given last night at Eaton Auditorium by the Albeneri Trio and he finds that the words he has used before are not strong enough to describe its excellence.

The trio consists of Alexandre Schneider, violin; Benar Heifetz, cello; and Erick Ior Kahn, piano. All three are fine musicians. Their interpretations were extremely sensitive, their phrasing faultless. Yet over and above these obvious characteristics, their playing contained those more intangible elements which distinguish great performances from good ones.

The program featured three classical trios. Outstanding among them was the Schubert E-flat major trio, Op. 100. This work along with the C major Quintet shows that not only did Schubert initiate the Romantic Movement in chamber music, but he culminated it as well. The performance left absolutely nothing to be desired.

In a perfectly integrated group such as the Albeneri Trio, no one of the musicians stands out. But not to mention Mr. Kahn's handling of the piano passages in the Mozart E-flat Trio would be to neglect the most exquisitely phrased and most intelligently played Mozart piano music that has been heard here as far back as I can remember.

This was the first concert this year of a series sponsored by the Friends of Great Music, an organization which depends for its existence on the support of the public. It is a reflection on the taste of Toronto audiences that the attendance was so poor as to make it unlikely that expenses were covered. If the group becomes discouraged, the city will lose the services of a worthwhile organization. And the blame will lie on that apathetic group of "music lovers" who deplore the programs of the Prom concert and who do nothing to encourage good music when they can.

PHILIP FREEDMAN

JOINT RECITAL

Last evening Hart House Theatre provided the background for a joint recital given by Evelyn Kilby Dunlop, contralto, and Mary MacKinnon Shore, pianist.

Despite an overly-long program, Mrs. Dunlop sang to a consistently enthusiastic audience. She essayed several groups of difficult songs and lieder, running from Bach through Handel, Gluck, Beethoven, Franz and Schubert, to contemporary English and Celtic ballads. In addition to these, she declaimed the tremendously taxing My Heart At Thy Sweet Voice from Saint-Saens Samson, with more than adequate breadth and power. Her songs were delivered with distinction, warmth and good understanding.

Mrs. Shore proved to be not only a sympathetic accompanist; in two groups of solos, the latter Chopin, she summoned delicacy and heroic power respectively in fine style. Especially pleasing in performance was the ethereal E Minor waltz. In the G Minor Ballade Mrs. Shore lacked only the fire and drive that make a male performer a requisite for this work.

Ballet

Massive Innovation

Leonide Massene often has been accused of creating revolutionary ballets. He does not actually depart from the Ballet tradition or old technique, but merely creates a new point of view and adds to it some of himself. That is what he has done in his formation of "Ballet Russe Highlights". But his contention that "excerpts from the classical and modern ballet, in place of the performance of long complete works, — would appeal to the novitiate" is entirely too true. The innovation couldn't fail to entice large and new audiences. The new

"So."

"Soooooo ooooo?"

"So. And what's more replied The Prime Minister quietly, his eyeballs popping four feet out of his head from the strain of subtle argument, "emphatically so."

With ghastly, hideous screams of thwarted rage and beating himself about the face, chest and back, His Majesty's Loyal Opposition fled the chamber of the University of Toronto Parliament.

Such is the calibre of University debates. So far above the average plane of argument that a single word, with of course various intonations (q.v., cf. "Sooooo ooooo?"), carries the complete, conclusive statement of the subject. For instance, take the intellectually gigantic debate on "Does your Lifebuoy taste different lately?" as reported verbatim in the always completely accurate, precise and scintillating columns of The Varsity.

"Yeah."

"YeaaaaaaAH?" (You cannot hope to get the full significance of this masterpiece of logic, but try hard, anyway).

"Yeah. And what's more," refuted The Prime Minister conclusively, big, blue veins throbbing on his livid forehead, "indubitably yeah."

Crushed,—hopelessly, morally crushed, with glassy-eyed stare and trembling chin, the victim cut off his legs and was forever afterward called "Shorty." Perhaps you find the connection a bit vague, but I solemnly assure you that deep, deep down there is a significance that is truly staggering.

Recently, several crack-pot radicals have been suggesting that a few more words might make for a more interesting debate. Investigators sat in on an S. P. S. Parliament on the subject "Should eight-year-olds be allowed to marry?" which went something like this:

"Daa."

"DaaaaaaaAA?"

(Now get this.) "Daa, daa. And what is more," shouted The Prime Minister, drunk with the exuberance of his own verbosity, "you're darn right daa!"

Just imagine! Well, I mean to say! Stunned by such vulgar garrulity, the spectators sat like stones! In fact, they looked like stones. And, it being a typical Skule debate, the only spectators were stones. Shows you what happens when an atom sits in on an S.P.S. Parliament.

comer is attracted immediately to the sensational glittering display. But in Toronto, where the ballet comes only once a year it is unfortunate that these new audiences should be introduced to unconnected passages rather than given the knowledge of the beautiful whole; for what can he learn about the ballet in veying only one or two of its outstanding dances? He who knows and loves the ballets from which the highlights are chosen is left unsatisfied. The effect is the same as that created by the playing, in succession, of the main themes and variations of a sonata without the transitions. The whole is unrelated. One brilliantly executed piece is piled overwhelmingly upon another.

However any detrimental effects of this method are entirely upon the audience; for the company, being small, and composed of some of the greatest names in ballet, gave memorable performance.

Massine found the answer to the seeking by Fokine and Nijinska for a ballet outside of romanticism in the development of choreographies containing much frantic movement: much suited to his temperament and dramatic ability. Tortuous writhing, in every light to Bach's Air for the G String or seductive squirming of Canto Scena Gitano from Rimsky-Korsakoff's Capriccio Espagnol were presented with all the Massine movement possible. This was art for art's sake.

Vic. Trounce Jr. Meds, 21-0 In Fast-Moving Football Play

Last night the Vic steamroller flattened Jr. Meds 21-0 in its last scheduled football game. Showing all its usual power, Vic was never seriously threatened. Jr. Meds though at the wrong end of the score showed a very marked improvement over their previous outings.

Cook, Burford, and London were tops for Vic. Cook's plunging and passing were outstanding. Freddy Burford was as calling plays always seemed to be in the right places for Ron Cook's passes. Walt London turned in his usual all-round performance.

Johnny Gora and Bill Varga did more to stem the Vic tide than any other individuals with Meds. Gora in particular pulled Meds out of trouble several times in intercepting Vic passes.

In the first quarter Vic kicked off to the Med 22. A short kick by Meds went for 10 only. London went for 10. Cook went for 3. Vic lost 3 on the next down. Vic then kicked for a single point. Meds gained nothing in 2 downs from their 25 but on the third Vic roughed the kicker and were duly penalized. Vic then intercepted a forward on the Meds 30. After an extension went for 8, a Cook to London pass went for 15. London then plunged the distance. The convert was good. The kick-off by Ve went over the goal line and was just run out. On the next play a bad snap went over Varga's head. He recovered but had to concede a safety touch.

In the second quarter there was no scoring although both teams took to the air and there were many intercepted passes. Vic started off the third quarter with a bang. Cook threw several passes for long gains and plunged over himself to score the second Vic Major, which was converted. A short kick gave Vic the ball about 20 yards out. Burford then carried over the line but fumbled and Meds recovered but were roughed. An attempted forward by Meds went astray on their own 25 Jones picked up the looseball and carried to the Meds 2 to end the quarter. The first play of the fourth quarter saw Jones carry the ball over the line to end the scoring. The game was called shortly after the kick-off because of darkness.

Vic. I And Trinity Lead In Soccer

What with intercollegiate competition occupying the main spotlight, the intramural soccerites have been shoved into the background with little or no notice given to their doings or undings.

The half-way marker of the intramural soccer schedule has been reached and the teams are still in as much of a mix-up as ever. Outstanding teams are scarce this year due to the fact that the better players are plying their wares for the Blues.

So far, however, Vic I and Trinity stack up as the teams to watch. The former is leading its group with a record of three victories and one tie, while the Trinity team has yet to be beaten in three starts. These are not the only unbeaten clubs in the intramural circuit, however, as the third section Wycliffe eleven is credited with two victories and a tie.

Further down in the groupings are found teams like Forestry and Vic II which are each credited with a single victory over the hapless Trinity II club.

The regular schedule will eliminate all but six teams to battle it out for the Arts Faculty Cup, emblematic of intramural soccer supremacy. Playoffs are slated to commence late this month.

Centre Island Conference Locale

The Varsity Christian Fellowship held its annual fall conference at the Manitou Hotel, Centre Island, this week-end. Guest speaker was Rev. Maurice Flint, formerly a missionary to the Eskimos and later chaplain in the R.A.F.

Friday evening Rev. Flint stressed that "whosoever is born of God sinneth not" and the following night, he spoke on the right motives in living for God.

Saturday afternoon, a treasure hunt was scheduled. Following the Sunday morning worship service in the Anglican Church, St. Andrews-by-the-Lake, the students shared the experiences of Christ in their lives.

Further Fields Look Greener

Certain Canadian universities are now on the football path marked "progress." The University of Manitoba is in the throes of negotiations for the inclusion of a team in the United States North Central Football Conference next season. The University of Western Ontario is making preparations to toss a hat into the ring from which the eastern representatives in the Grey Cup finals will be chosen.

The Winnipeg University has inherited the ideas of the fair metropolis that sports the finest high school football organization in Canada as well as one of the top junior hockey circuits. They do things in a big way out there. A little over a decade ago a group of men decided to see the stranglehold on the Grey Cup released by the East and proceeded to import American college stars by handfuls. The Blue Bombers went on to win the Grey Cup and to become the top western team in the past ten years. Their player material now comes from the minor leagues which were developed by their officials and supervised by their players.

If this proposed venture is completed, sport fans will need no reassurance that Canadian football will benefit from this deal. Winnipeg sportsmen are known for their shrewdness and there is no reason to believe that this has not caught on at the University of Manitoba.

The athletic body of that organization has already set the wheels into motion by sending feelers out for a Winnipeg coach who has a thorough knowledge of American rules.

From around London come rumors that Johnny Metras still harbors the idea of getting his razzle-dazzle Mustangs into the eastern playoff picture. The brainwave has been there for a long time now but the turning point must have been reached a month ago as the Mustangs battled the star-studded Toronto Indians to a standstill. Perhaps Metras has forgotten that Joe Krol is with the Argos now and not with his Purples.

On The Bench

Shortages are still hampering the smooth-running wheels of the Sports department. Mostly shortages are a nuisance, but we have been notified of one that may prove a boon to ambitious students. Miss Baxter, U. of T. swimming instructor, tells us that swimming judges are difficult to obtain. This led the Swimming Club to open this field to students wishing to judge diving and style and ornamental swimming this year.

It is to be expected that these would-be adjudicators must first undergo a period of training. So Miss Baxter has allotted some of her few spare moments to hold classes, one lecture and two or three practices in each event, for all those interested enough to postpone their lunch hour. The lecture will be held at 1:10 on the following dates: Ornamental Swimming—Thursday Nov. 8 (NOT Friday as previously announced), Diving—Tuesday, Nov. 13, Style Swimming—Friday, Nov. 16. These lectures will be held in the office in the gallery of the gym at the Household Science Building.

Qualifications for this position are a fairly wide knowledge of swimming, and two years attendance at University. It is essential that students attend both the lecture and the practice before they will be allowed to evaluate any swimmer's technique.

Softball Goes On

Although the lack of a regular ball field encourages many of the players to lose some of their original enthusiasm for the sport. It seems that the lack of a backstop necessitated much running around after the ball. Surely this bit of equipment would help to conserve much-needed energy.

Vic I defeated P.H.E. II Friday afternoon, in a game labeled by one of the players as "A real thriller" . . . and she was on the losing side. It took the two teams two innings to get truly warmed up to the game, but during the third and fourth, events moved at a very fast pace. Vic scored three points in the beginning of the third inning. P.H.E. rose to the occasion with six hits and three runs. Vic carried on in a similar manner in the last innings, but P.H.E. as a team didn't run fast enough, so their frequent

Strong Silent School Teacher Football Coach By Night

The silent man behind the scenes of many of Toronto football picture is a likeable school teacher who answers to the name of Don Graham.

Few football broadcasts have emanated from Toronto in the past four years that haven't had Graham's hand in them . . . he has called all the line plays for Roy Dilworth's program for just that long.

When it comes to actual football, Don's work goes much deeper. His first experience as a coach came at Runnymede Collegiate where, as Don fondly says, "Bobby Coulter was among the brighter stars I turned out."

His seniority with Varsity teams dates back to 1932 when Warren Stevens, on joining the local athletic staff, immediately sent for Don and signed him as coach for the freshman team.

Not wholly content with the local experience, Graham spent the next summer at a coaching school in the United States. So successful was this venture that he has returned there every two years. When asked how he chose a college at which to study football, Don replied, "I just pick a good line coach and go." That he has picked them well is rather obvious as his list of teachers (Continued on page 4)

Who Reads The Funnies?

By Ross McLean

John McRae sat and ordered one chocolate milk shake after another. He had reached his third and requested a hamburger (to be reminded that it was Meatless Tuesday, O Pshaw!) when he decided: "It really must have been a mistake!"

The Feature Editor had arisen from his downy couch and asked him to investigate the comic strip tastes of university dignitaries. But what a hopeless task!

Hoping to combine lectures and assignment, he had first approached one of his professors who, it turned out, did not read the comics. Ever!

"Queer," thought McRae. "I might as well do things up brown," he mused. "I'll start at the top." He turned his steps toward the office of the president.

Dr. Smith was out. His secretary, obliging and, perhaps, herself curious, offered to secure the desired information when the president returned.

Th president, she revealed later, liked Little Orphan Annie.

"Why," McRae reflected, "the thing has possibilities after all."

The next people (and McRae wonders if you ought to call dignitaries people) on his list were the registrars. Mr. Fennell was out. Mr. McAndrew was sometimes amused and sometimes not; he was, however, partial to no particular strip. Mr. Hicks was out. Mr. Woodside was out.

The perspiring cub next tried fifteen times to contact Dean Beattie whose office is 55 steps above UC. Finally successful, McRae's pencil quivered as he jotted down the Dean's laconic comment: "I can't remember the name of one comic strip."

McRae took to the telephone. He called five dignitaries. None were where by all the laws of the University they ought to have been. He gave that up.

He visited Hart House to probe regarding the comic favorites of the Warden. Kindly and firmly, he was told that the Warden did not give interviews of that type. Rumor has it, however, that the Warden shares with the president a fondness for Little Orphan Annie.

The line in Canadian football gets little enough credit. A line coach gets still less. Perhaps it was Graham's fate to

He weighed Atoms

Born to a Quaker family in a little thatched cottage in England in 1766, John Dalton acquired enough education at twelve years of age to start a school of his own. He began to take regular weather readings and was noted for his ability to predict the weather. He studied flowers and insects, optics and color-blindness, and finally decided to make chemistry his life work. He noted the constant proportions in which different elements combine with one another, and finally established the atomic theory in chemistry.

JUST as Dalton's research paved the way for the development of many new and improved materials and products, so research carried out by the Canadian Nickel industry has played its part in developing better materials and products.

Sixty years ago there were practically no uses for Nickel except for Nickel plating, for coinage and for Nickel silver. Today Nickel is required in nearly every industry for making top quality products or for keeping production costs down. The research that has helped to bring this about will be continued in the years to come.

The information collected from the field of metal research by International Nickel scientists is available to Canadian engineers, designers and metallurgists seeking better materials for any product or process.

Research reveals new uses for Nickel. Increased use of Nickel from Canadian mines and plants means employment for Canadians and brings many benefits to Canada.

President's Installation Will Be Held Friday

DELEGATES COME FROM AFAR

All the world is coming to Toronto this week-end for the installation of President Sidney Smith. Invitations airmailed over a month ago to Universities of Canada, the United States, Latin America, and Europe have brought acceptances, Miss A. E. M. Parkes, Secretary of the Installation Committee, told The Varsity last night.

Delegates from almost every Canadian university will be present Friday she said, as well as a large number from America, British, foreign seats of learning.

Besides the 135 universities, 12 learned societies and foundations including the Rockefeller and the Guggenheim Foundations, will be represented.

Heading a distinguished list of individuals guests will be the Administrator of the Government of Canada, His Excellency the Honorable Thibaudeau Rinfret and Madame Rinfret.

Elevated to the office of Administrator during the temporary vacancy of the Governor-Generalship, His Excellency, normally Chief Justice of Canada, will represent the King at the installation of the President of the Empire's largest University. An Administrator is customarily appointed during any prolonged absence of the Governor-General from Canada.

Representing Ontario will be the Lieutenant Governor, the Hon. Albert Matthews, and Mrs. Matthews; Premier George A. Drew and Mrs. Drew; and certain Cabinet Ministers.

Civic Officials, representatives of the Bench, the Roman Catholic and Anglican Archbishops, and dignitaries of the Presbyterian, Baptist, and United Churches, the Salvation Army, and the Hebrew faith, will also be present.

Since accommodation in Convocation Hall is limited, students should obtain admission tickets from the S.A.C. Office, Hart House, as soon as possible. Staff may obtain theirs from the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall.

Church vs. State Is Lecture Topic

A series of four lectures on "The Doctrine of Church and State" has been arranged by the Graduate School of Theological Studies. These lectures are to be given every Wednesday afternoon in Sheraton Hall of Wycliffe College at 5 o'clock.

The first of these lectures to be given this afternoon by Professor B. W. Horan will be "Church and State in the New Testament." Other lectures will be on "Church and State" in the Medieval Period, and the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries and in the Contemporary World.

Elaborating on the subject Professor Horan explains that, in view of the increasing claims of the State to direct the life of the individual, these lectures are aimed at tracing the struggle of the Church and State through the past ages. "The church," he said, "stands for the rights and the freedom of the individual."

Although planned primarily for Theological students, these lectures are open to the public.

U.C. Lit. Discusses Jap-Canadian Issue

An open meeting and panel discussion on the current Japanese-Canadian question will be held Wednesday afternoon at 4 p.m. in the Junior Common Room by the University College Literary and Athletic Society.

Representatives of the newly formed committee on Japanese-Canadians will be on hand to answer all pertinent questions.

Gordon McCaffery President of the Lit., announced that the meeting has been called in order to inform the Student's Administrative Council of the opinion of U.C. undergraduates on the subject.

First Interfaculty Debate To Centre About Service

The first interfaculty debate of this season will be held on Wednesday evening Nov. 7th in St. Joseph's College Common Room at 8.30 p.m.

The motion before the house will be resolved "That every Canadian youth should have one year compulsory military service."

Speaking for the affirmative will be June Furlong of St. Joseph's College and Monty Simmonds of U.C., and for the negative John Gwynne Timothy of Trinity and Josephine Armstrong of Victoria.

RESENT GOVERNMENT INTERVENTION

Down With Drew Cabinet Votes Victoria Parliament

"Resolved that this house rejoices in the triumph of the Drew government in the recent Ontario elections" was the motion under discussion at the Victoria College Debating Parliament last night. After the debate the government was defeated on the division of the House.

The leader of the Government forces, Dave Bartlett stated that his strongest argument was that he believed in the will of the people, the will that decisively re-elected the Drew government in June of this year. The Liberals, he added were in a slump leaving the C.C.F. as he only threatened opposition. Joliffe provided his own undoing by his 'Gesapo' charges against the Drew government.

Mae Harmon, speaking for the opposition argued that the Conservatives did not have the confidence of the majority of the people, in fact the Drew government obtained less than half the popular votes in the election. She then pointed out that Ontario was going against the world-wide trend to the left and everywhere throwing the Conservatives out of office. Ontario is indeed one of the last citadels of Tory reaction, she concluded.

"This is no time for socialistic experiments. The Ontario government reflects the attitude of the people of Ontario," stated Eileen Armstrong, the second government speaker.

Reed Scott, last opposition speaker defined the Drew government as a disaster looking for a place to happen.

There was also a discussion on the motion "Resolved that this House support the Ford strikers in their just demands for union security and urges the Canadian government to pass an order-in-council to make this effective." This motion was carried by a vote of 38-31.

Japanese-Canadian's Deportation Disapproved By Mass Of Students

Thirteen hundred Japanese-Canadians stand to be deported, many from their native land, unless three major faculties can devote time to supporting the motion against their deportation. This was the agreement reached yesterday by the Japanese-Canadian Committee at St. Hilda's College.

This deportation is disapproved by 64% of the student body, according to a recent poll. To prevent it the faculties of Engineering, Medicine, and Dentistry must alter their support of the movement from their present promise of co-operation to organized positions of protest as suggested by the committee. This situation exists since the Students' Administrative Council the only campus organization entitled to represent the entire student body, is unable to offer this representation until a greater student is shown. President of the committee Don Franco said he expected S.A.C. support will be granted when a future poll shows 70% of the student body to be against deportation.

Yesterday's meeting arranged the distribution of individual and group petitions, posters, and literature.

Alcutt Kept Busy By Students Finds Time For Relief In Verse

By Bob Cooke

"Professors are funny old men. . .," say the words of a rather famous campus song, but if you are in a professor's office for a pleasant visit and not to explain why an essay is late, he may tell you some very interesting things.

The other afternoon we went to see Professor E. A. Alcutt. A muffled roar "Come in" greeted our knock on the door of his office, and, politely, we entered. We found him occupied with a young naval officer who, it seemed, planned to come into engineering. After saying goodbye to the young officer, he asked us what we wanted.

Well, we were rather curious about something we had heard him say to his former visitor and obligingly he explained. They had been talking about education and Professor Alcutt had been explaining how things were done in the English Universities. "We had small classes," he said, and our professors used to get men who had made some prominent contribution to science to come in and take the lecture when he subject was being discussed. I have never forgotten hearing Sir William Ramsay, who discovered the five inert gases describing them to us."

"To my mind," he continued, "the difference between a university and a mere technical school lies in the fact that a university makes contributions to the knowledge of science while a technical school is bounded by the knowledge that has been gained in other places. We encourage research here because we know that all great universities have gained their reputations through the research done at them."

He then showed us a piece of his lighter writing explaining, "I'm so sick of what is being said in the paper about atomic power that I had to write something satirical about it." One verse of his poem goes as follows:

"And, in the air, atomic planes
Are plentiful as railroad trains,
While eyes protrude beyond their sockets
In following atomic rockets.

We had heard that he spent a good many years at the Soho Foundry where Bolton and Watt did most of their work on the early steam engines and so we asked him about it. "Yes," he said, "It was rather interesting how they made the engines. Parts for the mine engines were made at the foundry, but the engines were built at the mine, just like the building trade." Another thing that was rather interesting that he told us was that the engines were paid for out of their savings in coal, the payments were spread out instead of being made when the engine arrived. Although the foundry no longer belongs to the Boulton and Watt company there are still some things left from their day. There is a planer still in use that is over a hundred and fifty years old and a model of the first gas lamp holder, a product of Murdoch's ingenuity.

Professor Alcutt is the Technical Editor of Manufacturing and Industrial Engineering and while we were in his office he showed us a copy of an article he had done for the magazine with only a few days notice. It was an article on jet-propulsion turbines which gives the magazine a scoop over its competitors. It's in doing things such as this that a professor spends the spare time he never gets.

Students Urge Withdrawal Of Guard From Ford Plant

SUPPORT WORKERS' DEMANDS

By Bob Marjoribanks

Disapproval of the attitude of the provincial and federal governments to the strike of the Ford workers at Windsor was expressed on Monday night by three campus organizations. The University of Toronto C.C.F. Club and the University of Toronto Labour Progressive Club met separately and passed motions authorizing the despatch of telegrams to Leslie Blackwell, Acting Minister of Labour for the Ontario government, and to Humphrey Mitchell, federal Minister of Labour.

The telegrams urged the withdrawal of the provincial police and the R.C.M.P. who were sent to Windsor for the purpose, expressed by the Ministers of Labour, of protecting Ford property and lives which are allegedly endangered by fire arising from the refusal of the strikers to admit the full complement of maintenance employees. The telegrams urged further that the government intervene immediately to bring about a peaceful settlement of the strike.

Student Petition Objects Growing

The University of Manitoba is crowded to such a degree that a petition demanding improvement has been sent to the Premier of Manitoba. This petition was signed by the student body and backed by the University President, A. W. Trueman.

Drawn up by a selected group of students the petition lists five major grievances which the entire University students and professors want rectified immediately. On this campus the problem of feeding the students is the greatest, therefore the students demanded an enlargement of their canteen. Other suggestions for improvement include a larger janitorial staff, an increased supply of lockers, additional drinking fountains and the installation of air-conditioning in the library.

"This is a place which is expected to serve 1,600 students," pointed out President Trueman speaking of the inadequacy of the library "and yet it has reading space for only 140." The President also voiced his grievances when speaking of the limited space of the university book-store. "The room holds 20 people," he said "and until they get out, nobody else can get in."

"The situation has never been good," the President said "but this year and for the next few years matters will be infinitely worse. I don't want to stand around much longer waiting for action."

CAMSIC Conference Held In The West

Winnipeg, Nov. 6. (C.U.P.)—The Ninth Annual Conference of the Canadian Association of Medical Students and Internes was held at Winnipeg last Friday and Saturday. Delegates from Dalhousie, McGill, Montreal, Toronto, Laval, Queens and Western Medical Colleges were present at this first Medical Conference to be held in the west. A highlight of the convention was an address given on Saturday afternoon by President Trueman of the University of Manitoba to these students and interne representatives.

Cody Scholarship Given K.D. McRae

The Maurice Cody Research Fellowships and Scholarships Committee makes the following announcement:

There will be no award of the First Maurice Cody Scholarship of the value of $300.

The Second Maurice Cody Scholarship of the value of $200 has been awarded to Mr. K. D. McRae.

These scholarships were established through the generosity of friends of the late Henry Maurice Cody and are awarded on the results of a competitive examination held at the opening of the session.

At a meeting of the Victoria College Debating Parliament on the same evening a motion was passed by a vote of 38 to 31 "That this House support the Ford strikers in their demands for union security and urges that the Canadian government pass the necessary orders-in-council to make this effective."

The motion was introduced as a private bill by Ken Morrison, II Political and Economics during the period preceding the orders of the day. With the permission of the Speaker of the issue was debated for almost an hour.

The text of the telegram sent by the campus C.C.F. Club are as follows:

To Minister of Labour, Humphrey Mitchell: "We protest the federal government's failure to conciliate in the emergency at Ford."

The text of the L.P.P. telegrams read

To Mr. Blackwell: "The L.P.P. Club of the University of Toronto urges the government to withdraw immediately police force from Windsor and also urges immediately steps be taken to settle the strike"

To Mr. Mitchell: "The University of men to take over Ford and grant the ment to take over Ford and grant the just demands of Local 200"

The campus L.P.P. and the C.C.F. clubs are to-day soliciting an expression of sympathy for the Ford strikers from the student body. They have jointly published a petition, which appears elsewhere in this issue, inviting students to subscribe to an expression of approval of the unions' demands for security and a request that the R.C.M.P. be removed from Windsor. Both executives of the campus political clubs have assured union leaders of active support in any popular demonstration of approval of the action of the strikers. Both groups are prepared to turn out in force complete with placards if the occasion arises.

Further expression of campus opinion on current industrial questions is anticipated when the University College Parliament meets on Tuesday to debate "That this House approves a general strike of labor to maintain war-time take-home pay."

X-Ray Appointments

Chest X-ray examinations for first and final year students are being held this week only in the East Block of the Parliament Buildings. Students are reminded that they must keep their appointments for these examinations. Any first or final year student who has not yet made an appointment should contact the Health Service immediately.

Students are also reminded that they must keep their appointments for medical examinations. In spite of continued warnings many students are failing to keep their appointments for both medical and X-ray examinations. The Health Service has announced that fines will be instituted if this practice is continued.

Editorial

Defence Of Pass

He was a rather intelligent-looking lad, but seemed sheepish at the time. "Oh," he said in a deprecatory manner, "I'm only in Pass Arts."

"Never mind," consoled others in the group, obviously trying to cheer him up.

The attitude of both the Pass Arts student and his friends from honor courses is found, unfortunately, not only in most corners of the University, but in not a few off-the-campus circles. Because of its name and lighter timetable, the entire course has been labelled as the easy course of the University. It has been unanimously designated as the course through which any student may slide with the least effort.

Professors are Guilty

Students and outsiders are not the only offenders here. Many professors, reputed for their interesting manner of presenting a subject to students in honor courses, can be accused of deliberately dulling their lectures for the Pass Arts students in an obvious attempt to dictate notes so that the listeners will be certain to get the most important points with the minimum of difficulty. Possibly this does make things momentarily easy, but it leads to memorization rather than thought on the part of the student, and as a method is hardly fair to either of them.

These professors help to give the whole course an inferiority complex. In trying to make things easier for their pupils they are indirectly implying that passmen are not capable of assimilating anything unless it is spoon-fed. Except for the atmosphere lent by University surroundings there is little difference between this kind of university pedagogy and the memory-work-homework routine prevalent in public and high schools. Lecture-rooms have a delightful chit-chaty aura when invaded by the Pass Course en masse.

So are Students

This is the logical moment to say dogmatically that there is no reason for all this, unfortunately, there is. One reason is the attitude taken by some professors, as outlined briefly above. Another major reason can be found in the students themselves. Some students enter the course because of its reputation of being an easy one. So that they can devote more of their time to other campus activities, or because they are too lazy to think of working very hard. Others come into it with an embittered attitude of being forced to lower themselves to it, and some because they are not sufficiently interested in any specific subject to specialize. Regardless of their reasons for entering the course, the majority of its students are, or pretend to be, ashamed of being in it.

It Can be Good

Actually, the Pass Course can have just as much meat to it as any other course offered in the University. Both timetable and curriculum, criticized as being skimpy and superficial are not so in most cases because the individual makes them so.

No student is forced to adhere strictly to his lecture schedule, and if sufficiently interested in any subject, is not barred from supplementing his course by attending other lectures.

It is an old and very true adage that one gets out of a thing as much as he puts into it. In the absence of a good General Course in the first two years, the Pass Course will have to fill that vacancy. It is possible to choose from the various subjects offered, a closely-integrated course of studies comparable to an honor course. The same books are available all students, Pass or Honor, and the same professors lecture to both, and will never discourage genuine interest on the part of any student.

It is up to the individual student, then, to make his course what he wants it to be, and to the professor to help by taking him more seriously. There is no need to be ashamed of the course you are in if you don't get all you could out of it—but perhaps of yourself.

Music

Momentary Lapse

The Secondary School concert at Massey Hall last night featured Mary Syme as piano soloist, by choosing the Saint-Basens Piano Concerto No. 4 as the work through which we were to judge her capabilities. Miss Syme performed under a distinct disadvantage. Inferior French music has a sort of vague precision which can awaken but a casual response in any except confirmed Francophiles. Miss Syme seemed to get something out of it, but the orchestra was obviously bored stiff. The moments when her phrasing was good and her rhythm forceful suggest that under more favourable circumstances Miss Syme might be able to impress an audience. But as yet all is conjecture.

Apart from Sibelius and a few modern English composers, Sir Ernest MacMillan seems most at home in the late Nineteenth Century. His performance of Brahms' Fourth Symphony a week ago was one of his best efforts. Whether the orchestra was unable to follow him or whether Sir Ernest himself must take the blame I cannot be sure, but whatever the cause, last night's performance of Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony was inaccurate and confused. Since space permits I will give a few of the sorry facts. A proper balance was rarely maintained between the woodwind and brass sections. Not only did the instruments enter in succession instead of together but, even after they had all entered, some instrument would stick out like a sore thumb and spoil the balance. In fact texture of the whole orchestra was coarse and muddy. Uniformity of phrasing was conspicuously lacking. Tchaikovsky has phrased the main theme of the slow movement carefully and unmistakably. The violins followed his instructions, but the oboe soloist clipped notes here and there with little regard for the character of the theme. The bassoon slurred over the phrases without proper articulation. Even the cellos made an excessive crescendo on the second phrase of the melody, perhaps because they had originally entered too softly. In the trio of the scherzo the oboist had his own individual manner of performance which differed noticeably from the flute's.

And now a suggestion or two, more constructive perhaps, on the appropriate manner of performing Tchaikovsky. Tovey has pointed out how Tchaikovsky uses the antithetical style of the heroic couplet, a style particularly useful for epigrams, to produce results

Citizen Kidney Myth, well-known campus figure who was originally imported from the University of Manitoba to take part in the U.C. Follies, 1944 edition, will become president of this University in the formal insulation ceremony to take place in Controversy Hall Friday afternoon.

The chairman of the board of directors of the Gyproc Wool Corporation will officiate in the insulation program and will personally stuff his company's product into Mr. Myth's union suit. "I've been looking forward to this event since the first frost last month," said Kidney when interviewed by The Varsity last night.

Mrs. Myth told The Varsity that she is very happy that her husband is finally being insulated. "I just can't get Kidney any durable underwear nowadays," she revealed. "And I have been worrying about him. You know how easily he catches cold."

There was keen competition between the insulation concerns bidding for the Myth contract and for some time it appeared that the Ten Test firm, which offered a form fit asbestos union suit, would get the job. As an added feature the Ten Test suit was equipped with legs and sleeves designed to roll up or down with changes in the weather.

John-Manville muffed the deal completely since their representative was unable to attend the contract conference. "I had to show up at my wedding that day," explained Tommy when asked to explain his absence.

which are far from epigrammatic. The balanced thrust and counterthrust of Tchaikovsky, however, does not prevent his phrases and sentences from accumulating into large paragraphs. He manages to flow on without breaking his couplets. By concentrating on the large climaxes or by overintensifying the composer's emotional concentration most modern performances of his symphonies are reduced to a series of high points with vague connecting links. Mozart was Tchaikovsky's favorite composer and we do the Russian an injustice by forcing his fully crystallized and mature emotions out of the adequate and well integrated moulds which he found for them.

I went down to a place called the Press,
I had nothing but vile distress.
First they told me to read some proof,
Then they started to raise the roof.
I struggled along till I scarce could see;
Next morning the Editor came to me—
"One hundred and twenty misprints," said he,
And I'll never go there any more.

I went off to review a show,
I sat down in the very front row;
Back to the Office and wrote all night
Pages and pages of quips so bright.
They didn't like what I wrote at all;
The story next day was extremely small;
It needed good eyesight to find it at all,
And I'll never go there any more.

Saints Plaster Dents In Group III Rugby

Two fumbles paved the way for St. Mike's 13-0 victory over Dents, giving the Gaels top spot in Group Three. Dents threatened in the first quarter when Petruccio and Young worked the ball up the field up to St. Mike's 30. McManus kicked to Niero who brought the ball a yard out for the Irish.

Sparked by Odette's recovery of a Dents' fumble, the Saints plunged up the field allowing Bauer to take it across the line. Niero's convert was good. Dents came back with accurate passing by McManus and Young rolling up to St. Mike's 20, but the half ended and the Gaels led 6-0.

The two teams played close ball in the start of the third quarter with few passes and plenty of plunging. Later in the quarter, Gallagher for the Irish picked up another Dents fumble at the 5 yard line and raced across for a major

The Glamour of a Rugby Week-end

A rough schedule is drawn up before departure, which goes something like this: Leave Friday one o'clock, arrive London four, register, at hotel, take in a show and to bed; up at nine Saturday and some shopping, out to game at one, back to hotel at five, to football dance at eight-thirty, in bed by two or three; sleep till ten, pack and away by eleven, arrive Toronto two-thirty, a quiet afternoon at home, possibly the Hart House Sunday Evening Concert and abed by midnight; up to hit a nine o'clock Monday morning. All very lovely.

Here is how it frustratingly turns out: Friday, one o'clock—blitz buggy acting mightily funny, front left tire a probably problem, people on the phone; four-thirty—gassed, oiled, watered and aired, Lazy Lena leaves local limits, six aboard; five-five—rad boils over at Oakville, people envision all-night escapade with distance possibility of sleeping in car, dark, faithful four go to eat, tireless two install new hose connection, scalding inner surface of hands; seven-fifteen—papers are offered as Hamilton bypassed; lights of London at nine p.m., ignition locked, engine flatly refuses to quit, battery cable removed, selves and Lena register at hotel; midnight—characters suggest raid on stadium; five a.m.—sundry persons still together after wandering about town and university in much bewilderment, meet Varsity's fearless three in hotel lobby with characteristic 'W' amid tonsorial topping, reminiscence, fall asleep in lobby, bellboy awakens at seven sharp although call not arranged, realize it is Saturday; reconnoiter stadium and university by daylight, preferable; in a dither at one-thirty p.m. someone has snatched Annie Oakleys from ticket office, nice, friendly usher shuts eyes, ducats turn up inside; good view of brawl from Press Box, game lost; supper in restaurant with Toronto's ringing in our ears throughout, nostalgia, indigestion; discover no admittance to dance at hotel, get in anyway, friends help; midnight—in room, assorted characters wandering in and out exchanging anecdotes and, follow same and assist; six a.m.—pair of unknowns suggest bridge, noises, now wide awake; more sleep, brunch at noon, everybody ready to pull out immediately; one p.m.—inflate front left tire; leave London two-thirty; arrive Toronto without incident four-thirty, unbelievable but true, rename Lazy Lena Lightning Liz; people disturbed and home at six, hunger and sleep loom large on mind; staggered into nine o'clock Monday morning, haggard.

Speaking on Sport—Yes.

The Mulock Picture

Only four games remain on this fall's Interfaculty timetable, of which two, at the most, could affect the playoffs setup but probably won't. Sr. S.P.S. and U.C. could still tie for Group I leadership, but to do this the engineers would have to throw their two remaining games which they won't. In other words, St. Mike's victory last night made it final.

Sr. School (Group I winner) will play St. Mike's next Tuesday, and their superior weight will probably give them the necessary to win. On the Monday, U.C. and Vic will hook up in the other semi-final, and it remains to be seen whether an improving U.C. outfit can best this red and gold bunch of speed boys. Personally, Vic look like the stronger team. All this adds up to Vic and Sr. School in the colorful Mulock final next Friday. The games are all in Varsity stadium at 2.15 p.m., so regulation quarters will again be employed by the timekeepers. Bob Lye, the good ref around the U. of T., will officiate at each game.

The Sportswoman

By Polly Mutz

The Winner

It was a beautiful day to play tennis . . . warm sunlight encouraged the two finalists to discard sweaters, and a gentle breeze cooled off their cheeks colored by intense effort. The courts were spotted here and there with little pools of water, which any amount of sweeping could not disperse . . . causing Natalie Faver to fall during the course of the game. The two contestants for the tennis title were fairly evenly matched. Jan Rutherford, P.H.E., excelled in power and speed. Natalie Faver, also P.H.E., had a deadly accurate aim. It was a good game, with Jan Rutherford emerging the victor . . . with a score of (6-3) (7-5). The large tennis cup now changes hands . . . Marg Alexander, St. Hilda's, will bequeath the cup to Jan at the end of the year. Jan already has in her possession a goodly collection of tennis trophies, the latest being the title of the Ottawa city and District Champion.

P.H.E. as a team are winners by an overwhelming majority. They can boast of a total of 58 points, and the runners-up, St. Hilda's managed 25 points. St. Mike's is third, with a score of 14 . . . next comes Vic. with 12. The combination of Meds-S.P.S. have 6 points to their credit, with U.C. winding up the score with 5. The points were allotted in the following manner: one point was given to all players who made the first elimination round. Two points went to those in the second round . . . and so on up to the sixth which was the winner. P.H.E. are in the same position this year as St. Hilda's were the last year.

A Triple Header

The basketball season was officially opened Monday night, when three games were played off in the gym of U.T.S. The first game featured U.C. II and Meds-S.P.S. . . a fast game, but the wild shooting on both sides signifies a crying need for more practice . . . on the whole it showed promise of a good season. U.C. II defeated Meds-S.P.S. with a score of 16-14. Next on the floor were the freshmen of U.C. and Vic. This was the most outstanding game of the evening, considering that they had never played together before . . . they played a fast game, clean, and spirited. Lillian Laakso, of U.C., was a remarkably good player. Vic. secured the game by the narrow margin of 23-21.

The last game was a tilt between the Nurses and Vic . . . the Nurses coming out the winners 15-4, showing considerably improvement since last year. All of which sounds very encouraging, when one thinks of future Intercollegiate games as well as Intramural. It is still within our powers to hope that the meet at McGill will come off sometime after Christmas, at least nothing concrete has appeared to blast the hopes of Toronto to put up a good showing in the basketball "do". Though a few coaches of basketball teams have been known to shake their heads sadly in reply to a query on the conditions of their charges, we have seen nothing so far to merit such low spirits . . . or maybe they were indulging in a little pardonable self-modesty. Anyhow . . . we expect that the activities of the teams themselves will speak more forcefully than any words . . . and it looks as if Toronto will have a top-of-the-bottle representation in the forthcoming show at Montreal. What do you say, team!

Love, Parties & Friendship

By Ross McLean

A friend of ours happened to call KI 3482 the other evening.

"Hello," the party at KI 3482 began.

"Hello," he said. "Is that Hutton House?"

"No," a tired voice replied. "You want MI 3482. This is KI 3482. This is just a nightly occurrence, you know."

"How do you suppose it happens so often," our friend wondered. "Sloppy dialing?"

"No," she answered. "I think it's love."

Our friend assures us that in his case it was sloppy dialing.

The girls from Smith College continue to make friends at Varsity. Phoebe Taylor, one of the exchangees, reports that she has for the past several weeks been entering gradually into an acquaintance with one of the third floor residents of the Trinity apartments.

Each morning as Miss Taylor steps to her window in Whitney Hall to comb her hair, her acquaintance appears in his window in the Trinity building, shaving.

They then wave hair brush and razor at one another and behave like good neighbours.

Heads of Varsity, Queen's Deplore Student Vandalism

In an interview with The Varsity yesterday, President Sidney Smith released for publication the text of his letter to Dr. W. E. McNeill, vice-president of Queen's University, as well as Dr. McNeill's reply with regard to the damage done to University of Toronto property prior to the last Varsity-Queen's game. We print, herewith, excerpts from both letters.

"Dear Dr. McNeill,

"I assure you at the outset of this letter that I am not writing in any recriminatory spirit. All the universities are faced with a common problem in respect of the conduct of their student bodies in the post-war period. On occasion, one may discern a tendency to translate the joys of peace by ways of an abandonment of standards of good manners and good taste.

"The despoiling of stone fabric by paint that cannot be entirely removed is inexcusable. In sending you the list of damage done to our buildings we have no thought of presenting a bill to Queen's University. I am hopeful, however, that by common action we will be able to put an end to these unpardonable activities which, if unchecked, may lead to something more serious. I am enclosing a copy of to-day's 'Varsity' in which I have endeavored to head off the possibility of retaliation on the part of the students of this institution. I have not lost my recollection of the buoyancy of my students days. I would encourage the opportunity for expressing that buoyancy short of damaging irreparably property."

Dr. McNeill replied as follows:
"Your letter telling me of the damage done to University of Toronto property by Queen's students caused me great pain. I am terribly sorry that a small irresponsible group should have brought the whole student body into disgrace.

"I did not reply immediately because I wished to find out at this end how many were engaged in the act of vandalism. My present information is that two different groups were concerned. First a group of students had planned a raid on the Stadium in accordance with a long standing tradition; but had bound each other not to put paint on University buildings. But independently something very much worse happened. A small group of not more than six, committed acts of vandalism for which we blush in shame.

"I called a meeting of the Senate yesterday and reported the matter. I told them what I had done and suggested that no action be taken pending reports from the AMS court and my suggestion was accepted. The Senate was very indignant but it had confidence, as I have, that the AMS Courts will deal vigorously with the offenders.

"Your letter was very wise and detached and no one could find any fault with any word of it. The Varsity editorial was also sound.

"Queen's University is not willing that the University of Toronto should be put to the expense of repairing the damages. I should be very grateful to you if you would let me know the cost."

President Smith pointed out that in his letter to Vice Principal McNeill he had also stated that it has been found in the University of Toronto that ex-service personnel have not been the leaders in any act of vandalism.

Servicemen's Art In Gallery Show

The Canadian Government has placed an exhibit of war paintings by contemporary Canadian artists in the Hart House Art Gallery. These paintings, done in oils and water colors, form a record of the service of Canadians on land, on sea and in the air during the present war.

Many of the artists have been closely associated with the development of the fine art collection in Hart House and nearly all have at least one painting hanging in the collection are: Carl Schaefer, Charles Comfort, Will Ogilvie, Michael Forester, George Pepper, Jack Nicholls, Pegi Nicol MacLeod, Roly Murphy, Lauren Harris Jr., and Eric Holgate. The exhibit will continue for about two weeks.

U.C. Joins Other Faculties To Help Japanese-Canadians

W. U. A., the following resolution "Resolved that the students of University College condemn the action of the Dominion government in the proposed deportation of loyal Canadian citizens of Japanese ancestry, and believe that the government should be responsible for the rehabilitation of these Japanese Canadians to civilian life and provide for ample repayment of losses sustained."

Gordon McCaffrey, president of the Lit and himself a member of the S.A.C., The students of University College followed the lead of other campus organizations yesterday when they passed, in an open meeting of the Lit and the stated that the responsibility for taking action on this problem belonged rightly to the S. A. C. He went on to say that since that body would not do so other organizations would have to take the initiative.

In the discussion which led to the passing of the above motion several speakers voiced the opinion that such action might mistakenly advocate leniency toward Japanese Canadians who have proved disloyal.

Earle Fisher, who has been associated with Japanese-Canadians while serving in the Army, felt that these people would still be faced with tremendous problems upon their release from camps.

A former school principal from British Columbia, Robert Shevard, stated that the Japanese in that province have been "hopelessly robbed and disgustingly treated."

In conclusion it was decided to post a copy of the resolution in the U.C. rotunda, along with a petition to be signed by students of the college who agree to its content.

These problems will be discussed by sub-committee, so that those interested in specific aspects may join in the argument.

Clock-Stocks Depleted Students Remain in Bed

By Julian Reznick

When the Philosophy professor asked one of his pupils what were the three most essential things in a Varsity student's life, Campus Joe wasn't far from wrong when he answered, "A room (even if it is an attic), a meal (even if only one a day), and a alarm clock (when and if you can get one)."

With a little initiative he could overcome the first two problems. But the Alarm Clock? My, my, now he is a dreamer!

So grave has become the clock situation that it has issued into a campus problem. The social and physical scientists have pooled their wagons of wisdom. But in vain! There just aren't any alarm clocks!

The consequences of the clock shortage are more far-reaching than they might seem to the casual observer. When campus Joe finally rockets out of bed in the morning, he's already missed two lectures, and so redoubles his efforts to be on time for his third. He dons his trousers over his pyjamas, puts his shirt on backwards, and does a fair imitation of Dagwood flying through the front door.

He forgot to wash and shave; he didn't eat; he brought the wrong books, and there's no ink in his pen. Does the picture look familiar?

Odd as it may seem, a Varsity reporter, himself a victim of the meagre-clock-stock epidemic, gave the subject a very thorough study. The reporter, in an interview with a downtown dealer (who arrived at his office an hour late), received blunt welcome. "Get out," the dealer barked.

In one of the frats, however, the problem of getting up without an alarm clock was easily solved. They just stay awake all night. Of course college-people need some rest, so rather than catch a wink (literally) each night, they set aside one day completely for rest. In this way they don't miss all of the classes some of the time, just some of the classes some of the time.

A few long-haired intelligentsia of S.P.S. have finally found an opportunity to use their creative abilities to capacity. One particular 'Einstein' invented his own alarm clock. It is too complicated to explain in detail here, but the principle is that it rings, and at the proper time, too. It's amazing what one can learn in college.

The problem has been solved in another way by a young lady who works on the telephone exchange. She just rings the phone at 8:30 each morning for all her friends. By now she has lost all her friends.

There is also an elite group at the (Continued on page 4)

World's Academic 'Greats' To Watch Smith Installed

CEREMONY IS ANCIENT RITUAL

By Wally Belfry

A pattern clinging to tradition has been set for the formal ceremonies installing Dr. Sidney Smith as President of the University of Toronto Friday afternoon at Convocation Hall.

Academic greats of all North American universities and all major universities throughout the world will fill the platform and banks of the hall, wearing many colors of robes representing their respective universities. Seats on the ground level will be filled with guests of national importance.

An "Old Country" tradition will be enacted when the Beadle agent of conferring degrees, walks onto the platform ahead of the old-gown-clad Chancellor, and bearing the declaration of authority. By the University Act of 1906 the President must be installed by the Chairman of the Board of Governors, currently Col. Eric Phillips. Dr. Smith will respond as Col. Phillips administers the declaration of office.

The actual installation is effected picturesquely in the act of disrobing the President. As he is disrobed by one faculty member two more will take the new garments from the Beadle and aid Dr. Smith in donning them. This will be done by University College Principal Taylor, Dean Gallie of the Faculty of Medicine, and Dean Young of Applied Science and Engineering. When Dr. Smith is adorned in the silver-tasseled black velvet motorboard and blue and silver gown he turns to shake hands—officially President of the University of Toronto.

Duan of Arts Beatty's greeting on behalf of all university members will precede Dr. Smith's first address as President. Six honorary degrees will then be conferred as previously announced. The six candidates, wearing scarlet L.L.D. robes, will be presented to the presiding Chancellor, Dr. Cody, by President Smith. Hoods signifying their newly-awarded honor roll will be placed over their heads and withdrawn by the Beadle and the candidates will sign the Golden Book reserved for such occasions.

Next Premier of Ontario George Drew and President of Harvard University J. B. Conant will speak on behalf of those who were awarded degrees. To the organ melody "The Blue and White" the processions will leave the platform.

Miss A.E.M. Parkes, Secretary of the Installation Committee, reports that the representatives of the universities have a full weekend arranged for them. The evening of the installation a dinner at Hart House will the 400 representatives opportunity to offer congratulatory messages to President Smith. These will be accepted for Dr. Smith by Irwin and Ruth Margeson and placed on trays borne by George Doner and John Stephenson.

Saturday morning the representatives will attend the Remembrance Day proceedings, many to place wreaths on the Soldiers' Tower. That afternoon the dignitaries will take their place amongst the tissue-throwing throngs in Varsity

Editorial

Pomp and Circumstance

Tomorrow, with ritual reminiscent of a coronation, there will be brought together visibly everything that the University stands for, concentrated in one man whose double business it is to administer the University and to embody it. The installation of a president is as far-reaching as that.

Central to it all is the declaration of office, which President Smith will pronounce at the climax of the afternoon's ceremonies:

"I, Sidney Earle Smith, pledge myself to perform the duties of the President of the University of Toronto as prescribed by law and by the statutes of the University; and I promise to defend the rights and to promote the welfare of the University and members thereof."

This declaration he will make in the presence of the Administrator of the Government of Canada, symbolizing the Crown from which the University holds its charter and to which it owes undivided allegiance; in the presence of the Board of Governors of the University, charged with administering its affairs; in the presence of the faculty heads, charged with the work of teaching and discovery which is the University's central function; in the presence of the student body, who receiving this teaching and sharing in this discovery are essential members of the college community; in the presence of the alumni, who are continuing members thereof; and in the presence of civic, and religious heads and common citizens, who collectively symbolize the public to which the University owes its principal duty.

Within the limits of accommodation available, students should seize the opportunity to play their part in this corporate act. The representative of the Crown, the representatives of church and state and the academic world, are not more important. Fully as much as any other body, the student body is the University. Every student seat in Convocation Hall should be filled tomorrow afternoon.

Art, Music and Drama

An Exception to the Rule

At Eaton's Auditorium last evening the young pianist Sylvia Kamin presented a program of Rosenthal dimensions, which was a most profitable evening for students of music. The subject of tone production, among others, has been the bane of countless pupils, and it was instructive to see how this artist approached the problem, especially in the well-known Major Sonata by Schubert, where expressive melodic phrases and strict classical timing were remarkably combined.

It has been asserted by some that certain musical works had best be left alone by women players. Sylvia Kamin's performance of Beethoven's last sonata would give the lie to such statements, or at least provide the exception. This piece represents some of the composer's profoundest thought, and is rarely attempted in public, save by such veterans of the game as Arthur Schnabel, who climaxed his program with it here last May. An acceptable interpretation of any of Beethoven's later work requires the most intense emotional concentration, something which younger soloists are less apt to control than produce.

Whether the age of virtuoso worship is gone or not, it is still necessary for pianists to assume the affirmative, not only to ensure a successful debut, but to allow complete attention to musical rendition. Sylvia Kamin's technique, aside from occasional over-peddaling and a few indistinct runs, took her scintillatingly through half a dozen Debussy creations; it also made possible a clear voicing of the individual parts in the Bach Chromatic Fugue, and the subtle tonal distinction in Schumann's Papillons.

The reception given by her audience would indicate that our city is aware of its fine talent and the need for more such recitals.

We Are Rebuked

Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

We note with disgust the most recent effusion of your make-up editor on behalf of two left-wing political groups on this campus.

This latest outburst takes the form of a banner headline proclaiming the unqualified statement that the students of this university are urging the withdrawal of guards from the Ford plant.

Co-incidental with this brazen piece of deception is an item with similar intent which advises us in the headline that the Victoria College Debating Parliament votes "Down with Drew Cabinet."

In both cases, the material in the columns gives the lie to the implication in the headlines. In the first case, it becomes apparent that the students of Toronto University have not expressed resentment concerning the governments' intervention in the Windsor strike, as suggested in your headline. Nor have they urged the withdrawal of police from the Ford plant. In the second case, the failure of a resolution rejecting in the triumph of the Drew Government in the recent Ontario election is in no sense an opinion against the Drew Government, nor does it carry the implication of an adverse opinion, any more than the failure of thousands of people to rejoice over the end of the war implies a regret that hostilities had ended.

It has often been suggested that "The Varsity" can be an important training ground for aspiring journalists in the student body. If that suggestion has any merit, then it would seem imperative that the official newspaper of Toronto University be immediately abolished, since front-page exhibitions like that of this Wednesday's, are nothing but a sterling example of yellow journalism at its worst. If the editors of "The Varsity" are determined to make of its pages a jaundiced rag, we respectfully suggest that they openly embrace the political groups with whose ill-considered and irresponsible resolutions they are in apparent accord.

One can only express the conviction that the students of Toronto University are endowed with sufficient common-sense and sound judgement that they will not be taken in by this attempted idly home by the contemporary graphic records in a way history books cannot do. Some works, of course, have definite artistic merit, such as the numerous small pencil drawings of George Harlow White; others are pretty poor stuff.

For lack of space, the bulk of the collection is not on exhibition, being laid away in racks behind, but if asked the librarian in charge will let you browse around amongst these as much as you want. For persons of an antiquarian or romantic turn of mind—as distinguished from those who look only for aesthetic qualities in art—I think the John Ross Robertson collection will provide much interesting and enjoyable recreation.

University Orchestra

Notices have begun to appear in the Varsity encouraging students to turn out for rehearsals of the University Symphony Orchestra. I'd like to point out a few reasons why those of us who play musical instruments should do so.

Everyone will agree that a university as large as ours should be able to produce an orchestra of its own. For the past few years it has been a University Orchestra only in name. Last year, for instance, less than half the members were university students, the rest of the players being recruited from the conservatory and other sources. In effect, a foreign group has been staging an annual concert sponsored by the University. This procedure is out of keeping with the ideas of the founders of the orchestra and has occasioned us little reason for pride. School spirit should help make this year's ensemble a University orchestra indeed.

Those who have had experience in ensemble work will probably turn out again because they are familiar with the benefits and pleasures to be derived from it. Those who have not tried orchestral work now have an excellent opportunity to acquire some useful training. They will also learn that there is at least as much pleasure in producing music in concert with others as there is in solo expression.

PHILIP FREEDMAN

Washington, Nov. 6- (CUP)—Washington rocked today with the news that the jealously-guarded secret of the atomic bomb has become public property. An obscure student publication has revealed the plans of the bomb in an advertising poster placed in full view of the public in the University College rotunda in Toronto.

The artist who did the poster, one "Hymie the Limey," declared the construction of the bomb was "an absurdly simple matter" and that any reasonably intelligent university student could reproduce a working model in five minutes.

"Any fool can do it," he declared. "The editor of The Undergraduate can do it."

A spokesman for The Undergraduate announced a short course in the use of atomic bomb would be given in a subterranean cellar referred to as "Room 10" for secrecy to University College students before publication of the magazine and that a free bomb will be given away with each issue.

"We want to put our magazine over with a bang," he declared.

Comments on the poster were varied. "It shows considerable nerve and a nice sense of the disgusting," said S. Thete, Art Critic of The Varsity.

"Oh, is that how we did it?" said Louis Pasteur, co-inventor of the bomb. "Looks like a dead fish to me," said J. Stalin, Generalissimo of the Armies of the U.S.S.R.

"That's long enough, that's all the space we have for tonight," said Robinson R. Cuscoe, managing editor of The Varsity.

ARNOLD ROWE-SLEEMAN, TRINITY III
IAN T. MACDONALD, TRINITY VIII

We heartily concur with these correspondents, and with others who have written in a similar vein, that the headlines in question, while in a narrow sense literally accurate, are taken as a whole grossly misleading. For this we offer no excuse. The night editors were not sufficiently careful to say what they meant, and for this they have been rebuked.

Our make-up editor (who had no responsibility for the wording of the heads) has no affiliation that we know of with any left-wing political groups; nor are "the editors of The Varsity" determined to make of its pages a jaundiced rag. "The Varsity's political position is one of absolute neutrality; and we deplore as much as any reader what happened in yesterday's issue.

Indeed, we deplore it more than any reader; not only is our sense of justice outraged, but our pride in producing an accurate paper.

Headline-writing is not as simple as it looks; type is not rubber and the necessity of heading a story in a given number of letters often tempts a night-editor to imperfectly summarize the sense.

That, while an explanation, is no excuse; and we shall take care that it does not happen again. W. H. R.

Lacrosse Scores Led by Puttock

The Interfaculty Lacrosse League is now in full swing and a few ex-Ontario Lacrosse Association players are listed on the team rosters. Jimmy McKay, Meds, with Jack Foote and Charlie Edmunds, P.H.E. all have worn the sweaters of the Mimico Mountaineers. Doug Price another P.H.E. man, played formerly with the Brampton Excelsiors.

In group one, Meds and P.H.E. are tied for first place with one win and one loss to each. Group two finds Meds II holding first position with two wins and no setbacks, followed by Vic who have won one. Forestry leads group three with two wins and no defeats, winning their games from S.P.S. III and Dents.

G. Puttock, Forestry, leads the scoring parade by a wide margin, having scored sixteen goals. His nearest competitors are J. Foote, J. Dzupina, D. Price P.H.E. and J. Robson, U.C. with five goals each.

St. Mike's Lead In Volleyball

The lack of lights for two nights plus the uncertainty of team members has not jarred the volleyball schedule to a great extent. The games in the upper gym or Hart House have gone on with little or no notice by anyone save the participants themselves. The fun and frolic derived from these games has been confined to the players and not to the spectators.

Altogether there are fifteen groups, ten in the minor league and five in the major. Three or four teams are found banded together in each of these.

Up to this point no team has played more than four games but already the threatening teams have reared their heads. The fellows playing under the name St. Mike's A have creditably accounted for themselves with four victories out of a possible four. No other team can boast of such a fine record.

The defenders of the Victoria Staff Cup, emblematic of volleyball supremacy of the campus, Senior U.C. are hopelessly out of the running as they seem to have encountered more trouble than they can cope with.

Other teams in the same class as the defending champions are Pre-Med A, Jr. Vic. Trin A SPS IV and Emmanuel.

Other teams are still in the fray. Such others include Sr. Meds, PHE I, SPS III, Jr. U.C., and Pharmacy who are still in the undefeated stage. All have two wins to their credit save the University College group which won its third start last night by squelching Jr. SPS.

Sr. Vic is another team which still has hopes of taking a strangle hold on the trophy although it has suffered a lone defeat.

Another Championship

In our midst is a championship team in the making which, during the razzle-dazzle football days, has been squelched into an uncomfortable back seat. The team is undefeated in league play and the only blemish upon its otherwise spotless record is a 2-2 draw suffered last Saturday. That is the record sported by the Varsity soccer team.

To date, in four games, this group of soccerites has booted home a total 18 goals while Goalie Claudie Elliott has turned crimson with shame on but three occasions. A win in one of the two remaining games will place the Blackwood Cup on the Hart House shelves for another year. With no play-offs allowed this season, the championship is almost a certainty (if this statement does not jinx the team).

The Blues are coached by Jim Paton, a grad student in the School of Social Studies, and is made up of thirteen men. Elliott is a third year Vic student who hails from Timmins and gained his soccer experience there. Last year's championship Med team is represented by four men, Toronto's Stan Spooner, Vancouver's Robbin Bell-Irving, Roy Shinobu who spent his summer starring for King Eddies in the City League and Joe Fyfe. The two Clarkson brothers—Willie and Max hail from the Old Country where they picked up their innumerable tricks. From the major soccer league in the West Indies come Dave Boyd, Noor Hassanali and Erry Thompson. Ridley's contribution comes in Art Riguere who is found around School as is Jack Mayne. The other internationalite on the squad is Doug Eaton who comes from dear old Newfie.

Thus, thirteen fellows from all parts of the hemisphere, are banded together with a common purpose—to win the intercollegiate soccer championship.

Freshies Threaten To Oust Seniors

The basketball schedule has been working like the insides of the proverbial clock for the last three nights....no hitches, no defaults. On Tuesday night four more games were played off. The first hour was given over to the game between Vic II and O.T.II.... which teams displayed not too great co-ordination in passing the ball.... which was explained by the fact that it was their first game, and some tension is thus excusable.... but we are dubious whether or not the frequent fouls can be thusly pardoned. Vic won... but the score was not reported. The game of the evening was between St. Hilda's Freshies and Meds B.... their good spirit, neat passing and the clever feint on the part of St. Hilda's freshies.... who won the game by a score of 19-16....

Laudable team work was the earmark of the next teams, P.H.E.H.A. and St. Hilda's Juniors. Bobbie Beaton helped her team to victory with an enviable ability to make plays.... carried off at a high rate of speed. The last game featured St. Mike's and the U.C. Seniors. The coach of the former avowed that all his players were stars, but the U.C. captain put up but one player for praise.... June Ward, who executed set shots from the centre of the floor which were masterpieces. It took the first half to get the teams unscrambled, and going on the fastest game of the evening, ending with St. Mike's in the lead-14-13.

REMEMBER?

COSY COMFORTS FOR CAMPUS CO-EDS . . . there's a wonderful variety from tailored flannel to the gorgeous feminine ones in padded satin at the Evangeline Shops. With coal futures uncertain, we advise not one warm housecoat this winter but two, because you will not want to be without one while 'tother is at the cleaners. There is such a wide variety in housecoats in the Evangeline Shops everywhere that to attempt to describe one or two seems futile when there are so many other attractive ones begging to be given notice, and when your nearest Evangeline Shop is so close you only have to slip over to Yonge and Bloor. It's going to be a "housecoat" winter, gals, so put your bid in early.

TIES! TIES! TIES! Literally thousands of new ties, all the latest colours, styles, patterns. If you feel that your personal appearance lacks that certain something, if you notice to your disgust that the eyes of campus co-eds do not gleam at your approach, in quite the manner to which you are accustomed . . . (whisper) . . . why not take yourself to FRANK STOLLERY'S. Have a private session with one of the experts on tie-choosing and come away with new ties and new hopes, (that we encourage but we do think the possibilities of brightening up men's apparel are limited). STOLLERY'S are proud of their ties this season and justly so.

SEASON'S NEWS IN SMARTNESS . . . Joan Rigby is noted for exclusive designs, the sort of smartness in clothes which take the accepted fashion trends to the moment and adds that special touch of individual designing which gives to all Joan Rigby clothes an extra quality of fashion achievement. Anything you buy there will give you satisfaction. It is a "wardrobe stabilizer" and long-lasting. Joan Rigby clothes will withstand the knocks of every day living, and as every girl knows, a really good costume these days is worth holding fast to because replacements don't come easily. Take relatives a-shopping for their better garments at Joan Rigby's.

LET'S BE GLAMOROUS by the fire-side! On cold wet snowy evenings when the Varsity gal comes in from a hard, long day what a joy it is to slip into a beautifully fashioned Lady Ellis housecoat. There are many housecoats to captivate the campus co-eds, in soft colours and materials. How about a corded bengaline? Padded satin? Especially for the after-lecture-and-before-dinner period when relaxation means a lot, or after a hot bath you can step into a warm cosy wool housecoat in luxurious colours and feel deliciously warm as you look. Lady Ellis has a shop in this neighborhood, on Yonge, just south of Bloor, and in your neighborhood, too.

FASHIONS FOR YUO! Shopping around Simon Ramm's I saw many different types of day and evening clothes of the kind to captivate the heart of any calculating campus gal, from impressive date dresses for every type of figure to big heavy cozy coats to put you on an even keel for the blustery winter to come. Working and afternoon dresses are also in abundance, especially intended for the shining light who knows the importance of smartness through the day's lectures. Then come those perfectly ideal suits for winter wear, the shorty coat trimmed with soft fur, the skirt to match. This is really a super outfit and can be worn on many a semi-formal occasion as well as on the campus. Just East of Yonge, at 40 Bloor East.

IT'S SIMPLY NOT INTELLIGENT to limp around with a wrenched or sprained ankle or instep when a patting on of Sloan's Liniment will cooperate with nature to relieve it. Sloan's works by bringing circulation to the spot, driving out the uncomfortable cut-off feeling which results from a part of the body having been injured by a sudden fall or strain. Sloan's is exceedingly strong in its action, does not require rubbing on but merely a gentle patting on with absorbent or fingers, and the effect is almost immediate. Good to relieve simple head colds as an inhalant when a tea spoonful is added to a glass of water.

THIS WEEK'S REVIEW OF NORTHWAYS . . . Well my children, as you know Northway's has a reputation of originality. Their date dresses are the sort of thing you had in mind but couldn't quite visualize ready-made; wools, crepes in every describable fashion and colour, waiting for you to look 'em over. A Bromleigh Coat of the same colour would twin up nicely, not forgetting that hat and bag which can be selected in compatible colours at the same time. Why not have another outfit and look at the finely woven suits? There are masses of crisp, feminine blouses to set off the good clean lines of the tailor-made suits.

DU BARRY DERMAT-SEC Formula is a rich, super-emollient which supplies extra softness to neck and throat, overcomes the dryness which produces wrinkles and activates the functions of the pores to produce a clear-toned skin. This cream for dry skin is a protective for the young, a corrective for the older skin. Use it in the "Beauty-Angle" way to bring up circulation, working upwards along the throat column with both hands, then lie with feet about a foot higher than your head in the way prescribed by famous beauticians, getting new supplies of blood flowing up to nourish the skin of your throat and neck.

university who have overcome their difficulty by employing a Pass Arts student who has a clock to make the rounds each morning. The man is on piece-work, at one cent a nudge. With about fifty employers he expects to earn enough to put him on easy street for the rest of his life.

Then again, a particular, socialist-minded group has been trying to revolutionize the school into buying a 'Big Ben' to serve the entire campus. It will work on the principle of electrical impulses.

We understand, however, that in a little while there will be a great surplus of clocks. Well, it had better be soon for 'Tempus Fugit' and many have already missed a little short of one month's lectures.

Do You Find Traditional Religion Wanting?

Rev. William Jenkins

Are you dissatisfied in an orthodox church because the religion seems immature, unreasonable or spiritually lacking? Have you felt uneasy because you cannot believe some of its teachings and so you have said: "If religion stands for these things it has nothing for me." In the Unitarian church all doctrine and belief must stand the test of enlightened reason. Truth, not blind authority, is the sole criterion by which articles of faith are judged. Each individual is expected to develop his own exacting, enriching creed according to the dictates of his own mind and conscience. Join us on Sunday morning at 11 o'clock and hear Mrs. James P. ... Et Lux Perpetua Luceat Eis

Tomorrow morning, in front of the Soldiers' Tower dedicated to the dead of World War I, the University will join to their brave names the names of its heroes fallen in World War II.

It is fitting that the service of remembrance and consecration should this year return to its traditional site. During the war years, the front campus saw an expanded ceremony symbolizing a show of power as much as a commemoration. The campus was covered with close ranks of troops, navy army, and airforce, members of the student reserve and of active units stationed at the University; and the reading of the names of the dead was followed by an imperturbable march ing past.

It was fitting in those years, when we had again drawn the sword.

Now that we have re-entered the years of peace, we return again as a family to a shrine, to the former site of mourning. The Soldier's Tower, which twenty-five years ago the Alumni of the University erected to be a permanent memorial to the dead of what they could only conceive as the last and greatest of possible wars, has taken into its brood of shades the dead of a second, greater, and far more terrible holocaust.

We are a little awed these first months of peace; a little awed by the hush which follows the sudden cessation of sound, and is filled with the confused memories of sound; more than a little awed by the recollection that what was final has happened again, and may happen once more with indisputable finality.

We may be right in so thinking; but if we are right, if our pessimism is justified, it will be precisely because we are pessimistic. Paradoxically, the men who died were not pessimistic as they went to death. In keeping their memory alive, we shall nourish our own essential hope. Whether or not they have need of us to mourn them, we need, each one of us, to be inspired by them.

"Each one, man by man, has won imperishable praise; each has gained a glorious grave—not that sepulchre of earth wherein their glory is enshrined, but remembrance that will live on the lips, that will blossom in the deeds of their countrymen the world over.

"For the whole earth is the sepulchre of heroes; monuments may rise and tablets be set up to them in their own land, but on far-off shores there is an abiding memorial that no pen or chisel has traced; it is graven, not on stone or brass, but on the living heart of humanity.

"Take these men for your ensamples. Like them, remember that prosperity can only be for the free: that freedom is the sure possession of those who alone have courage to defend it."

Government on International Level Only Method of Securing Peace

Organic government on an international basis or World War III within twenty-five years was the alternative seen by Mr. Duncan K.C. at a dinner held by the university C. C. F. Club on Wed. evening at the Diet Kitchen.

Mr. Duncan gave the world two ideologies from which to choose, the old "tried and found wanting" type of the League of Nations, or a type based on law and a new organ of government.

"The former system," he stated "was merely a group of nations brought together with promises on paper, complete with signatures on parchment, much fold-er at the ceremonies—but still—"a scrap of paper." Since this system was built on "the shifting sands of international approval" and subject to any nation's prerogative to change its mind it is an "unworkable system."

"Some people say that we are over-governed, I say that we are undergoverned, as we have no government on the international level. To form a new government on an international level is the only method of keeping world peace," asserted Mr. Duncan.

He pointed out that The San Francisco Conference had no legislative power over nations, and was directed against aggressors outside the United Nations, but not those within. Mr. Duncan then showed that despite the miseries of Europe with the horrible prospect of twelve million people dying this winter of hunger and disease, the United States Congress has been "chiselling along on its share of the cost of U.N.R.R.A., and paying with strings attached." This showed, he pointed out that it is impossible for an international budget to compete in a national assembly with a national budget.

8:30 p.m.—Reception for Dr. and Mrs. Smith in the Royal Ontario Museum.

McGill and Varsity Tangle Winds up Rugby Schedule

Tomorrow afternoon the curtain will descend on the 1945 edition of the curtailed intercollegiate football schedule as the McGill Redmen tangle with the Varsity Blues at Varsity Stadium.

The Doug Kerr-coached twelve will be pointing for their initial victory of the season after having born the brunt of three straight set-backs, two at the hands of Western while the other defeat was hung on by the Queen's Tricolor.

On the other hand, however, the Blues are determined to finish the season with two victories to balance the two losses already in the records.

Meanwhile, Warren Stevens has been putting his "fine mannered young boys" through the paces and reports state that all is not well in the camp of the Blues.

Speedy backfielder Bob Henry will not dress for the game due to an injury sustained in the London encounter. Johnny Farmer may be missing from his end position due to a leg injury.

On the brighter side of the picture is Colin Cranham's return to the lineup after an absence of one week. Rumors that Bobby Coulter would dress for the game have been denied by Stevens and Coulter. These rumors started with intercollegiate proceedings were halted.

Coulter's appearance in uniform in a practice but, according to the coaches, he was only dressed to test several plays.

Coach Doug Kerr has also been bothered by the injury plague. His star linesman Brian Little will be missing as will backfielders Doug Heron and Dave Townsend.

The McGill attack is centered around the all-round play of Murray Hayes, the booting of Bob Bartlett and the plunging of Johnny Hall, Bill Stronach and John Porter.

Kerr's pre-Varsity game workouts concentrated on setting up a pass defense and the perfection of offensive plays. He attributes two of the three defeats suffered by the Mustangs to bad breaks rather than bad playing and claims that he is proud of their showing despite the final score.

With good football weather a crowd of 14,000 is expected to view the first game between these teams since 1939 when the Redmen bowed twice to the otherwise winless Blues. The Blues promise to start off where they left when Coulter. These rumors started with intercollegiate proceedings were halted.

Compulsory Military Training Upheld in Interfaculty Debates

The motion "Resolved that every Canadian youth should have one year of compulsory military training" was upheld by a vote of 60-21 at a meeting of the University of Toronto Debating Union. This first of four inter-faculty debates was held at St. Joseph's College on Wednesday evening.

The first speaker for the affirmative, Monty Simons of U.C. stated that they could never rely again upon a volunteer army for defense, and that 145,000 men could be partially trained each year under this plan. With preparation the ultimate end of this programme, some training would give more strength than no training.

Josephine Armstrong of Victoria, the first speaker for the negative held that this year of training would come at a time when the student who went to school only as long as he was compelled to do so was partially trained for a job. Hence he would hate to leave his job for a time. She also added that this training would lead to a decline in morals, and would be an unnecessary financial expense.

Speaking for the affirmative, June Furlong of St. Joseph's held that this plan of training would be part of the programme for national fitness and would teach tolerance, democracy and nationalism.

The final speaker for the negative, Jack Gwynne-Timothy of Trinity said that such military training would make for disunity, and would not prove effective since a professional international police force was needed to preserve peace.

REMEMBRANCE SERVICE

All students who are Ex-Service personnel and all members of the Staff who served in an active capacity in any branch of the Service are requested by the Alumni Federation to be in uniform Nov. 10, the day of the Service of Remembrance and Consecration to be held at the Soldiers' Tower. Permission to wear uniform on this occasion has been granted by the three Services.

RUGBY GAME

Students are requested to stay off the field at half-time of the McGill-Varsity football game. The Varsity and McGill bands have worked out an interesting program to be staged on the field at half-time. In order to assure its successful execution the field must be kept clear at that time.

Long Absent from Campus Colorful Ceremony Returns

LAST INSTALLATION FALCONER

At three o'clock this afternoon, when Dr. Sidney Smith is robed in the blue and silver presidential gown before an awesome array of dignitaries representing the world's principal seats of learning, Convocation Hall will witness its first presidential installation in 38 years. Dr. H. J. Cody, Chancellor of the University and Dr. Smith's predecessor, due to a family bereavement at the time of his taking office, was never formally installed.

The last installation ceremony took place in 1907, when Sir Robert Falconer succeeded James Loudon as president. Dr. Falconer, who was in Pompeii when notified of his succession to the presidency, took office officially in September, 1907, the day before the present Physics Building was opened.

Most colorful occasion prior to today's ceremony, the Falconer installation was attended by the Prime Minister of Canada and two provincial premiers as well as representatives of universities in Canada and the United States. Sir William Meredith as Chancellor of the University officiated.

First president of the University of Toronto, as such, was Rev. John McCaul, an Irishman, who entered office in 1850, the year in which King's College became a secular institution and assumed the title, University of Toronto.

Earlier, Hon. and Rt. Rev. John Strachan, in 1827 founded the King's College, the first institution of higher learning in Upper Canada, and became its president. It was Bishop Strachan also who is credited with suggesting the founding of McGill University.

From 1880 to 1889, following Rev. John McCaul, Sir Daniel Wilson headed the University. A sidelight on Sir Daniel Wilson headed the University. A sidelight on Sir Daniel's career is given by the record of his interest in the art of engraving. He is said to have taken up this work himself to cut down on the cost of publishing several self-illustrated books. An engraving of Turner's Ancient Carthage hangs in the University Librarian's room today to prove this former president's skill in the art.

James Loudon, president from 1892 to 1907, was the first native-born Canadian and graduate of the University of Toronto to become a member of the staff here.

Margaret Wrong S.C.M. Speaker

Margaret Wrong secretary of the International Committee on Literacy and Christian Literature for Africa will speak to a student meeting tonight at 8 o'clock at the School of Missions under the auspices of the Student Christian Movement.

Miss Wrong was the founder and first head of the University College Women's Union and founder of the Women's residences, Hutton House and Argyle House. After taking her Master's degree from Toronto she spent some time here as member of the staff of the History Department. In this respect she emulated her father, Professor George M. Wrong, for many years head of the Department of History of this university. In addition to her Master's degree Miss Wrong holds a degree from Somerville College, Oxford.

Miss Wrong has had extensive experience in the field of Christian education having served with the World's Student Christian Federation in Geneva and the Student Christian Movement in Britain.

At present she is working with Dr. Frank Laubach, exponent of a new and simplified method of mass adult education and author of "The Silent Billions Speak."

Student Services Remember Feats

At the suggestion of several ex-service personnel at the University, a Student Memorial Service will be held at 7:30 p.m., Sunday, Nov. 11, in Trinity Chapel. The service will be held under the guidance of Group Captain G. O. Lightbourn, Chief chaplain of the R.C.A.F., and is sponsored by the Student Christian Movement.

The service men and women of the University are especially urged to attend and to bring along any of their friends. "Our intention is to hold similar services periodically on the anniversary of famous military operations of the war," Captain Douglas C. Candy, official chaplain of Hart House, told The Varsity.

Captain Candy, a former member of the First Canadian Parachute Battalion, said that the subsequent service will probably be held in the various chapels on the campus. Each will commemorate some specific feat of one of the three Canadian services such as the crossing of the Rhine in March 1945.

Panel Discussions At History Club

A panel discussion on the subject of "The Role of History in the Social Sciences" will be held at the first meeting of the University of Toronto History Club, it was announced yesterday by Jack Gillett, president. Prof. D. J. McDougall of the History Department, and Prof. C.W.M. Hart of Sociology will be the speakers, and Prof. V. W. Bladen of the Economics Dept., will hold the chair six feet above his head. The meeting will take place in the Women's Union at 8:00 p.m. Tues.

Jack said that everyone is welcome, and that members of the First year are reminded that they do not have to be enrolled in the History Course to be able to come. The History Club holds four meetings a year, to which well-known speakers are invited. An annual feature is the monster Christmas party, and the year's activities are climaxed by the banquet.

Organ Recital

The second in series of Tuesday afternoon organ recitals will be given on Nov. 3, from 5 to 6, in Convocation Hall. Dr. Healey Wilman, University Organist, is the soloist for the series.

Students from all college and faculties are invited to attend. The program will consist of outstanding works for the organ including some of Bach's greatest compositions.

Remembrance Service

Group Capt. G. O. Lightbourn, Chief Chaplain, R.C.A.F. will be the special preacher at a Student Memorial Service in Trinity College Chapel at 7:30 p.m., on Sunday, Nov. 11.

Editorial

A Last Reminder

We have said our say about rugby rowdism. Despite protests, commonly anonymous, we stand by everything we have hitherto said on the subject.

This week-end there seems to be no reason to expect paint-slinging; that particular form of over-exuberance has, it would seem, worn out its appeal. But this week-end, for special reasons, a much more healthy custom will also have to be cancelled: we mean the half-time free-for-all.

The Administrator of the Government of Canada will head the list of distinguished guests occupying box seats at Saturday's game; and these are not men to be sent away from the University with the impression that it is a place where at the slightest provocation fists fly.

THE BAND WILL PERFORM

Furthermore, the Bands of Varsity and McGill have arranged a special display for the half-time interval. Their precision marching will be disrupted beyond repair if the field is filled with a surge of brawling rooters.

For that matter, though the admonition comes late in the season, there is no need for the rooters to brawl. A spirited intermingling is healthy and desirable; but like other football features the half-time crowd has this season gotten out of hand. Last week at Western there was tear-gas, stealing of bandmen's hats, and fistcuffs in which at least one student suffered smashed glasses and a badly-cut cheek. No one will be any the worse tomorrow for sitting tight and watching the band.

UNSUING TOILERS

The band are worth watching. Everybody sees the cheerleaders, and yells at them, and (human nature being intrinsically ungrateful) complains about them; the band is too easily treated as a superfluous extra. The University of Toronto Band deserves a better hand than it has been accorded so far, the better attention for its performances.

Of the 42 bandmen, about 95% are students who have served with the armed services. Meeting regularly in the C.O.T.C. drill hall for rehearsal, they have gladly and even gallantly blasted out one another's cadrumns in the interest of University spirit. With considerable trouble they have arranged ornamental marches which have been generally disrupted by callous crowds. This week-end, they have organized by correspondence a joint display with the band from McGill. It will be worth watching.

LAPSED TRADITION

In this as in other matters, students are demonstrating an imperfect sense of tradition. Everyone recalls that before the war inter-collegiate rugby was marked by spectators' horseplay. Nobody seems to recall that it was marked by other, better-organized features. Nobody seems to recall the tradition of leaving the field clear for the band at half-time.

A rugby game in the pre-war era would have been thought strangely incomplete without the marching and counter-marching of the brightly-uniformed band. Spectators whose memory goes back that far are apt to wonder whether the post-war generation has lost all appreciation of the work that others go to on their behalf. We think not. We think it more likely that students to-day are under the illusion that their fathers before them were rowdy. There is such a thing as taste, even in rowdiness. Our predecessors knew when to stop. With practice, we may acquire a similar sense of the boundary between exuberance and bad manners.

GROWING UP

At the start of the rugby season we remarked that the generation of inter-collegiate spectators would have to recapture a lost frame of mind: inter-collegiate-mindedness. The sudden excess of oxygen, we said in effect, would make them delirious; they must learn to breathe it. They have done well. The vandalism and horseplay of the past three weeks have in a sense done a service: the publicity they have attracted has reminded student at all Universities of the duty they owe to one another, of the united front of respectability which universities must present to the public if they are to be permitted to survive.

We have come a long way from the delirium which a few of us brought back from the first game at Kingston. Tomorrow we have a chance to show that four games have made us letter-perfect.

Robeson
Relaxes

By Ruthie Cohen and Blanche Stanley

Paul Robeson the man is as great as Paul Robeson the artist. It is often understood that interviews with celebrities are difficult to get, but this was different.

We stood in the long back-stage line-up, waiting to get Mr. Robeson on his own for an informal chat about the University. He shook our hands, signed our programs, and then asked us to wait until he could get a free moment.

The whole atmosphere of the room seemed to parallel the friendly attitude of Mr. Robeson; his "colleagues" kept up the conversation while we waited.

"Oh, you wanted to talk to me, didn't you?" queried Mr. Robeson; so we did. He sat down on the arm of the chesterfield and looked informally, as if we had met him before.

We asked him if he had ever visited the University of Toronto campus. "Oh yes, I have been in Toronto several times, I have spoken at some important luncheon at Hart House on a previous visit; in fact, I have even stayed at Hart House."

He told us how he had enjoyed watching a football game here, and that his son now plays football for Cornell. "The thought of the students is extremely important. In my country they are not quite aware of the responsibilities in this world. It's going to be their red-wagon always," he stated.

People in looking at Europe don't understand what is happening; Europe isn't going to stand still, and if we can't catch up, we shouldn't try to stop them. There is a job still to be done, we can still lose some of the victories we have won," Mr. Robeson added.

For a few years Mr. Robeson lived in Russia, giving concerts and lecturing. His son went to school in Moscow when he was eight years old, and is now a student of electrical engineering at Cornell University.

He deplores the Russophobia opinions of the American newspapers syndicates, saying that he was glad to see that both sides of Europe were openly reported in Toronto newspapers.

Mr. Robeson talked about his work. He felt that singing was relatively unimportant when he had a message to give to the people. "As a matter of fact," he went on, "I may not even finish my tour. I know I can get the platforms so I think I should take the opportunity to lecture. Even if I finish

The current wave of strikes spread to the University Press late last night when Etain Shrdlu, Varsity typesetter, announced that the big words employed by Editor Skinner "made him tired."

Waving a large banner demanding "Shorter Words at Equal Pay," Shrdlu kicked over several cases of type and stated that if Skinner insisted on using words like "intransigent" and "Russophobe" he could set them himself.

"His pernicious insinuations are obnoxiously vituperative," Shrdlu told reporters. "With unparalleled intestinal fortitude I have endured to the saturation point."

Asked for comment, Skinner snapped, "He makes me sick." When last seen he was wrestling with cases of type, while minions of Shrdlu picketed the joint grimly.

my tour, I shall lecture in between concerts."

Singing at universities is a pleasure for Mr. Robeson. Many of his concerts are given on university camps where he greatly enjoys the informality of the student audience.

"I always receive a warm welcome in Canada," said Mr. Robeson with a smile. This welcome could be nothing, however, compared to that which he gave his audience; shaking hands with every autograph-seeker, remembering people he had met on previous visits.

As we left the room, he told us how sorry he was that he would not be able to attend the rugby game on Saturday because preparation for his concert that

CORRESPONDENTS

Readers of The Varsity are reminded once again that we cannot undertake to consider anonymous letters for publication. Some of the choicest specimens of invective we have seen in many months have recently had to be withheld from our readers because they were unsigned.

The Varsity welcomes comment, criticism, and flat disagreement, and will endeavour to print a fair selection of letters in all three classes; but writers who coyly or shamefacedly omit their signatures are debarring themselves from the fun at the outset.

Art, Music and Drama

"Skin of our Teeth" New Dramatic Departure

Future historians and theorists of the drama will, I believe find "Skin of our Teeth" significant in two interconnected ways: (1) As the first successful play to employ the revolutionary device of building up a realistic dramatic illusion and then shattering it by allowing the actors to confess the fact that they are playing a part; (2) As the first successful drama taken directly from a novel, our characteristically 20th Century medium. I refer here, of course to Joyce's Finnegans Wake.

The first aspect is basic as far as dramatic art is concerned. Is it fair to shatter the convention of realistic representation this way? It is not by any means the same as having a narrator telling what is going on. Wilder breaks the dialogue in Skin of our Teeth more than once, and the actors turn to the audience as actors in a role, so that they may comment on the play they themselves are engaged in.

Is this an attempt to trick the audience into liking the play, when the dramatist cannot command sufficient prestige strictly within the realistic mould?

Or is it a legitimate effect by which the writer gains intimacy with the playgoers, and gains significance for his story by making them participants in the dramatic situation? Does Wilder shatter his medium here, or give it a new lease on life?

Personally I incline to the opinion that Wilder pulled it off by the skin of his teeth, and it may easily prove that he has started a new dramatic convention. How else can the self-consciousness and hesitancy of the modern age be captured in drama?

The story concerns everyman's morals, inventions, and seduction. Every man is epitomized in George Antroubus, who struggles backwards and forwards through history with the aid of his maternalistic wife, his clever brat-daughter Gladys, and his machiavelian son Cain, rechristened Henry; his other son Abel is dead before the play begins. This household is attended by a seductive domestic Sabina, who becomes a beauty queen in Act II. My opinion of the significance of the dramatic action will be made clear in discussion of the source of the play and of the Vic production.

I mentioned self-consciousness and hesitancy earlier, and that should have led me into the play's second major aspect—the Joycean psycho-analytic source. This is too complex a matter to more than touch on here: the odd speech that sounds out of character or a trifle unrelated to the situation stems from a too thorough fidelity to the source; the realistic scene in the last act is an attempt to compress Book III of Finnegans Wake into a nutshell; again the lantern slide lecture effect comes from the television sequences in Joyce. All the characters are found in different permutations and combinations in Joyce's novel, and certainly the novelist's total philosophy of cyclical history overlaps the Wilder drama.

I felt of the production (excellent though it was as a whole) that this indebtedness, which is basic in interpretation of the drama, was overlooked.

If, for example, Tom Beckett, who played Mr. Antroubus, had had a synoptic view of the play and its intention, as based on the novel, he would, I am sure, have differentiated more sharply between the Antroubus of Acts I and II.

Mrs. Antroubus (Molly Brown), was adequate if a trifle timid in characterization. Beth Cady, as Sabina, was superb; technically flawless, and immensely sincere, she thus avoided the easy pitfall of the part, which is the "Ain't we the modern ones" touch. Henry (Don Harron) displayed the versatility of acting that Mr. Antroubus lacked, thereby cashing in on the Joyce Wilder conception. In the last Act, he slipped a bit, and rather aided on the melodramatic note that the play acquires there. Gladys, portrayed by Ruth Newey, got the broader changes demanded by the character in the different acts; she has a very charming stage presence.

The minor roles were generally smooth. Royce Firsh as Announcer was a natural. I had imagined the Stage Manager as a fluffy, effeminate creature, but Alan MacNeil gave a thoroughly convincing portrayal of the opposite interpretation. The Telegraph Boy, (Burk Ritchie) would do well to protect his voice more, but otherwise he is priceless. I disagree with Pegi Brown's interpretation of the Fortune Teller. There is more to the character; possibly more hag, less arrogance, less monologism. But despite that, she commanded the stage excellently in the second Act.

Laurels for this show really go to the back-stage crew. To get such a play functioning well technically, in the short space of five weeks, with its mammoths, dinosaurs, flying flats, and the like, is a momentous achievement. The integration of the whole show rested with obvious success on Dora Moore's capable shoulders. Unqualified congratulations to stage manager Bob Simkins, decor, Murie Kelly, and electrician Charles Brown. And in case I have forgotten anyone in this all-important line, I hereby place a wreath at the tomb of the Unknown Technician.

It's here! Mulberry, the man-made harbor that the liberating armies took across the channel to the shores of France. Here is the large scale original model of Mulberry, used in the British War Office in planning the invasion, with maps, charts, photographs and a special film . . . "A Harbor Goes to France." You'll be fascinated with this model of Mulberry, and "our future engineers" should most certainly try to see this exhibition.

Skule Group I Prove Victors Trounce U.C. in 10-1 Defeat

Alert School took advantage of every break yesterday to defeat U.C. 10-1 in the final game of the group I schedule. Only twice did S.P.S. have the ball inside the Red and White 35 yard line, but on both occasions major scores resulted.

The first touchdown was sudden and unexpected. U.C. had recovered a bad snap on School's 15. On the first play, Butko of S.P.S. outwitting the ball brilliantly, nabbed a U.C. fumble and ran the length of the field to the 10. Sharpe then carried the ball around left end for a score. The kick was blocked by a charging U.C. line.

In the second quarter, with Staley kicking and Volpe running, the University College gridders threatened again. A pass to Clayton brought the ball to the Engineers 25. Staley's single was called back on an offside, but a few minutes later, School fumbled, and Staley hoofed a mighty punt from centre field for U.C.'s only score.

A U.C. fumble was gathered up by Evans who was finally brought down on his opponent's 20. On the next play he plunged for the touch. The convert was blocked.

G. Evans was School's most effective back while Keith Hendrick's long punts set U.C. back on numerous occasions. Roberts at end and McKnight at snap also played well.

As a whole, the U.C. line stood out stopping the School offensive cold. Upton, Ed Staley and MacKenzie were the sparkplugs. Quarter Volpe and Art Staley provided the backfield punch.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Mickey Michasiw

The Final Act...

With the McGill Redmen comes the final football game of the year and with the final games comes a well deserved rest for the players who have trained so well for so long. Even though the season was not quite what the optimists had expected, there is always that next season for which Warren Stevens has been aiming.

Stevens will lose but four of this year's team—Gus Campbell, Stu Scott, Jim Carson and Mel Lawson. While replacements for Scott and Lawson may not be found too easily, there are capable fellows like McReynolds, Cranham and Lawrence to take over. To these add any additions from the first year enrolment and there is a championship team in the making.

But back to tomorrow's game. The McGill Daily reports that in an interview with Coach Doug Kerr, the Redmen's mentor expressed keen hopes as to the result of tomorrow's game.

Kerr is quoted as saying that on the basis of Varsity's performance at Western, he expects to win.

The Optimist went on to say that the Redmen could defeat Western if they played the type of football exhibited in the Queen's game. Ouch! And Mr. Parks of the London Free Press insisted that the Mustangs had but played around with the Redmen after the first touchdown in the game!

Perhaps Mr. Kerr is in for a bit of a shock come the end of the game.

Jottings On A Frayed Cuff...

Queen's, by upsetting Western at Kingston tomorrow could end up in a first place tie with Mustangs. After seeing the two teams play it does seem rather far-fetched but stranger things have happened... If they run true to form and minus the batteries and dope, the Galloping Gaels should end up in a second place tie with the Blues... The Mustangs face an undefeated season. The Redmen a winless season... Stevens' worries are but starting. Comes Wednesday and the first basketball practice. Holdovers from last season's starting five include Murray Thompson, Harry Mayzel, Doug Spry and Don Gibson who has graduated but is attending classes at O.C.E. Grossman and Ryan have departed but a host of eager basketballers will be there to greet the coach... Colin Cranham may be almost as busy. After packing away his football experience, he will be out to retain his spot on the basketball squad. And he spent his summer playing muckball too!

The Sportswoman

by Polly Muir

Stop—Thief!

As unpleasant as it sounds, there has been some dishonesty around the basketball courts of late. This is one thing that one does not expect to find in a group undertaking studies in the higher schools... For the second time St. Hilda's have had a basketball stolen. Perhaps the perpetrator has no conception of the gravity of the situation... it puts St. Hilda's $15 in the hole... new basketballs are impossible to purchase. Which places the Saints in a very unenviable position.

It seems of a serious nature since this is the second year in succession a St. Hilda's ball has been pilfered, showing that this practice may continue, if not checked immediately. There is much to be said for the virtue of honesty and just as much for the dignity of the college student, who should have grown out of her habit of collecting souvenirs at some else's expense.

In case the basketball has just been mislaid (we hope), here is a description of it... fairly old, with MEDS printed on it in ink. If anyone chances to locate said ball, the team of St. Hilda's will be more than grateful for its return.

Heiroglyphics—

We were given our first opportunity to peruse a baseball score-sheet the other day, and found it covered with all sorts of weird signs and numbers... it suggested a new type of secret code to our mystified mind. There were squares, triangle numbers and initials all jumbled together (or so it seemed at first). Anyhow, after we had discovered a footnote at the bottom of the page, we found that P.H.E.I.I had defeated their sister team P.H.E.I last Wednesday afternoon by a score of 11-6. The game was won in the first inning when the second team managed to tally eight points out of 11 tries. One good reason why the first team didn't get very far was that their top player Joe Caron didn't get properly organized. Another reason was the first baseman of P.H.E.I.I who truly outdid herself.

Record Entries In Relay Meet

With a record number of entries, the Interfaculty Relay Championships were held Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday afternoons at Varsity Stadium. Due to lateness of entries, Hec Phillips advised that the meet would not be completed before Fri. afternoon. To date, twenty-four teams have entered with a total of ninety-six men, and in scoring, S.P.S. is in first place with twenty-three points, Meds in second position with sixteen, Vic holds the third spot with nine, followed by Trinity with four and Forestry with three.

Hec Phillips was very pleased with enthusiasm and keenness shown by all competitors and looks ahead to a very successful winter track season.

Rooter's Tour Has Quiet Plans

Montreal, Nov. 7-(CUP)-Vandalism may be vanquished in week-end football rivalry, according to plans published recently in the McGill Daily.

Five Red-and-White horriboned buses will leave Friday night overflowing with fans for Saturday's McGill-Varsity football game. Sociability will be the keynote as McGill supporters breakfast Saturday at Whitney Hall and Hart House alongside Varsity-ites. Following breakfast, the visitors will be taken on a conducted tour of the Toronto campus.

McGill will rally on the campus early Saturday afternoon, snake dance to the stadium, and dance in the evening.

SENIOR INTERCOLLEGIATE SOCCER GAME

Varsity vs. McMaster 12 noon Saturday

Grid Star Assists Coach Stevens Coulter Famous With Blues

Among the many new faces seen on the University of Toronto campus this year, there is a familiar one in the person of Mr. J. R. Coulter. Yes, Bobby Coulter is back again at college where his athletic accomplishments made him one of the most well known football men in the history of the Blue and white.

Fans remember Bob playing football at Runnymede Collegiate as a dashing halfback in the Toronto High School League. In the fall of 1932, they found him sparking the Varsity Junior Football Team to the Intercollegiate Championship and for the first time since 1908, the Dominion crown.

The next year, Varsity, with Coulter and Sinclair playing Senior, won the Intercollegiate title. 1934 was a big year for the half-now-turned-quarterback Coulter, as he was adjudged the worthiest member of the Senior Football Team and awarded the Copp Memorial Trophy in the first year the trophy was up for competition. The following year saw a vast array of excellent football talent at the University and we quote the Torontonensis, "One of the finest teams the gridiron has ever produced a formidable outfit" Bobby captained this team and his teammates will always be remembered whenever Varsity football is mentioned. Remember, Hughie Marks, Joe Gray, Gus Greco, Al Williams and Bob Isbister?

This was Bob's last fling at college football as he graduated from Arts and the following year was under Lou Haymen with Toronto Argonauts. Next year, he started his teaching career at North Toronto Collegiate and also coached the Varsity Intermediate Football Team. With Coulter as their football professor, North Toronto Seniors won the City High School Football crown in the fall of '41. As popular at the North Toronto school of learning as a teacher, as he was as a student at Varsity, he earned himself the title of "a pupil" teacher, a real fellow."

In 1942, he left school and donned officers' blue as P.O. Coulter in the R.C.A.F. Commissioned as a Physical Training and Drill Instructor, Bob became rather restless and after a short remuster and training period appeared with pilot's wings. Football could not be forgotten however, and we find him quarterbacking the R.C.A.F. entry from Uplands in the Ottawa City League. Lou Hayman's Dominion Champion R.C.A.F. Hurricanes eliminated Uplands in a hard fought tussle by four points, if memory holds correct. Last year Bob did double duty as coach and player with the Hagersville football squad in the Armed Services League.

This spring with his air force duties talent at the University and we quote the Torontonensis, "One of the finest teams the gridiron has ever produced a formidable outfit" Bobby captained this team and his teammates will always be remembered whenever Varsity football is mentioned. Remember, Hughie Marks, Joe Gray, Gus Greco, Al Williams and Bob Isbister?

Owing to the installation ceremonies for President Sidney Smith there will be no record hour today.

Campus Chorus Downs Vandalism

Canadian Campus comes back with an emphatic, "NO" this week in answer to the charge that School Spirit has forgotten its manners during its six-years retirement and threatens to become vandalism. Two columns ago Canadian Campus reported Intercollegiate Sport is back; back with all the trimmings, songs, yells, parties and school spirit, but a school spirit which in some cases forgot the limits of good taste. "How far should school spirit go," the Canadian Universities were asked, "and when does it become vandalism?" Here is the answer.

From east to west university students agree that limits must be set to manifestations of school spirit. Student demonstrations of college loyalty, no matter how enthusiastic, must not extend to the destruction of property. When this happens, all reports agree that school spirit is no longer schools spirit but has become vandalism. Everyone has a good word to say for school spirit as such: it is an indispensable part of college life. The University of Montreal says, "it is the base on which student activities are built."

"School spirit," says the University of Manitoba, "should go just so far and no farther. When demonstrations cause damage to property, and annoyance to bystanders they should cease, because while still school spirit it becomes a reflection on the school. There is a time and place for everything. Students have every right to pride in the institution they attend, but fences pulled down and a defenceless public kept from sleep, there school spirit should stop."

The University of New Brunswick reports, "UNB, like many universities, has a particular arch-rival, and we consider burning the effigy of Mount Allison, snake dances, torch parades sufficient demonstration of our defiance. There is no genuine hard feeling or thought of vandalism or violence. As a matter of fact we like our enemy."

College loyalty has a claim on the student and, "in the case of someone slandering his college a student should be prepared to fight to defend it; but to destroy property is going a little too far," comes from Mount Allison University. They add: "College spirit absolutely should not run to vandalism, when it does it becomes dangerous and destructive rather than something of which a college should be proud."

Student opinion agrees with the view that vandalism is usually the work of an irresponsible few who have no real school spirit. As McGill University observes, "vandalism is a love of destruction for destruction's sake, in it there is no thought of school, spirit of school, A McGill freshman gave the final word on the subject. When asked his opinion, he hugged the female questioner, and said, "That is school spirit, any more would be vandalism."

Fuel Fire In Lab Damages Western

London, Ont., Nov. 8—(CUP)—Extensive damage resulted from the outbreak of a fuel fire in the geology laboratory at the University of Western Ontario, Wednesday. Prof. C. Harold Reavely, head of the department, prevented a serious explosion by closing off the room and smothering the fire.

Fuel oil drippings from overhanging lines were ignited when a student set a white hot crucible in some of the oil. Flames flared endangering a demonstrator and four students.

Committees Met In August To Plan Installation Doings

By Virginia Fox

"It was left to the rugby team to cause the only disappointment of the week-end," Miss A. E. Parkes, co-ordinating secretary of the committees which arranged the installation of President S. E. Smith, told the Varsity yesterday.

However, she admitted that the team had not been preparing—as the committee had—since August for "Installation week-end."

At the end of the summer the University of Toronto Committee for the Installation of President Smith held its first organizational meeting under the chairmanship of Dean of Arts Beatty.

Work was delegated convention-style to various committees. Dr. Smith himself headed the invitations committee and the committee in charge of the program for Friday's installation and dinner. Dr. W. J. Dunlop arranged Saturday night's reception. Dr. B. Neilly was in charge of the finance committee. J. B. Bickersteth arranged accommodation for visiting representatives and J. R. Gilley headed the dinner committee.

Miss Parkes was given an "installation office" in Hart House and, on a scheme of University lend lease, was assigned two full-time clerks from the extension department.

"What made the work so interesting," Miss Parkes said, "was the fact that an installation of this type has never before been held at the University of Toronto. The program committee had no set precedent to follow on method of installation and procedure."

Sir Robert Falconer was officially installed as president of the University of Toronto. But Dr. Cody never was formally installed. Because of Mrs. Cody's death the official installation ceremony was cancelled.

Details of Dr. Smith's installation, the conferring of the honorary degrees, and

Egyptian Delegate Pays Insulin Debt

What he termed "our debt to this University for the discovery by Sir Frederick Banting of insulin, lead to Dr. M. A. Omar's presence at the installation of Dr. Sidney Smith on Friday.

His country, explained the be-zezzed and colorfully-garbed delegate from the University of Cairo, had been riddled by diabetes. Sir Frederick's discovery of a cure had been for them especially meritorious salvation.

A member of the department of pathology, he had flown from Cairo to Washington, D.C., and from there to Toronto to attend the installation.

Cairo students publish a six-page weekly paper in Arabic, he said. Instruction in scientific subjects is all carried on in English.

"A few subjects," he gestured expressively with his hands, "are taught in Arabic."

Students Remember Fallen Heroes In Quiet Saturday Morning Service

The Memorial Cloister, inscribed with the names of the University's 670 fallen in World War I and dominated by the Soldier's Tower reaching into a chilly grey sky, formed a background for the University's annual Remembrance Day Service, conducted Saturday morning by Chancellor H. J. Cody.

A light crowd attended, along with the McGill and Varsity bands. A small guard of honor, arms reversed and heads bowed, mourned on behalf of Navy and Army their fallen comrades in arms.

After an opening hymn and prayer, Dr. Cody read the names of 127 students and graduates killed in the last year of the war, while a cold breeze sent the last remaining leaves scurrying across the campus.

Five buglers sounded the Last Post, and the crowd observed the traditional two minutes' silence.

Wreaths were then laid by His Excellency the Hon. Thibaudeau Rinfret, representing the Dominion of Canada; by a representative of the Province of Ontario; by President Sidney Smith for representatives of the University College of the University of Toronto; and by Alumni, the Victoria College Alumni, the Faculty of Dentistry, the undergraduates of the University, and the Women's Auxiliary of the RCAMC.

Finally the benediction and the Carillon booming "The Blue and White" recalled the mourners to the problems of the present.

PRESIDENT SIDNEY SMITH INSTALLED

Blues Falter In Second Half; Vanquished By Redmen 13-6

The hitherto winless McGill Redmen stunned the Varsity Blues and some 10,000 football fans at Varsity Stadium Saturday afternoon by coming from behind with a spirited second half drive to cop a 13-6 victory in the final game of the intercollegiate schedule.

The loss left the Blues in a third place tie with the Redmen while Queen's ended up in the second slot by dropping a 17-2 decision to the undefeated league leaders, Western.

While the game was a drab affair with numerous fumbles and incomplete passes, it was a brilliant display of the finer points of the game—an onside kick, an intercepted pass behind the defending goal line and a touchdown on a kick recovered by the kicker.

After McGill had opened the scoring early in the second quarter, the Blues drove downfield from their 30. A Lawson-Lawson pass placed the ball on the centre stripe and after another first down plunging by Scott and Lawson, a Lawson-Cranham pass placed the ball on the 21. After two fruitless attempts came Scott's onside kick which Lawson received on the two. He plunged over for the major which Scott converted.

Halftime score was Varsity 6, McGill 1.

Varsity opened the second half with a brilliant running and passing display which twice placed them inside the McGill 15 yard line. On both occasions, however, Murray Hayes intercepted forwards to pull his team out of danger.

Two passes by Earl Smith clicked for the first McGill touchdown. The Sumnerskill pass left the ball on the 15 while Smythe completed his across the line. Bartlett converted to make the score 7-6 for McGill.

Atomic Control Is Theme Of Installation Speakers

EIGHTH PRESIDENT SINCE 1827

By Wally Belfry

Education's control of atomic power dominated the three major addresses at the installation of Dr. Sidney Earle Smith as President of the University of Toronto Friday afternoon at Convocation Hall.

The actual installation was effected by the disrobing of Dr. Smith by University College Principal Taylor, Dean Gallie of the Faculty of Medicine, and Dean Young of Applied Science and Engineering. The academic gown was removed from Dr. Smith's shoulders by one faculty member and the other members aided him in donning the official blue and silver presidential gown.

Pictured above is the Administrator of the Government of Canada, His Excellency the Hon. Thibaudeau Rinfret, chatting with Chancellor Cody before Friday's installation ceremonies. Originally invited in his capacity as Chief Justice of Canada to represent the Bench in honor of President Smith's legal attainments, M. Rinfret was meanwhile elevated to the Administratorship with the departure from Canada of the Governor-General.

The President then repeated after Chairman of the Board of Governors, Col. Eric Phillips, the declaration of installation: "I, Sidney Earle Smith, pledge myself to perform the duties of the President of the University of Toronto as prescribed by the statutes of the University; and I promise to defend the rights and to promote the welfare of the University and the members thereof."

Welcoming the President, Dean of Arts Beatty hoped he "would not set out to be the perfect president," but rather that his mistakes would serve to guide his path.

The President then delivered his installation address.

The six recipients of the Degree of Doctor of Laws (honoris causa) were: J. D. Cockcroft, University of Cambridge; J. B. Conant, President of Harvard University; The Honorable G. A. Drew, Prime Minister of Ontario; F. C. James, Principal of McGill University; N. A. M. MacKenzie, President of the University of British Columbia; and the Reverend J. S. Thomson, President of the University of Saskatchewan and the National Conference of Canadian Universities.

In the capacity of Minister of Education, Prime Minister Drew expressed anxiety for the control of atomic power, saying "I do not believe the answer can be found in statutory measures of military control." He believed rather that the answer lay in the field of education, pointing out that they had in their midst two men who had much to do with the

Highlights From Dr. Smith's Address Stress Dangers Of Professionalism

Following are excerpted highlights from Dr. Sidney E. Smith's installation address of Friday afternoon.

"Will universities train a corps-d'élite for the Battle of Ideas? Not if they are to be mainly concerned with the training of men and women for vocations and professions."

"There are ideals which are not relative to time or place. The physical scientist puts forward hypotheses whose validity depends on the constant presence of certain factors. In a naturalistic mood, we have carried over into our study of man's relations with his fellow men and with his God this attitude of relativity."

"May it be suggested that an adoption by some Arts departments of the so-called scientific method of the physicist, who works with pointer readings on a mathematically-graduated scale, has obscured the humanity of the humanities and discounted the social aspects of the social sciences?"

"I would inquire further: Are not the Arts faculties in some instances concerned with professional or quasi-professional objectives to the detriment of their major mission of developing students who will be defenders of human freedom, examples of human dignity, and apostles of human values?"

"We should not concede without extreme caution the pressing claims of those who would place at the undergraduate level new professional or quasi-professional courses. If such offerings merit recognition by universities, they should be placed in the post-baccalaureate field."

Every Footstep Is Plotted By His Excellency's Aides

A time buffer of three hours remained between the feverish group in the Registrar's office and the beginning of the installation of Dr. Sidney Smith.

"And," Mr. Fennell suggested, "we will run over this afternoon's program with regard to his Excellency the Administrator. You," he said, turning to Kenneth Campbell, secretary to Chief Justice Rinfret, "will be looking after Madame Rinfret. And you, Captain Sherwood, will see that His Excellency is well acquainted with the situation." The Navy man in the gold braid acknowledged the assignment.

The party of aides de camp and the Registrar proceeded to the Chancellor's door for superficial examination there. Entering, they discussed coat hanger requirements and a mirror for the ladies. "Better safe than sorry," someone offered, and the need for a mirror was noted.

Next was mapped out the route from the Chancellor's room to Convocation Hall. Detective Sergeant Mumberson of the city police came forward to request an inconspicuous point of vantage in the Hall. He and an aide, Mr. Mackey, were in charge of the safety party. But their problems, they said, were mostly traffic ones.

The party moved towards Hart House to rehearse the Saturday morning plans.

Positions were worked out. Mr. Campbell was shown where Madame Rinfret would stand, Captain Sherwood saw the wreath and where he would go from there.

"Now let's go back to Friday evening if that's settled," said the Registrar. He lead the group to the south west door of Hart House and paused before entering.

"The President and the Warden will meet you here," he told his Excellency's aides.

The Administrator was to see Saturday's rugby game. T. A. Reed joined the party at Hart House to chart that course as the party moved on to the stadium.

Distance from Administrator's car to the box was paced carefully and a path chosen. Where his car was to be parked provoked a few minutes heated debate. "We must anticipate every contingency," murmured Mr. Campbell as he asked that some seats be saved under the roof. It might rain, he thought. This mention of seats focussed attention upon the Administrator's box. Mr. Reed hastily remarked that new seats were going to be put in.

Postponing inspection of the Museum until later, the party drove off in search of lunch.

could fall on the ball, this same Greenberg fell on the loose object for the major. Bartlett missed the convert but added a single later in the game as Scott conceded a rouse.

The man of the hour for the Blues was Mel Lawson who arose from a sick bed to dress for the game. He then proceeded to play a magnificent game at quarter with lengthy plunges. To top it off, he tossed the major part of 27 passes.

Bill Lawrence was carried off the field in the early moments of the game and was rushed to a hospital.

Colin Cranham heralded his return to uniform with a bang-up performance. His plunging and running were among the few highlights of the game as far as the Blues were concerned. Al Jacobs and Stu Scott also came in for some brilliant but spotty play.

Al Scott, Wil Henry and Gord Lawson carried the load for the line.

For the Redmen, Murray Hayes and Dave Greenberg were the power boys. Time and again they came through with sensational plays that brought the crowd to its feet. Johnny Hall and Earl Smith also proved to be more than capable of matching anything the Blues had to offer.

Along the McGill line, Pennyfather, Gus Summerskill, Tom Bridel and Bill Smythe stood out.

development of the atomic bomb, President Conant and Professor Cockcroft.

Second speaker on behalf of those who received degrees, President Conant was equally impressed with the horrors of the split atom. The solution he offered: "We must make the United Nations Organization succeed, for it presents, to my mind, the only workable solution. To that end the academic members on both sides of the Unarmed Border must join hands and work together as if still at war."

Presiding Chancellor Dr. Cody having dismissed the convocation, the colorful procession filed out to the strains of the "Blue and White".

Speaking OF SPORT

By Mickey Michasiw

The Moaners and Groaners . .

We spent all of Saturday afternoon and evening among the most vociferous aggregation of moaners and groaners ever gathered together. It left us wondering whether beef was off the rationed list.

"Watta bunch of stinkers . . . tackle like a bunch of old women . . . see that? . . . Couldn't hold a pass if it were handed to 'em . . . what happened to the Seeing Eye Dogs these guys use? . . . Stevens had better put on a uniform himself . . . aw nuts . . . who left the door of the Old Men's Home open? . . . aw nuts . . ."

On and on they rambled, through the second half, through the immediate post-game era and through the entire evening. These elevating barnyard observers left us as completely cold as a post mortem should.

Posthumous comments are better left alone as only feelings are hurt and little good is ever accomplished. We have but three things to say regarding Saturday's game.

First: The general feeling of the student body was of keen disappointment at the completion of the game. The general thought was: "Were the Redmen that good or were we that bad?"

Second: The Blues played under extreme difficulty. Woodyatt, Farmer and Henry were out because of injuries. Several others were playing under greatest of physical strain. A team not at full strength cannot be expected to give its best.

Third: Then there was the outlook of the two respective coaches. Stevens was quoted as saying, "All I know is that McGill and Christmas are both coming." We tackled Doug Kerr after the game and amidst the noise of jubilation, he informed us that he had drilled his team in pass defense for the entire week. He claimed that Gord Lawson was a marked man from the time he first stepped onto the gridiron. If this were so, it partially accounts for the fact that the Blues completed but four passes of 27 attempts.

The point suggests that Kerr knew who was on the Varsity team and went out to stop what he considered the main threats. Perhaps Stevens did the same but that conclusion cannot be drawn from his press statements.

From reliable sources we also learned that Kerr had more at stake than a mere game. For Kerr it was not just another game in which he could experiment with plays and players for next season when the chips will really be down. These sources claim that the wolves at McGill had been howling for Kerr's scalp and that he was forced to win Saturday's game or face the consequences. Perhaps that was where that extra McGill fight came from.

But let sleeping dogs lie! The season is over. The Blues won one game and lost three. McGill won the game going away and no excuses. It wasn't the "breaks" as one of the players so aptly put it. Breaks are made by a team and don't just come about as so many would have one believe.

One consolation, though. Two decisions over McGill; the cheerleaders and the band—in spite of the trombones which were referred to by some uncouth, inebriated citizen as "They stink."

Ending Another Season

The last week of baseball has rolled around, just in time to miss the snow. St. Hilda's captured the Group II title, after winning two out of three games with the Meds team. They will play the winner of Group I after Vic and P.H.E. II decide on Tuesday which is the better of the two. The play-off of Group I should be the most interesting game of the season, as both teams have lost but two games each . . . Vic lost to the two P.H.E. teams, while P.H.E. lost one game to Vic, and the other by default. With such evenly matched experts on the field, the Tuesday game should be well worth the attention of all students free at 12:30, and close to Trinity Field.

Glancing over last week's sports, the basketball picture has not yet been fully developed. The last game was played on Wednesday, as the Thursday and Friday games were postponed. It has been found impossible to give readers an account of the games played the previous night, as the last game ends too late to flash the news onto the press . . . thus we are forced to print the data a day late.

Vic seniors won the game from St. Hilda's seniors with a score of 26-8, the notable action being Vic's guard line and their passing, along with remarkably few fouls. P.H.E. IIB defeated Vic. Jr. in a game hampered by inexperience. The third game, between the Dental Nurses and the P.H.E. freshmen, was an all-round good game, with the latter team in the lead due chiefly to a good forward line. The last combination to use the floor were P.H.E. Juniors and U.C. Juniors. Reports have it that the players in this game operated at a high rate of speed, ending with the first team the winners — 22-9.

Football, Protocol Mingled As Dignitaries Watch Game

Protocol and diplomatic courtesies were involved in the closing of the inter-collegiate football season here on Saturday as McGill met Varsity under the eyes of His Excellency the Hon. Thibaud Rinfret, Administrator of the Government of Canada; Presidents James and Smith; and other dignitaries. M. Rinfret represented the King in the absence of the Governor-General.

At 2:25 the cars of the Administrator and his aides entered the stadium. His Excellency, escorted by police and aides, was welcomed by President T. R. Loudon of the Men's Athletic Association, who accompanied him to his seat in Box I, Section C.

As soon as the Administrator reached his box, the Union Jack was run up on the stadium staff, the Varsity band played "God Save the King," and McGill kicked the ball to Toronto.

At half-time the dignitaries were treated to a demonstration of marching by the McGill and Toronto bands. As a climax the red and blue bands drew up together before the official box and each one played its University song. Finally the U. of T. Pipe Band marched past the stands, pipes skirling and drums rolling.

The visitors showed keen enjoyment of the game despite increasing coldness of the wind. President Cyril James of McGill looked pleased with the outcome.

Four minutes before the end of the match, the State party went to their cars and left the field, before swarms of spectators could impede their exit.

Soccerites Swamp McMaster; Champs Third Straight Year

The Varsity Soccer team continued on its unbeaten streak, romping to a 6-0 victory in a return match with McMaster at the front campus on Saturday afternoon. Led by Shinobu, with three goals, the Varsity squad took the game with no trouble to clinch the possession of the Blackwood Trophy for the third year running of Intercollegiate Soccer. Varsity won the cup back in 1938 and 1939, the last two years of intercollegiate sport prior to the war.

The Blues opened up the offensive early in the first half, and were in for several good scoring chances in the first fifteen minutes, but were shooting either off or over. Max Clarkson was sent to the hospital with a broken nose, suffered in a collision with a team-mate. After about thirty minutes, Shinobu got his first, on a play neatly set up by Spooner and Willie Clarkson. With about five minutes to go, Shinobu again scored on a pass from Riguero, to make the half-time score 2-0 for Varsity.

Early in the second half, Eaton took a shot from the far right, and was credited with a goal on a deflection off one of the Mac backs. Mayne made it 4-0 when he netted the ball from the centre position directly in front of the McMaster goal. Late in the half, Riguero countered, Shinobu setting up the play, and Shinobu came in unassisted for the final goal.

McMaster's fullbacks, Stasiuk and Checkland, bore the brunt of their team's attack, but once they got the play out of their end into the Varsity zone, all evidence of organized attack was lost.

On the other hand, Varsity showed the advantages of thorough coaching as to team play, seldom miscueing on their forward attacks. Shinobu, Riguero and Eaton sparked the Varsity attack, while Elliott turned in his usual stellar shut-out performance in goal.

In five starts, the Blues have won four and tied one. Next week's game in London will not change the team's standing, as they have already gained more points than any other team can. In the five games, Varsity has been scored on in only two of them, with a total of three goals against.

of Science; the National Research Council was represented by Pres. C. J. Mackenzie, and the Guggenheim and Rockefeller Foundations by Prof. D. G. Creighton and Dr. W. A. McIntosh respectively.

The National University of Mexico was represented by one of its graduates, His excellency, Dr. Francisco del Rio y Canada, Mexican ambassador to Canada, who came from Ottawa for Dr. Smith's installation.

Among the 150 guests were Dr. M. A. Omar of the University of Cairo, Lieut.-Col. Leslie W. Le Souef of the University of Western Australia, Dr. Alberto de Moraes Cerveira and Dr. Antonio de Sousa Pereira of Portugal's University of Oporto; Dr. P. R. Viljoen of the University of Cape Town; and Prof. K. Digby of the University of Hong Kong.

The visiting representatives were entertained at dinner in Hart House's Great Hall on Friday night. Each table seated 24, and the faculty and college deans with their wives acted as hosts and hostesses for the guests.

"Comments on the excellence of the appointments and the dinner were made by everyone," said Miss Parkes. "Spotlights played on candlelit tables and the blue and white chrysanthemums. Especially effective were the royal blue doilies on which were embossed gold University of Toronto crests. The girls on the dietitian's staff made these by hand."

"Uncertainty with regard to the number of delegates imposed limitations on the invitation list for Saturday night's reception," said Miss Parkes. "For this reason we could only ask staff members of professional rank to be present."

Formal Banquet Caps Installation

President Sidney Smith was honored with a banquet attended by representatives from universities all over the world, on Friday evening in the Great Hall of Hart House.

The speakers who addressed the assembly after the dinner were introduced by Chancellor H. J. Cody, chairman of the proceedings. Chief Justice Rinfret, Administrator of the Dominion in the absence of the Governor-General, brought greetings from the legal profession, from the Supreme Court, and from Ottawa. "I have always looked upon law as the great medium of unity in this country. Law does its best to be based on truth and truth of necessity is one."

Mr. E. S. Kirkland, President of the Students' Administrative Council, stressed the difficulty under which the President will have to work.

The alumni were represented by Dr. E. J. Clifford who welcomed Dr. Smith as president of the university and promised the support of the Alumni Federation.

As a graduate of the University of Toronto, and as the representative of McGill, Dr. F. Cyril James said that the job of President is to smooth out the road of the affairs of the university. "Universities must do more than others outside do to shape the future of the country."

The delegate from the University of Montreal, Dr. Léon Lortie, welcomed Dr. Smith on behalf of the French-Canadian students.

Dr. J. D. Cockcroft of Cambridge University said that he believed more of his colleagues should cross to see Canada and its universities. "We should try to resume the east-west exchange of research students as soon as possible."

Speaking in behalf of all the universities in Canada, Dr. J. S. Thomson, president of the National Conference of Canadian Universities, said, "The University of Toronto has the greatest school of graduate studies in the Dominion. I hope that in these great formative years ahead the universities will recognize their responsibilities and expand their graduate facilities."

New and Entrenous

The Weekend ---

The Council member marvelled at President Smith isn't the man to let McGill colors be flaunted in his face at a football game, even when a member of his own Board of Governors is doing the flaunting.

At half-time Saturday, cries of "Pull them off!" heralded a gleeful tussle in the presidential box. One of the Governors, a McGill alumnus, wore red and white ribbons streaming from his lapel. Egged on by exuberant dignitaries, before the eyes of delighted spectators, President Smith pulled them off.

Miss A. E. M. Parke's uncanny memory for names as she blithely introduced him to a pair of installation delegates in Examination Hall immediately before the ceremony.

"I'd like you to meet," she told the awe-struck student, "Dr. William Leach of the University of Birmingham and Mr. Anders Bronn Skuggevik of the Norwegian Technical High School at Trondheim."

"This," she explained to the visitors, "is — is — oh, good heavens, I've forgotten your name."

Presidents of Universities, observed Dr. J. S. Thomson, himself one (Alberta), during the installation dinner Friday evening, are like barbers. They must feign omniscience on so many different subjects while praying that no one of their listeners will discern their actual ignorance.

"A major disaster has occurred," Miss Parkes announced with great anxiety a few moments before the installation procession was to enter Convocation Hall. "Dr. Willan has no music for 'The Blue and White'."

"Would you," she asked of S.A.C. member Gord McCaffrey, "mind terribly running back to the S.A.C. office and looking for another copy?"

"Not at all," McCaffrey agreed.

Five minutes later he had returned and had thrust into Miss Parkes' hands a music folio which, when opened, revealed that "The Blue and White" had been torn out. Miss Parkes herself set out then to the office to search for yet another copy of the song while the long-planned installation began. Dr. Willan had his music when the time came.

"This hat," explained Dr. Leach of Birmingham University, referring to a triangular, velvet beret he wore, "has the distinction of having been worn by Henry VIII. You've seen him wearing it in pictures perhaps?"

"The same hat?" wondered Mr. Skuggevik of Norwegian High School, eyeing the chapeau with reverence and curiosity.

"No," chuckled Dr. Leach. "One like it."

Deafening ripperty-ripperty's oozed out onto the ozone Saturday evening as enthusiastic Varsity supporters repeatedly chorused Toronto's yell during a CBC remote dance pick-up at the Queensway Ballroom, scene of Saturday evening's monster rugby celebration.

INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT OIL

PAGES FROM AN OIL DRILLER'S "LOG" TELL

The Story of a Failure

March 24th, 1943, "spudding in"... a big day for the drilling crew. 136-foot derrick completed, we started drilling Imperial Oil's "Royalite Wildcat Hills Well No. 1"—due north of Calgary-Banff highway, 35 miles from Calgary. Hoping for a real "strike"... geologists' survey indicates favorable oil structure at about 7,000 to 9,000 feet.

Trouble 719 feet down! Lost drill collar¹ in the hole. Might have been bad—but recovered collar and repaired break in drill shaft in 3 hours. Everybody breathed a big sigh of relief—sometimes this kind of accident sets us back days.

Another lucky break! Drill pipe "washed out" and twisted off at 775 feet. Luckily we got going once more in two hours. Using up plenty of drills on this hard rock. It's no easy job—pulling up hundreds of feet of pipe just to change a dull "bit"² then lowering the whole "string" again.

The geologists were wrong. Now drilling 2 miles underground, and these have been trying, disappointing months. Nature can fool the geologists. On this well, for instance, we expected to hit the formation we hoped would contain oil before this. Instead, one bad "fault"³ after another—quite unexpected. On top of all that—got stuck in hole at 10,676 feet, taking eleven days to fish up drill pipes and repair.

"Fishing" again for 12 days. Stalled again at 10,688 feet—lost 12 days drilling out stuck tubing. But we still have hopes... a "strike" will pay back all the months of hard work and money invested.

April 21st, 1944, well abandoned—"Dry Hole". A black day for all of us. After 13 months' hard drilling, we struck salt water. Wet as salt water is, it's still the oil man's Nemesis—a "dry hole" that produces no oil. So we plugged the well⁴ at 11,155 feet down and abandoned it—a grave two miles deep for all our hopes of "Wildcat Hills No. 1."

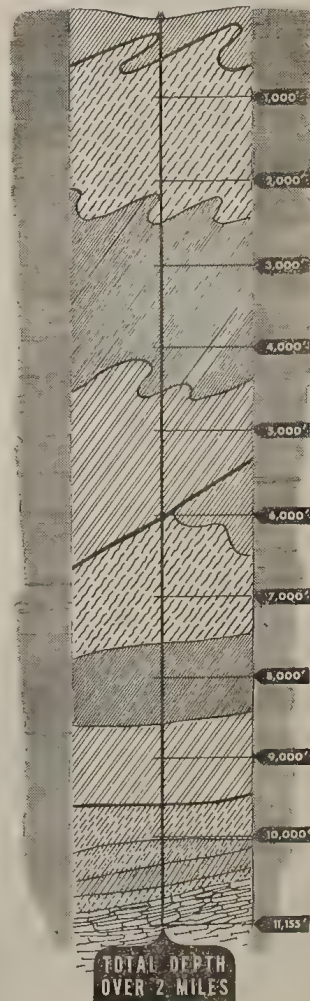

1—Collar supports drill in underground hole.

2—More than 400 drilling bits were used in sinking the well.

3—A "fault" is a break in the earth's structure—a dislocation of the rock formation.

4—Cement plugs are inserted in the hole as required.

The facts in this record are taken from the drilling log of Imperial's "Wildcat Hills Well No. 1", which was begun on the favorable recommendation of Canada's leading oil geologists, who had explored the ground thoroughly. Estimated to cost $225,000. for drilling, it actually cost approximately $340,000. from start to "dry hole" finish. But the drillers and geologists of Imperial Oil go on undiscouraged—because they know that in opening up Canada's promising oil fields they add much to the nation's wealth... and help to make Canada ever more independent of foreign sources of the petroleum so indispensable to the life of our country and every one of its individual citizens.

Blues Look To Next Year Stevens Sees Snappy Set-up

RUGBY REMINISCENCES

By Jerry Ewins

Saturday's game meant the end of Intercollegiate rugby for this year as far as actual combat was concerned, but plans are already underway for next season's team in the minds of players and coaches alike. The past few games were experiments in experience, giving Varsity's Mr. Stevens definite ideas of what his men can and will do for him in games to come.

The psychological end of the season came in London, and as a result the boys of the Blues took McGill too lightly and were largely beaten by their own mental attitude. The answer may lie in the over-estimation of the ability of the team as a whole, but the thing that stood out on Saturday was the lack of experience in stiff competition.

A coach bases his selections for spots on his team on what he sees a man do in actual competition. Next fall the team will get to work early—likely around September 9—and when McGill troops into Toronto on the fifth of October a wide-awake and capable squad will give them a hot reception.

Next year's Blues will definitely challenge the other Toronto teams in the City Series if the various schedules permit, but, even though the Yates Cup will be at stake, the winning team will not continue into the Grey Cup C.R.U. playdowns, as this process is clearly vetoed in the Intercollegiate constitution. Toronto will field an Intermediate entry in the league with O.A.C., Western, and McMaster, and a freshman team is also in the wind, if the much talked of City Junior League finally functions next fall. The other teams in this group will probably be Argonauts, and Balmy Beach Juniors, plus a Kiwanis entry.

This year's team had the old injury jinx dogging its footsteps at every turn.

U.C. Parliament To Debate Strike

"Resolved that this House would approve a country-wide strike of labor to maintain war-time take-home pay" will be the subject of the U.C. Parliament debate to take place in the Junior Common Room on Tuesday afternoon, at four o'clock.

Alan Porter, IV Poli. Sc., and Anne Levine, II Law, will form the Government. Harry Eastman, III Poli. Sc., and Marguerite Delaney, II Eng. Lang. and Lit., will speak for the Opposition.

A resolution will also be introduced supporting the stand of the Ford Strikers in Windsor.

Advisory Office Settles Veteran's Worries, Woes

"How can I live on $60. a month?"
"Where's my cheque anyway?"
"Where's a good place to get a dress suit?"

Attentively and sympathetically, Mrs. Margery King listens to these and similar questions daily between 10 and 4 as troubled veterans visit the University Advisory Bureau at 67 St. George St. She then refers the ex-service student to an appropriate counsellor—one of a panel of about 20 members of the University staff qualified and able to advise.

The Bureau opened on October 15 and has in the month since interviewed almost a thousand ex-service men and women. Of this figure, 375 were inquiries regarding entrance to the University. Three hundred others were concerned with non-receipt of maintenance grant cheques which were due last week.

Regarding that delay, Mrs. King has one well-rehearsed explanation: The Department of Veterans' Affairs has been overwhelmed by the sudden rush of discharges anxious to use their education benefits; even after the veteran's application has been approved and a letter sent advising him of the fact, there is a two-week lapse before a cheque is sent out by the Treasury; D.V.A. receives daily from the Bureau a list of veterans in urgent need of their cheques and returns a report explaining the delay.

Among the assorted problems to reach the ears of Bureau receptionist, Mrs. King, was one recently to come from a student inquiring about his cheque.

D.V.A. reported that the student had requested that the money be sent to his wife. "But," he cried in alarm, "I am not married!" D.V.A. had provided him with a wife and children. Records have since been adjusted and the bachelor is happy in the possession of a single man's allowance.

Another patron of the Bureau service wanted to know where to get a dress suit. The Bureau provided the information.

Yet another requested the Bureau to raise his $60 maintenance allowance. Although flattered by his opinion of their influence, the Bureau could give him no assurance that such an increase was likely.

Were the ex-servicemen on the campus to keep an itemized account of expenses, Mrs. King agreed, it might illustrate the inadequacy of the present allowance and persuade the government to make certain adjustments.

WILL PROBE INDUSTRIAL STRIKES

Electrical Engineers Meet Praise Microscope Workers

"The five men who first worked on our electron microscope are all in the United States now and they are the top men in the field," said Professor E. F. Burton in his lecture on the development of the electron microscope Friday night. This lecture was given in conjunction with the Toronto Branch of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

In his lecture Professor Burton explained that when it was discovered that light acted like motion it became known that it was impossible to enlarge anything beyond a certain size with a light microscope. This was because there was confusion in the image resulting from interference of the light waves. The limit to which an image could be enlarged depended upon the wave length of the light used.

With the discovery in this century that electrons behave like light, they have a wave motion and the electron beams can be focussed with magnetic and electrostatic lenses, the possibilities of magnification were greatly increased. The wave length of the electrons is much shorter than the wave length of light. As a result confusion does not occur until an enlargement about a hundred times the size of the best possible results with the light microscope is made.

Demonstrating the abilities of the electron microscope, Professor Burton showed the first picture which was taken with the machine in the Physics Building. It was a picture of the edge of a razor blade which made it look like a mountain range. Other slides which he showed were pictures of germs which had never been seen before the development of the electron microscope.

The next lecture of the series will be given by Mr. S.G. Ellis at 8-p.m., in room 43 of the Physics building next Friday. Mr. Ellis who will speak on "The Electron Microscope: Recent Advances" has worked on the machine in the Physics building during the past year and a half.

Fingal Buildings Sold To Western McMaster Plans To Build Memorial

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 12. (CUP)—Construction of Western's new cafeteria, additional classrooms and offices is scheduled to start immediately. With the allocation by the War Assets Corporation of the two "H" shaped buildings, acquired from Fingal Bombing School, plans for the erection of the new buildings have been accelerated.

The new cafeteria will accommodate 50 percent more diners than the present one. Of the four units obtained, three will be used, whereas the fourth will be completely dismantled, and from it, extra furnishings will be obtained. Another kitchen will be added to the cafeteria building, which will not be ready until after Christmas.

HAMILTON, Ont., Nov. 12 (CUP)

A proposal has been placed before the McMaster Student Council that, by means of student endeavour, a memorial be built to honor the men of McMaster who fell in the two Great Wars. The Chancellor has approved this proposal and encourages further action. A temporary committee has been appointed by the council to present the proposal to the student body and obtain their opinion of the tentative suggestions of a swimming pool or stadium, and encourage further ideas.

When the student decision on the memorial has been made, planning, finance, advertising and canvassing committees will be formed.

Nightly Visions Produce 'The Face'

Dreams come true, made public, and setting records make news.

The story-behind-the-story of the largest woman's face ever to appear on a campus poster traces back to the dreams of Dunc Smith, III Law. Weary from working on the U.C. Folies, Dunc found imprinted on his nocturnal cinema the huge letters "UC" and a face—enormous but exquisite. No end would satisfy Dunc but that this nicotine-nurtured Amazon should stop advertising cigarettes and serve the Folies.

Red tape, which stretched from a Toronto college to a Montreal advertising agency, must needs be cut; but the poster's presence in the U.C. rotunda covers that series of incidents. A board of co-ed advisers was formed to supervise the assemblage of the poster's 13 pieces, jig-saw fashion. The nose, eyes, and mouth, it may be said, all wound up where nose, eyes and mouth should wind up.

This professional note does not sound alone. Professional talent rages through all fields of entertainment from Jack Lennon, former dancing instructor with The Army Show, to Ken Peacock, whose orchestra has been scheduled for the King Edward Hotel. Folies advisers have experience with scripts of The Army Show, the Alan Young show, and the Happy Gang. Notable eccentric of the show, Paul Serson, causes awe when he composes music in a cloud of smoke and with the radio blaring distracting melodies.

The third in the current series of journalism lectures dealing with night editing, will be given by a member of the staff of The Varsity in Room 37 of University College at five o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

This lecture is deemed necessary in the light of recent technical difficulties in the production of The Varsity. Further instructions in proof-reading, head-writing and the solving of make-up problems will be dealt with.

It is very important that all those interested in the night-editing phase of the publication of The Varsity attend this lecture.

Scientific Workers Elect Executive

Five Organizations Join Wires Sent Participants

ANSWER OF UNIONS GIVEN

By Bob Marjoribanks

Five campus organizations were represented last night at the first meeting of a committee established to discover and present facts in connection with current industrial strikes. The committee was composed of delegates from the University C.C.F. Club, the University Labor Progressive Club, the Student Christian Movement, the newly-formed Humanist Club and the International Students Club. The delegates were empowered by their respective executives to participate in an impartial investigation into the history of the Ford strike at Windsor and strikes in other parts of Canada and to submit the results of the committee's investigation.

Challenge Offered By Humanist Club

At the meeting of the Humanist Club last week, a challenge was presented to the student body by the statement that, "students, as the better educated minority in very community can make valuable contributions towards solving everyday problems, and should not hesitate to assume their responsibility to society."

To better define the function and interests of the club short talks were given on the philosophy of humanism, "the belief in mankind," the organization and purpose of Community Councils and Cuses; the problem of religious education in schools; and the results of a religious attitude survey on the campus.

I.S.C. Gathering Will Swap Views

Donald Robertson a former Canadian radio announcer will lead a discussion on the Japanese-Canadian situation tomorrow afternoon when The International Student Club meets at Wymilwood at 4-p.m. Students from the foreign countries represented on the campus will then take up the discussion, adding their various views on the problem.

Thelma Kerr, president of the club, pointed out that many foreign representatives have already attended meetings, "Yet" she said, "there are still many who have lived in other countries who have not as yet been introduced to the group; to these, the I.S.C. extends a special welcome, and it also reminds others that the club is not closed to Canadians but rather it is for all students interested in becoming acquainted with the various races and world cultures represented on the campus."

Ethel Klassen, chairman of the committee, disclosed to The Varsity last night that the committee had already begun its investigation. A telegram has been sent to the Ford Motor Company at Windsor requesting that the management wire 200 words to the committee briefly outlining the company's position in the Windsor dispute. A telegram has also been sent to Hon. Humphrey Mitchell, federal Minister of Labor, with a request for information in regard to the position of the government. Similar messages were sent to Murray Cotterill, chairman of the Toronto Ford Strike Committee, and the United Electrical Workers Union which is picketing the Imperial Optical Company.

Late last night the committee on strikes had received replies from Mr. Cotterill and the U.E.W. and expected to receive to-day a communication from Labor Minister Mitchell and the Ford Company.

Mr. Ross Russel, Director of Organization, U.E.W., C.I.O., last night issued the following reply which we quote in part:

"Mr. Sidney Hermant in his capacity as an employer of labor, has refused to obey the laws of this country effecting the democratic rights of his workers to have a trade-union. In addition to declaring this strike we have been forced to open prosecution proceedings.

"By a unanimous recommendation of a federal government conciliation board the union agreement was to have been signed not later than August 1, 1945. Although both parties accepted the board's decision Mr. Hermant later refused to comply.

"A board of conciliation set up by the federal Minister of Labor commenced its hearings into the dispute early in the spring and by July 5, 1945, made a unanimous report containing a full union agreement which was to be signed not later than August 1.

Offers Free Publicity Boot Cobbler Refuses

Someone had suggested that the cobbler would make a story.

The reporter agreed.

The reporter, shy, and in search of an "open sesame" at the shoemaker's shop, examined his own footwear, selected two pair of shoes and one slipper in need of repair, and set out.

He entered the Harbord Street establishment known as "Shoe Repairs", deposited his footwear on the counter and waited while the old cobbler scrutinized the collection.

"For three heels, one slipper repair and three half soles," he decided at length, "four dollars and twenty-five cents." Quickly he grabbed the shoes and placed them on a shelf behind him, then turned and gazed with finality at the reporter.

Never or now, mused the reporter.

"I'm from The Varsity," he explained. The shoemaker looked quizzical and dissatisfied at this break from the ritual. "That's the campus newspaper. It's published on the campus for the students and the feature editor thought, well, that perhaps we could write a story about you. You know, your business and you! How you've been here for thirty years and what you've been seeing. He thought, that perhaps you would—"

"How much will it cost me?"

"Oh, nothing. Not a cent. We just want some of your experiences, yes, experiences, with students and their shoes."

"Ah yes," he said, reaching for a long sabre and, to the reporter's relief, slicing up some leather. "Ah yes. But I will pay no money."

"Oh no! We don't want you to advertise. Just to talk about your life here in the cobbler's shop. That's all."

"But I have no time to read."

"What?" the reporter queried desparately, "has that got to do with it?"

The cobbler gave a glance of understanding pity and repeated, "I do not read." He turned his back and concentrated on a sole.

As someone had suggested, the cobbler might have made a story.

Letting Things Slip

"Don't," said the third-year man puffing his way around Hart House running track, "let things slip in your first couple of years of college. Don't, whatever else you do, let your Physical Training credits lag." The student in question went on to confide how he had deemed other things than P.T. of top rank priority, how he had failed to get the required number of credits. He regretted his lack of foresight.

That is but one rather pathetic example of what can happen to students who lose their perspective early in their college careers. There are—and even the athletic directors would admit this—other activities than P.T. in the University of Toronto. There are more important activities. But there are also activities as P.T., which have their place, and are put in that place for a definite purpose. Likewise there are lectures, essay assignments, course bibliographies, and many extracurricular cultural pursuits. Lectures, essays, and background reading are almost as easily let slip as is P.T. Neither they nor P.T. should be neglected.

Incubator of Laziness

To proceed from the particular to the general along this line of thought, the point can be made that it is bad business to develop the easily acquired habit of letting things slide. Life on the campus seems specially conducive to the development of such habits. The University, carrying on its daily routine in evident obliviousness to the presence or absence of any one or any half dozen students, is much too efficient an incubator of laziness and indifference to obligation. Such laziness, unfortunately, seems to require little enough encouragement to emerge from its nascent state. The student who submits to the late-rising, midmorning breakfasting, afternoon coffee-drinking routine is in grave danger of doing himself a lasting disservice.

No Compulsion

The University can scarcely be blamed for failing to operate on a compulsory attendance basis—some departments do within limits, and these are generally resented by the student body. The University would, indeed, be failing in its function of preparing students for useful citizenship if it should resort to enforced attendance in all courses. It would be deferring the day when young men and women could no longer put on other shoulders the weight of making decisions. There is seldom anything akin to compulsory attendance in any position of responsibility likely to be met upon graduation from the university. So the university helps to prepare the student by saying simply to him or to her: "It's up to you."

The question remains, however, whether the students at large are up to it. They should be ready to assume at least that small measure of responsibility for their own welfare that is involved in getting up in the morning, without the assistance of a dozing mother, an affectionate young family pup, or a sergeant-major, neither doing nor affectionate. They should, likewise, be capable of developing and enforcing sufficient self-discipline to guarantee covering a course between September and April. That's surely not asking too much, although it is a beginning.

Further Danger

But the danger in the university system seems not to lie only in its demand for a measure of self-discipline in the student. It is to be found also in the element of discrimination and judgment required of the student in picking and choosing among the manifold activities offered and in allocating to those chosen a time-priority commensurate with their respective importance to the individual concerned. That takes a good deal of perspective, and is difficult in proportion. Again, however, it is a miniature of the problem to be met upon graduation; and, again, in its peril lies its value to the student.

The admonition of that third-year student, weary and contrite in his blue gym shorts, is one that might well be taken to heart by others who may be tempted to dodge this or that undergraduate obligation, whether they think it smart or wise so to do. "Don't," he puffed, "let things slip!"

"There's The Bell"

Anticipating that someone is going to be fooled by the fact that Bing Crosby produced it, R. L. G., one of this department's reviewers, has returned from "The Great John L." at the Uptown with the advice: "Don't let the fact that Bing Crosby produced it fool you."

Having called to this bit of Hollywood deceit, R.L.G. in a fury of exposed defames "The Great John L." as "just another product churned out of the Hollywood biography mills."

From said mills have emerged this season such assorted personalities as Texas Guinan, George Gershwin, Frederick Chopin et al, et joe, et sam. And now Mr. Sullivan, a man who might have lived as Hollywood fancies he did, had not been so busy fighting.

"The Great John L." we gather from R.L.G., wanders rather deliberately from fact. The story of the Boston Strong Boy, if you'll pardon us and, please, let us exonerate R.L.G., does not ring true.

For purposes of alleged palatability, the plot disregards his so-factual gloves, and concentrates on his semi-fictional loves.

(Memo to Research Ed: Find out if Sullivan wore boxing gloves.)

John L.'s mercurial love affairs are ominous. Destiny directs the boxer to drink. But Sullivan, stalwart lad that he was, pulls himself together in time for a last-reel temperance lecture, recovers one of his ladies who has seemingly been dazzled by the brilliance of Sullivan's newly-polished halo.

Greg McLure, we see by R.L.G.'s report, is "extremely convincing in the title role." Misses Barbara Britton and Linda Darnell, he says, "leave nothing to be desired."

Art, Music and Drama

Chronicle Combat

In commissioning a number of prominent Canadian artists to go with the forces and make a record of Canada's war effort, the government of Canada gave these men an women a glorious chance to demonstrate whether or not art really is a vital part of contemporary life. The majority answered in a brilliant affirmative; a few in rather dismal negatives. Examples of both results are at present to be seen in the Hart House Exhibition of War Artists.

A most noteworthy feature of the exhibition seems to me to be its demonstration of the marked superiority of watercolors to oils in recording the vivid action and kaleidoscopic drama of war. Almost without exception, the oils on the south wall appeared dull and lifeless, by contrast with the sparkling spontaneity of the watercolors on exhibition opposite them. The oils were posed and stiff creations; the watercolors had that verve and freshness as coming from on-the-spot creation.

A clear demonstration is provided here of the contributions abstractions and non-objectivism have to make to representational art. These painters were all given a specific task—namely, to communicate to the home population and posterity knowledge about combat conditions, for which purpose they were sent right to the scenes for action. A very few produced almost photographic transcriptions of what they saw. The bulk of production—and herein lies the permanent worth of the war artists' record, as distinct from the photographic record—used abstract values of line and color to enhance representation, and created chronicles with pure aesthetic as well as historical value—i. e., appealing editors the student newspaper would undoubtedly catalogue with monotonous precision the weather for the past week on page one and stock market reports for the past month on page four: with Ford Motor Company advertisements on pages two and three!

The Varsity is by no means perfect from it. But in my opinion the supposed attack on its editorial staff last week was a clear case of deceitfully "Putting the accent on the wrong syllable." And I can hardly find solace, finally, in the meek apology given by the editor-in-chief who on even less deserving occasions has certainly been able to take good care of The Varsity and of himself. NOEL CHAPMAN to the associated as well as to the purely aesthetic emotions, as all true works of art should do. Only a few works fell into the error of abstraction to the point of blurring or distortion of facts—legitimate in certain phases of art, but not for war chronicling.

The water colors, and especially the three striking portraits by comfort to my mind dominated the show. With exceptions in this department, the work in general seemed to me to be a little inferior to other examples of war art that I have seen. That is a personal opinion of what is on the whole a very interesting and instructive exhibition.

Dents Nose Out Trinity Rugby Schedule Over

Dents' extracted a 1-0 victory over Trinity last night to wind up their regular Interfaculty rugby schedule. It was a hotly contested struggle all the way, as both teams were in scoring position many times but blew their chances.

A long Trinity pass took play to the Dents' 40, but they failed in two plays and their kick was brought out to the Dents' three-yard line. Several plays later, Moore intercepted a Trinity pass on his own 27, but the Dents' attack bogged down. The quarter ended with Dents in possession on the midfield stripe, due largely to a 15-yard Trinity loss on an end run attempt.

Two long passes took them to the Trinity 12, with Moore tossing, and Lyons receiving. A field goal effort was blocked and Trinity recovered. A no yards penalty gave Dents another break, but Trinity intercepted a pass attempt on their own 10, and the half ended with the score 0-0.

After the kick-off, play ranged back and forth with a series of aerial plays, finally giving the ball to the Tooth-pullers on their five-yard tape. The Blueman, failing to move the ball in two tries, kicked to their own 42 to end the quarter.

Midway through the final stanza came the game-winning upset. Moore, intercepting a Trinity forward, ran the ball 65 yards down field; then Leuty kicked the deciding point. Desperately, Trinity tried to overcome the single point lead, but the final whistle foiled their attempts.

Moore of Dents stood out at quarter, ably assisted by Lyons and Leuty. Farquharson and Huicke starred for the red and black.

LACROSSE

Med's own Jimmy McKay threw exactly half his team's goals past Hennessy, the School netminder, in the Meds I-Sr. S.P.S. lacrosse game yesterday. The final score was 12-6 for the as yet undefeated embryonic M.D.'s. The rest of the redmen's counters came from the sticks of Spooner, Toogood, Rogers and Rae.

Moorehead paced the slide-rule-men by three times beating Wilsoq in the Med nets. McDonough, who was always in there trying, came up with two, while Tredgett garnered one for himself.

Occasionally it seemed as if the boys were trying to provide the Med team with patients to practise on; but it was really quite a gentlemanly game, with only two displays of fisticuffs, and three penalties given for cross-checking, and sundry other misdemaneours.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Jerry Ewins

Them Days Is Gone

And there was Phil in coveralls, with a bushel basket full of tools and a fiendish grin on his determined face, dismantling table by table, table by table. They might at least put blinds on the doors. To be forced to view such willful desecration—to be forced to just stand there and realize that there's nothing you can do about it—it's too much to ask of a human whose first written word was scratched on his slate with a dilatory piece of pool chalk.

The Mop and Pail will undoubtedly notice a tremendous increase in its circulation as a direct result of this ghastly business. The male undergraduate at the University of Toronto will now be forced to purchase this other morning newspaper if he is to keep pace with the early events of the outside world. Phil's paper will trek homewards with him in the evenings, and Junior will resume his daily perusal of the adventures of Secret Agent X-9.

If only there was some great moral purpose behind it all—the "be-all or the end-all here"—but to corrupt the sweet, innocent minds of those gentlemanly engineers at such an early age . . .

Dispatch that bottle of Sloan's posthaste, mother, they're treating sprained thumbs out at Ajax now.

Current Rumors

There are always plenty of rumors floating around in sporting circles, but the latest have Stu Scott going back with Beaches for their Grey Cup playoffs. Locker-room gossip says Bobs Henry and Armstrong, still theoretically under Indian contracts, are considering similar moves. The Directorate meets tonight fellows, you're on your own from there.

The Hockey Blues

It has been definitely decided to enter a Junior B team in the local O.H.A. circuit, and the first practice takes place at the arena tomorrow at five o'clock. Ace Bailey will look after the team for the first few weeks, but a separate coach will be appointed as soon as possible. The number of games played will depend on how the league draws team entries; thus nothing definite will be known till around the first of December, although at least a dozen contests are assured. The team will not go on into any league playoffs if it happens to finish the season on top of the heap. The Senior team will be something else entirely, but there should be a good deal of friendly rivalry between the two throughout the training periods.

Tuesday's Tidbits

The Standing Hockey Committee has come out with the fact that Pharmacy will ice a team for the first time in years in the Jennings' Cup loop, and it is said that Forestry and Vic are anxious to throw in two teams this winter. U.C. is reportedly dickering for a three-team entry from amongst its constantly swelling ranks of male enrollment . . . The Mulock Cup semifinals have been changed to this Thursday and Friday, with the final now scheduled for next Wednesday. Vic still looks good from here . . . Jr. U.C. are apparently trouncing all comers in the volleyball setup this fall, Mayzell and Himmel, two of last winter's basketball Blues, handling most of the spiking duties between them. P.H.E. are the only other team to show any promise . . . The Senior Harrier will be run off rain or shine at High Park this Saturday morning. The old "Cross Country" moniker seems to have fallen by the wayside now that the Indians are confined to reservations and any stadium they can find.

In Brief

Due to an acute shortage of space, we are bound to record a bare minimum of facts . . . the Physio basketball team trounced the Occupational Therapy girls with a score of 21-8; the game was not too well organized, but one player was worthy of comment . . . Armstrong, a forward on the Physio team. Which seems to be the sum total of space allotted.

Scoring Statistics

Two team captains, Herb Ballantyne for Western and Stu Scott of Varsity, worked themselves into a first place tie in the Intercollegiate scoring by virtue of their week-end efforts. Ballantyne picked up a touch and two converts to garner seven points in all, while Scott added only a single point to his 15 total amassed throughout the last month, giving each man 16 for this year's abbreviated schedule.

Varsity's Mel Lawson plunged across the line for his third touchdown on Saturday to secure the runner-up spot with 15. Parry of Queen's, O'Neil, Wardle and Szumlinski of Western, and Lawrence and Henry of Varsity tied for fourth with two touches apiece.

The following are the complete scoring statistics for the past season:

COSY COMFORTS FOR CAMPUS CO-EDS... there's a wonderful variety from tailored flannel to the gorgeous feminine ones in padded satin at the Evangeline Shops. With coal futures uncertain, we advise not one warm housecoat this winter but two, because you will not want to be without one while 't'other is at the cleaners. There is such a wide variety in housecoats in the Evangeline Shops everywhere that to attempt to describe one or two seems futile when there are so many other attractive ones begging to be given notice, and when your nearest Evangeline Shop is so close you only have to slip over to Yonge and Bloor. It's going to be a "housecoat" winter, gals, so put your bid in early.

TIES! TIES! TIES! Literally thousands of new ties, all the latest colours, styles, patterns. If you feel that your personal appearance lacks that certain something, if you notice to your disgust that the eyes of campus co-eds do not gleam at your approach, in quite the manner to which you are accustomed... (whisper) ... why not take yourself to FRANK STOLLERY'S. Have a private session with one of the experts on tie-choosing and come away with new ties and new hopes, (not that we encourage wolfing but we do think the possibilities of brightening up men's apparel are limited). STOLLERY'S are proud of their ties this season and justly so.

SEASON'S NEWS IN SMARTNESS... Joan Rigby is noted for exclusive designs, the sort of smartness in clothes which takes the accepted fashion trends of the moment and adds that special touch of individual designing which gives to all Joan Rigby clothes an extra quality of fashion achievement. Anything you buy there will give you satisfaction. It is a "wardrobe stabilizer", and long-lasting. Joan Rigby clothes will withstand the knocks of everyday living, and as every girl knows, a really good costume these days is worth holding fast to because replacements don't come easily. Take relatives a-shopping for their better garments at Joan Rigby's.

LET'S BE GLAMOROUS by the fire-side! On cold wet snowy evenings when the Varsity gal comes in from a hard, long day, what a joy it is to slip into a beautifully fashioned Lady Ellis housecoat. There are many housecoats to captivate the campus co-eds, in soft colours and materials. How about a corded bengaline? Padded satin? Especially for the after-lecture-and-before-dinner period when relaxation means a lot, or after a hot bath you can step into a warm cosy wool housecoat in luxurious colours and feel as deliciously warm as you look... Lady Ellis has a shop in this neighborhood, on Yonge, just south of Bloor, and in your neighborhood, too.

FASHIONS FOR YOU! Shopping around Simon Ramm's I saw many different types of day and evening clothes of the kind to captivate the heart of any calculating campus gal, from impressive date dresses for every type of figure to big heavy cosy coats to put you on an even keel for the blustery winter to come. Working and afternoon dresses are also in abundance, especially intended for the shining light who knows the importance of smartness through the day's lectures. Then come those perfectly ideal suits for winter wear, the shorty coat trimmed with soft fur, the skirt to match. This is really a super outfit and can be worn on many a semi-formal occasion as well as on the campus. Just east of Yonge, at 40 Bloor East.

Student Relief Aided Prisoners

André De Blonay will speak to students today at 4:00 p.m. in Room 37, U.C. on behalf of the World Student's Relief organization to which the International Student Service is affiliated. Mr. De Blonay who is secretary of the W.S.R., will stress the need for continued aid to Student Relief organizations for rehabilitation of students all over the world.

"Prisoners of War received aid throughout the War," said M. De Blonay in an interview. "Perhaps these prisoners remember the World Student Relief which provided the direct aid, but your dollars, those raised by Canadian students in the past years were those which, handled by the W.S.R. provided the books and materials enabling student P.O.W.'s to study in prison camps. The need is now greater than ever, however," continued M. De Blonay, "there are students at Caen University, who undaunted by the annihilation of the University Buildings, are continuing their studies in one of these few houses still standing in that city. There are other students studying from communal books, living in garrets or wrecked buildings, working in the daytime and studying at night, determined to keep up their studies at all costs. These are the same students who provided a nucleus for the French Underground, who at the risk of their lives made the invasion of the Normandy Beaches possible," continued M. DeBlonay, "Many of these students gave their lives," he concluded.

M. DeBlonay is currently travelling throughout Canada and the United States on a lecture tour.

sprained ankle or instep when a patting on of Sloan's Liniment will co-operate with nature to relieve it. Sloan's works by bringing circulation to the spot, driving out the uncomfortable cut-off feeling which results from a part of the body having been injured by a sudden fall or strain. Sloan's is exceedingly strong in its action, does not require rubbing on but merely a gentle patting on with absorbent or fingers, and the effect is almost immediate. Good to relieve simple head colds as an inhalant when a teaspoonful is added to a glass of water.

THIS WEEK'S REVIEW OF NORTHWAYS... Well my children, as you know Northway's has a reputation of originality. Their date dresses are the sort of thing you had in mind but couldn't quite visualize ready-made; wools, crepes in every describable fashion and colour, waiting for you to look 'em over. A Bromleigh Coat of the same colour would twin up nicely, not forgetting that hat and bag which can be selected in compatible colours at the same time. Why not have another outfit and look at the finely woven suits? There are masses of crisp, feminine blouses to set off the good clean lines of the tailor-made suits.

This cream for dry skin is a protective for the young, a corrective for the older skin. Use it in the "Beauty-Angle" way to bring up circulation, working upwards along the throat column with both hands, then lie with feet about a foot higher than your head in the way prescribed by famous beauticians, getting new supplies of blood pouring up to nourish the skin of your throat and neck.

"Absent Without Leave"

By Ross McLean

Al Appelbaum and Ernie Deutsch who went to early C.O. T.C. camp last summer with McMaster University and who went A.W.O.L. to hitch-hike to Rochester, N.Y., which is 80 miles from Niagara-on-the-Lake, thought they might make a column sometime when there was nothing else to talk about. And, lo, they have.

"I suggested to Ernie that we take a trip into Rochester," said Al. "No," contradicted Ernie, "I suggested it to you".

"Anyway," Al continued, "we wanted something special because all the rest went to Buffalo."

At the last minute, it seemed that Al would not be able to leave so that Ernie set out alone. He left at noon, he told us in a tone that suggested the miraculous, and arrived (in Rochester, that was) at three. At a U.S.O. canteen he sat down to write a postcard to Appelbaum who surprised him, after he had mailed the card, by appearing.

Rochester, they reported, "welcomed us very well," allowed them to spend only $1.50, provided them with admiring glances ("One girl thought we were paratroopers," said Ernie) and serenaded them with Canadian songs on bus rides for which neighbourly conductors would take no tickets. Rochester offered them two Waves at a canteen dance, showed them its university, impressed them with

"In July 1944 about ninety percent of the 175 employees organized into the E.U. On October 25, last year they received certification by the Ontario Labor Relations Board, but negotiations got under way in accordance with the Labor Code, only after the company was threatened by the union with prosecution for its failure to bargain in good faith and the union charges that attempts were made to utilize a Victory Loan Rally in the plant for the purpose of organizing a company union in opposition to the recognized bargaining agency.

"After observing all legal processes in order to induce Mr. Hermant to accept the agreement the union finally resorted to strike action with full approval of the Department of Labor."

The statement from the Toronto Committee on the Ford strike reads in part: "Ten thousand Windsor Ford employees are on strike because after a year and a half of fruitless negotiations and ineffective government 'conciliation', the company still refuses to grant the type of collective bargaining agreement which it has already granted in American plants. All the Ford Motor Company need do to end the strike is grant the same union security clauses which it has had for years in the Detroit plant."

"The record of walkouts, flareups and constant dissatisfaction in Windsor as compared with the comparative harmony in Detroit, with the same union and the same company involved in both plants would indicate that the employees have the right idea."

The telegram to Humphrey Mitchell posed six questions:

"Fact-finding committee formed at the University of Toronto representing several student organizations. Request following information on Ford strike:

"1. Is Ford strike legal?
"2. Will government continue as negotiator?
"3. If negotiations fail can government take over plant?
"4. Will it do so?
"5. Why were packing plants taken over?
"6. What is the legal status of Henry Ford II in strike?
"Earliest possible reply important."

The strike committee has called a meeting to be held on Wednesday at 5:00 o'clock at 48 Admiral Rd.

its Sunday traffic (which is, you may be surprised to hear, twice as heavy as Toronto's on Saturday) and left them with the impression that it was the loveliest city they had ever seen.

Rochester has no street cars, only busses, wide streets, good lighting and is very clean. Cpl. Appelbaum marched duty drill as penalty and Appelbaum almost lost his "hooks" as well as a parcel of food his mother had sent him.

We went to a press preview of Mulberry at Simpson's the other afternoon with Miss Peggy Bates of this paper. Mulberry, if you've been following Simpson's advt. at all diligently, you know already, is a massive port constructed between the first Quebec conference and D-Day to make D-Day possible.

"Just as many ingredients go to the making of a Christmas cake so is a port built up of many items or 'ingredients,'" proclaimed a determined, metaphor-making sign above the first exhibit. A colonel, or cook if we may pursue the culinary figure of speech, was explaining the model (which showed Mulberry in early stages, if we remember correctly) to a dozen or so representatives of the city's press.

We searched desperately for High News people in order to feel superior in the august gathering. (A Simpson's lady had asked us if we were from High News, so you can see.)

"On D plus 10, I think it was," the colonel was saying to his dwindled gathering. "We intercepted a message... We think the British are building a harbor". On D plus 11: 'They are'. So that was the first indication the Germans had of our port."

and finished the season in the stands. Alibis are a poor substitute for a team's losses, but it certainly gives one something to think about after that kind of a season.

Several men deserve credit for their work on the Blues this year, but none are more deserving than the two line stalwarts, Wil Henry and Al Scott. Henry plays inside, a position repeatedly bypassed when the glory is distributed, but Wil's aggressive style and sound defensive work at center secondary was outstanding throughout all the Varsity games. Scott went into the game as a substitute for the injured Gus Campbell, but what a first class replacement he turned out to be. With the exception of a few minutes in the initial Queen's game, he played every minute of the entire season, and his steady drive kept the Varsity line charging. The centre secondary was pin-blocked on nearly every line play, and Al went through the season without committing a single bad snap.

Jack McReynolds and Colin Cranham showed great potential promise as backfielders, and Bill Daniel turned out to be one of the most valuable men on the team with his general utility role of halfback and outside. Rudy Grass also

Hermant Replies To Union Alleges "Irresponsibility"

CAMPUS COMMITTEE EXPANDS

"Irresponsible action" on the part of Local 514, United Electrical Workers of America (CIO), "has made it impossible for the Imperial Optical Company to enter into a contractual relationship with the union," Sydney Hermant, assistant to the president of the company, told The Varsity yesterday. Mr. Hermant was approached for a statement in reply to charges made by Ross Russel, U.E.W. Director of Organization, in submitting the case for the union to a student committee recently formed to investigate current industrial strikes.

The student committee includes representatives of eight campus organizations—C.C.F. Club, Labor Movement, Humanist Club, Law Club, Sociology Club, Political Science Club, and International Students' Club. Purpose of the committee is to participate in an impartial investigation into the history of the Ford strike at Windsor and strikes in other parts of Canada. A meeting of the committee has been called by Chairman Ethel Klassen for 5 p.m. today at 48 Admiral Road.

"We hope at today's meeting to acquaint any new representatives with the committee's aims, and to plan a more far-reaching and more effective investigation," Miss Klassen told The Varsity. "There will be three new campus organizations represented at today's meeting; and still other student groups may be added to the committee."

In reply to the union organizer's allegation that "Mr. Sidney Hermant, in his capacity as an employer of labor, has refused to obey the laws of this country effecting the democratic rights of his workers to have a trade union," the Imperial Optical Company executive said this:

"If I were not obeying the law, all the union organizer would have to do would be to bring the matter to the attention of the law enforcement authorities. He would not have to publish information in a way which tends to grossly mislead those who do not know the true facts of the case."

Mr. Hermant said his company had been quite prepared to sign a union agreement, until the conduct of Local 514 toward the company, its employees, and its management made this "impossible". Employees of the branch factory at Ontario and Dundas streets, Toronto, voted five to one against going on strike in a free, secret ballot, he said. Since the strike was called, "and despite union pressure," never fewer than 50 per cent of the employees have continued to report for work daily. Mr. Hermant reports that greater numbers are returning to work each day.

In his statement, published in part in yesterday's Varsity, Union Organizer Russel said that "after observing all legal processes in order to induce Mr. Hermant to accept the agreement the union finally resorted to strike action with full approval of the Department of Labor."

Ballet To The Big Apple All Taken In His Stride

By Wally Belfry

Raised in the ballet but praised for The Big Apple—Jack Lemen was at a cross-roads in life.

Jack, whose dancing has since made him four times director of the U.C. Folies, got his start years ago as a ballet soloist for the renowned Volkoff troupe. Performing at a high-school, he took his intermission by teaching a few students the current dansation, The Big Apple. The Big Apple was bigger in the student's eyes than the ballet so Jack read the sign of the times and became a dancing instructor.

On the 1936 ballet team, Lemen and Company danced before Hitler and other high-ranking Nazis. They still insist their performance gave Der Furor his much-publicized love of La Danse.

Jack hasn't danced his way into matrimony in cutting the choruses from 100 to 25. "No," he explained, "The Army slowed me down."

That he can "really pick 'em" is illustrated by an incident that occurred in one of Jack's army shows. A chorine of his selection and training was dancing her heart out to a point where she was to advance up-stage, stop and say a few words. She arrived there breathless and speechless. It really didn't matter since a big, tough soldier shouted from the back row "Don't say a word, Honey. Just stand there and let me look at you." One of Jack's can-can routines was drawing too many laughs and the cast was bewildered. That is, until they discovered the little girl on the end was wearing, instead of the orthodox black can-can panties, a pair of lace steps-ins.

Jack's Folies cohorts describe his patience as that of "of Job"; say he amazes all by listening to the music first and then "dreaming up" a motion for every line of the music. As dance director of the Army Show, Jack is credited with a large part in its success.

When directing, Jack assumes a look of intense concentration under furled eye-brows. His typical words, "Straighten your knees, Honey," are smoothly spoken and hit home to a visible extent.

The only regret is that Jack Lemen hasn't a ticket to the Folies!

U. C. PARLIAMENT SUPPORTS STRIKE

Returning European Students Get No G.I. Bill Of Rights

"You can't talk democracy and culture to European students without creating democratic and cultural conditions first," asserted Andre deBlonay General Secretary of the World Student Relief in a campus address yesterday.

"We must remember that to students returning to university life in Europe from prison camps, labor gangs and underground movements there is no 'G.I. Bill of Rights' or comparable measure. Students are stunned and confused upon returning because they are no longer knit by the same ideals and hopes—those of escape and liberty. They face ruined homes, disrupted studies, physical privations and desolation," M. deBlonay said.

Students in Poland have suffered most. When he was in Germany, observing the operation of prison camps during the war, M. deBlonay saw work gangs of Polish girls and boys from the universities marching along under guard, wearing arm-bands with a large yellow "P" upon them. They were inferiors and only capable of manual labor in the German view. These were only a remnant of the students of Poland, however as the Germans had killed most university students immediately upon entering the country, on Nov. 17, 1939.

A few were saved. These were the 800 members of a French-Polish battalion in the French Army who were interned in Switzerland after the fall of France.

"We managed to have them released from the camps and arranged that they go to a special university started for them. They are the only Poles who were able to continue their studies and now they have degrees in many fields and form a nucleus of culture among Polish youth," M. deBlonay said.

"In France, students became leaders in resistance movements and the Maquis. They printed papers, organized sabotage, and helped escaped allied prisoners. Very few survived to return to normal life after the liberation."

In Norway, M. deBlonay said, the

37-32 Vote Backs Strikers On "Take-Home" Pay Issue

FORMER PRIME MINISTER HEARD

Approval of "a country-wide strike of labor to maintain wartime 'take-home' pay, was voiced by the second session of University College Debating Parliament last night. By a majority of five votes the government, supported by Hon. Allan Porter and Hon. Anne Levine, succeeded in passing the resolution which was opposed by Hon. Harry Eastman and Hon. Marguerite Delaney.

"That this house supports the strike of the Canadian Ford workers and upholds the justice of their demands," was the text of a motion introduced before the orders of the day by Hon. Phillip Cooper. Mr. Cooper's motion was supported by a vote of 51 to 13.

Speaking in support of a country-wide strike, Hon. Allan Porter declared, "This war will have been fought in vain if it does not bring a peace with prosperity, security and freedom. These things can be possible only with a high level of income as well as with economic democracy, meaning the right of workers to have a voice in the determination of working conditions. If it were necessary for a general strike as a last resort, it could be justified on the ground that the industrialists have always had the last resort in the past."

Tickets for "Daffydil Nite" are $1.25 per person, not $1.50 as stated in an advertisement in yesterday's issue of The Varsity.

HEALTH EXAMINATIONS

Appointments for annual medical examinations may now be made with the University Health Service. All male first and second year students and all those desiring to participate in athletics who have not had their medical examinations should report to the Health Service immediately for appointments.

On Friday, third year students may report to make their appointments.

Ex-Servicewomen To Have Club

Plans for the formation in the Arts Colleges of ex-servicewomen's clubs for social functions and also to help disabled men in Christie St. Hospital were discussed at an open meeting held in the Women's Union Monday.

Meetings are scheduled for every second Thursday, but the group will meet Monday Nov. 19, when all women veterans can meet their newly-appointed S.A.C. representative, Claire Rutherford, a former sergeant in the RCAF (WD).

"We are here to pass judgment upon an act, illegal, unethical and unwise, and it would be a reflection indeed upon the acumen of the honorable members if they neglect to perceive the disastrous consequence of a country-wide strike."

Supporting the desirability of maintaining wartime "take-home" pay, Hon. Anne Levine stated that "an increase in wages could, to a large extent, maintain a high national income and therefore a high standard of living."

"A federal strike," she contended, "can only be supported as a final weapon after grievance procedures have failed. One need only look at the strike at Windsor today to see the notoriety that can arise in the dispute between management and labor."

Can't Practice In Private Laments The Carillonneur

By John McRae

"Bells have always fascinated me," said J. Leland Richardson, carillonneur of the University. "Why when the news of the Armistice in 1918 came through I tore up a back street, straight to an old blacksmith's shop where a cracked fire-bell was hanging, and banged away for all I was worth."

It was Saturday morning, Nov. 10 just before the beginning of the Memorial Service, and the big bell was tolling in the Hart House Tower. The inside of the Tower resembles both a modern factory and a mediaeval castle. A long spiral stair case leads up to the room where the carillonneur plays. A great pendulum swings to and fro in a wire cage on one side of the room. Perched on a little platform above it, a complicated mass of wheels and levers ticks quietly to itself. A little light filters through the narrow slits in the thick walls and a couple of bare bulbs supply the rest.

Suddenly the carillonneur, sitting before a wire affair resembling an elongated loom brought his foot down with a resounding crash and the big bell tolled again.

"That's it," he said swinging around. "I guess they'll be starting now." "Yes," he continued, going on with his story, "I have always liked bells. In 1922 I was standing on the corner of Queen and Church when I heard the first carillon in North America begin ringing. It was in the Metropolitan Church. That decided me. Five years later I was studying in the National Carillon School of Belgium. In 1930 I was appointed the official Carillonneur of the University."

Mr. Richardson has a unique position among musicians. It is impossible for him to practice in private as every other musician can. A carillon is a very public instrument. It is also rather faunting to play. The heaviest bell weighs four and a half tons and requires 25 pounds pressure to play it. He very rarely comes out of a recital without at least two blistered fingers and a pair of sore feet. But this is the least that might happen considering the energy and violence he puts into his playing.

Since the 23 bells in the Tower have a range of a little under two octaves his repertoire is definitely limited. Only ballads, simple hymns, patriotic songs and some of the lighter classics can be transposed with pleasing effect.

Mr. Richardson gave 25 concerts over the CBC during the summer and has a regular program every Sunday evening from 830 to 930. The Carillonneur calls this the "Twilight Hour" even though, as he says, it is as black as the ace of spades during most of the year at that time.

History Linked To Social Sciences

"There is no antagonism between history and the social sciences," declared Professor C. W. M. Hart, as he opened the round table discussion on history's role in the social sciences last night at the Women's Union. According to the speaker the distinction between history and the social sciences is that the former is a body of arranged facts and the latter a method which is applied to facts.

Professor V. W. Bladen, chairman for the evening, asked Professor Dr. J. McDougall to continue the discussion.

Quoting from Bury, Professor McDougall said history is a science . . . nothing less and nothing more. He claimed that rather than merely collecting facts, an historian selects facts and judges the conduct of man in society, but not with finality or subjectiveness.

In conclusion, Professor B. Wilkinson expressed the belief that both history and the social sciences are intimately linked in the study of humanities.

RECORD HOUR

Editorial

A Matter Of Policy

The Varsity offers no apology for the recent outcropping of controversial political matter in its news columns. Unfortunately, experience has shown that we can barely print the word "strike" without touching off a barrage of denunciatory letters. People have written to accuse us of being red, pink, and black. One correspondent, more in sorrow than in anger, calls us yellow. No one has yet troubled to point a shaking finger and shriek that we are true blue, but we expect the spectrum to be explored in that direction any day now.

It is rather fun to receive such polychromatic gems in every morning's mail. We would not willingly put a damper on such enthusiasts. But recently some of our more balanced friends have displayed alarm at our policy: principally because they are not sure what it is. What follows is intended to enlighten them.

Our Policy

The Varsity's policy is to print whatever news will interest or enlighten its readers.

But because virtually everything on the globe is both interesting and enlightening, while we have only four pages at our disposal, we must select.

Our principle of selection is to insist on a campus tie-in.

If Henry Ford proposes renewal of arbitration, that is the business of the downtown papers.

But if a campus organization such as the Hoopla Club votes a condemnation of Henry Ford, that is grist for The Varsity.

In printing the news of the Hoopla Club's action, we do not in any way commit ourselves, or our publishers, to the views of the Hoopla Club.

The Hoopla club's business is to have views. Our business is to tell our readers about those views.

If the Tip-Tap Club, on the contrary, passes a resolution praising Henry Ford to the skies, we will tell our readers about that, too. But we are in no way committed to the views of the Tip-Tap Club. Surely that should be obvious.

Now recently, a good many campus organizations have been concerned about labor-management relations. We cannot imagine any more pressing subject for them to concern themselves about. Students have passed resolutions condemning management, or written letters praising management, and all this, because it is our job, we have conscientiously printed.

Not To Make News

It is rather hard, though, to be blamed for presenting only one side, merely because the other side has not made itself heard. It is not our job to make news, or to mould opinion. It is our job to express for our public whatever has been moulded.

Readers will ask at this point why, with a policy so innocuous, we campaigned against vandalism. Again the answer is simple. The facts in the case were stark and undisputed. The law of the land and the regulations of the University Caput are also stark and undisputed. We blamed a group whose activities no one could deny for breaking a law whose existence no one could doubt.

Then why have we no policy concerning the strikers? Why have we, for that matter, no policy on any political matter? Not because we deny the existence of a right and a wrong. Not at all. On such questions we are strictly neutral, simply because the facts are in doubt and the principles are in doubt. Each side is accusing the other of treason and robbery. Each side draws up a list of charges which the other denies. We have no doubt that there is fault on at least one side, if not on both. But we are unable to say which.

To Present Facts

In such a case, our job is to present whatever facts we can secure. If students will debate such issues (and why should they not?), they had better have the facts available. But since it is impossible for us to arrive objectively at the facts, we can only publish the statements of the opposing sides, and let interested students judge for themselves.

Yesterday a campus fact-finding committee supplied us with the Union's case in the Imperial Optical Co. strike, and we published it. To-day, having secured the company's statement, we publish that too.

Students are going to debate these questions, because they are students. Anyone who asks us to withhold the facts on one side is asking for injustice. Anyone who asks us to omit all such matter, to withhold the facts on both sides, is asking The Varsity, whose job is furnishing light, to let its readers stumble on in the dark.

Magainot Line Mentality

"In the creation of the world's deadliest weapon, the atom bomb, there has been a tendency to develop a 'Magainot Line mentality,'" says an editorial in The Athenaeum, student newspaper of the West Virginia University.

"So terrible is this new invention that many unfortunately are being lulled into complacency, believing that in the next war such a weapon will not be used. Just as poison gas was not employed in this conflict, these persons argue that the devastating atom bomb also will be banned from future warfare. Some go so far as to maintain that this weapon may be so terrible as to outlaw war forever.

"On the other hand, there has never been in the history of warfare an example where a military weapon has ended man's desire for conquest and power. There is no proof whatsoever that other nations in the future will not resort to the atom bomb if it suits their purpose to kill and kill quickly.

"Dr. E. U. Condon, vice president of the American Physical Society and atom research worker, sees the possibility of such things happening when he states, 'It is conceivable that in year to come some small group of scientists, working in some remote haven, may find a way to do the thing with only small, inexpensive and inconspicuous equipment.' Generals Marshall and Patton hold similar views.

"Developing a 'Magainot mentality' of false security or, at the other end of the line, an aggressive, militaristic attitude will not solve the problem. The answer lies somewhere between these two views."

They Can Be Fed!

Editor, The Varsity

Dear Sir:

We have watched with sympathy the Varsity's efforts to publicize the "anti-repatriation" campaign concerning the Japanese Canadians. We have also noted that the Varsity intends to devote some space to the discussion of some fitting memorial to our dead of this war. We think that the columns used for these purposes have been used well. But it has occurred to us that perhaps there is another topic that is worthy of your attention. It is one which has been discussed widely elsewhere, but seems to have failed to stir up action proportional to the gravity of the situation. The topic is the expected starvation of millions in Europe this winter.

Surely there is a problem for which the answer: "We are doing everything practicable," is not enough. We are convinced that it would be physically possible to prevent starvation in Europe if an all out effort were made by the Allied Governments; an effort unhampered by a preoccupation with some domestic problems, a solution of which, in any case, would not be facilitated by a Europe rampant with despair and hate.

Admittedly the voice of the Varsity might be as "one crying in the wilderness," but considering what is at stake, any attempt to bring about more action might be worth while.

GORDON NOAKS, IV SPS

Editor, The Varsity

Dear Sir:

For the past several weeks, many articles have appeared in the Varsity on the theme of "Vandals Strike Again 'Hoodlums Hammer Rugby'." The paper has tried to make us Vandal Conscious. We have soaked up this knowledge and now it is wrong for people to paint "Queen's" around Toronto.

It was with much surprise, therefore, that on Nov. 7 I saw "Back the Ford Strikers." Stealing cars, mutilating public property, and tying up a whole city hardly in the class of parlor games.

If you back the Ford strike, and therefore support vandalism, let us go immediately to Kingston and tear Queen's down.

Otherwise, if such practices are wrong, you certainly cannot "Back the Ford Strikers."

That Strain Again

Last night's symphony, we might complain, was rather poorly planned. Why play the Mother Goose Suite (Ravel) right after the Pavane for a Dead Infanta (also by Ravel)? The first forced all the old ladies to weep in their handkerchiefs, and by consequence these muffers of the affections were not nearly dry enough for their daughters' moans over the deceased Infanta.

The temperature at Massey Hall this season has so far been far too low. No oboe-player can be expected to play anything by Tcherépine in a concert hall whose temperature is consistently over 80 degrees Fahrenheit. We thought the rallentandos in the French symphony were far too freely handled. No conductor in his right senses would let the orchestra run away with its emotions so easily. The violins came in a trifle too late in bar 30 of the Adagio. The ballet group, the chief feature of the evening, jumped far too high in the scene from La Sonambule. According to the best Taglioni tradition, the somnambulist (female) at bar 60 should make a slight pretence, as it were, to come down about 68, and 70 really crash. Mile Eiffel failed to do this. Mile Escargon's entrées were exquisite. In the symphony's concluding number we detected an entire absence of feeling for autumn. None of the musicians seemed ever to have "sauntered down the woody lanes" except perhaps the kettle-drummer. There were bluejay tones in his magnificent crescendos.

And in final funeral we might note that one poor wretch was boxed over the ear (by royal command) with a viol because he refused to stand when the lieutenant-governor entered. Is this what Beethoven wrote the Fifth for?

A New Slant On Brahms

Gerhard Kander, soloist last night with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra in a performance of the Brahms Violin Concerto, is a coming violinist. His technique is excellent, his tone superb, and he apparently has some musical ideas of his own.

It was a pleasure to hear a performance of the Brahms that was not modelled on the Heifetz recording. At many points, the interpretation differed widely from what has become the standard. Not all of Kander's ideas could be considered improvements. For instance, his exaggeration of certain notes in the second theme of the last movement seemed to me a departure from the good taste of the rest of the performance. There were other differences in phrasing, notably in the first movement, where again Kander laid emphasis on notes which Heifetz practically neglects. Many of these appealed to me as being more in the spirit of Brahms than the Heifetz veneer.

The soloist was hindered in the second movement by the winds and brass who were struggling over a problem of coordination. In this movement the orchestra played too loudly, but in the rest of the work they allowed the violin to dominate as it should. The performance may be noted as an improvement in the orchestra's manner of accomplishment. If this is a trend, we are happy about it.

Sir Ernest is well acquainted with Elgar's masterpiece, The Enigma Variations, and there was very little wrong with his performance of it. The oboe was too loud for the viola solo in the tenth variation. The last variation was a mess because the music itself is poor. It is a pity that this hunk of banality was appended to so fine a work.

We note with pleasure that the orchestra has a new first trumpeter. While we do not pretend that Sir Ernest takes this column seriously, it is interesting to note that there has been some attempt to correct both the faults that were criticized last time.

—PHILIP FREEDMAN.

Among the great wealth written for the organ during the last century there has been very much progressive music. Unfortunately, so great and so rapid has been the progress in composition that few organists have been able to keep up to it. We are fortunate in having as University organist a man who can play even the masterworks of Josef Rheinberger, and keep it musical. During his program in Convocation Hall yesterday afternoon, 200 lucky people heard Dr. Healey Willan play Rheinberger's Sonata No. 9 in B flat minor, as it has been played but few times before in Toronto.

The sonata opens with an impressive Grave, merging into an Allegro. The Grave theme is reiterated at the end of the movement. The second movement is a beautiful lyric termed Romanse, which contrasts well with the last movement—a Fantasia and Fugue. The Fantasia is a series of rapid recitatives, coupled by pensive episodes or asides. The Fugue really earns for Rheinberger the nickname of "the Beethoven of the organ." The theme is built on itself and on counter-themes, culminating in a massive coda, in which the composer skillfully incorporates the Grave theme.

Worthy of mention also is the Fantasia and Fugue in E minor by the Dutch composer Edward Silas, whose works are all too seldom played.

On November 27, Dr. Willan will give another recital which he will devote to the works of Johann Sebastian Bach.

Khaki University Looks To Future

LEAVESDEN, Herts (Exchange)—The Student's Standard, organ of the students of Khaki University of Canada in the United Kingdom, have conducted a survey among its members to seek information as regards their future plans. 475 students stated their intention of attending university on their return to Canada. Engineering, Arts, Commerce, and Medicine are the main interests, although some expressed a desire for Law, Forestry, Journalism, and Pharmacy.

Khaki University is situated at Leavesden, Herts, and present enrollment is officially stated as being 596, of which 494 are N.C.O.'s and O.R.'s. Fourteen subjects are being taught, the most popular being Mathematics, English, Chemistry, Physics, and History, with a small percentage of the students engaged in refresher courses.

The academic standing upon admission was split almost evenly amongst Junior and Senior Matriculation, and First Year University, with 53 with second year or better. Students' ages vary from 19 to 42, 24 being the mean. Every province of the Dominion of Canada is represented as well as British West Indies, the United States and Newfoundland. Ontario is first in the actual number of students but British Columbia is the highest per capita.

The faculty consists of 64 members, 13 with their Ph. D., 12 with M.A.'s, and 19 with B.A.'s. Their degrees have been obtained from 21 different universities and colleges.

New and EntrenousTrombones And Toronto

By Ross McLean

He lost his shirt at the Varsity-McGill game and he was happy.

He hissed and aahhhed and screamed with fervor: "You stink!" to beat the band but he didn't beat the band; rather, vice versa.

He provided spectators in the R, S, and T sections at Saturday's football finale with a sideshow occasionally more appealing than the main performance on the field.

He sits now before his typewriter, broken in body, torn in shirt, but with, he reports happily, his spirits unbowed.

"I have been deep in thought," he boasts, "for, oh, so many hours ever since the Saturday rugby game. Should one, dare one, write to an editor?"

While he ponders, he strokes lovingly the zxcvbnm, 34 row on his Remington keyboard. He continues:

"Must I introduce myself? I am the person who does not like Toronto teams. I had no opinion about them when I got to darkest Ontario. I picked it all up, after an intensive three-minute look."

He hates, he claims, Toronto crowds for their smug conviction that the universal jig is up should their team happen to lose.

"That," he explains, "is what makes me very, very angry. I am by nature a meek person. But to see thousands of people week after week, refuse to concede that the other team possibly may be better, when they are actually better, is too much for even the weakest of spirits."

"And," he observes pointedly, "we all know how weak spirits are getting to be."

being met, as well as some physical aid not supplied by general relief organizations.

"In Krakow over 35 per cent of the students have tuberculosis. We are caring for these students," said M. deBlonay. "We have had great responsibilities during the war but now we have greater ones. We must raise two million dollars this year to help even a little," he said.

"We can give morally and socially isolated students the key to their life for the future and spare them much bitterness," continued M. deBlonay. "We must have faith in a unity of beliefs and aspirations common to most students. This can be the opening wedge of the new international idea," he concluded.

Toronto's charming heckler and sometime pseudo-inebriate explains himself.

"I have embarked on this crusade," he writes mightily, "to out-yell you all, to insult you as best I can, to hound you to death, and to make you angry by waving bottles—full, hoorah, hoorah—in front of cold, thirsty stands."

"I shall continue," he threatens dauntlessly, "until you learn the one thing spectators must learn, if they are to watch even a rugby game intelligently—to be tolerant of the other man, to forget your native pride, to give credit where credit is due (and where the Prices Board allows it), just to be a good Joe about it all."

"So help me —," he flusters. "So help me, I'll keep on yelling and insulting as long as necessary. Even if I have to end up borrowing somebody else's permit."

His second je ne sais quoi, hurff, concerns Toronto's band with whom he bandied about, you may recall, during the last dismal quarter.

"Maybe not the whole band," he reflects. "Maybe just the trombones."

Our friend, it seems, has a trombone to split with this section.

"In fact," he declares with some left-over fervor, "they stink!" "May I repeat with all the force that my weak little body can muster, that they stink? I've said it before, and I'll say it again. They stink!"

(The controversial views expressed by our correspondent do not necessarily reflect the views of this department).

"It's not," he qualifies, "that they can't play. They can't."

"It's not that they don't sound good. They don't."

"It's not that they aren't nice guys. They aren't."

"It's just that they stink. And if any one of them feels they are being unjustly discriminated against, then goodness to Betsy, tell them I am not sorry, not one little bit sorry."

The writer closes with the challenge:

"I am prepared to debate the two subjects with whomever you want, whenever you want. Each man to be armed with an eligible permit and three bags of peanuts. The president of Labatts to be judge."

"Yours," he leaves us, "in the land of larger lagers and less foam. Lord Calvert."

Trombonists all, loyal brethren of the Ale & Quail Society, the gauntlet is thrown.

Dr. B. Bagnani Flays Arabs Shows Problems In Egypt

EDUCATION GREATEST NEED

"Pan-Arabism in Egypt is really Nationalism . . . the desire to get all foreigners out of the country," said Dr. G. Bagnani at the Oriental Society meeting last night. He stated that the Pan-Arab League of States has as its real objective keeping Jews out of Palestine.

"The Egyptians dislike the English least of all foreign countries because they feel that the English will be the easiest people to get out of their country," he explained, "and this was the reason that they have actually helped the British in the war. The fact remains, however, that they want to get the British out of Egypt and also the Suez Canal area and the Sudan."

"Some interesting facts about these two regions make the situation very difficult," he continued. "For one thing the conquest of the Sudan by the British was paid for by the Egyptian government and the Suez Canal will revert to the Egyptian government in 1968, if the terms of the contract are to be followed. The obvious thing to do would be for Britain to give Egypt the Sudan in return for the Suez, but knowing Egypt as I do I am sure that this is just the thing that won't happen."

"The most important thing to remember about Egypt is that what you expect to happen will never take place; you might say that the explanation of Egypt lies in the hundredth name of Allah . . . the Joker. The Joker is always turning up and a good example is the visit of the King of Italy to Alexandria some years ago. The royal yacht had proudly steamed into the harbor, a twenty-one gun salute had been fired from the fort and the king was descending the gangway into a launch, which had been sent out to receive him, when it happened. From the hold of the launch there appeared a very grubby Egyptian mechanic who loudly asked, 'Has anyone got a can of petrol?'"

"The internal problems of Egypt are complex also," he continued. "There is a population of about fifteen million people living on the twelve thousand square miles that are cultivated. Labour is cheap and the standard of living of the fellah is low. However the fellah, or worker, has all that he requires because in that climate he needs only a cotton shirt or two, trousers, and a mud hut. Food is cheap, and, due to the climate which makes three crops a year possible, plentiful."

"The main thing that the people lack is any say in the government. Because the official language is classical Arabic, a very difficult language, only those who can afford to receive a higher education are able to take part in the government. Until the common people can receive a sufficient education, Egypt will remain in the hands of the rich, who find it convenient to keep the poor uneducated."

"However it has always been to Egypt's advantage to have a strong centralized government which has complete control of the irrigation system which is the life blood of the country. Egypt has always prospered when under the rule of a despot," he said in conclusion.

Science Workers To Hear Boutry

"University and Research Life in France under the Occupation" will be discussed by Prof. G. A. Boutry, at a meeting of the Canadian Association of Scientific Workers at the Women's Union this Friday evening at 8:30.

Prof. Boutry, French authority on weights and measures is currently touring eastern Canada telling audiences about the part played by scientists in the French underground movement.

"Though the meeting will be held by the city branch of the Canadian Association of Scientific Workers, a students' branch has recently been formed, which is open to students of social as well as natural sciences," Bill Fairley, new president of the university Association, commented. "All students of the university are welcomed to attend Prof. Boutry's address," he added.

Dean Thompson Welcomes Frosh

Dean J. C. Thompson of the Ontario College of Optometry welcomed the freshman class at the college's Initiation Banquet held in the Boulevard Club on Monday night.

"Most of the men of this class have learned co-operation and teamwork in the armed services. It is their duty to put their knowledge to work in the future and help the profession of optometry to keep on expanding as it has done in the last twenty-five years," Dean Thompson said to the assembled students.

The banquet was climaxed by a surprise show put on by first year students under the direction of Arthur Jones, second year president.

During the course of the evening, the scholarship given annually by the Optometrical Women's Auxiliary was presented to Donald A. Cleat, for proficiency in the second year. The award was made by Mrs. F. L. Searanck, president of the association.

Church History Lecture Topic

In outlining a 10-century friction between church and state Prof. K. H. Cousland said he thought the basis of this friction "lay in the inability of each to draw a line between their respective shares and functions."

In yesterday's speech at Sheraton Hall, Wycliffe College Prof. Cousland discussed the transition from ancient to medieval times and weaved through the development of theories on the position of church and state.

He traced the struggle between secular and religious factions which culminated in the collapse of the Holy Roman Empire.

Prof. Cousland pointed out that friction which has existed between the two obscures the fact that they have co-operated to achieve their respective aims, Christianity on one hand, union and power on the other.

Lay Off Licking Lollipops; Dental Decay Disastrous

By Joe Rife

Don't touch that lollipop! It may bring you one lick closer to losing your teeth. Miss D. F. Berry, associate in the Department of Preventive Dentistry, whose favorite subject is tooth decay, has discovered that the amount of refined sugars and starches in the diet bears a definite relationship to the occurrence of dental decay.

"The most popular theory concerning the cause of tooth decay," Miss Berry told The Varsity, "is that carbohydrates collecting around the teeth are acted upon by bacteria to form an acid which breaks down the enamel. It has been shown that if the number of these bacteria can be reduced to zero then no cavities will form."

Unfortunately the methods of controlling this insidious micro-organism with the tongue-twisting name of Lactobacillus Acidophilus are as yet limited to dietary measures. If the patient will adhere to a diet in which there are no starches or sugars then the bacteria count becomes nil and the susceptibility to decay is lowered. All of which brings us back to the old Yukon Sourdough concept of diet . . . "whiskey for the fluid part and moose-meat for the solid part."

"Patients find it very hard to keep to such rigorous diets, Miss Berry revealed," so the aim of our present research is to find an easier way to accomplish the desired result." Most of the newer drugs, including the sulphas and penicillin, have been experimented with but the results have not yet proved satisfactory.

"Everyone can help conserve their teeth by not eating foods of the sticky carbohydrate type," expounded Miss Berry, "and by those I mean sundaes, cookies, cake, chocolate bars, etc." The question is would you rather submit yourself to the rib-jingling jar of the dentist's drill or remain on a rigorous diet?

Most people would rather eat.

No Expense, No Money Worries When Co-op Gives Vets New Home

The Co-op Society will hold a meeting under the leadership of E. K. Musgrave on Thursday, Nov. 15. A veteran of this war, Mr. Musgrave is starting a 'Co-op' house for ex-service men near the campus.

Co-ops have been established to provide inexpensive quarters and to relieve students of financial worries while studying. There are five co-op residences on the campus, three for men and two for women.

Co-op member Roy Clark said the Co-op Union of Canada is not as closely knit an organization as a fraternity, although it has similar branches throughout Canada and the United States.

The only evidence of the Co-op Union at this University is the residences, but the principle of combined labor to cut down on costs can be extended to other spheres. Book shops, like the one which has been operating at the Ontario Agricultural College since 1918, or the cafeterias which sell at cost to the student are proof of this.

Plans are being laid for a co-op truck shop at the University of Toronto.

Chemists' Field Trip

The Chemical Club will gather for a field trip to the British-American Oil refinery at Clarkson next Thursday, Nov. 22. The group will leave the Chemistry Building at 1:15 p.m. All chemistry labs. and lectures are cancelled that afternoon for II, III, and IV years. Tickets may be obtained in Room 7 in the basement of the Chemistry Building. For full particulars, see the bulletin board in the Chemistry Building.

'Designing Female' Roles Meat For Vic Actress

Maternal demands almost dethroned Pegi Brown's career in the direction of music.

"When I was in public school I recited at an assembly," recalls this young artist student at Victoria College, "and my teacher thought I should take lessons in elocution. Mom wouldn't hear of it. She wanted me to play the piano. So I practiced it an hour a day instead."

However, Pegi's mother presently relented and arranged for her daughter to begin study in elocution and dramatic art.

Fortunate, too, for today Miss Brown ranks among Toronto's most talented young actresses and has been recently awarded the thespian plum of feminine lead in the Civic Theatre Production of "Reunion in Vienna."

"I was the most surprised and excited girl in Toronto," she confesses, "when Sterndale Bennett called me for that part."

Vice-president of the Victoria Dramatic League, Pegi's dramatic talents find outlet in college productions, in radio and in the Civic Theatre. She was Mrs. Hardcastle in last year's Vic production of "She Stoops To Conquer," and scored a hit as monologist at an I.S.S.

program in Convocation Hall.

At Lawrence Park Collegiate she took parts in high school plays and won three times the first award in the Ontario Annual Verse Speaking Contest. She obtained the L.T.C.L. Degree of the Trinity College of London, England.

Her break into radio came with a small part in "The People" which later led to an appearance as Henrietta the Harassed Housewife in a serial "For Men Only."

Equipped with a throaty, rich voice, she became quickly typed as a designing female or the other woman. She has since, however, played the gamut from a crying baby to old women. Radio Folio, Stage 45, Home Town, Hidden Enemy and Magic Carpet are among the CBC programs she has appeared on.

Dancing, fried oysters, cokes and the Bing Crosby recording of "I'll Be Seeing You," all appeal to Pegi.

The theatre is in her blood now, she admits. After each show she makes up her mind that it will be the last. But she can't give it up. She is tremendously enthusiastic about both the stage and radio and is aiming at the top in both fields.

Implies Ford Strike Legal In Reply To Group's Wire

QUIZ BLACKWELL TODAY

By Bob Marjoribanks

Labor Minister Humphrey Mitchell replied yesterday to the six questions telegraphed to him by the University of Toronto Fact-Finding Committee. The letter was signed on Mr. Mitchell's behalf by M. M. Maclean, Dominion Director of Industrial Relations.

In reply to the question, "Is the Ford strike legal?" Mr. Maclean replied "A strike is not illegal under the Wartime Labor Regulations if the dispute in question has been investigated by a Board of Conciliation and 14 days have elapsed between the date on which the Board makes its report to the Minister of Labor and the stoppage of work. The present strike of Ford employees was preceded by an attempt to effect an agreement by a Board of Conciliation."

Health Welfare Is Cassidy Theme

"The private social agency can make definite contribution in the development of more efficient facilities for the care of public health," declared Dr. H. M. Cassidy at yesterday's meeting of the Samaritan Club.

In his lecture "Prevention and the Social Agencies" Dr. Cassidy, Director of the school of Social Studies, pointed out that there is ample scope for private organizations in exploring fields of public health welfare untouched by government agencies. The speaker emphasized that the training of volunteers, and the rehabilitation of disabled patients, are projects which private organizations must continue to carry out.

In conclusion, Dr. Cassidy stated that since government health organizations are hampered by many rigidities, the wider field of the private agency enables it to make important advances toward the desired goal of sickness prevention and a higher standard of public health.

Concerning Misfits

Harking back to the jumbled days of registration, an echo still haunts us—"Oh, and I'm taking Political Science," gurgled the freshe. "Dunno what it is, but it's only three hours a week—and doesn't it sound intellectual!" The young lady in question obviously had neither any idea of what subject she would be learning, of the value it might hold for her in the future, nor any idea of the university system as a whole.

Plunged into the subject, she might easily take a violent dislike to it, see no worth in it, and finally fail at the end of the year as a consequence of lack of interest. Alternatively, she might battle along in the wrong course for several months, then drop it and substitute another, in which case she would have to race against time to catch up on back lectures and reading. There is the slim chance that she would like the course—but that should not be left to chance.

Too Many Misfits

This is the case too often, not only regarding subjects, but whole courses. Often students arrive at university, and select a course which is a complete misfit for them. Some students will enter Honor Science because they were "good in science" in high school, or take English because they want to become writers. Misfit students become a hindrance to the classes in which they are enrolled as well as being miserable themselves. Professors soon lose interest in a student who lags behind the others, and drops in on lectures merely to observe the formalities.

An intelligent study of the Calendar might help these students somewhat, but a freshman confronted with the fact-filled Calendar with its cryptic cross-references and divisions, is more likely to be confused than aided.

No Help In The Calendar

The space in the Calendar is very limited, and only a bald outline of the courses is permissible. Entrance requirements, fees, campus organizations and facilities, educational standards expected of the student, a map of the University grounds, awards offered, and a summary of registration—all are included in the 250 pages of the Arts Calendar. All this, but no indication is given of the value of any of the courses offered, nor to what end they are to assist the student.

We do not blame the framers of the Calendar for this discrepancy, though the 35-odd pages in the back which are devoted to a sterile enumeration of prizes and awards for deserving students might better contain some helpful guide concerning the various courses. The awards list could be included in another, separate pamphlet.

A Bureau Is Needed

This, however, would merely be a half-way measure. Some vocational guidance centre, such as the University Advisory Bureau which was recently established on the campus for the benefit of students returned from active service, could be of inestimable value to students entering university for the first time.

This seems to be the only solution to a problem which affects every member of the student body. It would not be practicable to attempt to set up such bodies in every high-school, because of the comparatively small numbers of students who go on to university. Also, each university has problems peculiar to itself.

While the staff of the Registrar's Office are willing to help befuddled first-year students, there are far too many lost souls clamoring in front of the long desk to be handled adequately at registration time. The overworked Office has other matters to attend to, as well, and cannot be expected to devote precious time to guiding students.

Professors are always ready and willing to help, but the first-year student, entering the largest university in the British Empire, has a hard enough time to get his own bearings in the first few weeks, let alone know where kindly professors can be found.

No, it seems that a competent, well-trained advisory board, primarily concerned with the guidance of students into the educational channels best suited to their abilities and aspirations, is the only and best solution. A talk with our freshe might convince her that she wasn't the Political Science type, but might do better and be happier in Home Economics. That one probably would have.

Workmen cutting a niche in the U.C. rotunda yesterday to provide a space for a new phone booth were somewhat astonished to come upon an early Norman who had been bricked up in the wall. He had been there apparently for about five centuries, and apart from feeling a little tired from all the standing, he was in fair shape. (Enter a fair shape.)

The cat was immediately sent for, and the following one-act play took place. (For the benefit of pass students, the speech of the early Norman has been translated into basic pass English.)

CAT: Who did this to you and why?

E.N.: I was immured here by the King of the Lower Lake Region and Georgian Bay. I incurred the wrath of the head of the Philosophy department by asking him his personal opinion of the works of Plato. (Noises off stage. Haulhoys and flourishes.)

Hasty Heart Heartens

Seldom does New York send us a play to equal "The Hasty Heart" for skill in production, acting and writing. We were refreshed to witness a play concerning soldiers that concentrated on character study and not on patriotism and glory. John Patrick has succeeded in mingling a potentially tragic theme with hilarious comedy at the same time maintaining a naturalness that warms the audience the moment the curtain rises. Unlike so many plays that tend to treat the characters as puppets, Patrick has created a story about human-beings.

It is impossible to present laurels to any one member of the cast, since all rendered polished performances, but special mention should be made of Joseph Foulk (Blossom) for his remarkable yet unobtrusive pantomime. Moreover, we observed a vast improvement in Victor Chapin since his adventures in summer stock. Obviously, he reacts to competent direction. Needless to say, we are impressed with John Dall's ability for dialects.

Set in a convalescent ward of a Burma hospital, it is difficult to conceive this play having a comedy ending, but such it has, and it is handled so subtly, that one hardly perceives the author's technique. There is no dull moment in the whole comedy chiefly because the director and actors have concentrated on pace. Plaudits are due the Royal Alex. for presenting this play to Toronto.

We were extremely pleased to hear the string quartet attempting to play suitable incidental music between the two scenes of the last act, but why on earth must they shatter the mood of the production between the acts by rendering "Ole Man River" and snatches from Strauss waltzes? Better no music at all, than these inane attempts to entertain which completely cloud the atmosphere established when the curtain first rises.

—VERNON CHAPMAN

That Aint No Lady

Arthur Stringer once wrote a short story in which a character by the name of Benjamin Spindel constructed one good play by collocating the best parts from all his previous dramatic efforts. Mr. Stringer might do well to adopt the recipe, because his own new play The Lady Intervenes is as stiff, barren, sterile, frigid and brittle a piece of writing as one could reasonably expect to hear narrated from a stage.

The play concerns the clumsy, but not ineffective, efforts of one Lady Blythewood to adjust the lives of war-torn veterans, whom she has convalescing at her home near Toronto. The first ten minutes is taken with the relating of the characters who are in it and the function which they are to serve, which they proceed to do from there on in their own stereotyped way.

The dramatic situation is not without possibilities, but the play presents an extremely undernourished appearance chiefly because of a very jerky manner of writing and a desire on the author's part to be just too funny. He betrays all points from a domestic household in the midst of reconversion problems.

The pace of the production was slow; consistently slow so that it indicated that Sterndale Bennett, the producer, intended it to be that way. It was probably an attempt to improve the show by use of much pantomime, but it only made it duller.

The acting was adequate to the demands of the play. Anna Russell in the stella role as 'Lady B' gave a very slick, competent performance.

Roly Young's dictum that the Civic Theatre must avoid being "arty" would bear further interpretation now that the organization has backed a wooden horse.

Farce-ny With Larceny

Larceny Inc is the farcical story of two small-time crooks who buy a leather-goods store with the intention of digging from its basement to the vault of a neighbouring bank. Their plans misfire.

Max Hammer's acting as the 'brains' of the intended robbery held the Plaquest production together, but the cast under the directing of Joseph E. Jolley, displayed uniform good sense in handling the parts with just enough of the burlesque quality that makes farce enjoyable. William Shilman as the strong-arm assistant, and Shirley Rosenberg as the girl who tries to cut in on the deal, then turns romantic and moral over a drug-store clerk, deserve mention.

The thorough intelligence of this group is in every way commendable. They know the kind of play they can handle and they do a snappy, coherent job.

Two more performances are being given, the 16th and 21st.

CAT: Was the registration very high when you were a student?

E.N.: There were about fifty students here. Ten of them were at the Spartan Institute (now known as S.P.S.) studying applied bombastics. The remainder were distributed among the various colleges and were generally occupied with the mutation of lead shot into pearls. One male student was in the faculty of Astrology and he was expelled for predicting the examination questions.

CAT: What about female students?

E.N.: There were three wenches here at the school of yarn spinning.

CAT: Uh-huh, they call it a different name now.

A NEW OUTLOOK IN RELIGION

Our Civilization has largely overcome dogmatism in science and art and has in consequence advanced a pace. But religious dogmatism still handicaps our moral and spiritual progress.

Unitarians have overcome dogmatism in religion and thus are able to lead civilization in its spiritual quest. We are a fellowship of seekers. We seek answers to the age old questions—the origins of life and the world, the nature of the universe, the pattern of destiny, the purpose and meaning of life and death. But we seek primarily a better way of life for our generation and for those who will follow after us.

We recognize that none of these questions has been finally and conclusively answered and we believe that a free exchange of ideas and a wide divergence of opinion is not a handicap as some would hold, but an asset that leads to greater understanding and the discovery of new truth.

Join us on Sunday morning at 11 a.m. The Rev. A. Powell Davies of Washington, D.C., will conduct a special 100th Anniversary Service. An evening service at 7:30 p.m. will be conducted by the minister, Rev. William P. Jenkins. First Unitarian Church, 216 Jarvis St., just above Dundas. Write for free Unitarian literature.

Our Man Bailey Is Hopeful As Juniors Crowd Puck Session

The old woman who lived in the shoe had nothing on Ace Bailey, Varsity hockey coach, at the Arena yesterday afternoon. It was the occasion of the first hockey workout for the members of the Blue and White Junior B. team.

No less than 72 players turned up in hockey dress of every color and size to fight for a spot on the O.H.A. entry. Ace, assisted by Staff Smythe and Matt Dennis on the sidelines, presided over the practice with a weather eye open for hockey talent.

Th two goalkeepers, Paul Hutzulak, late of Marlboro Juniors, and John McGuire, a graduate of the Cornwall City League, withstood the rubber barrage of the two hours period in fine style. Up front, several players were impressive. Hugh Smythe of last year's Blues looked good, as did Paul Kane, former Marlboro Junior A forward and Ed Staley, recruit from last year's Navy team. Norm Dearlove and Bob Cooper of Tip Top Tailors and Marlboros, respectively, showed well on defence. Ace

It Can Happen Here

Those of you who did get up to the stadium yesterday afternoon were presented, we think, with a couple of games that were tops, strictly tops. The teams were separated in each game by but a single point, and the thrills of the spectacular intermissions were a movie man's technicolor dream in reality. It was one of those afternoons that goes into everyone's mental scrap book.

The Junior game was a treat to watch, with Hughie Bolton stealing the show in a marvellous display of football ability. He runs, tackles, kicks, passes — in short he's a coach's ideal. Johnny Maynard got the payoff touch on a beautiful fifty-yard gallop, but diminutive Jim Miladinov turned the tide in Riverdale's favor when he intercepted a pass on his own five and ran the ball out of the danger zone in the dying moments of the game.

The Senior game presented, without a doubt, the worst exhibition that rugby officialdom has given the Toronto public in many a day. The referee, Harry McBrien, never did get his scattered wits collected, and as a result the disorganized display of game supervision he came up with really smelted (Cries of "Shades of the Varsity-McMaster game" from two grandstand quarterbacks in the rear). 'Maybe Harry's out of his element — he should stick to basketball (Encores of "He went to Riverdale; sour grapes, sour grapes!")

And we saw some 'for instances' too: in the second quarter when that Malvern back recovered the Malvern fumble on his own five-yard line, tried to outrun several tacklers and was spilled behind his own line — a clear-cut safety touch that went for a single point; early in the second half when a Malvern backfield fumble on the Riverdale five was recovered by a Malvern man on the one for an offside pass — it gave Malvern yards, and after the ninth buck at that determined Riverdale bulwark they went over for a touch; the other Malvern touch — two players on the offensive side touched the ball on a third down pass play, not to mention the fact that the man who was credited with the score came out of the crowd on the sidelines.

If ever a coach had just cause to protest a game that's it. As Bobby Coulter said "There's no doubt about it; the better team lost". Wonder if anybody will do anything about it.

Take a Look Around

And view the scintillating literature which occupies the rest of the page, and sympathize with the trials of a sports writer struggling for air. The news, condensed to microscopic size is: the P.H.E. softball team white-washed the Saints in the first game of the finals yesterday... P.H.E. knows how to play softball, but with their pitcher they don't have to... she allowed only one Saint girl to reach first base. The Saints, when last heard from, were heading for the practice field where they will remain till the next game on Monday.

GOOD IDEA... Mrs. Jocelyn Evans has started a new service in this town, one which we consider to be of tremendous importance in the economic picture just NOW... it's an "EMPLOYEE RELATIONS" service, provides advice and practical experience in adding noon-day rest and recreation rooms for workers, suggests ways and means of bettering management-employee understanding. Formerly women's personnel manager of Research Enterprises and Fairweathers, Mrs. Evans brings to this new undertaking considerable experience in labor-management problems.

IT WAS REMEMBERED back ago, that Harry had done hearts aglow, But now the time of tide has changed And that poor guy is also changed, So listen men and lend your ears And now find out what Harry fears. His fears are all centred around those important females who used to give Harry the big rush but now have left him cold. Harry has not been checking up on the latest road to success as it is mapped out for him at STOLLERYS tie counter. Ties with vim, vigor, and vitality are daily brightening prospects for the better dates with his more intelligent friends. But Harry is not dumb, We expect to meet him shopping at FRANK STOLLERYS any day now.

GLOVES FOR MADEMOISELLE... those long-awaited almost elbow-length chamoisette gloves with self-contrast stitching are available now at Creeds... they're definitely distinctive with a short or three-quarter length sleeve and they do something for a well-turned wrist under one of the new wide coat cuffs. The shades, white, beige, brown, navy, black, chamois, and the price a moderate $1.98, which ought, between you and me, to be "buff" said. If it's a fine imported capeskin glove you're looking for, Creeds can sell 'em to you for $5.95, and they come straight from England in the suave new shades of rust, eggshell, chamois, copper. In a less expensive glove they can show you round-seam chamoisette Piquet in white, navy, brown, black, chamois, beige.

SMARTNESS WITH AN OXFORD ACCENT... well-timed fashions of exquisite character delineation. Joan Rigby's clothes are designed to give you the poise begotten of the knowledge that there are now better designs or workmanship available. Clothes as well as humans have a personality which reacts pleasantly or unpleasantly on other people. Joan Rigby's clothes have been made with that extra care and quality which tells a story of a social background. If you have out-of-town relations searching for clothes with a substantial future, Joan Rigby's clothes are the type of thing they should see.

We know that you know about this land of fair clothes, but you don't know about the "newie sensations". Are you pathetically allergic to hats? But not this one, it's a wonderful for long bobs easily disturbed by the prevailing wind, a snood affair with the catchiest little crown, trimmed with gold beads, easily put on and as cute, my girls, as

Man Or Mustache?

By Ross McLean

Moustache-cultivation is a painful process according to a soulful letter received by this department.

"Take a tip from one who knows," its author suggests. "Never joke about other people's moustaches."

"I did," he reports ruefully, "and now I'm staggering under the weight of eight days growth of down," attention failed to focus on the lip-wear during its early stages.

"For the first two days," the writer states, "I made a habit of thrusting out my upper lip valiantly when among close friends." Whether myopic or indifferent, he does not explain, but his close friends muffed their moustache-adoring cue, dismissed the gesture as an upper plate exercise.

"He's just exercising his upper plate," they would whisper in his absence. "Let's dismiss it."

"At night," his letter continues, "I revived my flagging spirits by counting each new hair in the boudoir mirror." The spirits, presumably, would lay down their flags.

"One, two, three o'airy," we can hear him humming happily as he tabulated, "oh gee, ain't I hairy?"

The third day witnessed the abandonment of this lip-thrusting. To janitorial disgust, he took to dropping clues.

In final dismay, he decided to do the unsuitable. He pointed!

Squinting curiously, a friend noticed the development.

"I was stimulated by success," he proclaims. "That night I rubbed salt on the newly-recognized growth and placed a glass of water nearby."

When the hairs got thirsty, he reasoned, they would reach out to drink. He would seize the unsuspecting, little parched hairs, tie them, and then he would have them, hah!

"This experiment flopped," he remarks discouragedly. By some pilial grapevine, the hairs had gotten wind of his scheme. They didn't budge.

The rascals! Fourth day brought triumphant climax.

A friend to whom the writer refers suggestively in upper case as SHE, peered near the writer's nose and observed: "You're growing a moustache!" "So," he concludes cheerily, "it was not in vain after all!"

No, my hairy one, having impressed your heroine, it-was-not-in-vain-after-all!

Say, does anyone need a slightly-used feature editor, clean-shaven, clean-living, and anxious to retreat to a hallowed hideaway where no meddling postal agent could deliver such epistles as the above.

Weary European Students Appeal To I.S.S. For Aid

LETTERS POUR IN

"I am so mentally weary that I have no kick left in me", writes a Greek student who is appealing to the European Relief Fund.

The E.S.R.F., the European branch of the I.S.S., has received hundreds of such letters from students whose studies have been interrupted by the war.

This student, Michel P., continues, "I have really no other resources at all apart from your sixty francs a month. I have been living from hand to mouth. I had told the old lady from whom I have rented my room that I should have to leave her and go to a work camp when the news of your monthly grant came. She insisted that I remain with her and try to live on that sum. She is the widow of a French artist, and her only means of livelihood is from letting rooms. You will realize her generosity to me when I tell you that her own difficulties are such that we are both reduced to re-peating to each other the same eternal excuse 'I don't feel hungry'."

I really do not know how much I owe her and she refuses to make me out a bill. But I would so much like to help her get rid of an old debt of 300 francs which has become a nightmare to her.

I do not wish to mislead you gentlemen, and I freely admit that my University work so far this year has been lamentable. Perhaps I have lacked resolution but as every human being needs to find an excuse to offer his own conscience, I comfort myself with the reflection that life has been too unbearably hard. If however you consider that I do not deserve your further help I shall not trouble you further. Yours, MICHEL P.

Other students have written in similar vein, when ill health due to the war has forced them to cease their studies; some of these are civilian refugees who have recently been interned and their financial condition is such that they are unable to meet their living and studying expenses. They would be most grateful for even advice, encouragement and moral support if it is impossible to render material support.

UNION HEADS BROKE LAW - BLACKWELL

Anniversary of Nazi Butchery Marked by Many Services

The first international students' conference since the war will be inaugurated in Prague tomorrow, Nov. 17, by a large International Students' Day manifestation under the patronage of Dr. Eduard Benes, president of the Czechoslovakian republic. It is hoped that some of the young Canadians who recently left for the Youth Conference in London will be able to attend. International students day is the anniversary of a typical act of Nazi savagery. Six years ago tomorrow all Czechoslovakian universities were ordered closed, and over 1,000 demonstrating students of Charles University, Prague, were massacred.

Originally set aside to commemorate these Czechoslovakian martyrs, International Students' Day has become for students the world over a symbol of what fascism means to education—extermination of a people's culture, perversion of science, martyrdom of those who upheld freedom of thought.

The date will be marked simultaneously in all universities throughout the world. Canadian universities from Dalhousie to British Columbia are planning special observances.

Adopted in this connection by the International Council of Students for endorsement in all countries was the following pledge:

"On this day, in our schools, colleges, and universities, wherever we are stationed in the struggle for freedom, we declare our hatred for the barbarous cruelty shown to the children in the Soviet Union and France, students in Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia, teachers in Norway, professors in Belgium and Poland—to educationalists in every land where Nazi invaders have trampled. We repudiate the Nazi perversion of education and science, and pledge ourselves in the schools and universities and in every way that we can to defend true learning and free research.

Prevention Of Legal Right Charged Against Picketers

CITES CRIMINAL CODE

Hon. Leslie Blackwell declared yesterday that the determination of Local 200, U.A.W., C.I.O. to limit the number of maintenance men it admitted to the Ford plant at Windsor was "a declaration of prevention of legal right."

Mr. Blackwell revealed this fact to a delegation of the University Fact-Finding Committee which interviewed him for an hour and a half in his Queen's Park office yesterday afternoon. Mr. Blackwell quoted Section 105 of the Criminal Code which permits peaceful picketing for purposes of persuasion but does not permit denial of entrance to premises to persons legally entitled to do so.

Ex-Service Students

Due to an error in The Varsity yesterday an incorrect list of the names of ex-service students who represent the student body on the University Advisory committee, was published.

The correct list should read: F. Huntley, Engineering; A. H. Stevens, Medicine; H. Lacey, Victoria, and J. Duggan, U.C.

The provincial police were sent to Windsor, Mr. Blackwell declared, at request of the Police Commission of Windsor of which Mayor Reame was the only dissenting member. Asked why provincial police were not used to effect entrance of the maintenance men he replied that the force was inadequate to remove the car blockade. Only a military force could have done so, he declared, and he was reluctant to resort to this measure before peaceful alternatives had been exhausted.

"To refuse to enforce the law on the grounds that it might be inflammatory," Mr. Blackwell declared, "is to set the law in abeyance. I was faced with the

"THE LAMPS OF LEARNING"

Closed Indefinitely - - -

One forlorn lamp standing, gaunt, amidst the rubble is the only remaining visible sign of the once proud University of The Hague, Holland.

Take a look at the picture at the left. Take a long look. Did you ever think the campus could change like that? It has, though. It will never be the same again.

It changed that way overnight, back in 1940. There should have been five graduating classes since then. There hasn't been one. The University is dead: a field of stone and rubble, and the ghosts of buildings, the skeletons of what were once mansions of the liberal arts.

The tower is down. The tower that remembered the dead of a former war is reduced to rubble and the truncated fragment of an archway. Hart House is gone, too. The great curtain walls crumpled like cardboard beneath the rain of bombs, and no one will ever worship in the chapel, or eat in the Great Hall, or read magazines in the common room again. Not that there are any magazines to read: there haven't been for five years.

That gaunt pile on the right of the picture was once the main library. There aren't any books there now, nor any shelves nor study rooms nor steps inviting a quiet smoke in the sun. The books went roaring up into yellow flames that night, and their ashes settled quietly across the campus; ashes that were once the wisdom of the ages and the treasure of thousands of students: now quite gone.

Nothing is left at all. Nothing but one iron lamp-post, its glass shattered, its socket lightless. You can call it the lamp of learning, if you like. It hasn't shone over this university for five full years.

No, it didn't happen here, though it very well might have. It happened at The Hague University, Holland, when the German bombers came down on like a flight of murderous birds.

The staff and students, driven into hiding in a night, are creeping back now to what was once their campus, and blinking in the sunlight amid its ruins. Tomorrow, on International Student Day, we remember them, as we remember the martyred students of Prague and all the scattered, harried, hunger-driven students of Europe and of China.

Through the International Student Service, we shall soon be able to do what we can for those who survive. But let us first bow our heads.

Medical Arts And Letters Club Hears Talk On Lawrence Of Arabia

"Lawrence of Arabia left an example to the youth of Great Britain, Canada, and the world in unselfishness, freedom from possessiveness, and just for power," proclaimed Dr. William Boyd, professor of Pathology and Bacteriology, in an address before the Medical Arts and Letters Club last night.

Dr. Boyd discussed Lawrence's career as a soldier and as a writer. He described the extravagant praise which Lawrence won for his guerilla tactics against the Turks in World War I. "He was" Dr. Boyd stated, "an example of Napoleon's great aphorism: 'in war it is not men, but the man that counts'."

Noting the wide acclaim awarded Lawrence's book "Seven Pillars of Wisdom," Dr. Boyd described his supreme work as "a mirror of his own strange nature." A complex personality with a rare combination of talents, Lawrence had the unmistakable stamp of greatness and goodness upon him.

Erroneous Commonwealth Picture Result Of Superficial Observation

Raymond Arthur Davies, Canadian foreign correspondent who has just returned from Russia told a public audience at the Ontario College of Education last night that there was democracy in Russia but not our kind, and that within the framework of their own interpretation of the state the Russians had a good deal of freedom.

"We must attempt to understand the Russians not by judgement but by observa-tion," he declared and pointed out that the Russian system was contradictory superficially, but logical when one looked into it. "Superficial interpretation misleads foreign opinion," he continued, and cited the observations of William L. White as a case in point.

Mr. Davies said that the chief desire of the Russians was peaceful conditions for them to rebuild their country after a war that had cost them an estimated 729 billion of dollars and the lives of 12-15 millions of their people. They planned to complete the rebuilding within three years.

With regard to the London conference, Mr. Davies said that the ordinary Russian citizen thought that it was terrible that we had not learned to act together. They wish for the functioning of the United Nations Organization essentially dominated by the three great powers of Great Britain, the United States and Russia, and say that if the three can work together there will be no war.

Former Canadian Rhodes Scholar Discusses English Labor Victory

"The Labour Party won its huge victory in the English elections because the people felt that the Tories had betrayed them," said David Lewis, secretary of the C.C.F. Party of Canada at the meeting of the C.C.F. Club yesterday. Mr. Lewis based his statement on his observations of England while he was a Rhodes scholar, and member of the Labour Party, at Oxford.

"For twenty years the Conservative Party has fooled the people with propaganda warning them that private property would be confiscated and personal liberty restricted if the Socialists won. But now," he continued, "the people have seen through this ruse and are sick of the Government whose policy made growth of Nazism and the resulting war possible.

"When things are going along well the people are satisfied with the government, it is only in times of trouble that they want a change. England is in great difficulty being faced with problems of reconversion, housing, the loss of her foreign assets and a host of others. The election of a Democratic Social government in England will prove an impetus to world improvement and will result in improvements in the social and economic structure of England.

INTERNATIONAL STUDENTS' DAY TOMORROW

Editorial

A Problem of Geography

At the risk of laboring a point we would like to draw your attention just once more to those ruined buildings on Page One of this issue. It is comforting to reflect that they are not ours — that a bumper crop of students still crowd our lecture rooms and laboratories and football fields.

They could have been ours—but we were spared. No planes, no storm troopers, no bombs. Just a sprinkling of uniforms in the corridors of Hart House and a sign advertising for blood donors in the U.C. rotunda.

We Did Pretty Well

Yes, it was a pretty good job that we were able to avoid the fate of The Hague and Louvain and Prague. It must have taken a lot of planning to keep us clear of destruction. It must have been because we were so fond of our freedom, because we all made a conscious effort to keep our democracy alive in its darkest hours. Or perhaps because we were so industrious, doing everything in our power to make the most of the educational facilities at our disposal.

No? Then perhaps it was because of our unceasing vigilance to keep the elements of dictatorship from gaining a foothold in our midst that our university was spared. Or because we put our material wealth unsparsingly into our educational institutions.

No, We Were Lucky

No, this isn't getting us anywhere. Our secret weapon of defence was one they told us about in third grade—geography. We had the foresight to plant ourselves in the middle of a continent that was destined to remain a comfortable distance from the nearest unfriendly aircraft. It was too bad about those unfortunate Europeans and Asians who didn't know enough to locate themselves in a safer hiding-place. Of course they should have known better, but you can't help feeling just a little sorry for them just the same.

Mind you, they did a pretty fair job of carrying on under the difficult conditions they brought on themselves by not studying up on their geography. They set up some more or less satisfactory lecture rooms in the cellars of European cities and in caves in the hills of the Asiatic interior. Of course quite a few of the students got themselves killed and many of the professors took leave of absence to spend a few years in concentration camps, but they really did the best they could under the circumstances.

Luck Was Against Them

Well, sooner or later they'll probably rebuild those shattered buildings on Page One. They'll clean away the rubble and build a crop of nice new modern buildings and that picture will be hung somewhere in their main building to remind them to be a little more careful about their geography in the future.

And maybe, as we watch those buildings grow, we might ask ourselves if we would have fared as well—if we hadn't been such superior geographers. Would we have stuck as persistently to our books and our slide-rules if a Nazi tail-gunner was busy dropping high explosives down our necks?

Perhaps we, too, would have made the grade. But just the same it might be just as well to give those people a hand with their job. They could use it—E. S.

WE CAN HELP

Overwork and poor food has caused a 200% increase of T.B. in France.

The remnants of books and scientific equipment in the late Caen University barely fills one room.

Housing shortage finds 3,000 Paris students without accommodation as winter sets in.

Serious inflation has brought economic misery and lower moral and intellectual standards to students and professors alike. Students who could no longer live on their resources were forced to the black market. Young boys were taught to steal, lie, and cheat the Germans.

World Student Relief, with headquarters at Geneva, supplied books, pencils, and paper to prisoners of war; now it is carrying on reconstruction among European universities.

In this cause, the Canadian Committee of International Student Service will attempt to raise $50,000 this year for relief of Chinese and European students. Plans for a Toronto campaign will be announced soon.

Army Odyssey

The Dieppe raid was scheduled to take place six weeks before it did and when bad weather forced its postponement, troops already embarked for France broke down and cried, Ross Munro discloses in "Gauntlet to Overlord," the first full account of Canada's Army given to the public.

Writing with authority gained from five years association with Canadian servicemen overseas as chief war correspondent for The Canadian Press, Munro in his college days a member of The Varsity staff has set down the story of the Canadians in 130,000-word book just published (by The Macmillan Co. of Canada, Ltd.)

Munro reveals the postponement for the first time in his chapter on the Aug. 19, 1942, Dieppe attack during which he was on or close to the erupting beaches for eight hours. Men from the 2nd Canadian Division were ready for the raid July 4 but tide and weather conditions had to be right. There were postponements and July 7 was the last day on which the raid could take place. The heartbreaking news of the cancellation came in mid-morning and Munro wrote in his diary that he had never been more depressed.

Six weeks later the same troops were sent on the raid, "a sudden decision dictated by the necessities of the North African landing which was being planned at the time and scheduled for early November." In the August raid Commando troops were assigned the tasks that paratroops were given in July, eliminating the need for such perfect weather conditions.

The CP war correspondent also writes of the men and the operations he saw at Spitsbergen, North Africa, Sicily, Italy, France, Belgium, Holland and Germany as the only reporter who was with the army from "Gauntlet" to "Overlord"—the code names given to the Spitsbergen operation in 1941 and the west front campaign.

The "fundamental reason for Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton's retirement from the Army command at the end of 1943 was conflict between the general and members of the cabinet over the question of splitting the Army," Munro says. Gen. McNaughton's retirement was concerned with his desire to keep the Army together as an entity for the west front campaign and his opposition to the dispatch to the Mediterranean of the 1st Canadian Corps.

It was intended originally to bring the 1st Division back from Italy in the fall of 1943, but instead the Canadian force there was increased to corps strength. "The Army commander was at variance with this plan," Munro relates. He opposed it and was overruled. In the fall of 1943, the Army commander, whose health was never very robust, took ill and at Christmas it was announced that he was leaving his army command because of ill health.

Munro says that Gen. McNaughton and the then defence minister, Col. J. L. Ralston, "clashed practically every time they met. The climax came when it was decided to send the 1st Corps to Italy. Then the differences between the two burst wide open."

Munro tells of "subtle criticism" of McNaughton which developed out of the conduct of the 2nd Canadian Corps on an exercise eight months before the retirement. Although the Corps was comparatively new and did not have all its equipment, harsh comments on the general's tactics appeared in the official report of the manoeuvre and were distributed to various headquarters.

"General McNaughton's prestige was damaged and his standing in the War Office and in Whitehall suffered," writes Munro. "This probably was a contributing factor to his retirement."

Records

November's
Discs

By far the most interesting of the November's releases is a new recording of the little-known Sixth Symphony in C by Schubert. Those interested in Schubert's phenomenal development as a writer for orchestra will be enthralled with Beechman's lucid interpretation. I can only marvel at the clarity of the woodwinds of the London Philharmonic. Victor has done a fair job with the recording, although the sound in the bass is muddy. The album is by no means a gem like the same artist's performance of Schubert's Fifth Symphony. But it is a good performance of symphony that should be better known and is worth acquiring if you are interested.

Timed to tie in with Canadian showings of a picture of the same name, both companies have issued recordings of Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue. The performance on Columbia records by Oscar Levant and the Philadelphia Orchestra under Ormandy is by far the worst version of this, the most abused music on records. Levant, in his attempts at emphasis, distorts the rhythms to an extent that is unbearable. Of course, it is impossible for him to arrive at any sort of decent phrasing because of the serythmic falsifications. Ormandy does not help the proceedings any by indulging in his usual practice of slowing down before every change of tempo.

Since Victor's old recording of Gershwin masterpiece was withdrawn, no acceptable substitute has been provided. The best performance now available is the one that Victor has re-issued, in one of its worthless paper albums, with Sanroma and the Boston Pops. This, despite the fact that it is rather stilted and high-brow.

These were the only new records that I was able to hear this month. Victor has also released recordings of Frank's Choral Prelude and Fugue with Rubenstein and Schumann's Piano Concerto with Arrau and the Detroit Symphony. Columbia offers Stravinsky's Scene de Ballet and an old recording of Tchaikovsky's Swan Lake Ballet with a new picture on the cover. I imagine that the picture makes little difference and that Dora's performance of this pleasant music is as vital and dynamic as ever.

U. C. Men To Play School; Whipped Vic In Last Half

An underrated University College rugby team overcame a six-point deficit in the last half of the semi-final game yesterday afternoon at the Stadium to beat Victoria College 8-6. The Artsmen will now play on Wednesday the winner of Monday's Sr. S.P.S.-St. Mike's match to determine the holder of the Mulock Cup for 1945.

After a scoreless first half, Vic, recovered a U.C. fumble behind the goal line for a touch, and followed it up with a neat placement kick for the extra point. Within five minutes of the Vic. score, the U.C. machine began to roll down the field and scored on Volpe's plunge from the seven-yard line, which was followed up by Edmond's convert. The tie score lasted until midway through the final quarter when Staley kicked to the deadline, and he followed up with another single just before the end of the game.

The second stanza started with U.C. holding the ball on their own 40. The Red and White attempted a kick on their third down, but Rosen's snap was bad and Staley was stopped before he could boot. Vic. took possession of the ball and plunged for yards, and on their next third down they kicked to the U.C. two-yard marker. U.C. managed to push the ball back to their own 50 but Cooke, Burford and Wheeler combined for two first downs before the Vic men were held by a revitalized U.C. line on the one-yard line. U.C. worked the ball out to their own 40 but Vic made a 10-yard runback. A pass from Cooke to Thompson netted Vic. 15 yards and Thompson ran the ball to the U.C. eight-yard post. Burford plunged for six yards to leave them two short of a touch. The eventual winners didn't have possession of the ball in the Vic. end at all during the whole quarter.

Vic., in meeting defeat for the first time this season, put up a hard fight and were much the better team for the first half of the game and the early minutes of the third quarter. The U.C. line was unable to hold the charging Vic. team until late in the game, when they came to life. Kuhn and Rosen particularly shone for U.C. while Heinbuch and Morris turned in a similar job for Vic. Nick Volpe was the individual star of the game as he turned in a flawless job at quarterback for the winners, and scored their only touchdown to put his team back into the running. Until he was hurt in the final quarter, Burford quarterbacked a good game for Vic. Vic. offensive power was concentrated in Cooke, London and Wheeler. Staley turned in a below-par game but fortunately Cooper came to his rescue with some timely hoists.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Jerry Ewins

Our Minds Have Tender Hopes

The show starts at five o'clock every night in the big gym, and will likely have a run of at least fifteen weeks. The premiere was on Wednesday night, but once the cast are in their proper roles and the multitude of understudies have acquired parts in some of the lesser plays produced around Hart House, the feature performers will really begin to give the customers their money's worth.

The best part of last year's Blues is still floating around, but things are going to be a little tougher this time, and some of them had better pull up their socks if they expect to snare a spot on the team. Fellows like Roy Tredgett, Joe Meschino, Gord Wallace, Louis Glait, Van Vandermark, Whitey Clayton, Barry Lowes, Stu Scott, and a couple of outsiders, Jones and Zeaton will be tough to beat, mighty tough. Doesn't seem as if the Blues can help but come up with a good outfit—what'll they look like about the middle of December?

Two Games To Go

We finally were right about something. When last year's All-Star selections were anxiously scanned by a bewildered sports writer, whose job it was to co-ordinate the various team managers' nominees, he found that Nick Volpe's name appeared on but one man's first team—his own. Well yesterday Nick confounded even his severest critics by calling one of the best games seen in Intramural circles in years, not to mention the fact that he intercepted a desperation Vic pass in the late stages of the game to definitely turn the tide in U.C.'s favor. His third down quarter sneaks were tops too, but he received some swell support from Bruce Tetmar and Nels Kuhn both on offense and defence. We were genuinely sorry to see Freddy Burford limp from the game in the last quarter—a good sport and a great guy.

Campus Chatterings

John McCamus is tearing his hair these days because he says that nobody is volunteering to go up to Newmarket on Sunday to brush out the ski trails. If you're the outdoor type, give him a call at Hy. 1760 and make car-pool arrangements... Stu Scott dressed for the Beaches Wednesday but didn't get into the game. He'll probably play Saturday... They carted them away yesterday, in very broad daylight, and loud and long were the wails and moans that rent the autumn air. All good men and true bowed their heads

The Sportswoman

By Betty Mutz

When the customary Sportswoman must needs be absent, some one else must labor over its composition. Thus were we seen off with the job, on the theory that if Polly can do it, surely her sister can, too. Therefore, her sister will, willingly... (chained and manacled to the machine). Then here is what happened in basketball:

The P.H.E. Jr. team trimmed Vic. B, 26-13. 'Twas a fast game, and the Vic guards did well to hold down the powerful P.H.E. six as they did. Nurses defeated Vic. Jr., in a closely fought game, by 10-8. The U.C. Sr. team white-washed St. Hilda's Sr. to the tune of 20-0. In a fast, close fight, St. Hilda's Fr. beat Vic II, 17-15. Then, P.H.E. Sr. left U.C. Sr. well behind, 24-14, in a game that was, at first, rather sloppy, but whipped into shape in the last three quarters, with very few fouls, as it should be. Physio won over St. Hilda's 10-4. The low score was the result of fine guarding on each side and not, indeed, of a slow game. Finally Meds A beat Vic. II by one point, while Meds B tied O.T. Fr. 22-all.

These were the only games, out of sixteen that were scheduled, to be reported. Either the others weren't played at all, through lack of ambition, or else the persons responsible neglected to bring in the reports to the officers of the basketball club. When no game report is sent in, a large zero is placed in the space beside the game's scheduled time, and so is all effort misspent. Therefore, managers, remember your responsibility: keep your teams to the timetable, and then report the results of the game to Sue Gray, H.U. 9500, or bring them to Room 82, U.C.

SPS Favored To Meet UC In Cup Final Wednesday

U.C.'S FOURTH YEAR IN ROW

The Mulock Cup is on the block again. Come Wednesday afternoon the interfaculty rugby finalists take to the Stadium field for the annual trophy classic. U.C. won their ticket to the game last Thursday with their win over Vic. Sr. School and St. Mike's vie for the other slot this afternoon. Current wagers find the School squad heavy favorites over the Saints.

Rivalry between the respective contenders will not be confined to the field by any means. It will overflow into the stands with cheerleaders and various other features. With the close of the intercollegiate series college enthusiasm has returned nearly to its wartime height. Latest information from School says that if they down St. Mike's they will skip lectures legitimately on Wednesday and hike to the game to ruin their larynges with Toike Oike's.

U.C. will not be outdone by the School efforts however but are planning their own methods of rousing their fans. It is anticipated that football lovers from the other colleges will turn out in large numbers to witness the final struggle of the season.

With their surprise win over Vic last week U.C., the current cup holders, make the finals for the fourth consecutive year. Last year they nosed out the School squad by a 3-1 score. The year before the Engineers decided U.C., 8-2.

Staley, who has sparked the Red and White team all season, is expected to make the going plenty tough for the opposition. Milne, Hamm, and McKnight are Schoolmen most likely to succeed. For St. Mike's ex-navy man Niero and Buair will likely star.

Service Essential Musgrave States

We must substitute service for profit-seeking as the motive for our economic activities if we wish to avoid further disasters in the economic life of the world," said Mr. A. K. Musgrave in an address to the Campus Co-op in Cartwright Hall last Thursday. Mr. Musgrave, a veteran of this war, is forming a Co-op on this campus for servicemen.

Co-operation is a way of life in which each individual, in his own interest, automatically aids the rest of the group; whereas, in ordinary business advancement was often achieved by "walking on the heads of others," stated Mr. Musgrave.

"In the services we learned to subordinate our individual desires to the benefit of the group, and while we don't want a regimented civil life, it is a good idea to carry our traditions of fellowship and team-work back with us," he explained.

Civic Elections L.P.P. Subject

Participation in the coming Toronto civic elections is among the subjects which will be discussed at the business meeting of the University Labour Progressive Club, to be held at eight o'clock this evening in Wymilwood.

"The meeting is an open one, and all those of progressive outlook and sympathies are urged to attend." So stated Margaret Jersak, secretary of the club's interim committee. Other members include Ken Morrison, Chairman; Phyllis Cohen, Vice-Chairman; Steve Endicott, Treasurer; and Henry Rosenthal, Educational Director. An informal discussion of veteran's problems will be led by Gordon McLean, himself a returned man, and nominations will be received for officers of the permanent executive.

Among the activities of the club are monthly open meetings, and a series of bi-weekly study groups on Marxism in theory and practice, held at 274 College St.

Potential Optometrists Use Converted Dwelling

Eyes right!

In military jargon that is the creed of the 150 students who daily take classes in the converted house on the corner of St. George and Sussex. Proudly displaying building and occupation permits, it is the home of the Ontario College of Optometry.

In its lecture rooms and laboratories that number of young men (many of whom have recently left the service) are qualifying for the right to attend Ontario's eyes.

There, in the new wing, third year students work in an eight-cubed clinic, receiving practice in the description of glasses. Equipment used is identical to that which they will employ after graduation. Free eye-testing service for University students is rendered here. Joe College, by making an appointment, can determine whether he is 30/20 or 45/60 in his right eye, and the fledgling optometrist chalks up another practice prescription.

The new wing also contains a Mechanical Laboratory where, at a dozen benches, students work with special grinding machines over the delicate lenses of today's scientifically-constructed eyeglasses. Clinic and Lab work comprise the most important courses in the final year of optometry.

Student oculists also study Visual Training whose purpose is to keep both eyes working efficiently and equally, to prevent one eye from "loafing" and to train the eyes to interpret what they see. Visual Training, if applied early, in some cases enable the young man or woman to escape the fate of spectacles.

Not yet a part of the University, although first year students attend certain lectures in biology, psychology, anatomy and physics through the Department of University Extension, the College has been recently developed from a one-year course to a three-year one.

It is hoped by Dean J. E. Thompson that in the next five years the College may become part of the University.

COMMITTEE REPORTS STRIKE FACTS

Dark Shades Cause Strain Says Illumination Expert

"The reason why the illumination in houses and buildings is bad is that people like to use dark shades which don't show the dirt," Mr. H. R. Logan E. E. told the members of the Royal Canadian Institute Friday evening. "These dark shades will not reflect light and as a result there is too much contrast between the lights and the rest of the room and the room is unevenly lighted. The eye strain resulting from this contrast causes definite discomfort."

Mr. Logan traced the development of eyes in animals from the lowest forms which are only able to distinguish between dark and light to those of the human which can distinguish or resolve different objects and see color. In fish and nocturnal animals the sensitive layer is made up of rods which are connected together for more sensitivity in the feeble light that surrounds them. The outer edges of the human eye are similar to this but the inner or centre part of the eye is made up of cones each of which is directly connected to the brain. It is this part of our eyes which allow us to read printing and do any of the other things which require our eyes and give us enjoyment through them.

Recently studies have been made to find an illuminating system that distributes the light well and reduces contrast so as to relieve eye strain. This work has shown that fluorescent lights running the whole length of the room and lying flush with the ceiling used together with light reflecting walls and furnishings the most satisfactory results. Men in this field, known as Illumination Engineers, have been called on to plan the lighting system of factories, stores and the post-war luxury railroad coach.

High Incomes and Full Employment Post-War Hope Says Dr. Cassidy

Dr. H. Cassidy, director of the School of Social Work, told the University Women's Club Saturday that a higher national income and full employment would strengthen the Dominion Government's policy for better relations between the federal and provincial governments.

"The Dominion Government", he said, "realizes that for efficient post-war reconstruction there must be congenial Dominion-Provincial relations, with federal leadership in all fields."

Quoting a report issued by the government in August, Dr. Cassidy outlined a government plan for grants to the provinces for highways, forest conservation, and other public works projects plus assumption of 20 percent of the cost of needed projects of private enterprise should fail.

Turning to the social security scheme, Dr. Cassidy thought it to be inadequate. He pointed out that people should be able to retire before seventy, the present

School Approves Distinctive Flag

If the decision was to be left to our campus Engineers, Canada would soon have a distinctive national flag and anthem. The Engineering Parliament on Friday voted by a small margin in favor of its government's resolution to adopt both.

The government, represented by Art Jackes and John Mills, contended that the flying of the Union Jack abroad as the Canadian flag has led to confusion, misunderstanding, and ridicule. They argued that patriotism does not comprise only loyalty to Britain and the Empire, but is a more personal feeling—pride in family, community, and homeland. The government deemed a Canadian flag and anthem essential to our national unity, and a necessity in view of Canada's increased prominence in world affairs.

Larry Maughan and Bob Meeken, opposition speakers, declared that while nationalism here would not affect our attitude toward Britain, it would decrease Britain's friendship for us, resulting in closer ties with the United States. This was construed to mean eventual economic and political domination by that country. In resting their case, the opposition stated that Empire unity is essential to world unity.

S. M. Hermant & Local 154 Both Allege "Bad Faith"

PREPARE FORD STRIKE REPORT

Allegations of "bad faith" on the part of both the Imperial Optical Company and Local 514 UE-CIO are reported in a brief presented last night by the University Fact-Finding Committee on Strikes.

The brief quotes a statement of the company that it has "treated union organizers in good faith. Irresponsible action on the part of the union has made it impossible for the Imperial Optical Company to enter into a contractual relationship with the union."

The Union advances as evidence of the company's "bad faith" the report that "the Central Ontario Industrial Relations Institute suspended the company from membership in August, after they had refused to accept the Institute's advice and sign the agreement which the Institute had negotiated for the Company."

The committee's brief presents an account of the conciliation proceedings as presented in "Reports of Conciliation Board re Imperial Optical Company vs. Local 514, UE-CIO."

According to the brief, Local 154 applied on July 27, 1944, to the Ontario Labor Relations Board for certification as bargaining agent. This was granted on October 25, 1944. Negotiations broke down in March, 1945. A conciliation board was set up on May 14, 1945, and on July 5 brought in a unanimous recommendation for voluntary check-off which, according to the brief, implied union recognition. The board further recommended that an agreement be signed by the parties concerned not later than August 1, 1945. This recommendation was signed for the company by E. M. Dillon and for the union by I. Himel and by A. Brady, chairman of the board. The committee points out in its

Avukah Discusses Palestine Crisis

"Britain is standing beside a powder keg in Palestine with lighted match," Heinz Warschauer, associate editor of Magazine Digest, told Avukah Thursday night, "She will not approach the keg; she will let the problem slide unless she is strongly persuaded to do something at once."

"The British government," continued Mr. Warschauer, who was Palestine correspondent for a Berlin Jewish newspaper in 1937, "sees in the Palestine situation a source of further friction in India because the Arabs in the Holy Land have 19,000,000 co-religionists in India who are exceedingly interested in how she will handle the problem of Jewish Immigration."

Max Day, president of Avukah told the meeting that the society will concentrate this year on a study of the history of Zionist culture and the productions of Zionism.

TORONTO SWAMPS WESTERN 4-0

"Sweats It Out" As Police Probe

Just sixty minutes but the most uncomfortable hour of his life, says Stephen Stykolt, IV Poli Sci., about one unforgettable episode in his escape from Europe in 1939.

He and his family had left their native Warsaw for Bucharest at war's outbreak just fourteen hours ahead of the Nazis and had made their way to France where they remained for ten months.

France's surrender was the signal of another moving day for the Stykolt's and they headed toward Spain, travelling on a 24-hour pass that had been extended "by dint of good fortune and paternal influence to 96 hours and that allowed them to reach the Portuguese border."

The hour devoted to sweating out the extension outside the offices of the Spanish secret police was, according to Stykolt, the most hauntingly uncomfortable of his life.

Without the extension, the family would probably not have reached the safety of this continent. From Europe they travelled to Rio de Janeiro and from there to New York and Toronto.

"The future," queried the man known as "Styk" as he lighted his third cigarette. "It's hard to tell. Maybe an M.A. and then a career evolving around Economics. Teaching or politics, perhaps. I haven't really decided yet."

The young woman interviewer buffed her own scarlet and gold pin with a weary Kleenex and inquired about his famous repertoire of enchanting French ditties. He laughed and asked: "Do you take French?"

The reporter nodded. "Then," he apologized "I can't sing them to you."

Married Couples Dance At "Vic"

The Victoria College Union played host to thirty-five married couples at Wymilwood Saturday when the V.C.U. sponsored a dance for the married students of the college.

Don Meek, Social Director of the Union told The Varsity that the dance was designed to make married students feel both welcome and essential in their participation in college activities.

Undeclared Blues End With Shutout

The University of Toronto Soccer Blues drubbed Western 4-0 at London Saturday afternoon to finish the season undeclared. This was the second victory registered over the Mustangs this year, the first coming in Toronto three weeks ago by a 6-1 count.

The game was played under the worst of soccer conditions, as a steady rain turned the field into a quagmire, and goalkeeping especially was most difficult. Although the contest promised to be a free-scoring affair, offensive play was even more restricted than defensive in this type of setting.

Western had the advantage of the wind in the first half, and as a result, play was fairly even. Neither team had many direct shots on goal, and good scoring chances ended up with the ball hitting the goalposts or the goalie wallowing in the mud with the ball safely in his hands. The only score of the half came early, when Willie Clarkson netted a free kick, after a foul on Toronto in the Western defensive zone.

All through the second half, Toronto subjected Western's goalkeeper Zarzon to a steady barrage of leather, and only due to his good netminding was the score held at three more goals. The Varsity forwards dominated the play, while the backs gave out with sound defensive work behind the Toronto firing-line. Spooner, on a pass from Shinoba, scored first, on a weak goal that merely slid by Zarzon. A few minutes later Spooner again counted, on a ball crossed to him from the left-hand corner. Given a free kick late in the half, Thompson scored the last goal of the game. Zarzon was helpless on the shot, stand-

Seminar-Smarties

Are you a seminar-smartie? Do you jump in at the middle of the professor's argument before he has had time to come to the conclusion? Do you assume a knowing air as soon as you hear a discussion, and at once turn it into an argument?

If you are this obnoxious type of student, we heartily dislike you as a person, and deplore you as a thorn in the side of any discussion group. When you spread your activities as far as the lecture-room, we really hate you.

There's One In Every Class

In almost every classroom there exists an erudite chatterbox who is over-willing to seize upon any chance that will enable him to air his wisdom, or rather, knowledge of long words. He will forsake the basic beauty of simple English, and roam far afield into rhetoric, with much waving of the hands, in an attempt to have a learned discussion with the professor on some minor detail of the lecture. He will finish by confusing the rest of the students, and side-tracking the whole group away from the subject.

These pests can often be marked by their opening sentence, interposed at the moment the professor pauses for breath: "Mmmmm, well don't you think this is the correct manner of approach?" Then follows a lengthy, disconnected diatribe on some detail of the subject. Unfortunately, most professors are too well-mannered to bring to class suitable instruments for dealing with these people, and, hoping to evoke a true discussion, hear them out until patience wears thin.

Professors Like Questions

No professor minds having questions thrown at him in the middle of a lecture, if they are pertinent to the subject and show that some point needs amplification. Such queries are helpful to the class as a whole, for the same question may be lurking in the minds of other students. But the place for an intellectual duel on a side-issue is hardly in the centre of a crowded classroom, where people are trying to take down notes coherently. It is over cups of coffee, on the debating floor, or even in the professor's private office that such broadsides should be delivered. Since this particular type needs an audience, we pray that they form a debating society.

Fundamentally Selfish

It may be that the seminar-party doesn't realize that he is being selfish and a hindrance to his classmates. He is too interested in the manifestation of his own superiority to be aware of others, except in the role of audience. And he really is being selfish. The lecturer has only a certain time in which to give the main points of the subject for the day. An undue amount of caustic criticism and questions leading into long harangues will hold up the whole class, and waste the time of both professor and students.

Moreover, such a discussion, if discussion it may be called, is generally carried on between two people, and thus the whole purpose of the group is lost. Seminars exist with the design of creating healthy discussion of the subject, with all members participating, to awaken interest in the student. The professor is there to lead the talk into the proper channels, suggest reading material, and to explain any difficulties which may have arisen during the course of study.

It is easy to see how all this can be lost through the determined efforts of a seminar-smarty. One will disrupt the group; two will finish it off completely.

What can be done about these pests? Practically anything short of physical violence. Perhaps a few hints from outspoken classmates will have some effect. Maybe then they will come to see that they are displaying not their intelligence, but their unintelligent attitude in being deliberately uncooperative.

Corwin
And Pratt

Norman Corwin's On a Note of Triumph (Mason Book Co. $2.00) is an ambitious attempt to summarize the events and problems of war and victory in Europe. A big subject difficult to objectify, and Corwin has unfortunately chosen a stock of expression so well worn as to be no more forceful than the fundamental bare abstractions. The humble democratic "little guy" the paranoic Nazi giant and the bereaved mother with her "tall, straight thought" are thoroughly genuine concepts, but simplified to the lines of the enlistment poster.

The very backbone of the piece is wrought largely through the various media of hack expression: the war-bond drive slogan, the rotary club pep-talk, the senatorial statement for the press, and at best, the verbatim excerpt from reports of the foreign correspondent. More effective are the transcripts from speeches of political figures, but how much less effective, especially to utterances with their direct functional present generation, than the original bearing on actual events.

What might have been colloquial vigor of diction is enervated by a too professional slickness of tone—not an aesthetic intensification, but a mere "slick" conventionalizing, mutual dilution from attempting to alloy art and life instead of plating art upon a core of life.

Still, I cannot imagine why the author's preface insists so strongly on the non-poetic nature of the work. Besides forceful rhythms and measured phrasing, we find the occasional vivid image and figurative association of incongruities which characterize the "poetic". Furthermore, the bracketed additions, missing in the original radio script and, on the whole, superior to the rest of the production, suggest that Corwin possesses a talent which he can exploit as far as the C.B.S. sees fit. At any rate it should be interesting to see what Corwin might produce if he were once free of the severe limitations (at present) of the broadcasting medium.

Covering roughly the same ground, but with less theatrics and more integrity, is E. J. Pratt's new ten-page poem They Are Returning (McMillan of Canada, 50 cents). The length is significant. Too serious in theme to be carried any great length by the verbal gusto of a Chinchorot, it is still long enough to accommodate the author's usual epic amplitude, and short enough to avoid the need for the rather flat type which characterizes parts of Brébeuf—short enough.

Rudy Mental, compositor emeritus of The Varsity, while digging into page four last evening, struck oil.

The Cat just struck.

—WOO, EROS, RAGO, JAKE, PHILIPINO, HORMONE, RAZBRY, TIDDYWEE, EBBERT, TIDDY WOO, ETHELBERG, QUEEN'S OWN, MEHITABEL, FROLO, OMAR, MINOS, GRRR, HYPHEN, SNICKLEFRITZ, DA-DA-BIT, ALLEY CAT, SHREDLU, KITTY FOYLE, JAYDEE, OLD MYLO, L'L OIKE, BUBBLES, BLOOD AND GUTS, OEPIDUS, FUN PENN, MCSWILL, MEOW, SAITTEN KITTEN, PU TRID, KASHOO, PIJ.

also to admit as structure and not mere ornament the vigorous intellectual quality of some of Pratt's briefer lyrics, Come Away Death, for one.

For the rest, the poem is typical of Pratt's peculiar aloofness from the main stream of contemporary poetry. To some extent, he stands apart in time-reminders of the nineteenth century: "world" is rhymed with "furled," the dead are "uncung" (but note "amorphous" too), and with the coming of war "The game was on another field." These of course are mere echoes. Pratt is essentially, matter and temper, thoroughly modern, and his individuality consists in something more than the mere austere denial of deep philosophic or dark psychoneurotic elements; it consists in his artistic and intellectual grip on the diversity of the modern world and its antecedents.

He disciplines the turbulent vocabulary of war and industry in a balanced structure of phrase. He builds Homeric catalogues from the place-names of the commune. He roots the present to a geological or anthropological past: "Cunning of Science, terror of the brute, /And running back along the human tree, /Could come stemming from a simian root..." He deepens historical perspective through the subtle medium of the school boy: "One who had followed in a Latin book/ the story of the Second Punic War..."

Pratt has always been and still is a limited poet, if you like, a "minor" poet. Such designations are purely historical. The student may make a few reservations, but the ordinary intelligent reader will find They Are Returning a satisfying and quietly-felt piece of craftsmanship. —DUNCAN ROBERTSON

The Unorthodox Is Valuable

Reginald Godden has established his Toronto reputation by playing contemporary music and works not generally known. Continuing in this theme, his program for the Sunday evening concert last night was studded with contemporary works. Judging from the remarks of the young lady who sat in front of me, this practice gives rise to a certain amount of confusion on the part of the listener. The question she asked was why does he do it. The answer is twofold—both because he plays modern music well, and because he is convinced that much good music is being produced today. He is performing a valuable service by putting unfamiliar works before the public.

Another thing that perplexed the young lady was Mr. Godden's "peculiar technique". For her information and for others who may be baffled, there are actually good reasons for all his "unorthodox" motions. The best reason is that his playing has improved immeasurably since he adopted this new method. Developed originally by E. Robert Schmitz, the method was designed to produce a technique that would both conserve the energy of the performer and tie in intimately with musical interpretations. However, I would not vouch for the fact that all of Mr. Godden's motions would be approved of by Mr. Schmitz. Nor do I believe that the teacher would be enthusiastic for the particular Russian works that Mr. Godden chose. However that may be, it was a program well performed and enthusiastically received. —PHILIP FREEDMAN.

Versatility at Pops

Versatility was the keynote of Friday night's Pops performance. Both soloist and conductor alternated between piano and podium with facility and obvious enjoyment. While pianist-composer Percy Grainger conducted two of his new compositions, Sir Ernest fulfilled the piano obligations with relish and ebullience. Then the roles were reversed; Sir Ernest led, and Mr. Grainger cavorted at the piano through his Handel in the Strand. Shepherd's Hey was endorsed by Sir Ernest, after the coy Percy declined to conduct.

To my taste the musical climax of the evening came with Charles Wakefield Cadman's American Suite, which is by turns haunting, reflective and jocular. Perhaps we shall hear this composer's masterful Dark Danzons of the Mardi Gras here someday. The variations from Tchaikovsky's third orchestral suite were surprisingly effective—little-known but meritorious, given a fine, intelligent reading (literally) by Sir Ernest. Mr. Grainger was also heard as soloist in Fauré's lovely, introspective Ballade. His approach was musically always and somewhat freer of that sloppiness which has characterized his recent performances. —DOUG ROSS.

Victoria College Harriers Garner Interfaculty Title

The Victoria College team ran off with the Senior Interfaculty Harrier Meet at High Park Saturday morning with a low total of 33 points. Trinity finished second with 40 points, St. Mike's third with 91 and Wycliffe fourth with 106.

D. R. Preston, Vic, took first place, running the distance in 29 minutes, 15 seconds. Joe Taylor, U.C., Senior Intercollegiate Mile- and Three-Mile Champion, grabbed second position 50 yards behind the winner. Jack Goering, Trinity, a member of the Intercollegiate Championship Harrier team, ran in third place, followed by Don Flack, Vic, the Junior Interfaculty winner of two weeks ago. The winning team from Vic had Preston first, Flack fourth, Sloan sixth, McNeil ninth, and Speers thirteenth to capture the key positions in the meet.

Due to the keen interest shown by all participants, the meet was a complete success. It was held under a cloudy sky, with a typical autumn breeze providing the proper atmosphere. As Dr. Taylor fired the starting gun, 32 runners sped off on the five-mile jaunt.

Wycliffe lived up to their reputation as "the harrier college" by having a record entry of 12 contestants.

With Mr. G. Parke-Taylor of Wycliffe and Dr. Kirkwood of Trinity assisting, everything was run off in fine style, and was a fitting climax to the season's outdoor track activities.

Speaking OF SPORT

There Ain't No Justice

Seems as though every time we predict somebody to win something they forthwith go out and lose it. Vic came through nicely last Thursday, to bring current events up to date.

The obvious moral to it all is to eliminate the prognosticating keys from all sports writers, thus keeping the literary mouth shut on such subjects; but upon pondering the problem further the logical answer dawns like morning in the Peer Gynt Suite. The somebodies you intimate will lose take it upon themselves to personally prove that you are a bum, your progenitor was a bum, and you descended from a long line of bums—and the funny part of it that they usually make their point. Many's the top-flight team that has gone down to defeat before a bunch of nobodies who come out fighting mad from a session with a newspaper column onto the playing field. Therefore, some good does accrue, even if a superficial examination does not betray its secrecy.

All that remains now is for us to pick a Mulock Cup winner and the other finalist's a cinch. Well, we'll put it this way . . . U.C. looked good last time out and should cop the cup. If Senior School trample on the Irish today they can't miss the mug. That levels things off but good — no hitting below the belt boys; go to your neutral corners and come out fighting!

Monday's Meanderings

The Western Mustangs are still on the prowl according to the week-end reports from down Chatham way. They took advantage of a couple of fumbles to down the Windsor Rockets 9-6 in a Kivani's benefit game in that fair city Saturday afternoon. The margin of victory was supplied by the talented toe of Captain Herb Ballantyne in a last quarter play . . . Coach Reeve decided not to use Stu Scott in Saturday's Beach-Indian game as Indians had entered a protest against him, but Scott might yet get into the Argo affair this week . . . It is rumored that the Basketball Blues will not be coached by Warren Stevens this year, and that a couple of names will be considered by the Athletic Directorate Tuesday night . . . Bernie Taylor and his Vic boys have been eliminated from Interfaculty play, but the fact remains that Bernie exhibited one of the best-coached teams in the circuit. He was coaxed away from his O.C.E. duties this fall to take over a team with little experience, and the success of the team is a direct tribute to his personal perseverance.

Question of The Moment

Why didn't Bob Cunningham kick for Varsity this season, and has Johnny Metras been talking to him yet?

Alexander, a vivacious comedienne with incredibly expressive eyebrows. Yes, we said eyebrows.

The famous Four Professors, most cherished memory of the 1943 show, did a post-war encore that missed their old finesse but panicked newcomers. This year we liked better a brief but joyous tap dance routine by Clara Smith and Mitchell Keskanek.

The music was catchy and substantial, when the orchestra could agree about it; Shirley Schipper blued her way through McLancholy Midnight with appropriate huskiness; dictator El Chisti stopped the show with his every gesture: which surprised no one, because Al Siegel always stops the show, whether he has any lines or not.

For the choruses, tall and short, there is only one word: superlative. Their routines were smooth, their grooming impeccable, and they danced as if they enjoyed it.

On the debit side, we point to thinness of script, too brief a finale, and relatively uninspired songs by the standards of former years. We complain that we had too often the feeling that we'd seen this before. The "blackout" chorus, the Four Professors, the producer's speech interrupted by an impatient player, the C.O.T.C. take-off, and the cabaret finale with a blues song, a trio, and unfunny interjections: it's all been done.

But, Jove, it was done well!

—HUGH KENNER.

Mary Hamilton . . . A Profile

The Saint's softball team have not spent a very restful week-end, what with the prospect of a second game of the finals to be played this afternoon looming large on the horizon. When last heard from they were practicing like mad . . . for their opponent is to be P.H.E. II, but most formidable of all was the thought of standing up to bat under the withering fire of the pitcher Mary Hamilton.

It is no small wonder that the St. Hilda's players spent sleepless nights . . . Mary has been pitching for champion softball teams for the past three years. Casualty meeting her, one could not say her appearance would strike fear into the heart of the most timid freshman . . . rather her wide smile and candid blue eyes invite the outpouring of woes. However, facts are facts, and most convincing are those concerning her years in the Airforce. Mary was the pitcher for the Aymler softball team which copped the No. 1 Command championship title in '43; two years later it was the Niagara District League championship that Mary helped carry away. The crests received on said exploits are now attached firmly to a colorful blazer along with numerous mementos of basketball victories.

A public school teacher for two years, Mary Hamilton joined the Airforce in '42. Trained as a Meteorological Observer, she would have given her Corporal stripes to be a Physical Trainer . . . but no, the authorities decided that Mary must bide her time. Come peace she decided to don Varsity colors come peace . . . besides she lives in Toronto. Now the D.V.A. cheques have added concrete to dreams (better late than never) . . . and Mary is enrolled in first year P.H.E., and has time to dabble in hypo and fixer, otherwise known as developing pictures.

On the Western lineup, Hall played well, especially in his handling of goal-kicks at right fullback, and Bousfeld at centre half deserves mention, as does Goalkeeper Zarzon. For Varsity, Riguro at center half was a constant scoring threat, and Shinobu at left inside played a steady game. In the backfield, team captain Joe Fyfe played with his always dependable accuracy.

In the season's schedule, the Blues have won five, tied one, and have registered four shutouts. This takes us back to Coach Jim Paton's statement of last October—"A good team this year . . . they shouldn't lose a game . . . they'd better not!"

INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT OIL

The Amazing Family

THAT DWELLS IN CRUDE OIL

Through hundreds of miles of underground pipe lines and by tanker and tank car, crude oil flows for processing to the seven Canadian refineries of Imperial Oil Limited. If you looked at some of this crude oil in a test tube  you would see only a dark colored fluid. But if you looked at it with a chemist's eye, you would see that crude oil is a mixture of carbon and hydrogen. These two elements in crude oil  combine in hundreds of different ways, giving hundreds of different "hydrocarbons". While they are all closely related, the members of the petroleum hydrocarbon "family" vary considerably . . . some are very light and volatile  others are heavy and sluggish  with many "in-between's". By separating the crude oil family into its various groups of hydrocarbons, Imperial Oil Limited  produces over 500 different petroleum products—all of them very useful servants of Canadians today.

THE CRUDE OIL FAMILY

The very light hydrocarbons in crude oil help provide synthetic rubber . . . domestic and industrial fuel gases . . . blending agents for aviation gasolines.

These peppery "naphtha" hydrocarbons give us the gasoline that drives our cars, trucks, tractors and airplanes and solvents used in paint and polish manufacturing.

These hydrocarbons of the kerosene family aren't as active as their lighter brothers, but give very steady light and heat.

The fuel oil family of hydrocarbons are sturdy fellows that provide Diesel fuel oils . . . fuel oils for ships and industry . . . and fuel to keep the home fires burning.

The "lube oil" hydrocarbons have just the right "body" to lubricate our car and airplane engines and industrial machines.

The wax family of hydrocarbons are heavy and slow-moving but bring us floor wax, candles, paraffine wax, petroleum jelly for medicinal uses and cosmetics.

The asphalts let people walk all over them in the form of asphalt roads. You find them in airport landing strips and over your head in asphalt shingles and roofing materials.

In the old days, refiners made only a few products. Today, thanks to modern progress, ALL THE CRUDE OIL WE GET OUT OF THE GROUND IS MADE INTO USEFUL PRODUCTS.

Senior S.P.S. Gains Finals By Eliminating St. Mike's

REPEATERS FOR CUP FINALS

Senior School gained the final bracket of the intramural football league for the third consecutive year yesterday afternoon as it squeezed out a 5-0 decision over St. Mike's. The club now advances into the final game which will be played Wednesday afternoon against University College.

St. Mike's were slow in starting but picked up momentum as the minutes wore on. However, not even the band nor the three charming cheer leaders could overcome the edge on the football field. A fierce second-half passing attack almost paid off for the Gaels but they bogged down, short of the mark each time.

Keith Hendrick, Bert Hamm, Norm Millen, and Charlie Evans played heads-up ball for Skule. Hendrick's steady kicking, plunging by Millen and Evans, and the rattle-dazzle ball handling of Hamm were potent factors in the victory.

Art Niero, Dave Bauer, and Mackan showed up well for St. Mike's. Niero's kicking and passing, Bauer's plunging, and Mackan's passing gathered almost turned the trick for the Saints several times.

Skule kicked off to start the game and took the play to St. Mike's 30. The Gaels kicked to Hamm who was dropped on his own 50. Two plunges by Charlie Evans went for a first down but Skule gained nothing on the next two plays. Skule then started to roll.

Two plunges by Evans, a pass, Hamm to Hendrick, and an end run took play to the St. Mike's 13. Two plunges were stopped and Hamm kicked a field goal on the third down. St. Mike's tried a pass on the first down at their 25 but Farquhar intercepted at St. Mike's 50. Evans plunged for a first down. Two passes were missed and Hendrick kicked a single to end the quarter.

St. Mike's started off at their 25. An exchange of kicks and several passes gave St. Mike's the ball on their own 52. Two passes were knocked down and the kick made it Steele's ball on their 35. After an exchange of kicks St. Mike's had the ball on their 27. A pass attempt was knocked down as the half ended.

St. Mike's kicked off and were awarded the ball on the School 40 when the receiver fumbled. One pass was knocked down but the second was intercepted, giving Skule the ball on their own 30. Plunges by Hendrick and Hamm, and a forward, Hamm-to-Hendrick, took play to the Saints' 38 from where Hendrick kicked a single. St. Mike's started to drive and took play to the Skule 20 before being stopped. Two plunges went for three yards ending the quarter.

The fourth and final quarter brought no further scoring but the desperate Gaels opened up with a withering aerial offensive which fell short on two occasions. The game ended with Niero firing long passes in hopes of catching up with the law of averages.

Bursaries Award For Ajax Published

President Sidney Smith announces that five bursaries of the value of $180 each have been awarded in the faculty of Applied Science and Engineering to the following five applicants for admission to the First Year in that faculty: J. B. Farrell of Bloor Collegiate Institute; N. Hayman of Northern Vocational School; R. Hyer of Scarborough Collegiate Institute; D. Peregrine of Parkdale Collegiate Institute; and H. R. Warren of Port Credit High School.

These students will commence their studies at the Ajax Division of the University of Toronto in January next, taking advantage of the Special Session to be operated there by the University. Of the total amount of $1,000 available for Bursaries, all but $100 has been awarded to these five which makes possible an award of the remainder to D. C. Hubble who held an Applied Science Bursary in his first year.

Wild And Woolly West Holds Few Fears For Co-Eds Spending Summer On Bikes

It took seven rehearsals to make Dormer Ellis and Beverly Meredith sound unrehearsed.

"It was supposed to sound completely spontaneous," confessed Dormer referring to the pair's appearance last week on Borden's Canadian Cavalcade. "But really we had to duck in and out of the studio for a week before the program."

The girls students at the U. of T. had been invited by the milk company to describe their Western bike-and-train odyssey last summer (see The Varsity, October 10). Humor-garnished, fiction-flavored, their story reached Cavalcade listeners by combined dramatization and interview.

Their comments cued to accommodate mood music and their story provided with a wholly-false punch line, Dormer and Beverly were portrayed as an adventurous, adolescent twosome.

"Really," wondered Beverly as she listened to a playback of a recording of the program, "did I sound like a ten-year-old? Good heavens!"

Weird-fearsome-mysterioso music had provided a mood-establishing background for Lorne Greene's "sombre, out-of-the-night" scene-setting.

"It's dusk in the wild and rugged Alberta foothills," Greene read dramatically. "As you pitch camp for the night you sense a threat of approaching danger."

As Dormer and Beverly waited for their first lines, Green's "threat" had double significance.

"At every sound," the narrator continued, "At every sound that breaks from the dark and shadowed forest, you tremble in a nameless unexplainable fear!"

Here the script orders "Music: A Punctuation" and Greene catches his breath.

"You retire and try to sleep. But that fear remains, to clutch at your throat—to make you start afresh at every shadow that flickers in the pines—at every gust of wind that howls down from the crags above. For hours you try to relax. But you can't! Then suddenly there's a new sound. You sit bolt upright—and flash a light. Then something seems to freeze inside as you see—there in the underbrush—two evil, shiny, greenish eyes!"

Music comes up quickly as the vast air audience sits spellbound by the vision of two evil, shiny, greenish eyes. "Did that?" Greene asks provocatively, "did that ever happen to you?"

"It sure did," exclaim Dormer and Beverly together. "That happened to us, last Summer!" Narrator Greene retires and syrup-voiced Cy Mack takes over: "And plenty more happened, as well, to these two very surprising Canadian girls—They introduce themselves—"

"I'm Beverly Meredith," speaks up Beverly Meredith in rehearsed, unrehearsed fashion. "And I'm Dormer Ellis," declares Dormer Ellis with polished conviction.

DEANS DENY RACIAL DISCRIMINATION

Labor-Progressive Club Plans To Picket Optical Company

The University Labor-Progressive Club last night decided by a unanimous vote to participate actively in a mass picket of the Imperial Optical Company, corner Dundas and Sherbourne streets. The club has issued a call to all students interested in the democratic rights of labor, to join in this picket of the United Electrical Workers of America (CIO), which will organize at 7:30 a.m. on Thursday, Nov. 22, and will give students enough time to return to their 9 o'clock lectures. Many clubs and organizations in the city were said to have prepared to join in the action.

A resolution was then passed, supporting the UAW and UEW strikers in Windsor and Toronto, and empowering Henry Rosenthal, the L.P.P. representative at the Students' Fact-Finding Committee to ask its members for action on behalf of the workers.

"The fact-finding committee has found enough facts; it is time now to undertake concrete measures based upon them," Rosenthal said, and he went on to outline the club's views on the basic issues involved in the Ford strike:

"There are many people who think that this strike is just another union-management dispute," he said; "but studying the history of the Ford company, we find that it has consistently acted as spearhead of reaction, having introduced terroristic methods, the speed-up system, etc. When the company was suddenly organized by the CIO, this was a great defeat for the management, which is now fighting to avoid another defeat, that of granting union security for the workers."

He went on to say that students had really a much greater interest in fair labor rights, than their "generally uncorrected attitude" implied, because, he said, union security is closely tied to full employment and therefore to the security of students as well as workers.

At the meeting it was decided that the club should extend its help to the civic election campaigns at which L.P.P. candidates are running, and money was collected for the strikers in Toronto and Windsor.

Electron Microscope Research May Lead To Tuberculosis Cure

Hopes of finally determining whether cancer is caused by a virus were raised by the development of the electron microscope, Mr. S. G. Ellis told a McLennan Lab. audience Friday night.

At present, the electron microscope in the Physics building is being used on cancer research.

"Through the electron microscope, we have at last been able to see the viruses responsible for influenza and tuberculosis," Mr. Ellis said. Viruses, responsible for many diseases, are micro-organisms too small to be seen with the best ordinary microscopes. The electron microscope offers the hope that now, being able to study them, doctors will be able to develop better cures for the diseases they cause.

Explaining the difference between an electron microscope and a light microscope, Mr. Ellis stated that electrons are focussed by electric and magnetic lenses just as light rays are focussed by glass lenses.

"In microscope work," he said, "the wave length of light is the limiting factor. Beyond a certain point, we can magnify no further, because the detail we are looking for is finer than the structure of the light we are using to observe it. By using an electron beam instead of a light beam, we can see far finer detail than ever before."

Electrons travelling at different speeds, he explained, determine the point of focus, the detail obtained, and whether the electron will be deflected by the object under observation or will pass through and affect the photographic plate underneath. A high-speed electron is deflected less by the magnetic lenses than a low-speed one, and as a result the focal point will be much farther from the lens system.

The next lecture in the series will be given next Friday at 8 p.m. by Prof. J. T. Wilson. Prof. Wilson, until recently director of Operational Research for the army, will speak about "The Pre-Cambrian Shield."

World Alliances - Dr. Wallace' Topic

Termining the United Nations Organization "not a federation, but a continuation of a wartime alliance," Dr. Malcolm Wallace, former principal of University College, said the only alternative to such a world organization is the establishment of power blocs.

Addressing the International Affairs Society yesterday afternoon, Dr. Wallace spoke of the U.N.O. as "determined to have power to cope with the aggressor." He said the Security Council has been built on the absolute sovereignty of each of the nations of the former wartime alliance.

Dr. Wallace is now engaged in special research on peace problems for the Canadian Institute of International Affairs.

Prejudice In Three Faculties Charge Of Alistair Stewart

MEDS, DENTS, PHARMACY NAMED

By Bob Robinson

Denial of charges of discrimination against Jews in the University's faculties of dentistry, medicine, and pharmacy was voiced yesterday by the deans of the faculties accused by Alistair Stewart, C.C.F. member of parliament for Winnipeg North. Dr. Sidney Smith, president of the University, had no comment to make.

Mr. Stewart's specific charges were made Sunday night at a meeting in Toronto sponsored by the Canadian Association for Labor Palestine. They followed general charges of "wretched racialism" made by the C.C.F. member at a meeting in Woodsworth House, Toronto, last Oct. 27. At that time Mr. Stewart told The Varsity he was preparing a more fully documented case supporting his accusation.

He said McGill University is also guilty of such discrimination.

Sunday night, Mr. Stewart told his audience that all faculties do not "share the odium." He specifically exonerated the Faculty of Arts and the School of Social Work.

"There is sufficient evidence from the faculties of dentistry, pharmacy, and medicine to justify a public examination into these departments which are subsidized by the taxpayers' money," he said.

In 1942, Mr. Stewart said, 80 students were admitted to the dental faculty and finally a group of 54 was accepted. Of the 26 students eliminated, 24 were Jewish, and of the remaining 54 non-Jews, 52 were accepted.

Said Dr. A. D. A. Mason, dean of the Faculty of Dentistry, when interviewed by The Varsity: "The charges are untrue. There is no discrimination in this faculty on religious, racial, or any other grounds. The figures quoted by Mr. Stewart are incorrect."

Dr. E. S. Ryerson, dean of the Faculty of Medicine, said that in recent years the faculty "has been taking in from 15 to 20 percent of that particular persuasion." He said this is a much higher percentage than was admitted 20 years ago.

"I fail to see how this can be construed as discrimination," Dr. Ryerson added. "We would be very glad to open our records to anyone who makes such a charge," Dean R. O. Hurst of the College of Pharmacy told The Varsity. "Our percentage of failures and of medical winners is quite in accord with the percentage of enrolment. Jews certainly have not been kept out."

Dean Hurst asserted that of the graduating class of three years ago approximately 45 per cent were Jewish.

Any ex-service personnel who have yet to receive cheques, are well advised to contact the D.V.A., 55 York Street, in person immediately and clear their status.

CORRECTION

Mr. A. K. Musgrave, Principal of the Co-operative School, is not contemplating establishing a Co-op residence for ex-servicemen on this campus as was erroneously announced in the Nov. 19 issue of The Varsity.

Dentistry A La 90's Tried To Hot Dentantics Music

By Joe Rife

"Dental didoes in this year's Dentantics are combined with plenty of music in the torrid mood," stated Wes Dunn, director of the show, in a recent interview. The music is to be supplied by Allen and Glen, two-piano team, a male quartet, a 25-voice glee club, and a 15-piece orchestra with male and female vocalists.

There will be two skits depicting dentistry à la 1990 and the gruesome details of a date with a dentist. The molar men expect to raise the temperatures of the male customers with their chorus of dancing dental cuties but are refusing to include phone numbers in the program because of lack of space. Music for dancing in the main gym is to be provided by Ellis McIntook and his band. At the intermission Syd Lorraine will mystify one and all with his feats of magic.

The Mermaids will present their artistic aquatic show in two stanzas during the evening. Wes Dunn says that he is sorry but it is absolutely necessary that the cast of the water show remain shrouded in towels and bathrobes while out of the pool but suggests that opera glasses may be of some use to the spectators.

"We have had some difficulty in getting the show whipped into shape," said Wes taking another aspirin, "because it seems that everybody is either writing exams or taking labs, at night but everything is running smoothly now and the musicians' union has decided not to sue."

Editorial

The Big Debate

First guest editorial for the current year is this from Debates Commissioner Graham Cotter. We commend to your attention his topic, his treatment, and his conclusions. And we'll be seeing you at the Big Debate.

The announcement that McGill and Toronto debaters will meet in Convocation Hall next Monday evening should attract Varsity students keen on renewing intercollegiate debating. Such debates as this have been suspended during the war, and are now beginning again as one of the most important features of university life.

It was hoped that this debate could be broadcast; but that could not be arranged this fall. That such debates will be broadcast—carrying on the tradition of broadcast debates of the pre-war years—seems sure, and it will indeed be consonant with the function of the university that it will be furnishing leadership in intelligent discussion not only to undergraduates, but to the larger body of the public who sometimes seem remote from college life.

At Home, Too

But it must be remembered that such a spectacular event as this, with a return debate taking place at McGill the same night—on the same subject—is only representative of the program of intramural debating in which a larger number of the students participate. The University of Toronto Debating Union, which is sponsored by the S.A.C. and campus debating societies, has a function wider than even the promotion of intercollegiate debating: the greater part of its activity is the promotion of intramural debates.

Home debating, sponsored by both the U.T.D.U. and the college or faculty societies, is vitally important, in that it gives the greatest opportunity for that conflict of minds and ideas that is essential to original thinking and principled leadership.

The Leadership of The Mind

Our debating springs from the democratic procedure of parliaments. All debating societies have as their highest aim the preparation of their members for active citizenship and democratic leadership. The mature citizen is marked, politically or otherwise, by ability to stand firm for democratic principles, to perceive the needs of his society, and to act on his principles and his knowledge. The achievement of such a maturity is the duty of all who by coming to University have undertaken to give good citizenship to the nation.

This maturity is fostered by debating, when out of the conflict of minds in debate comes the ability of the individual to see clearly and to act decisively. When our debating societies discuss the public interest, their members are the maturing citizens of a new generation; when youths struggle to order their minds and to see the truth, they are working towards the fundamental requirement of democracy—thoughtful and informed public opinion. And when out of debate and conflict comes conviction, expressed and tested, new leadership is created and taught to lead, and new citizenship learns to act and to follow leadership, not blindly, but on principle.

Winning Is No Test

Note, then, the significance of the first intercollegiate debate. In arranging it, the executive of the U.T.D.U. stressed that the emphasis was to be not on the outcome in terms of which university won, but on the outcome in terms of the success of the interchange of opinion. The Debating Union, assembling in Convocation Hall, is not meeting to test the leadership of just the visiting debaters, but of all debaters. Intercollegiate debates can become a strong binding factor in the nation, by showing that the common problems across the country can be met by a common leadership of ideas—and so, of action; this especially when, later, debates with Laval and other universities are arranged.

Let there be no doubt about the vital purpose of debating. Every debate's executive on the campus is responsible for the encouragement of democratic methods and democratic spirit. Every student must know that it is his duty to drink deeply of the experience and power of public discussion. There is a rich reward for him; and for the nation and the world.

Correspondence

Deportation And Democracy

Today's breathing-space between spirits of advertising enables us to publish letters, some of them lengthy, selected from an accumulation of several weeks. We apologize to our correspondents for the lateness of publication, and to our readers for such a concentrated dose.

* * *

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

Frankly, I am nauseated by the Pharisaical attitude displayed by the students of this University towards the people of British Columbia.

In all fairness, may one ask: Is Toronto prepared to accept and settle in its midst several thousand Japanese Canadians? How many students so righteously denouncing the people of B.C. and the Government are prepared to give up their places at the U. of T., and their lodgings, to a Japanese student?

The housing shortage is acute in Toronto and equally so in Vancouver. There are many thousands of ex-servicemen returning home who are finding it difficult to find accommodation and jobs. Who will deny that their problems would be aggravated if 10,300 Japanese Canadians had to be absorbed.

Ideologically, perhaps, one may concede the Japanese-Canadians should not be deported, but practically, realistically, one can see no other solution.

One side only of this problem has been presented by The Varsity and its news has been definitely slanted. This I realize is justifiable journalistic practice but is hardly calculated to result in an unbiased considered student opinion. Moreover, I and many others would most strenuously object to the S.A.C. taking any official action without some adequate poll being taken to ascertain the views of the student body.

May I suggest that a competent exponent of British Columbia's views be given space in The Varsity to present the reasons for the government's actions. Col. C. C. I. Merritt, V.C., or one of the other British Columbia M.P.'s would doubtless be glad to enlighten us. —G. E. BERTSON

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

For the past few weeks, I have weighed the pros and cons of the popular topic of discussion of serious-minded students on the campus. I have come to the conclusion that the treatment given this minority of 24,000 Japanese-Canadians is shameful and utterly undemocratic.

What is being done with the respect of historic rights of minorities, on which every Canadian affirms that the foundation of the unity of Canada as a nation is based? What is being done with our belief that unity and strength of Canada depend on the "acceptance" by all our people, of our status as free and equal partners in a great nation?

No nation is so unhomogeneous as ours. During the last century or so Orientals have shouldered our hardships just as submissively as any other people of European descent. What is Canada trying to do? Is it trying to create another "Expulsion of the Acadians", one of the darkest pages of Canadian history?

I am French-Canadian, but above all, I am Canadian. I believe that the unity and strength of our country depend on the recognition of the fact that the welfare of every part of this great country is related intimately to the welfare of every other part, and that furthermore, the fullest enjoyment of the rights and benefits of citizenship depends upon the corresponding acceptance of its obligations and responsibilities.

These Japanese-Canadians were in the pre-war period accepted as potential citizens, and in the last few decades have shown great interest in the economic and general expansion of this, our country. Why not then, give these people an equal opportunity to develop their personality, and make a full contribution towards the betterment of the social welfare of local community, province and country?

I wish to say in conclusion, that the problems and troubles of groups and individuals amongst them, as well as amongst the other people of the world, constitute the problems and troubles of all. We should realize the fact, specially we the youth, that it is high time to develop in us a sincere desire to practice the principle of mutual aid and impartial friendship. Canada will only be for us in years to come, what we make it now.

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

The current charges against the University made by the C.C.F. member for North Winnipeg, having served their sensationalist purposes, are perhaps not intended to bring serious denial, but there are, nevertheless, inequalities within the University which are significant, not in their magnitude, but in their implication of the existence of an unjust principle. The question is that of the attitude of Toronto University to returned Merchant Navy men. Although these men comprise only a minute portion (Continued on page 4)

Art, Music and Drama

Imperfect But Worthwhile

Few people will deny that the Civic Theatre Association is a worthwhile organization. It has the blessings of all who are interested in seeing drama grow in Canada and in Toronto in particular. But even its well-wishers would not claim that either of its two productions has been entirely successful. Its second venture, presented last night at Eaton Auditorium, was in the realm of opera. Encouragement can be drawn from the fact that Canadians are beginning to produce operas for themselves.

Faust, in English as in any other language, is an opera which depends for its effect on star singers. Most of the music is shallow. What keeps it alive are the "famous arias" which are scattered throughout its four acts; and virtuosos personalities are needed to really put the arias across. More than anything else, the production last night lacked virtuosos personalities. The poor results were inevitable. However, it was better than some of the profession-productions that have been seen here. The chorus, made up of members of the Canadian Mastersingers, was fine and much more impressive than the leads.

This column has pointed out before that Toronto is ready for civic opera. But if and when it comes it will have to include the city's best voices or be doomed to arouse only moderate enthusiasm from a limited audience.

—PHILIP FREEDMAN.

Friml Fumble

An operetta, with its serious side interspersed with rather slapstick comedy, fails to impress us. Perhaps it was the singing, perhaps it was the staging, but something about Rose Marie just didn't excite the audience of the Royal Alexandra last night. As is often the way with musicals, and other plays, the secondary parts were more interesting than the lead roles; better artists, more appropriate casting, more enthusiasm.

Josephine Neri, as Rose Marie, sang fairly well, but by facing the house she spoilt most of the effect of the Indian Love Call, which should have been one of the most important parts of the opera.

Jim Kenyon, portrayed by Arthur Maxwell, showed the same faults as Miss Neri. His voice is suited to light comic opera, rather than to sincere love songs, and his acting revealed a lack of identification with his role.

Relief from the tedium of the Totem pole dance at the end of the first act was supplied by Nina Olivette as Lady Jane, the comédienne of the piece. The Totem scene was amateurish, but may improve after the first performance.

The general effect of the popular songs, and the beautiful ballet-dancing in Act II, scene 3, were what saved Rose Marie from being just another dull succession of music and dancing. Don't be discouraged, however, Rudolph Friml's music is still enough to make Rose Marie a musical success, if not a theatrical success.

Seventy Sons Swamp Bailey At Initial Senior Practice

Ace Bailey was literally and figuratively swamped with hockey players yesterday as some seventy potential stars turned out for the first practice. He gave them all a whirl on the ice before he managed to cut the mob down to the workable size of forty.

After the practice, Bailey felt more than optimistic about the season's future. With such former commercial stars as Bill Kosick, Halder, Ball and Henry to carry Varsity colors, the future was definitely bright as the popular coach pointed out. Two ex-Navy stalwarts, Rutledge, a Young Ranger graduate and Jonstone formerly of H.M.C.S. Cornwallis were noticeable with their color and added zest.

Three of last seasons' Blue team, Harvey Bain, Bill Wade and Ian Hart were out to retain their defense positions. Up front, Lawlor and Anderson are also back. The regular goalie, Davidson, turned up again like a bad penny and promised to make things tough for others who aspired to dethrone him.

In the only scheduled lacrosse game yesterday, a team representing University College swamped Junior School by the score of 14-4.

Scoring honors for the winners were well distributed as Robson, Toogood and Scott each accounted for four counters. Smith was the only offensive threat for the losers as he netted three markers.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Mickey Michasiw

Splatterings Off That Frayed Cuff . . .

With intercollegiate competition at the inactive stage, the local intramural grid stars finally come in for the portion of the football glory that is rightfully theirs. For the third year running the representative teams of the two largest institutions on the campus—School of Practical Science and University College—put on the show for the Mulock Cup . . . The winner? Well, prognosticators' row has fallen down badly of late. There were the Chicago Cubs. Then came that strong Vic. aggregation. Last Saturday the Stuki Indians took a horrible beating . . . Anyhoo, on the basis of play during the past season, it looks like School to take the rubber game!

From the not too distant intercollegiate past come reports regarding the over-zealous school spirit which left traces around and about. Mainly through the intervention of President Smith, the bill for the removal of painted "Q's" will not be presented to the Kingston establishment . . . The heads of James, McGill, etc., looked upon the matter through glasses of a different hue as their bill of $483 was slapped down before amazed Queen's officials . . . Well, the boys of that university certainly had their fun. Nearly seven hundred dollars' worth! . . . The Canadian Press All-Star intercollegiate team has caused considerable comment hereabouts what with but a lone Blue gaining that supposedly coveted honor. Rudy Grass achieved what some twenty others failed . . . For our money however, Wil Henry takes the honors, hands down. It is more than surprising to see players like Parry and Wardle make the grade on a single game performance while a steady but less spectacular lad stands by . . . It was also Al Scott's misfortune to run into an all round centre like Doug Cook . . . It must be quite a while back since anyone who tied for the scoring leadership, failed to make the grade. That was Stu Scott's ill fate. Well, there's always next year, like the funnies always say . . . The announcement of a new basketball coach will be made this evening. Any bets that it's Ozark Ike of the Fat-field clan?

Tea-Dance, Cheers And Rally For Mulock Cup Bound College

University College has announced its fullest intentions of supporting its team in the Mulock Cup finals come Wednesday. A rally and tea dance will be held this afternoon from 4 to 6 in the Junior Common Room in an effort to drum up the college spirit.

For fifteen minutes between dancing, three cheer leaders bedecked in snappy red and white outfits "will" give out with yells, old and new.

Classes in University College will be cancelled Wednesday afternoon in order that as many students as possible may be offered the opportunity to view the clash at Varsity Stadium.

Tide-Time

The swimming meets are on the verge of breaking on the shores of the campus . . . this is the lull before the storm . . . the ebony hour before mermaids of Varsity plunge into the work of shaping up an aquatic display which can be guaranteed to encourage visiting teams to double their practising pace. That is . . . if one can judge by the enthusiasm of the individual colleges in rounding up potential swimming champs. The reports are to the effect that they are digging out of moth-balls great numbers of swim-suits (and some are those two-piece jobs). One of the U.C. volunteers is Ruthie Cohen, water-ski champ and member of the ill-fated '40 Olympic team.

To get down to explicit facts and figures the swimming club has just issued a schedule by which all colleges and faculties are asked to abide. Each college will polish up their swimmers in five practice sessions before the great moment when the goats are separated from the sheep—to speak metaphorically. These elimination contests will take place at the U.T.S. pool from 7:30 to 9:00 on the following dates: Monday, Nov. 26—Meds; Tuesday, Nov. 27—Trinity; Wednesday—Vic; Thursday—P.H.E.; Monday, Dec. 3—Physiotherapy; Tuesday, Dec. 4—U.C.; Wednesday—Occupational Therapy; Thursday—Dental Nurses and St. Mikes; Friday—O.C.E. Those concerned can garner more information if they will consult their own bulletin boards.

After these aforementioned meets go off without a hitch (we hope), and the swimmers that shine as jewels are raised above the heads of those who don't, the competition will take place on an intramural level rather than strictly home stuff. When Hart House opens its august portals for the sake of the first Athletic Nighters, the pool consecrated to purely masculine endeavors will be graced by the best Varsity swimmers taking part in the intramural meet. Nor is that the last time the feminine form is to glide through the clear waters of the Hart House haven. The biggest splash of all is to be the women's intercollegiate meet . . . the drawing card of the last Athletic Night. Other colleges have been contacted, and have signified their intentions of arriving girded for the fray.

With this in mind, students will no doubt be inspired to go out in full force, and only complain that there are but five practices instead of ten . . . no matter that snow flurries make one year for the warm fireside rather than the summery sport of swimming. Yet they will be encouraged on in the struggle by the thought of the artificially-induced heat pervading the waters of the pool.

Lollypops (Continued)

By Ross McLean

The Warden became perturbed and told our man that there were certainly more important things that he could do, than to corroborate a rumour regarding lollypops in Hart House.

Our man had already visited the Tuck Shop and had inquired there whether it was true that lollypops were prohibited in Hart House. He had taken ten minutes to explain to the Tuck Shop proprietor that a lollypop is a piece of candy on the end of a stick and failed to get any satisfaction. They didn't know anything about lollypops in Hart House, they grunted. Well, thank you anyway, muttered our man as he exited.

He tried another official. This official was similarly bewildered.

"I understand," repeated our man patiently, "that, by order of the Board of Stewards, lollypops are forbidden in Hart House, like sweaters."

Not that he knew of, grinned the official. But, he would investigate if the reporter cared to return later.

A secretary then searched the files of Board Stewards' edicts. Under "L" however she did not find anything remotely involving "Lollypops."

"Of course," suggested the official to our man when he had come back. "Lollypops are not allowed in Hart House in the daytime, but you can bring yours to any dance here." And he winked slyly.

"Well," yelled our man, "thanks very much for your assistance." And he wandered away.

How it began anyway? Our editor-in-chief, a zealous collector of curious Hart House facts, happened to mumble at dinner one day that he understood that lollypops, by order of the Board of Stewards, were verboten in Hart House. We had assigned a man to track down the order with the already-reported results.

Someone, we suspect, has made a sucker of the Feature Department.

The feature Department has made a sucker of itself. The item referred to is a subsection (subsection 4, we believe) of a set of regulations governing College and Faculty Stunt Nights. It is in a black leather-bound book in the right hand drawer of the Hart House Secretary's desk, where we spotted it while leafing through the book, by permission, in quest of something else. Try again, Features!

Correspondence

tion of the returned serviceman, their neglect is not at all negligible, but is a mistake more easily corrected because of the small numbers involved.

The concrete considerations and concessions that the returning serviceman enjoys, from both the government and the University, are huge, but no such happy consideration has been offered the returning merchant sailor. He wore no uniform, received a higher scale of pay, and to his country and the University, he is no veteran. He wears no discharge pin, receives no gratuities, does not benefit from any Veteran's Land Act, receives no assistance for University training. It is a fact that he has performed a prodigious service in the war, in a branch that suffered casualties at a greater rate than any of the three uniformed services, but this fact is ignored by the people who watched him perform his moral obligations to his country, and now ignore their obligations to him when he returns.

One ex-merchant-seaman student, returned after twenty-one months' sea service in the North Atlantic and the Pacific, from Newfoundland to Australia, has made the very reasonable request that he be allowed to enter Second Year Honour Arts, although he had only qualified for Second Year Pass, when he left the University for the Merchant Navy, at the age of eighteen. This request would have been granted with alacrity to an ex-serviceman, were he a veteran of Europe or Camp Borden, H.M.C.S. York or combat sea-duty. But to the University, such a request from a merchant seaman demands impossible concessions, and the answer is "No."

Intending to qualify for the Third Year Honours Course by additional study, this same student hoped to be excused from the extra burden of compulsory Physical Training, on the grounds that these classes are optional for the veteran of the uniformed services. The University not only considered this hope absurd, but reminded him to attend extra P.T. classes to make up his quota, which had slumped because he was four weeks late in entering University, having spent this time coming up from New Zealand.

This incredible apathy to veteran Merchant Navy men cannot be excused except as a dismal, lazy refusal to examine the truth. The serviceman did not, of course, enlist with his eye towards any material benefits which might come his way after the war, but if these benefits, as well as the good-will of his country are offered him, as indeed they are, on his return, he would be the first to insist they should be based on an honest recognition of all who have sacrificed with him to preserve this country so that it could be in a position to offer these rewards in the first place.

The mean tradition that disregards the merchant sailor, while heaping a sometimes indiscriminate favour on the man who had merely worn a uniform, regardless of where he has worn it or for how long, is too fatuous for this University to subscribe to. Surely it can be argued that a merchant seaman, who without uniform served aboard ships in the same war areas as our naval ships, endured the same monotony and discomfort, exposed to the same dangers, with less defences, is entitled to some post-war consideration, if only common grace. The narrowness and bigotry of this University is appallingly unjust, and denies the liberal tenets of a whole educational system.

Construction Of Canadian Cyclotron
Announced By Principal Of McGill

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 18 (CUP), but construction is now to begin immediately.

McGill University is undertaking the construction of a 25,000,000 electron-volt cyclotron and a two-storey laboratory in which to house the atom-smasher, Principal F. Cyril James announced last week. The Montreal cyclotron will be the first in Canada and one of the largest in use.

Direction of the cyclotron project will be undertaken by Prof. J. S. Foster of McGill University, who developed the plans after many years' work. Prof. Foster returned for the purpose last year from his war research post at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Earlier plans for the undertaking were halted by the outbreak of war in 1939, but construction is now to begin immediately. Indispensable in investigation of atomic energy, the cyclotron is used in all experiments in nuclear physics. McGill's cyclotron will have a 25,000,000 volt capacity, and since the average energy required to segregate a minute particle from a complex nuclear substance is only seven or eight million volts, the excess energy enlarges the field for greater perfection and development.

Graduate students who have specialized in nuclear physics will be allowed to assist in the designing and construction of the more technical parts of the cyclotron.

Varsity Battles McGill In Post-War Debates

WILL DISCUSS IMMIGRATION

"Resolved that the House approves unrestricted European immigration to Canada for the next ten years," will be the resolution of the McGill-Varsity debate to be held at Convocation Hall Nov. 26, at 7.30 p.m. This will be the first inter-collegiate debate to be held since before the war.

Flora Moffat, IV Sociology of Trinity, and Allan Brown, II English Language and Literature of Trinity, representing Toronto, will uphold the motion. Opposing it will be Winston Mahavir and Jack Macdonald of McGill.

At the same time Sheila McQueen, IV U.C., and Telford Georges, III law U.C., will take the negative side of the resolution against McGill at Montreal.

At Toronto the decision will be determined by a vote of the House according to the parliamentary procedure while at McGill judges have been appointed.

When questioned concerning the debate Flora Moffat said, "I am looking forward to a good fight. We have the facts on our side although I am at a disadvantage being the only girl in the debate." She concluded triumphantly, "I'll do my best to uphold my sex."

Telford Georges when asked for a comment replied that it was certainly not a one-sided problem.

Speaker Staley Lived In West

It was a lucky thing for the Indians when his funds ran out in Alberta.

Twenty-five years on Indian Reservations started for The Reverend E. J. Staley when, on his arrival in Canada at the age of 15, he gave all his money to the railway company and asked that they discard him when the fare equalled the funds.

Victoria College will hear Mr. Staley speak at 1:20 today in Alumni Hall of how the trip ended in Alberta where he worked his way through the University of Edmonton, spending his summers in the North-West Territories. This summer experience led him to join the Indian Residential School at Morley, Alta., on the site of the MacDougal Mission, oldest mission in that part of Canada.

Mr. Staley will speak of the problems of racial prejudice and minority groups he has encountered in working with the Canadian Indians and building a residential school for 100 children.

Invite Japs To Ontario Say St. Mike's Debaters

A vote of 38 to 36 upheld the resolution "resolved that Premier Drew should invite the Japanese-Canadians to settle in Ontario," when the Loretto Debating Club and the St. Michael's Senate Club clashed last evening.

Speaking for the affirmative, Jacqui Samson pointed out that the Japanese-Canadians are now virtually homeless and that it is our duty to prove our belief in the fundamentals of Christian charity. She argued that the war had been fought to destroy racial prejudice.

Earl Mahoney, for the opposition, drew attention to the restrictive immigration laws now prevalent in the United States and to the "White Australia" policy.

He declared that if the Japanese-Canadians were allowed to remain, the inevitable result would be unfavourable results which would necessitate similar restrictions.

It is the fault of other Canadians that the Japanese-Canadians have not already been assimilated, said Mary Farrell. She pointed out that in 1931 only one was in jail and none have been charged with sabotage during the war. Dick Donnelly viewed such an invitation as economic suicide, bound to result in a lowering of living standards. He stated that unemployment was prevalent among the white people of British Columbia while the Japanese-Canadians had jobs.

Pep Rallies Part Of Plan As U.C. And S.P.S. Meet

PASSING MAY DECIDE WINNER

Those two traditional rivals, Senior School and University College, battle it out at the stadium at 2:15 this afternoon for the third time in as many years. The game climaxes the fall rugby season for both fans and players alike, and the colorful events of the day, sponsored by the Engineering Society and the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society, will provide adequate entertainment.

U.C. has been finalist for the last four years, with Vic. the competition and victor in the game three years ago today. Two years ago, Senior School won 8-2, while last year the Royal College men eked out a 3-1 victory.

School are favored to capture the Mulock Cup in today's affair, but U.C. may provide another surprise after upsetting Vic. last Thursday. Both teams play the same type of game, relying on ground gains and good kicking rather than a powerful passing attack. School has walked off the field with two convincing triumphs in the pair of meetings between them in their regular group schedule, 4-0 and 10-1. Passing may prove the deciding factor in today's game, however, as U.C. has promised to throw it wide open in an effort to outwit an S.P.S. pass defence that showed gaping holes in Monday's semi-final with St. Mike's.

Appoint Dr. Long To Head Relief

The sum of $50,000 is to be raised in universities across Canada for student relief in China and Europe by the Canadian Committee of the International Student Service, which is headed by Dr. Marcus Long, newly appointed chairman. The students in these stricken countries lack not only books, libraries, and meeting places, but the necessities of life such as food, clothing, and medical supplies, declared Dr. Long.

"We can not only perform a humanitarian service but also take a step forward in achieving the peace of the world," he continued. "The university students of today are the leaders of tomorrow. By extending a helping hand now to these young men and women, many of whom were active in the resistance movement, we will establish a bond of friendship that will last through the years."

Dr. Long is now on the philosophy staff at the University of Toronto. He has an international background and diverse experience of university life at the University of Toronto and Northwestern University in Chicago where he was a student; as a substitute professor at the University of Manitoba, and later at Brandon College.

Women Aspirants Attend Art Class

Like a boxing referee in a ring, John Hall introduced his season of women's art classes at Hart House last night.

"In this corner," he said, "you have all the materials required to draw or paint—pastels, paints, charcoal, etc. In that corner you have all the objects necessary—nuts, bolts, bottles, sea-shells, tin cans, etc. Now go to it."

Omitting "May the best man win," Mr. Hall suggested that the students arrange the objects so that they "create a design or pattern", that they use any color they wished rather than the actual color of the object.

"If you think a pear should be purple make it purple," he said, adding that his aim was to develop creative pictorial expression amongst his students.

Attended by approximately 30 girls, the class was the first of 14 Tuesday-night sessions to be sponsored by the Fine Arts Club. Graduates of Mr. Hall's classes are scattered as far as New York in fields ranging from interior decorating to designing.

U.N.T.D.

All UNTD ratings, with exception of those who have applied for discharge, will parade Thursday 22nd November, 1945, at 1900, COTC building. Ratings are to use rear entrance to drill hall.

School's hopes will rest on the capable shoulders of Hamm, Hendrick, Milen, Sharpe and McKnight. Kuhn, Bennet, Tetmar, Volpe and Ed Staley have consistently turned in fine performances for U.C. this season, and U.C.'s attack will likely be centered around these five men.

Afternoon labs and lectures have been cancelled at S.P.S. in order that Schoolmen may turn out to cheer for their team, and a pep rally will take place at 1:45 p.m. outside the School building. A snake dance, in keeping with true School tradition, will be organized behind a band and a sound truck, and the procession will wend its way to the stadium.

University College held their rally last night in the Junior Common Room in the form of a Tea Dance. Cheers were rehearsed under the Gazillika direction of Bea Thorkelson, Varsity cheer leaderette. All classes in University College have also been cancelled for the afternoon.

The rival rugby teams will meet on more friendly terms tonight at the first Red and White night of the year, to be held in the Women's Union at 8:00 p.m. Regardless of the outcome of the Mulock Cup game, both football squads will attend this "come single, go home double" affair.

All U.C. undergraduates may gain entrance by Admit-to-lectures cards at the door. There will be four year slits, and dancing to Hugh Graham and Graham Topping will hold forth from 10 to 12. Several of the Polli's routines will be repeated by the choruses. The evening is sponsored by the University College Literary and Athletic Society and the Women's Undergraduate Association.

Today's game will be refereed by Bob Lye, with Clayton and Ferguson assisting as umpire and linesman respectively.

Round Up All The Gang For The Remake Review

For no apparent reason the Feature Department has received a friendly communication from the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

"Thursday, November 22nd," it announces, "is a special occasion for Miss Consumer Committee."

Thursday, November 22nd is, it seems, Old Home Night.

"Why Old Home Night?" the letter asks.

"Because the programme will feature both a play and a remake review in which our own committee members are taking part."

"We want you on hand," it adds appealingly, "to cheer the home team." The invitation, kindly extended in mimeographed cordiality by Olwen Chappell chairman of the Miss Consumer Committee, affords a peek at the programme.

"A peek at the programme," it whispers, "shows: Time: 8 o'clock

Hart House Blues

Hart House is a fraud.

Well, not quite; shall we say it is a lunch counter and gymnasium? At any rate it fails to live up to its prospectus.

That it is fighting a losing battle to be a House and not a hive is nobody's fault; least of all the Warden's. What blood the Warden, the Committees, and the staff have sweated to keep their pride and joy from becoming merely utilitarian, only they can know; but circumstances are against them.

It is time for students and the public in general to realize what those intimately connected with the House have long realized: that it is altogether too small.

The Aims of Hart House

We cannot emphasize too strongly that the House as it stands to-day satisfies no one; least of all those who have struggled for 26 years to make it accord with its Founders' prayer. The ideal toward which the House strives is contained in a passage which appeared in the 1945 Torontonian, and which was quoted in the Hart House announcement in the opening issue of The Varsity for the present term:

"For 26 years Varsity men by thousands have passed through the beamed oaken doors of Hart House into the cool corridors and humming committee-rooms of the headquarters of the University's extra-curricular life. Day after day they come by thousands, for concerts, singing, painting, the casual book, the theatre, crafts, worship, and every variety of sport . . . Fellowship draws them, too: friendly disputation and debate, the conversation of wise and earnest men. Thronging the common-rooms and corridors, in groups at evening around the Warden's fire, they debate the thousand issues of the campus and of the world. For Hart House, magnificent show-place though it is, is more than a building; it is a centre of life, and in the truest sense, itself alive."

What It Achieves

We doubt if there are many students to whom Hart House means all that; for it could only be called "a centre of life, and itself alive" by a most powerful effort of the imagination. What does it mean? It means, roughly, a place to eat; a place to play games; and a place to hold dances. It is also a place where, by virtue of a framed and choicely-lighted edict, one must wear one's coat. This is largely the fault of the students; but not altogether. It is also, and even more, the fault of a woefully inadequate building.

The mark of a recreational centre should be ease. In Hart House one is seldom easy; because the exigencies of space shove the would-be relaxer around continually; a circumstance fatal to relaxation. And desperate administrative problems make for prohibitions and restrictive regulations. What becomes of the prospectus?

You Can't Relax

Painting? One cannot on a whim (and all hobbies are whimsical) sit down in Hart House and paint or draw. There is no place. On designated nights, space is made for an Art Class, men who are willing to take organized instruction and can find regular timetable space. But no room for doodlers. Singing? If you have a voice that satisfies the Glee Club director, good; otherwise, you jam into the East Common Room for a Friday noon sing-song, depriving fifty other men of the use of the room.

Sport? If you want a quiet swim, you must steer around the water-polo schedules. For a workout in the gym, you must avoid the nights of all the big dances.

Theatre? Closed for all but six weeks of the year. The casual book? Fine, if you can get a place to sit in the Library.

Only the Camera Room is available round the clock for its designated activity.

And so on. For every extraneous event—dance, art class, or what have you—the normal routine of the House must be upset. To permit feeding of extra thousands, the billiard room has had to go. To absorb would-be meditators whom sing-songs, meetings, and the playing of the Grand Piano have driven out of other rooms, the new temporary tuck-shop with its bare benches will become a part-time Quiet Room. And 1,000 faculty members have a dining-room seating 90; 1,000 graduate members have a tinier one still.

We repeat, it is no one's fault. The building is simply grossly overcrowded. An extra-curricular center attempting to crowd a myriad activities under its roof needs room to breathe. But nothing will be done without agitation, loud, vehement, and continued. The Hart House administrators are fully aware of the need; but by themselves they can do nothing. It is up to students, whom congestion prevents and for some years has increasingly prevented from having the cultural center they deserve, to make themselves heard. —W. H. H.

Daffydil

Explosive, Ecstatic

Founded 1895; Impounded 1939; Re-bound 1945.

A many-mooded Daffydil Night was reincarnated last evening in an now-explosive, now-ecstatic form whose varied program ranged from the slapstick "Fire" routine of the clown-garbed, coke-hustling, joke-rustling Epistaxis-distributing, ushers to Robert Graham's masterful violin interpretation of De Falla's Fire Dance.

Daffydil-exhumers and censors of the show's sex humor, the 1945 Committee offered a two-hour performance whose contents seem too humorous to mention.

Fred Evis' toe-teasing original "A Dancing Step" (given adequate terpsichore treatment by the Kaplan-trained chorus) and his soulful "Jarvis Street Blues" (chantered in authentic, throaty fashion by a sultry Isobel Benn) competed with two Cole Porter contributions pleasantly handled by Jack Finlay's Glee Club for customer approval. Show-stoppingly successful was the chorus' pre-finale "I Wanta Get Married", borrowed for the occasion from Gertrude Niesen who also uses it effectively. Bill Paul's "Hellzapoppin'" mid-audience outrages clicked consistently.

Aided by an ectoplasmic George, the skit opener "Variety Is The Spice Of Life" took a friendly dig in the ribs of the chiropractic profession. Ian Alger's script apparently failed to meet sanitation standards. "State Medicine" was omitted from last night's performance. "From camp To Campus" tackled that seemingly irresistible theme of "reconversion", depicting its dizzier aspects. Daffydil is a bed-panacea for what ails you.

The Gauntlet Is Accepted

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

The questions raised by Mr. G. E. Bettson in yesterday's Varsity concerning the problem of Canadians of Japanese descent are questions which may properly be asked and which deserve to be answered. One regrets however that his argument in support of the deportation of loyal Canadians is based entirely in expediency and shows no concern about the meaning of citizenship in a democracy.

It needs to be said that, whether or not Toronto is "prepared to accept and settle in its midst several thousand Japanese Canadians", Toronto has not been asked to do so. Nor are students being asked to give up their places in the University to "Japanese" students. Nor is the question of a housing shortage or unemployment among ex-servicemen in British Columbia or any other part of the country relevant to the argument. The ten thousand people whose fate is in dispute are not a new immigrant group come into the country at the present time to displace Canadians. They themselves are Canadians and many of them have their roots in this country as deeply if not more deeply than some who lay a much easier claim to the title because their racial stock or national origin is not so distinctive.

It needs to be said also, in fairness to Mr. Bettson's first query, that the question of the resettlement and reestablishment of the whole group of loyal Canadians of Japanese ancestry who spent the war years in relocation centres is a question not for B.C. alone but for every other province in Canada. By all that is decent and democratic, former residents of B.C. (against no one of whom has any charge of disloyalty ever been made) should have the right to return to their homes if they wish. Many of them realize, however, that their problem as a minority group will be minimized if they are not concentrated in one area.

Provincial authorities can do a great deal to solve the "Japanese-Canadian problem" by facilitating the resettlement within their own borders of a portion of those Canadians of Japanese descent who wish to establish homes outside of B.C. Ontario will not be expected "to accept and settle in its midst several thousand." But we should be prepared to stand by our fellow citizens, regardless of racial extraction, and willingly welcome a few hundred.

We must agree with Mr. Bettson, I think, that "one side only of the problem has been presented by The Varsity." Some of us would be glad of the opportunity to hear a coherent argument from the other side. We would like to see "a competent exponent of British Columbia's views given space in the Varsity to present the reasons for the government's action." We hope that Mr. Bettson and some of the "many others" who share his feelings will make use of the next Hart House debate to state the case for the government's position. We would like to see who the people are who are prepared to support an onslaught on the basic principles of democratic citizenship, and we would like also to know whether they are able to sustain their case on legal (not to say moral) grounds, without recourse to the kind of racial fanaticism and blind prejudice characteristic of the system supposedly destroyed in the last war.

EDWARD T. LUTE.

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

I am nauseated. The housing shortage is acute in Vancouver, and equally so in Toronto.

There are many thousands of returning ex-servicemen who are finding it difficult to find accommodations.

Yet at this very moment there are people with blonde hair and blue eyes occupying the very premises that are needed to relieve this housing shortage.

Who will deny that the housing shortage would be immeasurably relieved if these people were deported?

Ideologically, perhaps, one may concede that blue-eyed blondes should not be deported, but practically, realistically, one can see no other solution.

A British Columbia M. P. has enlightened us on a similar problem. " . . . these Japanese, the same people who kicked the teeth out of half of our boys over there, . . . people want to welcome them into our midst."

The whole world knows what horrors have been perpetrated by blue-eyed blondes in the guise of Nazi Supermen. Are we to allow these same people to deprive our fighting men of the very homes they have fought to protect?

No!

This is a condensation of a condensation of that great social tragedy by Saryon Steimpeck, "Why Women Don't Grow Bald". We are super-condensing this famous classic for that ever-growing number of low-grade morons who refuse to read anything with a longer reading time than Little Orphan Annie and Mickey Mouse.

Chapter I: Wherein Dick D. Dick Discovers Love

In the gloomy shadows of his unit room, Dick D. suddenly perceived in one of the dank corners, the vague, uncertain and somewhat indefinite form of a girl.

"Who are you?" he gasped, morally shaken.

Chapter II: Wherein We Discover Who's She

"I'm Hedy Lamarr," she whispered, and fell forward into his arms in a dead faint. (Ed's Note: Needless to say she was not REALLY Hedy Lamarr.)

Chapter III: Wherein He Discovers She, She Discovers He, and We Discover Lots

"Hoo-Haw," he murmured lovingly in her left ear—she had donated her right ear to a Medical Society investigating the sex-impulses of ears.

"I knew you were a lady," he said, "I knew it the moment I saw the picture of Emily Post tattooed on your arm."

"You're wonderful," she sighed.

"You have a right to know," he replied. "I'm a midget."

"But you look so tall!"

"I'm standing on top of my brother," groaned Dick.

"But you're so handsome!"

"My brother's on top this week. But I love you," stated D.D.D.

The passion of his avowal thrilled her to her fingertips, which hung like an ape's, down to her ankles.

"Kiss me," she commanded, lifting aside her moustaches.

Chapter IV: Where In the Truth Out

"Enough of this lovelorn and all that sort of rot," cried Dick (THE Dick). "Hoo-Haw, I feel like a cold drink."

"You look like a cold drink," she smiled broadly, and four of her teeth fell out of place.
